ZOO NEW ENGLAND is putting on two great Halloween weekend-long events. Whether you're in Boston or beyond, we've got a zoo for you! The first to host a weekend of costumed and candied fun will be Stone Zoo, whose annual "Boo at the Zoo" celebration lasts from Saturday, Oct. 21 through Sunday, Oct. 22. If you miss this first weekend, or want to see show off that costume to a whole new set of animals, or even if you just didn't get enough candy at Stone Zoo, you can head on over to Boston's Franklin Park Zoo for more fun at "Zoo Howl" on Saturday, Oct. 28 and Sunday, Oct. 29. 617-541-LION or visit www.franklinparkzoo.org

THE GHOSTS & GRAVESTONES TOUR, presented by Old Town Trolley Tours Meticulously researched and highly theatrical, GHOSTS departs every night through OCT 31, at 6, 7, 8 and 9 p.m. from the Old Town Trolley Ticket Center adjacent to The Marriott Long Wharf Hotel on Atlantic Avenue. Reservations are available by calling 617-269-3626. The two-hour trolley tour, hosted by a 17th Century Gravedigger and featuring several costumed characters, combines some of Boston's gravest moments with a hearty dose of humor. Every Night at 6, 7, 8 and 9 p.m. through Oct. 31, from the Old Town Trolley Ticket Center adjacent to The Marriott Long Wharf Hotel on Atlantic Avenue. TOUR LENGTH: Two hours (a portion of the tour is conducted on foot) Adults: $32 Children: $19 (Children under the age of 13 must be accompanied by an adult) RESERVATIONS: Ring The Mortician at 617-269-3626.

Raising the bar on the high seas

By HEIDI SARNA
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

Cruise lines are dreaming up tours for thrill seekers, from ziplining to parasailing, to keep things fresh in the been-there-done-that Caribbean.

There was a time when a cruise to the Caribbean was exotic all around. Ships were smaller, ports less developed. Back in the mid-'90s, for instance, Cozumel, Mexico, was downright remote. It was an appealing gritty outpost. No more.

Though the wheels of progress might have bulldozed over much of the Caribbean's rustic charm -- the legendary Carlos' n Charlie's bar in Cozumel looks today like a TGI Fridays -- what makes a cruise to the islands special these days are the surfing machines, bowling alleys, giant poolside video screens, and other cool gimmicks the newest Caribbean-bound mega ships are peddling to their excitement-addicted passengers.

The bar has been raised for shore excursions as well. Cruise lines are dreaming up tours for thrill seekers, from ziplining to parasailing, to keep things fresh in the been-there-done-that Caribbean. Among the most innovative is Royal Caribbean.

On the line's recently revamped Web site (www.royalcaribbean.com), shore excursion options are broken down into categories, such as adventure and snorkeling, so it's easy to zero in on the wild stuff offered by both Royal Caribbean and sister company Celebrity Cruises.

Among the new offerings: Cave tubing requires head lamps in Belize City ($135) and you'll need a helmet to tour the outback of Aruba in an ATV ($110). Sew your wild oats on a Harley in Key West ($375) or St. Maarten ($450) or check out Grand Cayman's eagle rays and nurse sharks from inside a two-person transparent submersible pod ($198).

It'll be easier to cough up the bucks for these pricey excursions considering that fares for Caribbean cruises are lower right now than they've been in years.

"For the remainder of 2006 and the 4th quarter of 2007, rates can be ridiculously low, reminiscent of 2002," said Sherry Laskin Kennedy, president of Vacation Shoppe in Satellite Beach, Florida. "Historically, November and early December have always been the least expensive times to cruise, with per person per diem rates well below $60 a day. My advice? Book fall/winter cruises now."

The reasons may vary from consumer hurricane fears to drops in fuel cost. But bargains abound.

At press time, on Carnival's Web site (www.carnival.com), four- and five-night Mexico cruises on the Fantasy, one of the line's older ships, were priced as low as $279 per person.

For those seeking the latest and greatest, the newest ship plying the Caribbean when it debuts next month will be the 92,100-tons, 2,384 passenger Norwegian Pearl. Always innovative NCL (www.ncl.com) is equipping the ship with not only 10 restaurants, giant Garden Villa suites and cool Courtyard Villa suites that share a private pool and sunbathing area, but a full-size, four-lane bowling alley. The ship's doing five- and nine-night Caribbean cruises out of Miami through May.

Royal Caribbean's (www.royalcaribbean.com) 160,000 tons, 3,634-passenger Freedom of the Seas debuted last April with much fanfare (it's the current biggest ship) and with eye-poppers ranging from a top-deck water park to a full-sized boxing ring, hot tubs cantilevered 20 feet out over the side of the ship and a surfing machine that throws up 30,000 gallons of water a minute. The jumbo cruiser sails year-round from Miami on seven-night western Caribbean cruises through May before offering alternating eastern and western itineraries. Sister Liberty of the Seas is due in May and will be alternating eastern and western Caribbean routes from Miami.

Carnival's newest ship, Carnival Freedom, will come on line in March. The fifth ship in the Conquest class, the 110,000 tonner will carry 2,974 passengers. it will be in Europe until October and the do seven-night routes out Miami year-round. Key features include the Seaside Theatre, a 12-foot-high by 22-foot-wide LED screen located poolside and showing movies and sporting events. It will also have Water Wars, a new Carnival feature already on Imagination and Fascination, where you enter a cage with two battle stations and propel water balloons against your competitors.

Princess (www.princess.com) isn't resting on its laurels either, with the introduction of the 3,110-passenger Emerald Princess slated for May, a little less than a year after older sister Crown Princess debuted in New York. New amenities include the Sanctuary, a patch of private outdoor deck area, where for a cover of $15 you can sunbathe, have a massage or enjoy a light meal in serene surroundings far, far away from the maddening crowds. The Crown sails from San Juan for winter on seven- and 14-night Caribbean sailings.

Holland America's (www.hollandamerica.com) new 1,918-passenger Noordam is doing 10- and 11-night Caribbean cruises roundtrip out of New York City through April, keeping passengers occupied with a Starbucks-meets-Barnes and Noble internet cafe and a culinary arts center where guest chefs host cooking demos.

This month also marks the return of ships to New Orleans -- they pulled out after last year's devastating hurricane. Norwegian Cruise Line and Carnival re-entered the market this month and Royal Caribbean will join them offering cruises from New Orleans beginning in December.

Gov.'s race, wine question could draw crowd

Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It's anyone's guess which issue in Tuesday's election will bring out the most Cohasset voters — the four-way gubernatorial race or the much-debated ballot question that would allow grocery stores to sell wine.

Voters Third Plymouth District, which includes Cohasset, are also being asked to weigh in on the Iraq war with a non-binding resolution asking that the troops be brought home immediately.

In addition to the race for governor, there are also a slew of other contests — and two other ballot questions for voter consideration.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas predicts a healthy turnout along the lines of the 2002 governor's race that featured Mitt Romney and Shannon O'Brien.

"I am expecting a 72 percent turnout — but I am always hoping for more," Douglas said. As of Wednesday morning more than 165 absentee ballots had gone out. Absentee voting can be a good indicator on the amount of excitement an election is generating, she said.

Cohasset has 5289 registered voters, including 1199 Democrats; 1246 Republicans; 2800 unenrolled; and two members of the Green-Rainbow party.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Both precincts vote at Town Hall. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, Nov. 6 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election.

Group wants troops home

Helps put 'peace' question on ballot

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

"Give peace a chance" remains the message of South Shore Peace Forum activists, even as the war in Iraq continues.

The group was part of an effort to collect enough signatures on a petition calling for the immediate end of the war in Iraq to place a non-binding referendum on the Nov. 7 ballot.

"It is about time for a question like this to appear on the ballot," said longtime Forum member Shirley Brown of Hingham. "Why have people waited so long to act? It is patriotic to stop this carnage and to bring our troops home safely and soon. I want the loved ones of all the troops and all the innocent people whose lives are affected by this war to be safe and to have life. And I want this awful violence to end."

It is unprecedented in Massachusetts for a non-binding public policy question to qualify for the ballot in so many state representative districts.

"This ballot question is a way for people to register how they feel about continuing or ending the war," said 15-year Forum member Chartis Tebbetts of Cohasset. "Hopefully a majority will say let's end it. It's not working. This is a challenge to decide which side of the fence they're on."

Dead spots

Poor reception plagues town

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Many areas in Cohasset suffer from poor cell phone reception. On the waterfront, near the South Shore Music Circus and even in the Village, cell phone customers report losing their signal, resulting in dropped calls.

While being interrupted in the middle of a conversation can be a nuisance, not having cell phone reception when it is absolutely necessary, such as during an emergency, is a public safety issue. To that end, the Board of Selectmen has begun working with Town Manager Bill Griffin to determine what its options are in terms of helping bring better coverage to every corner of the town.

Revenue estimates could total between $75,000 and $90,000.

The conversation began thanks in part to Jerusalem Road resident Paul Barrett, who wrote to selectmen months ago to express his concern. Barrett attended Monday's Selectmen's meeting and recalled the events, which took place at his house on New Year's Day this year. Barrett heard a frantic knock on his door at roughly 5 p.m., and when he answered, found his neighbor, whose house was on fire, in need of a landline because the cell phone he had in his hand could not get a signal. His neighbor had been going from house to house knocking on doors, trying to find someone who was home and would let him use the phone.

"First and foremost, this is a public safety issue," he said, adding his neighbor's dog perished in the fire, and it could have been a family member. "The beach area is very spotty," he said, and cell phone reception varies based on the company you use and where you are at any given moment.

Barrett said if the town chose to erect more cell phone towers, there would be a double benefit, as residents would no longer experience dropped calls, and the town could generate some revenue. Towns have the option of leasing their land to cell phone companies, which then erect the proper equipment to improve cell phone service in the area.

Volunteers for Habitat build trips

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Peter Sexton's home is adorned with many cultural artifacts from many countries around the world. He is a man that loves to travel and he tries to bring back something from each country to remind him of where he has been.

But not all of Sexton's trips are leisurely, as he is a regular participant in Habitat for Humanity build projects around the globe, which send him home not only with souvenirs, but the priceless feeling he has been able to give of himself to others.

Sexton has been involved with Habitat for Humanity International for the last 10 years and is currently participating in a Jimmy Carter Work Project in a village near Lonavala, India. The former U.S. President and Nobel Peace Prize laureate and his wife Rosalynn have given one week of their time every year since 1984 to build homes and raise awareness about the need for simple, affordable housing through Habitat. Sexton will be one of roughly 4,000 volunteers building 100 homes during this project.

On Thursday, Oct. 26 Sexton left

Margot Cheel, aerial photographer (for Cohasset Appalachia Service Project and many town sites), stands on the common with the Second Congregational Church in the background. The Second Congregational Church is where Margo received her first assignment — at the church's Time & Talent Auction. You may view her work at www.margotcheel.com.

Name: Margot Cheel

Occupation: Aerial photographer.

Best day of my life: Day I flew solo by myself in an airplane.

Best vacation: Montana and Yellowstone with my two daughters and my nine trips with ASP.

Favorite season: Fall.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving.

Favorite junk food: Blue tortilla chips.

Best book: "Illusions," by Richard Bach.

Best movie: "Out of Africa."

Best TV show: Anything on the Weather Channel.

Pet peeve: Too many choices in just about everything.

Most memorable moment: Receiving a phone call from Appalachia – from the mother in my ASP project, who said her house had burned to the ground and the only thing she had left was the photo album I'd sent her from our week of home repair.

Goal: To fly and photograph for many years to come.

Person I'd like to meet: Amelia Earhart.

Biggest worry: Lack of attention to what really matters (especially in our technological age).

Best part of Cohasset: Its beauty, its people, its community spirit.

Police Beat

Radar stop leads to criminal complaints

3A crashes continue to pile up

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police stopped a 1999 Blue Ford Explorer that was clocked at about 15 mph over the speed limit along 3A near Shaw's Plaza, last Sunday (Oct. 29) at about 4:45 p.m. The stop was made at 3A and Pond Street.

Further investigation revealed the driver had an expired Massachusetts license and the car's registration had been revoked due to insurance cancellation.

Police are seeking criminal complaints against the driver for operating without a license and speeding, and against the owner of the car for allowing an uninsured motor vehicle to be used; allowing a motor vehicle with revoked registration on the road; and allowing an improper driver to operate the vehicle, police said.

Both the operator and the owner of the vehicle are from Hull.

More 3A crashes

• At about 12:18 p.m., Friday (Oct. 27), a motor vehicle that was trying to pull out of the parking lot at Cohasset Food Mart to head south on 3A, struck a car traveling north, police said.

A 2004 Chevy was waiting to pull out onto 3A, while another vehicle was attempting the do the same thing, Chief Hussey said. The other vehicle, which has not been identified, actually pulled part way out blocking the northbound traffic and the operator motioned to the Chevy to go ahead.

A 1996 GMC SUV traveling northbound crossed over into the southbound lane to get around the car that was blocking his lane. The driver of the Chevy, who did not see the northbound GMC, hit the vehicle.

Chief Hussey said the operator of the GMC was cited for crossing the double yellow line.

There were no injuries, he said.

• During the wind and rain at about 6:52 a.m. Saturday (Oct. 28), two cars traveling in opposite directions on 3A grazed each other, knocking off the side-view mirrors on both cars. One of the cars also sustained damage to the side window, Chief Hussey said.

The accident involved a 2002 Honda Civic and a 2004 Pontiac Sunfire, police said. The Honda was traveling northbound and the Pontiac was headed southbound when the mishap occurred.

Police were not able to determine who was at fault. There were no injuries.

• At about 1:30 p.m., Sunday (Oct. 29), a 1996 Lexus attempted to exit Sohier Street and cross the northbound lane of 3A to head south toward Scituate. The operator apparently did not see a 2003 BMW traveling northbound and the Lexus struck the passenger side of the BMW. The driver of the Lexus was cited for failure to use care in an intersection. The driver of the BMW was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said.

Missing driver

A State Police K-9 unit was called in following an accident on Jerusalem Road at just past 1 a.m. on Tuesday (Oct. 24).

Officers who were responding to a 9-1-1 call about the single-car crash arrived on the scene to find two people in the vehicle: one in the front passenger seat and the other was sitting in the back seat.

"Both individuals appeared to be somewhat disorientated," Chief James Hussey said. "They also gave the impression that the operator of the vehicle had fled the car."

Hussey said there was no alcohol involved in the accident.

He explained at this point, not knowing the condition of the driver, police – after searching the area — called for a K-9 unit for assistance. They were unable to find the driver. The accident is still under investigation.

"We are confident we can resolve the issue of who was driving the car, and take appropriate action regarding any citations to be issued." The two passengers in the car were in their early 20s.

Tossed cigarette

A discarded cigarette was the apparent cause of a fire in the back of a pickup truck at about 5:30 p.m., Tuesday (Oct. 24) on Route 3A near Schofield Road.

"Apparently the cigarette landed in the back of the truck and ignited some paper and cardboard," Chief Hussey said.

He said officers at the scene were able to put most of the fire out with extinguishers from the cruisers. Then the fire department arrived and completely extinguished the fire.

Hussey said the truck driver said he is a smoker. It was unclear if he tossed the cigarette or it came from a passing vehicle.

Car punched

A walk-in to police headquarters wanted it logged that a homeowner punched his vehicle when he tried to turn around in the homeowner's driveway. The walk-in also said the man tried to punch him and missed.

Chief Hussey said it is not a crime to turn around in someone's driveway. "There is no intent there except to turn around," he said.

Hussey said police told the walk-in that he had the right to pursue a complaint about the incident if he chooses.

Mystery tractor

Following up on a complaint from a member of the Conservation Commission at about 1:30 p.m. Thursday (Oct. 26), police determined a truck in the wetlands off Sohier and King streets was a state vehicle. The truck was there to clear debris so the brook could flow more freely, Chief Hussey said. There were no markings on the truck, which was unoccupied when police arrived, but with the help of the building inspector, the ownership and purpose of the vehicle was determined.

Erratic driver

A 20-year-old man checked out OK after police received a call that he was driving erratically along Route 3A. Chief Hussey said the man pulled into the Mobil station to get gas and that is where the officer caught up with him.

The officer checked the man's records for warrants and driving violations and found nothing.

"The officer gave him a verbal warning and recorded the information should we have any further developments with this gentleman," Hussey said.

Stormwater committee looks for funding boost

$10K could help get grant money

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Stormwater Management Committee is one of the town's newest committees. To help get it up and running, Town Meeting will be asked to weigh in on an article that would provide it with $10,000 to hire a consultant to assist the committee in developing and implementing the town's required stormwater management plan.

Water Commissioner John McNabb, who is on the Stormwater Management Committee, came before the Board of Selectmen at its Oct. 16 meeting to explain the committee's need for funding. He said one of the most important initiatives the funding would allow the committee to carry forward is the application for a 319 grant from the state.

The grant funding would be used to implement activities and projects for the control of nonpoint source pollution, and "We all know there are problems with nonpoint source pollution," in town, said McNabb. When a heavy rain falls on Cohasset, the stomwater which flows into the town's drains picks up all the contaminants in its path, or nonpoint source pollution, and those contaminants flow into the town's water bodies.

"We won't just do our report and hand it to you, we're going to take action."
— John McNabb, chairman

The $10,000 would allow the committee to hire a consultant that specializes in applying for grant funding and helping towns identify and find solutions for their stormwater issues. "We won't just do our report and hand it to you, we're going to take action," McNabb said.

According to the DEP, projects funded under the 319 grant program must implement measures that address the prevention, control, and abatement of nonpoint source pollution, and must result in restoration of beneficial uses or achieving or maintaining state water quality standards. The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection issues a Request for Responses for competitive projects in the spring, which means the committee must ask the town for its support now. Proposals may be submitted by any interested Massachusetts public or private organization and the DEP encourages all types of eligible, competitive proposals from all watersheds. If granted, the town must provide a 40 percent match to the funds given by the state. This match may be cash or from in-kind services performed as part of the approved project activities.

The Board of Selectmen said it thought addressing nonpoint source pollution is a wonderful idea. However, Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said he is concerned about the flooding that has taken place in town as well. "James Brook, Deep Run, Haystack Lane...nonpoint source pollution is important but these areas have been subjected to severe flooding," he said.

McNabb said by addressing the nonpoint source pollution issues in town, it will also inadvertently address some flooding issues. "We are going to include flooding to the extent we can deal with it," he said. He added by putting mechanisms in place to curb nonpoint source pollution, such as ensuring the amount of impervious surfaces does not increase, or adding rain gardens to help cleanse runoff, flooding will also be abated.

"We're hoping in less than a year to make substantial progress," said McNabb. "We're going to solve as many problems as we can. I think we can do quite a lot with the funds."

Town Meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset High School. Warrants, or Town Meeting agendas, will be sent to every household two weeks prior to the meeting.

Correction

Advisory Committee recommends reimbursement

An article that ran in the Oct. 20 edition of the Mariner incorrectly reported the Advisory Committee voted 8-0 in favor of not recommending a Town Meeting article that would reimburse the schools in the amount of $65,097 for a security system at the Osgood School. In fact, the Advisory Committee voted 5-3 in favor of recommending Town Meeting vote to reimburse the schools for the expense. The Mariner regrets the error.

The confusion occurred as a result of an 8-0 vote on a motion related to the same article at the same Advisory Committee meeting.

Advisory Committee Chairman Merle Brown made the motion, which read, "The Advisory Committee is very disturbed that the School Committee went ahead and made a decision to spend money on the security system without consulting either the selectmen or the Advisory Board. It is fine that they make a decision to spend their money (operating budget), but if they are then going to seek reimbursement from the town, it should first have the blessing of the Selectmen and the Advisory Committee."

Pour reception plagues town

At previous meetings, Selectman Fred Koed has said revenue estimates could total between $75,000 and $90,000.

The Federal Telecommunications Act of 1996 can be used by cell phone carriers to preempt local bylaws and build cell towers anywhere in town. Planning Board Vice Chairman Peter Pratt, who attended the meeting, explained while his board has not yet brought up the topic at any of its meetings, towers are currently only permitted in the commercial zones on Route 3A. He said in his opinion, it might be a better idea to try to work with cell phone companies to find areas in town for building towers, which everyone can agree upon. "I think we would rather work with the provider and put it where we want, rather than be told where it's going," he said.

Pratt said there are innovative ways of providing cell phone service to residents without being invasive. He said right now, the Water Department has a cell phone tower on top of one of its water tanks. He said the town needs to somehow map the areas that are in need of better coverage and then figure out the best locations for putting up towers. "We don't want them hanging over homes," he said.

Barrett added some of the new cell phone towers look like flagpoles and at Boston College's football stadium, they have replaced all the flagpoles with cell towers to improve coverage in the area.

"First and foremost, this is a public safety issue."
— Paul Barrett, Jerusalem Road

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said he has been conducting his own research in town to find out where some of the worst areas are for coverage. "I have Verizon and the phone I have gets very flaky on Jerusalem Road," he said, as he notices the "bars" which indicate the level of service available are nonexistent.

Griffin said he has been collecting data on his own as well and said his Nextel phone loses its bars on portions of Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road.

But Koed said sometimes his phone will cut out in the middle of a conversation and when he looks at the screen, it says he has three or four bars. "Unless you're having a conversation, I don't think you can trust it. Part of my concern is that we're driving around saying, 'Can you hear me now, can you hear me now,' rather than contacting a professional," he said.

Resident Wayne Sawchuk suggested the board contact a company such as Industrial Communications in Marshfield, which specializes in tower construction and electrical contracting, site acquisition and development, tower site rental and management, and wireless communications products and services. "They own many towers and they'll be able to tell you where more are needed and they'll probably be able to give you a map. They lease the towers to all the cell phone companies, so they would likely know," he said.

Selectmen Vice Chairman Rob Spofford suggested the board get in touch with the Cable Advisory Committee, as he believes there are people on that board with cell phone technology expertise. "Either we or someone needs to move this forward," he said.

Griffin said he already had a meeting scheduled with the Cable Advisory Committee for the end of this week and would bring up the topic. He also said he would find a Request for Proposals which another town has used to solicit bids for leasing land for cell phone towers and bring it to Selectmen. He said he would also get in touch with a company such as Industrial Communications to see if he can find out the specific areas which are lacking in reception and the best areas for towers to improve reception for all.

Veterans Day observance

On Veterans Day, Saturday, Nov. 11 at 1 p.m., the town will dedicate a new monument at Veteran's Park on Cohasset Harbor. The new monument lists the names of those Cohasset residents who have served or are currently serving in the Korean War, Vietnam War, the Gulf War, or the War on Terror.

During the Korean War, 168 Cohasset residents served their country and one, Clifford David Strout, paid the ultimate price. Vietnam saw 263 Cohasset residents travel overseas and eight men — Peter J. Albiani Jr., Peter Cogill, Allen F. Keating, William C. Laidlaw, John Paul Lyon, Edward R. Maree, Dennis J. Reardon, and Craig M. Simeone — lost their lives. There were 30 Cohasset residents who served in the Gulf War and 43 residents are currently serving in the War on Terror. Ten of those residents are currently stationed in Iraq.

The monument is circular and made of the same stone used to make the World War I and II honor rolls, and is sunken into the ground. The circle has a diameter of 28 feet, and is 16 inches tall from the outside and 22 inches tall on the inside. There is a sloped walkway to bring visitors down into the center of the circle where there is a large flagpole.

On the inside of the circle are the names of the town's war veterans on beveled granite, with another plaque below the names indicating the war in which the residents served. There are also blank tablets to allow the town to inscribe the names of residents who may need to be added in the future. Outside the monument, there is grass and a walkway made of bluestone pavers.

Residents interested in contributing financially to the project may send checks made payable to the Veterans Memorial Committee to 42 King Street, Cohasset, attention Glenn Pratt. For more information on the town's veterans, please visit the committee's Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Schools plead case in letter to Capital Budget Committee

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department is not taking lightly the Capital Budget Committee's recommendation that the Board of Selectmen not recommend any of its capital requests to Town Meeting.

To that end, at its Wednesday meeting the School Committee approved sending a letter to the CBC, asking it to reconsider its recommendations. Due to the fact that the CBC felt it had a lack of information about the school department's requests, the School Committee said it would also provide backup data to help answer any questions the CBC may have.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy reminded the committee back in August, Town Manager Bill Griffin contacted Supt. Denise Walsh to inform her the school department would need to be ready to come forward with a list of capital items, which the School Committee assumed was more of an exercise than an actual request for funding. "Had we known this was going to be presented and funded within two months of asking, I think we could've taken a different approach," she said. The School Committee hopes its letter will be the first step to at least beginning a discussion of what the district needs.

Based on current finances, Griffin told the CBC he felt comfortable recommending spending $300,000 in free cash for capital projects at the Special Town Meeting, to be held Nov. 13. With roughly $1.6 million in requests, the committee had some tough decisions to make. Ultimately, voters will decide if the money should be spent.

The school department had requested $505,000 from the CBC for roof repairs, technology upgrades, a science exhaust fan, an emergency generator at Osgood, a new back turnaround/walkway at Osgood, the replacement and repair of playground equipment at Osgood and the repair of the high school track. None of its requests was recommended for approval at this time.

The CBC has recommended funding in the amount of $307,600. Projects to be completed with those funds include roofing repairs at the police station, upgrades for the harbormaster's office, replacement of a truck for the DPW, IT equipment at Town Hall, a new harbormaster boat, additional docks for Parker Avenue and Government Island, roof repairs at the library, one motorcycle for the police department, mobile data terminals for the police department, and an ambulance billing and reporting system for the fire department.

The letter sent by the School Committee states, "We were disappointed to find that some of your recommendations for the school department were delayed for a number of years while others were not included at all in your 5-year plan. This raises some serious concerns."

The letter says the state, through the Office of Educational Quality and Accountability, requires each school district have a formal preventative maintenance program to maximize and prolong the effective use of the district's capital and major facility assets, to ensure educational and program facilities are clean, safe, well lit, well maintained and conducive to promoting student learning and achievement.

"The town is to be commended for the investment made in building and updating school facilities and athletic fields over the past 10 years. However, maintaining, securing and protecting our investment is paramount now, or we will lose that investment," it states.

The School Committee said the town is not protecting its investment in the area of technology. "The Massachusetts Department of Education is very clear in the guidelines developed for infrastructure, support services and staffing for technology. We agree with the Capital Budget Committee report, that items such as upgrades and/or replacements of technology may be better addressed in the school department budget. However, as you may know, we have neither a capital line item nor a maintenance of facilities line item within our budget. We therefore rely on the Capital Budget Committee for your support for these items."

The School Committee also recommended the CBC reconsider resurfacing the Alumni Field track in fiscal 2008. "As you noted in your report, the Alumni Field track was installed 10 years ago. At that time, it was advised the track be resurfaced every five years to preserve the structure and maximize its life. That has not been done in the past 10 years." The School Committee also recommended at the next 5-year mark in fiscal 2013, the town return to considering pursuing an artificial field surface.

The School Committee said the requests put forth to the CBC "are needs (not wants), and, if unmet, would compromise the health, safety or welfare of the students, citizens/employees of or visitors to the school community. The installation of an emergency generator for the Osgood School, the replacement of 10 and 12-year-old buses used to transport students, the repair of roof leaks at the high school and the installation of an exhaust fan system for a high school science room are more than 'nice to have.' They all have real health and safety implications if not addressed."

The letter also said the Office of Educational Quality and Accountability further requires (and will audit) that each school district have a long-term capital plan that clearly and accurately reflects the future capital development and improvement needs, including educational and program facilities of adequate size.

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said he thinks the letter will be met with positive reactions. He said when the Board of Selectmen voted to approve the recommendations put forth by the CBC, he and School Committee member Steve Fusco were in attendance and made a case for funding for the schools. "The Selectmen were open-minded to certain items, and as you know, we've started working on the roof," he said, as the town agreed to fund those repairs out of its operating budget. "In general, they're supportive and I think the town is willing to support these things."

Logan airport noise study continues to fly

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer updated the Board of Selectmen on the progress being made on the Logan Airport Noise Study on Monday. Dormitzer is co-chairman of the Community Advisory Committee, which has been working on many initiatives to help improve the noise pollution communities surrounding Logan.

Dormitzer said the study is in its final phase and he will make a full presentation to the board at some point in the future. However, he said there have been some encouraging developments made which could provide relief for many communities under current flight paths, including agreement to re-route some early morning planes to keep them higher and more dispersed over the ocean, rather than on close flight paths over communities.

Two routine Jet Blue and Continental flights, which land in the early morning hours, have agreed to the new flight paths, which is a huge step in the right direction, said Dormitzer. While the FAA says it cannot handle the changes during some of its more busy hours, early morning flights overhead are the ones disrupting sleeping residents.

HOLIDAYS ARE COMING

Hello Cohasset. I hope everyone had a fun and safe Halloween. Now, it is on to colder weather and getting ready for the holidays, etc. I don't know if we are ready for it but this weekend will give us a little taste of the cold. Send in any news you may have to me here and let's keep the column fun-filled with news and events.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

A belated birthday wish goes out to Joshua Burke, who turned 3 years old last week. Happy Birthday "Mr. Curly Top."

BRICK BY BRICK

Looking for the perfect holiday gift? How about an engraved brick! Deb Kuppens, who coordinates the Brick by Brick program for Our World, Children's Global Discovery Museum here in Cohasset, is putting together a brick order for the holidays. The donation for each engraved brick is $100 — and your donation is tax deductible. The monies raised through the sale of these bricks will go towards funding programs at the Museum. Each brick is a creative and enduring way to honor families, children, grandparents, teachers or members of the community. If you are interested in reserving an engraved brick, please call Deb at 781-383-6399 or email her at DebKuppens@comcast.net

Madison and Elizabeth Hagearty with their dog, Chloe, whom they dressed up in a Cohasset soccer jersey.

TOP DOG

With the heavy rains and wind on Saturday, Elizabeth,12, and Madison Hagearty,10, had to find a new way to win with their soccer outfits. They dressed up their dog, Chloe and went to Petco's annual Howl-o-Ween animal contest in Quincy. They dressed Chloe up in a Cohasset soccer jersey and used soccer shorts from their brother Patrick's Build a Bear to win first prize. They won a $15 gift certificate to Petco and 8 pounds of free dog food. If winning the dog contest wasn't good enough, Elizabeth won the coloring contest, which was good for another gift certificate to Petco.

Elizabeth is a seventh-grader at the middle school and Madison is in the fourth grade at Deer Hill.

VO-TECH CRAFT FAIR

The 12th annual South Shore Vocational Technical High School Craft Fair is being held on Saturday, Nov. 4 from 10 am to 3 pm at 476 Webster St, Hanover. More than 70 crafters and artisans will be on hand to sell there wares and food, drinks and raffles will be available as well. The SSVT Parents Association puts on this event to benefit programs and scholarships at SSVT! This is a fair that you don't want to miss! Cohasset is part of the Vo-Tech district.

AT SYRACUSE

Congratulations to Cohasset resident Jenn Murray, who attends Syracuse University as a sophomore in Syracuse University's College of Visual and Performing Arts. Jenn was among the over 450 students who participated in the Goon Squad this fall as part of Syracuse Welcome 2006, the University's orientation week for new students.

Established in the 1940s by Syracuse University to spread school spirit and help incoming freshmen adjust to college life, the Goon Squad consists of volunteer upperclassmen who assist new students and their parents as they move into residence halls. In addition to unpacking vehicles and moving new students in, Goon Squad members also answer questions and provide campus directions to new students and their families throughout the Syracuse Welcome week.

CALENDAR RAFFLE

Attention Cohasset Residents! It's almost time for the Cohasset Varsity Hockey team's annual Holiday Calendar Raffle event! On Sunday, Nov. 5th members of this year's Varsity Hockey team will be going door-to-door throughout Cohasset selling $5 raffle tickets to the famous Holiday Raffle Calendar.

Local merchants throughout Cohasset have generously donated fabulous prizes, which will be awarded every day throughout the month of December. Every $5 ticket has 31 chances to win so it is hoped you all open your doors, your hearts, and your wallets to support Cohasset Varsity Hockey. All proceeds go toward supporting the team, including ice time, the assistant coach, and team jackets. Thanks to all of the merchants and contributors who've helped support this event!

BIRD WALK

Straits Pond Watershed Association will host a bird walk Saturday, Nov. 4, from 8 to 10 a.m. Participants should meet at Atlantic Avenue, Hull, at the foot of Summit Avenue. Cohasset's Sally Avery will lead the walk. Everyone is welcome to participate in this free event.

That is all for this week. Send in all of your information to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Rita and John Durkin celebrate 50th anniversary

Friends and family celebrated the 50th wedding anniversary of Rita and John Durkin of Scituate Sept. 16, 2006. The party took place at the home of John and Shelanne Durkin of Scituate. Given by the couple's children and their spouses, guests enjoyed dinner catered by The Borrowed Butler, dancing and a home video created by the family. The Rev. Mulvehill, pastor at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset, performed a renewal blessing of the marriage.

The couple married Sept. 15, 1956, at St. Carthage Church in Chicago.

Rita and John have eight children: Patti Epstein and Brian of Marshfield, Marita Carpenter, Laura Coletta and Tom of Cohasset, John and Joe of Scituate, and Bob of New London, N.H. They have 33 grandchildren.

John is currently a Realtor with Coldwell Banker. He served in the food industry for more than 40 years with such companies as Blount Seafood, Pizza Hut, Frito Lay and Kraft Foods.

Rita, as well as being a homemaker, is retired from a 20-year career with an optical distributor.

The couple are members of Hatherly Country Club in Scituate and St. Anthony Church of Cohasset.

Hearth cooking demonstration

Erik Anthony, owner of Independence Fireplace in Cohasset Village, is hosting a special event Sunday, Nov. 12, from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Suzanne Goldenson will be doing a hearth cooking demonstration in a fireplace at the store. She has written a book, "The Open Hearth Cookbook," and she has done demonstrations at Sturbridge Village and other locations.

For more information, call Anthony at 781-659-7970.

Cohasset Dramatic Club play about women is 'all about men'

Dramatic Club production premiers next weekend

By Nancy White
CORRESPONDENT

Seventy years ago Clara Booth Luce's play, "The Women," opened on Broadway with a packed theatre and rave reviews from the public. The women of the Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) are expecting similar results in their own production of "The Women" next weekend.

The cast, which includes eight women from Cohasset, will perform the period piece that's "all about men," — but don't expect to see a single male actor on stage. The all-female cast will portray a group of 1930's Manhattan socialites with little to preoccupy themselves; save for their girlfriends' lives, loves and divorces.

"It's a diverse cast of women, in geographic location, in age, and in theatre experience," says producer Susan Jaffe.

"The play is very funny, very witty with great dynamics between friends," explains Barbara Baumgarten, who plays Mary Haines, the play's heroine. Baumgarten, a Cohasset resident, is a veteran of both the stage and the CDC. "The Women" is her 10th show with the CDC and she has also performed with the Company Theatre and Hingham Civic Theatre. "The play has very clever lines – and a couple of cat fights," she says with a smile.

Roberta Raffa, also a Cohasset resident, had the unique opportunity to have been in the CDC's production of "The Women" in 1992, as well as this year's rendition. "In 1992," she says, "the cast was much larger so I never was saw the entire show. Some of us had to sit downstairs during rehearsals." This time around some cast members play multiple supporting roles.

"The play is very funny, very witty with great dynamics between friends."
— Barbara Baumgarten, actor

"[With] the casting of this production, the equation simply adds up to keep the cast small and tight," says director Lisa Pratt, "It just makes sense to take many of the smaller cameo roles and double and triple cast them…It keeps it interesting for the actresses who are not cast in the larger lead parts, and it takes advantage of their skill, while still keeping the cast a tight-knit group. Everyone wins."

The small cast coupled with a witty play that most women can relate to their own life experiences and friendships has made the actresses quick friends. "They are a sisterhood. Women dishing about men and other women brings women together no matter how or where. And interestingly I see the lines of the characters that are friends onstage blurring with the real life camaraderie offstage as we spend a lot of time together to bring this story to life," explains Pratt, a Cohasset resident has been involved off and on with the CDC since the 1980s.

"It's a great show to see with your girlfriends, it's very entertaining and really fun," describes Joan Reid, a Scituate resident whose first show with the CDC was in 1998, and who plays two domestic roles. Her roles provide a contrast to the Park Avenue socialites that the plot centers upon. "There's a lot of conniving, cheating and gossip, it's wonderful."

"Being in the suburbs as we are, a 'girls night out' is always a fun past time, so although we welcome everyone to our show, we think that the storyline of women and how they treat and care for their men and their other women friends, is as current a theme today as it was when the play was written in the late thirties," says Pratt.

In that spirit the CDC has teamed up with the Derby Street Shoppes to bring a true sense of "girls night out" to the show. On both Saturday night performances (Nov. 11 & 18) a specially designed gift bag will be given to all female audience members and a raffle will be held to win a female-inspired door prize. A gift that perhaps the women of the play would appreciate, "There's a timelessness of the message that makes you think that maybe people, and especially women, haven't changed at all," says Jaffe.

The CDC is a organization with long-standing in the Cohasset community that dates back to its founding in 1921. The group currently puts on two performances a year, a comedy or drama in the fall and a musical in the spring. "CDC is much like a family with many relatives, some of whom we see all the time and others who pop in and out, others who we watch grow and move on, and others who are completely new to the fold – both the club and the stage," says Jaffe, who also serves as president of the CDC.

The CDC's production of "The Women" opens on Friday, Nov. 10th at 8p.m. Subsequent shows on Nov. 11, 17 and 18 at 8p.m. plus a special matinee on Nov. 12 at 2p.m. All shows will be at the Cohasset Town Hall, tickets are available by calling 617-697-2115 or at Buttonwood Books and Front Street Books in Scituate.

"There is no question, this show is stronger and more believable for the audiences who will come to see it because of these women's friendships and respect for one another," says Pratt, "it makes for great theater, with laughs from start to finish."

Learn about Medicare options on Nov. 8

The following activities have been planned by the Council on Elder Affairs. Call 781-383-9112 for more information or to sign up for events. Don't miss the November issue of the new Vista, available next week at the CEA.

Evening Lecture: 'Health Care Options For Seniors' – The Senior Center will host a presentation titled "Health Care Options for Seniors," presented by Susan Flanagan from Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts, Nov.8. Included in the presentation is an explanation of Medicare, including the new Medicare Part D drug benefit. The presentation will also show how Medigap plans and Medicare Advantage plans work with Medicare. A question and answer session will follow. All are welcome regardless of insurance coverage. A light supper will be served at 5:30 p.m. Cost is $3. Transportation will be available. Call the CEA for reservations.

Medicare Part D Open Enrollment – Open enrollment for Medicare Part D will take place Nov. 15, 2006 through Dec. 31. Seniors can change their prescription drug plan at this time. For assistance, call Carol Barrett, CEA outreach, at 781-383-9112.

Thanksgiving Feast At Atlantica – Joe Campbell and the folks at Atlantica Restaurant are sponsoring a Thanksgiving feast for seniors on Tuesday Nov. 21, starting at noon. Call the CEA to reserve a spot.

Free Thanksgiving Dinner At Lombardo's – The Lombardo family is hosting its 35th annual free Thanksgiving Dinner at its facility in Randolph. The event will take place on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 23, in Lombardo's Function Facility, 6 Bilings St., Randolph. Doors will open at 10:30 a.m. Dinner will be served at 11:30 a.m., followed by dancing to a DJ until the event ends at 1:30 p.m. Call Cohasset Elder Affairs for tickets to this event.

Fuel Assistance – As winter approaches, people are probably concerned about the high cost of fuel. For information on fuel assistance, call Carol Barrett at 781-383-9119.

Christmas Angel Program – Cohasset Elder Affairs delivers a Christmas basket to homebound elders. If anyone knows of someone who would appreciate a gift or who would like to donate a gift to an elder, can call 781-383-9112.

Thanksgiving And Christmas Dinner – Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner can be delivered to elders who will be alone during the holidays. Call the Social Service League at St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-0771 with name, address, and phone number. The dinner is delivered between 11:30 a.m. and noon.

Vienna Choir Boys – One of the oldest boys' choirs existing in the world will be at Mohegan Sun. Cohasset Elder Affairs is sponsoring a bus trip Dec. 6, leaving at 9 a.m., and departing at 5:30 p.m. The trip includes choice of buffet plus two free bets on the Wheel of Fortune and the show. Tickets are $59. Call the CEA for more information.

Rockettes Are Back – Cohasset Elder Affairs is sponsoring a bus trip to a matinee performance at the Wang Center in Boston on Dec. 14. A stop for lunch at noon at Phillips Old Colony Restaurant, and then those attending will continue on to the theater for a 2 p.m. show. Cost is $104, and includes everything. The bus will accommodate 50 people. The trip is available to everyone. Call 781-383-9112 to register. Don't know what to get for a holiday gift? Why not a gift certificate for the show?

Our World rings in holidays early with Mistletoe Boutique

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Thanks to the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, South Shore residents may be able to finish up their holiday shopping early this year — and get it all done in one day.

On Sunday, Nov. 12 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., roughly 50 vendors will be on display during the Museum's "Mistletoe Boutique," fund-raiser, to be held at the Red Lion Inn. With vendors selling everything from holiday wreaths and hand-blown wine glasses to unique neckties, children's clothing, jewelry and items for pets, there is sure to be something for everyone on your list. Tickets for a 50/50 raffle will also be sold for $20 each or 6 for $100 at the door. Depending on the size of the pot, which is currently up to $1,780, Our World and one lucky winner will split the proceeds in half, which could also help whittle down that shopping list.

Co-chairs for the event Heather Comerford, Sue Hess and Vanessa Day said they are very excited about this year's Boutique. With the success of last year's event under their belts, the three have been able to expand on their efforts and make this year's event even bigger.

"The first two years we raised the same amount, but last year, we tripled it," said Hess, which could have to do with the fact that last year was the first Mistletoe Boutique held at the Red Lion Inn. Once out of the Museum, the planning committee had more space to work with and could accommodate more vendors. "This year, we're looking to grow by another 25 percent."

One of the most exciting additions to this year's Boutique is the jolly old elf himself. Santa Claus will be available for pictures in the Salon de Soleil at the Red Lion Inn. There will also be a bake sale and vendors in the Salon, including Alida Dean of Cohasset Greenery who will be taking orders for custom-made wreaths, which she will deliver once complete. "I think it's hard to find a really good wreath," said Comerford, adding Dean has a keen artistic eye and all her floral and greenery arrangements are beautiful.

Day said she is very excited to have vendors from Mascot pet gear at the Boutique. "They're getting national press," she said, for their unique items including sailors knot dog collars and leads, leather and canvas collars and leads and pet sweaters. Comerford added this summer, she was in Nantucket and stopped in a store to see if they had any Mascot items, and the shop owner said she kept ordering more than she thought she could sell and still couldn't keep her shelves stocked.

Hess said last year, one of the top sellers were the hand-blown glass ornaments sold by Clancy Designs of Jamestown, R.I. In addition to ornaments, the company sells wine and margarita glasses, tumblers, vases, candleholders and even soap dishes and toothbrush holders.

For those ladies who like to tee up when the weather is warm, items from Ame & Lulu would make a perfect gift. From fashionable golf head covers to golf bags and belts, their golf accessories help bring a little color onto the greens. The company also sells tennis accessories.

Expectant mothers might be interested in Dear Johnnies fashionable hospital gowns. The colorful gowns are a break from the traditional hospital-issued cover-ups, and come in various sizes for a better fit. While they are loose to allow for proper medical access, the gowns have more closures in the back for better coverage.

Local photographer Mike Sleeper will have his work on sale during the Boutique as well. He has captured images from all around the Boston area, including Fenway Park.

To make the day a success, there are many volunteers who help out behind the scenes and Hess said they could always use more. A good number of vendors will be on display in Lion's Hall, which is also known as the barn, which requires setting up many tables. "It is such a beautiful room," said Hess, adding the expanse of the room really allows every vendor to set up in a prime location.

"All our vendors have been wonderful," said Hess, and have been very cognizant of the fact they are part of a fund-raiser for a non-profit organization. Every vendor who participates pays a table fee and a percent of the sales also go toward the museum. "They all donated items for our February fund-raiser as well which was really nice of them to do," she said.

While the Boutique is being held in early November, Comerford said it isn't too early to start thinking about the holidays. "Many vendors there allow you to custom order products, and with the Boutique being in November, they can get it to you by Christmas," she said.

"It's one stop shopping and it goes on from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., which is lots of time," added Hess.

The fourth annual Mistletoe Boutique will be held at the Red Lion Inn Sunday, Nov. 12 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free and there will be roughly 50 vendors selling unique gifts. In addition, there will be a bake sale and the opportunity for children to have their picture taken with Santa Claus. For more information please visit the Our World Web site at www.ourworldcgdm.org. To volunteer your time, please contact volunteer coordinator Michele Allen via e-mail at micheleallen@comcast.net.

Bellevue Cadillac to hold benefit concert

The Jump Jive 'n Wail for Trails concert, starring the Grammy Award winning band, Bellevue Cadillac, will take place Sunday, Nov. 5, from 5 to 9:30 p.m., at the Mt. Blue Restaurant in Norwell to benefit the Maxwell Conservation Trust, the local land trust based in Scituate, which has worked hard during the past five years to save 125 acres of open space in the Bates Lane area in the west end of Scituate. This land is watershed to Cohasset and Scituate.

This rockin' party will also feature a super silent auction and raffle full of 80 terrific items. These include original oil paintings by Sergio Roffo, Dean Morrissey, Jill Cappadano and Paige Railsback, weekends in New Hampshire, Martha's Vineyard and the Berkshires, a kayak, a cord of seasoned firewood delivered to the winner's door, a catered Thanksgiving meal for eight from Whole Foods, stays at the Red Lion Inn, Cohasset.

Tickets for the event are $50 per person and include complimentary finger food, beer and wine. Contact Cynde Robbins at 781-545-4167 for tickets, or purchase them at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset .Reservations may also be made at Mt. Blue at 781-659-0050.

Learning language helps with mission

Su Escuela provides Spanish immersion

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Deacon Joseph Vitello stands with Sister Rosario and a young family he met in the Dominican Republic during his last mission to the country.

Every year, Deacon Joseph Vitello of St. Jerome Parish in North Weymouth goes on a medical mission to the town of Constanza in the Dominican Republic. The people are very poor and seeing the looks on their faces when they receive the supplies he and others from his parish bring is extremely rewarding. Being able to speak their native language and communicate during that touching time is priceless.

"It is amazing how we pick up the language this way."
— Joseph Vitello
of St. Jerome Parish

Thanks in part to Su Escuela, a Spanish immersion language program located at 152 King St., Vitello, as well as parishioner John DiVito, have been learning the language of the people in Constanza. They attend classes once per week, and are learning quickly due to the program's format.

"I had taken classes before, but you're immersed in the language here and this is what I need. It is amazing how we pick up the language this way," said Vitello.

DiVito added, "I came here with nothing, and now I understand a lot. I'll be absolutely honest, I'm surprised."

At Su Escuela, classes are taught in a way that mimics how a child would learn a language from his or her parents. Through complete immersion during class, Director Sandra Baldeón says students are normally able to reach in a few months the same level of study achieved through years of high school or university study.

During their trips down to Constanza, Vitello and DiVito say their Spanish greatly improves, basically due to the same method of teaching which Su Escuela provides — total immersion. In fact, Vitello is planning to leave for the small village of Tireo, just outside of the larger city of Constanza Nov. 4 and said, "We're going on a mission where we will be with three nuns who don't speak a word of English." Working closely all day every day forces them to pick up the language quickly.

Vitello began taking trips to the Dominican Republic two years ago, as did DiVito, who is on the Board of Advisors at St. Jerome's. Vitello said it has been tough raising the necessary funds to cover the costs of the supplies, "but you have to have money to help the poor." Everyone who goes on the trip pays for their own ticket, and volunteers their time.

Parishioners have been very generous in their donations, which will allow Vitello to bring four big hockey goalie bags and six suitcases down to Tireo full of medication, prescription and non-prescription, as well as hygienic supplies. "It's not just medicine, it's also all the necessary stuff we take for granted," he said, such as toothbrushes and toothpaste.

During the mission, Vitello said his group will host four separate clinics which will be between eight and 10 hours long. "It's exhausting," he said, but there are so many people that need medical attention in that area, even if only to have an overdue physical, that the long hours are necessary.

One of the most common physical ailments in Tireo is stomach trouble, which is due to a lack of proper drinking water. "Parasitic disorders can be a killer for infants," he said, which is why it is so important for both mothers and babies to be treated. What is even more important is that people who have been treated do not continue drinking contaminated water and re-infect themselves. "Eventually, we'd like to find a way to be able to purify their water," said Vitello, adding he is trying to work with Rotary International, which has set pure drinking water for everyone as one of its main missions.

When Vitello's mission is over, any leftover supplies will be left at the "pharmacy" in Tireo, which the nuns who live there will dole out accordingly.

While their lives are different from a material standpoint, from a spiritual standpoint, they are not. Vitello said during their missions, he and the group he travels with always goes to Mass in the village on Sunday. "It is the most joyful time. It is so powerful. You see the joy of the people and their hope and you wonder how they have it," living in the conditions they do, he said.

He said the doors to the church are always open, and sometimes dogs will come in and sit in the middle of the aisles and listen. When the time comes to wish peace on those around you, instead of receiving handshakes as you might in the United States, everyone gives each other hugs. "Especially the little kids," he said. "It's a particularly moving experience."

The little kids in Tireo will get a big surprise when Vitello shows up this year, as the children at Su Escuela are sending along treats – without the tricks – for Halloween. Baldeón said in her classes, she is teaching some of her younger students about the children in the Dominican Republic and she has collected roughly 1,000 lollypops to send to the children as well as chocolate. "I wish I could see their faces when they learn that children from a town in Cohasset in the United States are trying to learn their language," she said.

St. Jerome's is always collecting supplies and monetary donations for their trips to Constanza. They are also always looking for volunteers to help on the missions, especially nurses and doctors. Anyone interested in making a donation or volunteering time should contact the parish at (781) 335-2038 or via e-mail at stjeromeparish@comcast.net. The church's mailing address is St. Jerome Parish, 632 Bridge St., North Weymouth, MA 02191 and donations can be sent marked "Constanza Mission." The parish is looking for monetary donations, but also donations of Motrin, Tylenol, vitamins, toothbrushes, toothpaste, Pepto Bismol, Immodium, Lotrimin ointment, prenatal vitamins, antacids, Prilosec, Eucerin ointment cream and blood pressure cuffs and stethoscopes.

Cohasset resident travels the globe with Habitat for Humanity

Peter Sexton, third from right, stands with a group of Habitat for Humanity volunteers in Limeiro do Norte, Brazil this July. Team members were from the United States as well as Canada, and included Sexton's wife Anne, fourth from right.

Massachusetts and flew into London, England, and the next day, he flew from London to Bombay, India. From there, it is a 3-hour bus ride to Lonavala where he will be constructing the housing units. Construction began on the housing units Sunday and will continue through Saturday, Nov. 4. Prior to the trip, Sexton said he was looking forward to participating in this build.

"I started in 1996 and have been on probably about 15 builds," he said, and each one is very different. Sexton explained he has participated in two different kinds of international builds — global village builds during which 10 or 15 volunteers travel to a site for about two weeks and work with the local people, and then there are the Jimmy Carter Work Projects which send many more people for a more intense build.

"We build 50 duplexes, or 100 housing units in one week," during the Jimmy Carter projects, he said. With that kind of building over a seven-day period, every hour of every day is planned to ensure the work expectations are met. Sexton explained the preliminary work has been completed before the crews arrive, such as laying the foundations and completing roadwork, and once they arrive, roughly 40 people are assigned to put up each house.

"We have a well-defined schedule for each day," he said, as there are many hands to help with the work, but the goals set are still lofty and projects must remain organized and on track to ensure timely completion.

The first time Sexton went on an international Habitat trip, it was to Tanzania in east Africa. There, he experienced the most primitive conditions of any of his trips. "It is a city of 30,000 people and there is no water system, no sewer system, a few electrical generators but no power system and you are three hours from the nearest paved road," he said. Timber for the project came from whole tree trunks and using a manual saw, it took two days to break down one trunk into lumber.

On that first trip, he attended as an individual participant, but on every trip since, he has held some kind of leadership role. He has been the leader for some global village builds, which means he is responsible for going through all the applications and selecting the 10 to 15 participants who will travel with him. He said he tries to choose people from diverse backgrounds who will get along and work well together. Making the selections is no easy task, as hundreds of applications are submitted. "Most of the applications are from the United States, but I've had people from Mexico, the Netherlands, Canada and Egypt come along on trips," he said.

"I started in 1996 and have been on probably about 15 builds."
— Peter Sexton,
Habitat volunteer

Sexton has been able to see many different parts of the world through participating in Habitat projects. He has been to Tanzania, Malawi, South Africa, and this summer, he and his wife Anne, who has participated in more than five Habitat trips, went to Brazil. He has also been to Chile, Paraguay and Bolivia two times.

Before this trip, Sexton had never been to India for any length of time. "Last year for our 30th anniversary, we went to Bhutan and we spent a day there at both ends to get there and coming home," he said.

The area is at a high elevation, which means it gets cooler at night. Therefore, those participating will be staying in a hotel, but it is not anything like what would be found in the U.S. Sexton said there would not likely be laundry facilities and the participants have already been told not to open their mouths in the shower, as they do not want to swallow it by accident.

"We were given a lot of safety instructions," he said, including the warning to be mindful when they pick up cinderblocks, as they are perfect hiding spots for poisonous snakes and scorpions.

While Habitat trips are meant to help others, Sexton explained the organization does not give away houses. "We don't deal with the poorest of the poor," he said, adding Habitat builds affordable housing and provides interest free mortgages. "They must participate and put sweat equity into the project before they qualify," he said. While he has gone on many international trips, Sexton said there are many projects being built right here on the South Shore including one in Cohasset, and he has helped on those projects as well. Sexton said he enjoys participating in the Habitat trips for a variety of reasons. "It gives you the opportunity to give something back to society. It also gives you the opportunity to go to places you wouldn't go otherwise," he said. While there are tourist areas in many countries, participating in Habitat projects takes him beyond those areas to see what the country is really like for the people who live there. "You meet a vertical cross-section of people," he said.

When not volunteering his time for Habitat, Sexton works for Technic, Inc., in Rhode Island as its International Business Development Manager. "I do a lot of international travel for business," he said, adding he is often jetting off to Asia and Europe, including the countries of Belgium, Germany, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom, Japan, Korea and Thailand. "The week after this is over, I'm stopping in Europe for business on my way home," he said. "I'm typically flying over 100,000 miles a year."

Even with the many places Sexton has visited, he said there are still many countries he would like to visit, either through Habitat or on his own. "I'd like to go to Egypt, Mongolia, the very southern parts of Argentina and Chile and Tierra del Fuego."

Sexton said he is already planning for his next Habitat excursion, which will take place next summer. While the location has not yet been settled upon, he is thinking either Chile or Argentina. "We'll start planning for that in December."

Pratt Building makes the list

Earns place on National Register

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

On Oct. 12, the Cohasset Historical Society received some very good news. Its headquarters, located at 106 South Main St. in the Pratt Historic Building, was formally listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

David Wadsworth of the Historical Society has been working on the initiative for some time, and finally his hard work has paid off. The process of receiving approval for inclusion on the Register is "long and involved," said Wadsworth, and he gathered all the information necessary for the application, including the history of the community, the building's social history, its architectural details, photographs, charts of geologic surveys and other specific information regarding the building's historical significance.

Once complete, the application was sent to the National Register office of the Massachusetts Historical Commission, and then on to the Keeper of the Register in Washington, D.C. The entire process usually takes close to two years.

Having a building on the National Register is a very prestigious honor, as it marks the building as being worthy of preservation due to its cultural and historical value. By having the designation, it also helps towns secure grant funding and it protects the building in a limited way from any government activity at both the state and federal level, which might take place on the property. Any proposed projects for the property on which a nationally registered building exists have to be reviewed, and it must be determined the activity will not affect the building's historical significance.

Cohasset now has seven buildings and districts on the National Register. Those included prior to the addition of the Pratt Building include: Central Cemetery at the corner of N. Main Street and Joy Place; the Cohasset Common Historic District, bounded by Highland Avenue, N. Main Street, William B. Long, Jr., Road and Robert E. Jason Road; the Government Island Historic District, also known as Minot's Ledge Lighthouse Shore Station on Gulf Island located on Border Street; the Josephine M. Hagerty House, located at 357 Atlantic Avenue; the Caleb Lothrop House, located at14 Summer Street; and the Capt. John Wilson House and Bates Ship Chandlery, also known as the Cohasset Historical Society Museum, located at 4 Elm Street.

The Paul Pratt Building was built in 1903, a time in which there was a national movement to increase education and culture. Most were built with funds provided by Andrew Carnegie, however, the Pratt Building, while it was built in the same style as many of the Carnegie libraries, was funded privately by Cohasset resident Paul Pratt.

Pratt lived on South Main Street and was a merchant in Boston. When he died, he was very well off and his money was passed on to his two daughters. Neither one married and together, they gave the money to build the library. The land to build the library on was given by Samuel T. Snow, and Wadsworth's grandfather, Edward Nichols, designed the building.

Upon its completion, the building became a private library. However, there was another library, the Cohasset Free Public Library, which had books, but did not have a building in which to house them. The Pratt Library then offered some shelf space to the Free Library to keep its books, and for a time, Cohasset had two separate libraries under one roof. Over the years, the libraries merged into one public library under the Pratt Building's roof.

But the library outgrew its home and on March 3, 2003, the town celebrated the opening of what is now the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Ripley Road. With some construction the former Osgood School was turned into a new library for the town, and the Historical Society, which had outgrown its headquarters in the Lothrop House, took over the Pratt Building.

Antique Appraisal Day Nov. 4

Search the attic and the basement because that forgotten relic previously owned by Grandma could be worth some cash.

On Saturday, Nov. 4 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Cohasset residents will have the opportunity to find out the value of that heirloom, when the Council on Elder Affairs hosts the "Antique Appraisal Day" at St. Anthony's Parish Center.

James Callahan and Stuart Whitehurst, two well-known appraisers from Skinner Auctioneers and Appraisers who are often seen on the PBS hit show "Antiques Roadshow," will be on hand to evaluate items brought in and give their opinion as to what they might sell for. The cost is $10 to have one item appraised, $20 for two and $25 for three. Proceeds will help benefit the CEA, and there will be refreshments served, including donuts donated by French Memories, cider, and "walking potatoes" donated by the Angel Food Pantry. For those who are not familiar with walking potatoes, they are a baked potato with close to 40 possible toppings..

The event is being held as a fund-raiser, sponsored by the newly established Friends of the CEA. The Friends is a non-profit organization, charged with raising funds for the CEA.

While Skinner has experts in every area of appraisal, Callahan and Whitehurst, who will visit Cohasset, are "generalists," which means they have experience in many different areas of appraisal. For that reason, residents should not bring certain items to be appraised such as coins, stamps, jewelry and musical instruments, as they require an appraiser which specializes in that specific item. However, all other items are fair game. For services of china or silver, please bring one example of each piece in a set and a list of the total pieces in the set. For items that are too fragile or too large to be transported, a good quality photo will suffice.

For more information or to register, or to become a member of the Friends of the CEA, please contact the CEA at (781) 383-9112. To have John Campbell, Interim President of the Friends of the CEA, come by and take a photograph of your item, please contact him directly at (781) 383-0021 or on his cell phone at (617) 909-5687.

Wine at Grocery Stores

Let Massachusetts consumers decide for themselves if they want to buy wine at grocery stores.

Only two other states still have an outdated monopoly quota system on wine sales like Massachusetts.
In Massachusetts, a 72-year-old law still prohibits most grocery stores from selling wine. Some grocery stores can sell wine, but most can't – so liquor stores have a virtual monopoly.

☑ YES on 1 simply updates our law and makes it fair, so any qualified grocery store can get a license to sell wine if they get approval from their local city or town.

The Liquor Stores' scare campaign against Question 1 is just a deceptive attempt to protect their monopoly profits.
The Liquor Stores are paying for a scare campaign against Question 1 that makes false and deceptive claims about teen drinking and drunk driving. It's as absurd as having tobacco companies tell you they want to protect you against smoking.

"Most other states already allow grocery stores to sell wine and it doesn't create problems. What it does do is save consumers a lot time and money."

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Every vote counts

Your vote counts.

Tuesday's election is critical.

Who will be the next governor of Massachusetts?

Who will come out on top the race to represent us in the state Senate and in Congress?

Take a look at some of these heavily fought contests.

There is a four-way race in the tussle for governor: Republican Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey and her running mate Reed Hillman are facing off against Democrats Deval Patrick and his running mate, Timothy Murray; independent Christy Mihos and his running mate, John Sullivan; and Green-Rainbow Party candidate Grace Ross and her running mate, Martina Robinson.

Our local state senator has a rival. Republican state Sen. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth is facing Democratic opponent Stephen A. Lynch of Marshfield.

Incumbent Democratic Congressman William Delahunt is running against Republican challenger Jeffrey K. Beatty.

Democratic incumbent Edward M. Kennedy is squaring off with Republican Kenneth G. Chase for a seat in the U.S. Senate.

There are many other offices on the ballot, including races for attorney general, secretary of state, state treasurer, and Norfolk County commissioner.

In addition, there are also four important ballot questions. Please picture the results and consider how each question would impact your life should it be passed.

This is a two-sided ballot, so you have to flip it over to vote on the ballot questions.

Question 1 would allow food stores, meaning grocery stores and convenience stores, to sell wine.

Question 2 would allow candidates for public office to be nominated by more than one political party or political designation, have their names appear on the ballot once for each nomination, and have their votes counted separately for each nomination but then added together to determine the winner of the election.

Question 3 would allow licensed and other authorized providers of childcare in private homes under the state's subsidized child care system to bargain collectively with the state.

Question 4 would instruct the state representative from this district to vote in favor of a resolution to end the war in Iraq immediately and bring all the US troops home.

There are a lot of decisions to make on Nov. 7, decisions about who will serve us in elected office and decisions on ballot questions that will change some of our laws.

Cast your vote, and exercise your control over these decisions.

If you are wondering if your vote really makes a difference, take a look at these local true stories about what happened when that one person stayed home on Election Day.

- In the late 1980s, Steve Ivas was elected to the water board in Norwell by a margin of a single vote over Al Gunderway.
- In 1990, John Culhane defeated John Burt by exactly one vote in a race for the Holbrook planning board.
- In June, 1997, Sandwich defeated a $1.7 million Proposition 2 1/2 override by one vote. There was a recount, and the override passed by a single vote.
- In Braintree in 1991 there was a tie for tax collector between Vincent Joyce and James Sullivan? A recount gave Mr. Joyce the job by three votes.

Here's what happened in times and places far away.

- In 1839, Marcus Morton was elected governor of Massachusetts by one vote out of 102,966 cast.
- In 1910, Charles Bennett Smith defeated de Alva Stanwood Alexander by a single vote in a race for Congress in New York.
- The Afro-Shirazi Party won a majority in the Zanzibar legislature by a single vote in 1961. That one-vote margin was supplied by the delegate from the Chake-Chake District, who won his seat by a single vote.

The following is our personal favorite,

Once upon a time, a man named Randy Luthi and another fellow named Larry Call ran for the Wyoming Legislature from Jackson Hole.

They each got 1,941 votes.

There was a recount.

Again, they each got 1,941 votes.

The tie was finally resolved when a ping-pong ball bearing the name Luthi was drawn from a 10-gallon hat belonging to Gov. Mike Sullivan.

Cohasset is short on 10-gallon hats, so please come out and vote.

Her funeral procession, following Saturday's Mass, drove through part of each of those towns before reaching Woodside Cemetery.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Poor cell coverage

TO THE EDITOR:

Editor's Note: This letter was in Selectmen's correspondence.

I am writing to express my concern about the lack of adequate cell phone coverage along the ocean.

My concern comes in two areas: first, the public safety issue posed by this lack of coverage, and second, by conflicting (or confusing) opinions expressed by the Board.

Public Safety – As you are well aware walkers, runners, cyclists: many with strollers and young children, are continuously on Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road. This is wonderful, and one of the jewels of our town. But at the same time, there is a fair amount of automobile traffic, often traveling at bothersome speeds.

The first line of communication most of us have when we are away from our homes and we get involved in an accident, or have an emergency situation regarding our health, is our cell phone. Often times the difference between life and death is a matter of a few short minutes, and not being able to help ourselves or help others because our "life-line" doesn't work is unacceptable.

Board Position – You may have seen on the news this past week a story involving the town of Upton. The thrust of the story was the demands the governing bodies in Upton were making on the service providers to improve coverage. The Chief of Police and the Selectmen were taking a visible, unified position that this is a matter of public safety and must be corrected with urgency.

It is unclear in Cohasset what the priority is to get this safety issue addressed. While the technical solutions are well known and available (repeaters on light or telephone poles, for example) articles in the Mariner have quoted selectmen being concerned about the esthetics of those devices. In other articles, action and urgency seems to be expressed by other selectmen.

My request is for a very clear position on this issue from the Board of Selectmen, and for that position to be one of demanding urgency in forcing the service providers to insure coverage along the ocean.

George Chamillard

Preschool screening

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Public Schools has announced its schedule for screening of preschool-aged children. Parents should know that they do not need to wait to participate in such screenings if they feel their child may have a disability that impacts learning.

Parents have the right, at any time, to ask the school to evaluate their child to determine special education eligibility. The child must then be evaluated, and a finding of eligible or not-eligible made, within 45 school days of the school's receipt of the parent's written consent to evaluate. This process can be initiated by a parent for any child between the ages of 2-1/2 and 21.

HEALTH NOTES

Trying to make trans fats history

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Food and Drug Administration has recently opened an offensive on Trans Fats. Trans fats became a part of our diet at the beginning of the 20th Century when German chemist Wilhelm Normann showed that liquid oils could be hydrogenated and patented the process in 1902. Soon thereafter, vegetable oils and other fats were industrially modified through partial hydrogenation, and first commercialized by Procter & Gamble as Crisco (composed largely of partially hydrogenated cottonseed oil) in 1909.

Since then we have been eating an increasing amount of trans fats in our diets. Unlike other fats, trans fats are neither required nor beneficial for health. Several recent studies confirm that eating trans fat increases the risk of coronary heart disease as a function of the percentage of trans fat in one's diet. For these reasons, health authorities worldwide recommend that consumption of trans fat be reduced to trace amounts. Trans fats from partially hydrogenated oils are generally considered to be worse than those occurring naturally. By 1988 there were suggestions in the scientific literature that trans fats could be a cause of the large increase in coronary artery disease. By 1994, it was estimated that trans fats caused 30,000 deaths annually in the US from heart disease. Recently, the FDA has concluded that the primary health threat associated with trans fat consumption is an elevated risk of coronary heart disease (CHD).

By 1994, it was estimated that trans fats caused 30,000 deaths annually in the US from heart disease.

On the other hand: Cooking fats and oils play an important role in nutrition by providing a concentrated source of energy for the body. They are used to store energy in the body, insulate body tissues and transport fat-soluble vitamins through the blood. They also enhance food flavor, making baked products tender and conducting heat during cooking.

About fats

Production of trans fats increased steadily until the 1960s as artificially created trans fats replaced saturated animal fats in the US and other western countries. At first, the argument was a financial one due to lower costs, however, advocates also said, mistakenly, that the trans fats in margarine were healthier than the saturated fats of butter. Butter is less than 4 percent polyunsaturated and contains many healthful substances including vitamins (A, D, E, and K), omega-3 acids, and protection against intestinal infections, as well as selenium.

Melting Point — The densest fat used in cooking is lard, which remains solid at room temperatures and somewhat higher. Other fats and oils have lower melting points with most oils having melting points which keep them liquid to temperatures well below freezing. Some associate the melting point of a fat with body temperature and conclude that fats with melting points higher than body temperature are bad because they form products, which lodge in ones arteries and cause coronary artery disease. Such a conclusion is unwarranted. It's much more complicated than that. There are combinations of fats and oils like butter and mayonnaise, but most cooking fats have melting points depending

Safety, Safety, Safety

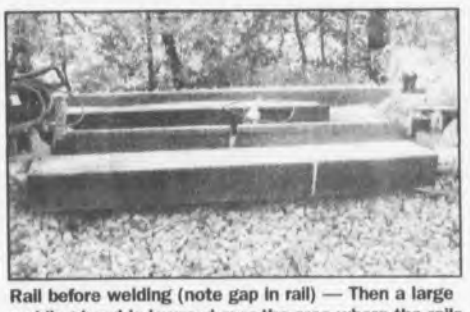
MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

It's all about safety. We've had a number of comments from residents about safety and the train. In some cases it concerns adults or children either accidentally or on purpose entering the right of way. Other times calls deal with the fact that the fencing along the right of way is not complete, so there is easy access to the track area. Yet we can all see that that there is equipment traveling on the tracks as a part of the construction project. We can't emphasize enough: it is never safe to enter the track area, fence or no fence! In fact fences may help safety, but they don't make for a safe railroad. Only people can make the train safe. Safety is a message we have repeated in these articles over and over. The tracks are very dangerous places at any time. In fact, they may be even more dangerous during construction when a wide variety of equipment may travel at totally random times.

Starting in December, the Police Department in conjunction with the Schools will begin an in-school education program about railroad safety. The safety-training program is a nationwide program called "Operation Life Saver." You can find information about the program on the web at http://www.oli.org/. You should be hearing more about this from the schools as the program gets underway. Formalized training aside, each parent should still spend time with their children to emphasize safety.

Town Parking Lot and safety – This office has had numerous phone calls about safety at the Depot Court / Pleasant Street / Ripley Road intersection. If you boil down the substance of most calls they deal with drivers speed and lack of consideration for pedestrians trying to make their way across this construction area. In some instances, we've even had pedestrians almost struck as cars zoom into the exit side of the Town Parking Lot. That does seem to be a bit inconsiderate, at least to us.



Rail before welding (note gap in rail) — Then a large welding head is lowered over the area where the rails will be welded together.

As you can see the MBTA is not finished with construction in this area. We are currently working with CBB to put the final paving on most of the lot before the snow flies. There will still be some work to do in the spring, but this paving will make it smoother for the time being.

More arcane stuff – Last week we talked about the "tamper" that leveled and aligned the new tracks. After we observed that interesting operation we had a chance to go to Weymouth and watch the rail being welded. Truly, this was another amazing operation. Picture this: Two very long strings of rail (about 1500 feet long or longer) have been laid and clamped firmly to the concrete ties. The two pieces of rail are laid so that they have a gap of about one inch between them. Each of the two pieces of rail is gripped by a 160-ton hydraulic jack that literally pulls the rails and all of the ties together totally closing up the gap. See the photos and captions for more details.

Mark Brennan, Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Engineering, Email: cgbengineering@townofcohasset.org Phone: 781-383-3094

Welding head lowered into place — A very large diesel generator located in a special truck located on the tracks powers the welding head where 40,000 amps at 8 volts is passed through the joint. This melts 1-1/2 inches of rail fusing the two ends together. Compare this amperage with the normal home electrical circuit breaker rating of 15 or 20 amps or the supply to our homes of 200 amps. The actual welding operation takes about 7 minutes.

Rail after welding —When the welding head is removed the connection is nearly perfect and requires almost no additional smoothing. The two pieces of rail are now totally fused together making a perfect joint. This is clearly not the way they built your father's railroad.

Success needs more than marathon effort

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Yeah yeah, for years I've heard marathoners whine about "hitting the wall". I guess I just assumed they were speaking figuratively, and that with a little more hard work and persistence, etc.

Recently I read about a study that suggests greatness is achieved mainly through hard work, perseverance, and a bit of good luck, and that inherent talent plays a much smaller role than one would expect. This sort of news is of course heartening to those of us with little-to-no talent, aside from our ability to recite the original version of Star Wars line for line, with optional sound effects. ("Ooteenee!") This idea goes down easy with us Americans especially, because although we're actually a bunch of lazy slobs, we like to think that at any time we could rise up from the couch, throw on a few clothes, and go out and change the world, just as all those first-generation immigrants did in the past. If we happen to wake up one morning with a single-minded obsession for sculpting or football or pork belly futures there's no reason we can't become the greatest pork belly futures guy ever.

It's a very positive philosophy, but unfortunately I know of at least two cases where it breaks down. One is long distance running. This year I decided to run my first marathon. I ran cross-country track in high school and in the years since I've watched a lot of marathon coverage from my couch, so I felt I was ready. Now, I never thought running a marathon would be easy, but I always assumed I could do it. First of all, my sister-in-law did it. You would think that if the average sister-in-law can finish a marathon — and between you and me I think calling her "average" is being a little generous — certainly I can do it, right? I figured the worst that would happen is that I would run the first 25 or so miles and walk the rest. What I didn't count on is what I call the reverse-Pinocchio effect, where at about mile 19 your Real Boy legs turn to wood and your dehydrated brain causes you to hallucinate about blue fairies and, in severe cases, spontaneously break into song.

Yeah yeah, for years I've heard marathoners whine about "hitting the wall". I guess I just assumed they were speaking figuratively, and that with a little more hard work and persistence, etc... Well, I'm here to tell you they weren't kidding. I do not like hypothetical limitations becoming real and physical. What's next for me, a glass ceiling? A cellophane barricade? Latex, uh, obstructors of some kind? None of it sits well with my "never quit until lunchtime" attitude. Which reminds me, when I was 14 I learned that it is possible to eat one too many pancakes. That was a bummer of a revelation too.

The other problem with this theory — that perseverance, not extraordinary talent, is the key to success — is that it doesn't explain the achievements of someone like Bach. J.S. Bach is one of only two reasons I believe in a higher power, the other one being that if I didn't, I wouldn't get free glazed donut holes every Sunday morning. This is a guy who banged out a 50-page cantata every week for years. You look at one of these things and the page is so dense with notes that roll on and on, up and down, doing loop-d-loops—it's indecipherable. And then you hear the Vancouver Chamber Choir performing "Gloria In Excelsis Deo" and you want to cry, it's so gorgeous and perfect. No doubt he worked hard too, but clearly Bach was colluding with angels. When I die I may find myself in a cold, dark pit, but if I hear a Bach Chorale somewhere in the distance I'll know all is well. If I hear Hillary Duff I'll know I'm in deep yogurt.

No historian I spoke to would say whether J.S. Bach did any long distance running, which I find highly suspicious. But had he run marathons I feel sure Bach would have won every race, despite the wig and the flannel robes. Not by training harder than the others, but by cheating — using his extraordinary talents and heavenly connections to place invisible barriers in front of his opponents, or slip NyQuil into their Gatorade...

Hmmmmmm.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, but is currently in New York City singing "I've Got No Strings" on Broadway, though according to the marathon route map he's supposed to be on Fifth Avenue.

Test scores show significant improvement

FROM THE SUPERINTENDENT'S DESK

DENISE WALSH

Overall, every grade level that was tested has met their A.Y.P., based on the C.P.I. (composite performance index) set for the district.

I am pleased to announce that an examination of the Adequate Yearly Progress (A.Y.P.) and MCAS results of 2006 shows significant improvement in student performance in many areas.

In grade 10 – 100 percent of our students passed both the Mathematics and English Language Arts portions of the MCAS test. Of those students, 93 percent scored in the Advanced or Proficient categories. The Boston Globe (using Advanced and Proficient scores) ranked Cohasset #10 of 280 districts in grade 10 Mathematics and #14 of 280 districts in grade 10 English Language Arts.

Examining grade 8 results – 30 percent scored Advanced in grade 8 Mathematics (#1 in the region according to The Boston Globe rankings), and 25 percent scored Advanced in grade 8 English Language Arts (ranking #4 in the region).

Overall, every grade level that was tested has met their A.Y.P., based on the C.P.I. (composite performance index) set for the district.

While we identify many areas that show significant student performance, we also have identified focus areas for attention.

In grade 3 Reading, the goal continues to be to increase the number of students performing in the Advanced category. The impact of the newly adopted Scott Foresman Reading Program K-2 and the development of a full-day Kindergarten program is yet to be felt.

In grade 4 Mathematics and English Language Arts, we continue to increase the data analysis, professional development opportunities, and use of consultants in Math and ELA to strengthen our programs. We also continue to expand challenging enrichment opportunities through EMC^3.

Finally, Science and Technology results in grade 5 and 8 emphasize the need to continue to expand the Science curriculum and include additional engineering concepts K-8. We appreciate the support of the PSO, as well as Cohasset Education Foundation, as we move forward with these efforts. It does take a village . . .

LIBRARY CORNER

Page position available — The Library is looking for an organized, detail-oriented Cohasset resident to fill a part-time Page position. Applicant must be 16 years or older. Responsibilities include shelving library materials, shelf reading, and light cleaning. Weekend and Mother's hours available. Call Gayle Walsh 383-1348x120.

Artist reception —Meet local artist Diana Rousseau at a reception on Sunday, Nov. 5th, from 5-7pm in the Meeting Room. The South Shore Art Center is sponsoring an exhibit of Rousseau's landscape paintings beginning Nov. 1st through Dec. 31st at the Paul Pratt Library. Gallery Hours: Monday, Tues., Thursday 10-8pm, Wed., Friday, 10 am -5pm, Sat. 9am-5pm, and Sundays 2-5pm.

Holiday closing — The library will be closed Saturday, November 11th in observance of Veteran's Day.

Knitting group — The knitting group will meet on two Wednesdays each month. November meetings are on Nov. 8th and 15th in the Meeting Room from 10-11:30 am. Edna Finegan, from the Senior Knitting Group, will be our instructor. All knitting levels welcome.

MamaSteph – will perform in the Meeting Room of Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 10:30 a.m., Mondays, through Nov. 27. All ages and communities welcome. Registration is not required. Funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Drop-in Story Time – will take place in the Children's Story Room Tuesdays, through Nov. 28, at 10:30 a.m. This is a lap-sit program that welcomes all ages and communities. Children must be accompanied by a caregiver.

Letters About Literature –This program asks students in grades four through 12 to write letters to authors whose work has made a difference in their lives. It invites personal and reflective writing about reading.

LAL is sponsored in Massachusetts by the Massachusetts Center for the Book, with funding from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum, and is a project that feeds into the national program that is run by the Library of Congress with funding from Target.

Local winners receive their awards in a ceremony at the State House. Last year, Madeline Blackburn and Foster Eymer won level 1 honorable mention.

To view their letters and read more award0winning letters go to massbook.org. Entry forms are available at massbook.org, Paul Pratt Memorial Library and school libraries.

Entry deadline is Dec. 8. See Mrs. Moody or email, smoody@ocln.org for more information.

Let's fill in the Big Dig!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Sometimes I wish we could fill in the Big Dig and start all over with just a shovel and a pail and someone in charge who knew what he was doing.

Are the guys who carved out the Channel between Britain and France available? No? Well, how about the guys who built the pyramids? They have managed to stay up for millennia. The Big Dig has lasted — how many months?

Just when we thought the problem was solved after Governor Romney tied a can to Chairman Matt Amorello and began an investigation into the work of the engineering firm of Bechtel/Parsons Brinkerhoff, what do you suppose happens?

Why Matt's successor, John Cogliano, hand-picked by Governor Mitt, hires Bechtel/Parsons Brinkerhoff to inspect repairs to the Big Dig and even approved another $8 million to retain B/PB engineers as consultants.

What is that they say about the fox and the henhouse?

One of the oddities of the current Big Dig contretemps, coming in the midst of nasty gubernatorial campaign, is that neither side can point to the responsibility of the other for the $14 billion project that cost a woman her life under a collapsed ceiling.

"It is not acceptable for Bechtel engineers to participate in any inspections," said Kerry Healy, the Republican candidate. "This is a situation that is deeply disturbing to us."

"What we have seen is consistently shoddy leadership and management and this has got to change," was the best Deval Patrick, the Democratic candidate, could do.

"We're watching Bechtel with the eye of an eagle," said Governor Mitt, just in from a trade mission to a state somewhere west of Pittsfield.

"We do not have a cozy, friendly relationship with Bechtel. Instead, it's a very arm's length, professional relationship and their job is to complete the Big Dig."

As they have been doing for the past 20 years, no doubt.

As I recall, a Democrat named Mike was governor when the first shovelful of dirt was taken from the Big Dig and . . . bear with me now, this was a long time ago . . . and I remember a guy named Salvaggi or Salvucci. That's about the extent my recollection.

Over the years, responsibility for the Big Dig came under the Mass Turnpike Authority and, for 16 years, Republican governors have had the opportunity to name members to the Authority. The notorious Matt Amorello was a Republican senator.

All that proves is that Republicans are no different than Democrats when opportunity knocks, whatever that means.

Remember McKee, Berger Mansueto? It was the construction firm that bribed its way into building the UMass-Boston campus in Dorchester. After an investigation, two senators, Joseph DiCarlo, a Democrat, and Robert MacKenzie, a Republican, went to jail.

My house is about 100 feet from the Greenbush rail line as it passes through East Braintree. The crossing where the tracks cross my street has been closed for some four or five months. I have watched them work on it as I sit at my desk.

That presents a serious problem — What shall I wear when they summon me to testify before the grand jury?

Harbormaster's boat is waste of money

COMMENTARY

BILL STONE

We cannot afford this luxury. Just look at all the cuts the various departments have had to make. Gee, we can't even afford to have all the streetlights turned on.

I read with interest, of the Harbor Department's request for $70,000 to purchase a new patrol boat.

I would like to give you the opinion of a person with over 50 years experience lobstering out of Cohasset harbor.

This boat is not needed and would be a frivolous waste of money.

The area proposed to be patrolled, is outside of Cohasset Harbor and is already covered by the Coast Guard with two trips a day almost every day. There are approximately 35 lobster boats from Cohasset in this area, on between 150 to 200 days a year. They all have radio, cell phones, and first aid kits. I have never heard of a lobster boat refusing to tow a boat in at the end of a workday. Just because the Harbormaster has the authority to enforce the laws in this area, it does not mean we need a boat to do it. We cannot afford to baby-sit the boating public when they run out of gas. As for rendering assistance in a case of an accident, any one with experience on the water will tell you the only help that is any good, is from boats already at the scene at the time of the accident.

The Harbor Department is not like the fire and police departments where we do need quick response time.

As I understand it, the present patrol boats were given to the town. If the state wants us to have these boats, they should also pay for the maintenance.

We cannot afford this luxury. Just look at all the cuts the various departments have had to make. Gee, we can't even afford to have all the streetlights turned on.

Instead of trying to find ways to raise the harbor fees, I suggest we should find a way to cut expenses. The harbor is part of the transportation system of the town, and should be supported by the exorbitant real estate tax we, as residents, are forced to pay. I don't know of anyone who has received a bill for every time the road in front of his house has been repaired or plowed. Maybe we could put tollbooths at all the town boundaries to help pay for the roads. The harbor is nothing more than a wet road, used for the transport of goods and services.

I would suggest making the harbormaster's position, part-time, just like the clam warden.

I held this job, along with Cliff Dixon, in the early 60's, as interim harbormaster until Harry Ritter was appointed. It was a part-time job then, (at $100 yearly, plus an hourly wage) if still is. The harbormaster worked under the direction of the highway surveyor, Louis Bailey, who very efficiently supervised this system. The harbor ran just as well then, as it does now. At that time we replaced most of the moorings because of a dredging project, adjusted moorings to accommodate persons desires to either increase or decrease the size of a boat, plus we built floats and runways. All done by the harbor personnel, not some outside company.

Let's define the harbormaster's duties, which end at the breakwater. They certainly don't consist of only supervising personnel from a luxury office. The harbormaster's shack was given to the town. Others and myself replaced the floor including the joists. It was to be used solely to provide shelter during stormy weather while watching the boats. It is not worth putting a lot of money into. If the "shack" needs repair, department personnel, with the town liable for materials only, should handle it. With the exception of welding, all repairs to floats and other town owned facilities should be handled "in house." The harbor department has grown disproportionately large to the simple needs of the town.

I noticed another expense of $10,000. Part of which would be used to add floats to Government Islands.

What is wrong with the existing system? Except for the need to shorten the S. W. end to minimize the scooping of foam from the dam-stream, the floats are fine. You can't expect to tie up any more skiffs at the landing without increasing the number of available parking spaces. Any extensions to the N.E. side will limit access to the wall, which is used for loading and unloading. Sometimes decisions are made without fully investigating the consequences.

Do you really want to take the advice to spend money on a wish list, from a person who has been on the job just a few months?

These are just the perceptions of an old fisherman who has "been there."

Selectmen are not well versed on school technology needs

COMMENTARY

BOB PATTISON JR.

Another selectman mentioned trying to update these computers. That is just not a viable option. It would be like putting new seats in a 1974 Pinto.

The last two issues of the Mariner contained several articles regarding technology in the schools that have compelled me to respond. The comments by some of the selectmen clearly demonstrate they have a lack of understanding of the current state of technology in the schools and the direction that it needs to go. Gary Vanderweil said he doesn't see the need for 700 computers for 1500 students. It frustrates me to hear people opine on subjects in which they are not well versed. The reality is that 700 computers are not nearly enough.

Today's curriculum, at all levels, is not only delivered through lectures, textbooks, chalk and blackboards; it is also delivered through PowerPoint presentations, on-line video, and content rich CD's and DVD's that accompany almost every textbook. Countless websites and software packages enhance the curriculum and learning experience. Pen and paper has been replaced with word processing software. Email and instant messaging are the preferred method of communication. All of this requires as many computers as possible.

According to the Technology Plan posted on the schools' website, they have a student to computer ratio of 2.2 to 1 and that does exceed the Massachusetts Department of Education recommendation of a 5 to 1 ratio. But, that is a benchmark standard for the year 2003 and that ratio is lowered if some of those PC's are inoperable or inadequate. (The DOE's ultimate goal is a one to one ratio.) Many of the schools' computers are inadequate by today's standards and not considered modern by the DOE today.

At my son's parent-teacher conference at the Osgood School last week his teacher told me about great reading software the school owns but can't use because the school's computers can't run the software. How can it be possible that Osgood's computers can't run the software? The majority of them are running Windows 98 operating system, which is isn't even supported by Microsoft anymore. Another selectman mentioned trying to update these computers. That is just not a viable option. It would be like putting new seats in a 1974 Pinto. The best option is to replace them. New computers would not only benefit the users but the technical department as well. Besides being able to run modern software, new computers can be managed, updated, inventoried, and monitored remotely.

Speaking of the technology department, it is woefully understaffed. The DOE recommends one full-time network administrator per district and one full-time tech support person for every 100-200 computers. The schools have neither. Based on the schools' 700 computers, they should have 3.5 tech support personnel. Having sufficient technical staff prolongs the life of the computers by enabling proper maintenance and keeps computer up time at a maximum level.

Lest one think me hypocritical for preaching on a subject I'm unfamiliar with, I am a Microsoft Certified Systems Engineer and I've been the Network Administrator for the Milton Public Schools for the past six years.

Tom Callahan said in a recent article that computers need to be "up to snuff" because they are the wave of the future. While I appreciate the sentiment, computers were the wave of the future in 1985. We are almost into the year 2007, deeply entrenched in the computer age and we can't afford handicap the students with inadequate equipment. The bottom line is that a firm commitment to technology must be made to ensure their success. I urge residents who attend the upcoming town meeting to consider funding technology improvements in the schools from the capital budget.

Briefs

No board meetings on Election Day

Election Day is Tuesday, Nov. 7, and in Cohasset, the polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Town Hall. Town Clerk Marion Douglas recently sent a memo to all boards and committees, asking them not to schedule any meetings during polling hours, "as it puts voters in a potential conflict situation between voting and attending public meetings," she stated.

Douglas said Massachusetts General Laws prohibit public hearings of the Zoning Board of Appeals on any applications for special permits or variances on Election Day. This also applies to any board that might be having a hearing related to those types of applications. The Elections Division also strongly discourages any board or committee from meeting during polling hours.

Town Web site up and running

Just a reminder, the town Web site is up and running and is being updated daily. The site can be accessed at www.townofcohasset.org. Meeting calendars, meeting minutes, important town forms and information on town boards can all be found at the site.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

By Bob Katzen

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records how the representatives and senators' votes on two roll calls from prior legislative sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$1.5 MILLION FOR EARLY EDUCATION PROVIDERS (H. 5401)

House 153-0; Senate 37-0; Governor Deval Patrick's veto of the entire $1.5 million in funding to provide professional development grants for early education and care providers. Supporters of the $1.5 million said that it is important to help these providers further their education and to attract workers to boost the state's commitment to a program of voluntary, universally accessible high-quality early childhood education for all preschool-aged children. In his veto message, Romney said that he vetoed the $1.5 because it was inconsistent with his original budget proposal. (A "Yes" vote is for the $1.5 million).

$149,742 FOR MENTAL HEALTH LEGAL ADVISORS (H. 5000)

House 133-20; Senate 38-0; Senate overrides Gov. Romney's veto (2/3 vote necessary) of an amendment to increase funding from $75,248 to $603,500 in funding for the Mental Health Legal Advisors Committee. Supporters of the $149,742 said that the funding is important to ensure the protection of the legal rights of persons involved in mental health and retardation programs in the state. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. (A "Yes" vote is to override the $149,742. A "No" vote supports the veto and $149,742).

ALSO UPON BEACON HILL:

LICENSE PLATE THEFT (S. 1836): The Senate gave its approval and sent to the House legislation creating a new crime of "buying, selling or dealing in stolen license plates." The proposal imposes up to a one-year prison sentence or $500 fine on violators. Supporters said that current law treats this crime as larceny, and imposes only a small fine.

INTERFERING WITH TRAINS AND SUBWAYS (H. 5111): The House approved and sent to the Senate a proposal creating a new crime of "interfering with the operation of any train or subway." The measure imposes a range of jail sentences and fines on anyone who "knowingly or willfully" places objects on the tracks or generally disrupts, delays, prevents or interferes with the vehicle's operation.

SHAKEN BABY SYNDROME (H. 4903): The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill requiring the state to develop and implement a statewide Shaken Baby Syndrome Prevention Initiative to reduce death and disability of infants from the condition that occurs when a caregiver intentionally shakes a baby too hard. Provisions include providing parents of a newborn with education materials prior to leaving the hospital or birth center; providing education and training to appropriate health care providers and other professionals who serve or have contact with children and development of a program to support victims and families affected by shaken baby syndrome. Supporters said that it is the number one non-accidental way that infants and children under two are killed in the United States and noted that more than half of infants and children who receive shaken baby syndrome suffer from permanent disabilities. They argued that the measure would save lives, prevent injuries and save millions of dollars in health care costs.

RAISE CAP ON RETIREES' ALLOWABLE EARNINGS (H. 5111): The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill allowing retired public state and local employees to continue working in a public job as long as the combination of their pension and new salary does not exceed $15,000 the salary they earned when they retired. Current law prohibits the combination from exceeding the salary at retirement and does not allow the additional $15,000. Under current law, and the proposed bill's salary limitation, retirees are required to return any earnings that are in excess of the allowable amount. Supporters said that many retirees cannot live on their pensions and should be allowed to earn more money than is presently allowed under current law. They cited many police officers who would like to supplement their income by working on police details in their local communities.

MCAS CHANGES: The state Board of Education voted [illegible] MCAS requirements that raise the standards for students to obtain a high school diploma beginning with the class of 2010. The new regulations raise the current passing scores on the English and math portions [illegible] score students must achieve to receive a 220 to complete an Educational Proficiency Plan in order to qualify for a high school diploma. The Board also added a science, technology and engineering exam to the [illegible] with the class of 2010 and a history exam beginning with the class of 2012.

VOLUNTARY HEALTH HISTORIES REGISTRY FOR THE BIOLOGICAL PARENTS OF ADOPTED CHILDREN (H.5031): The House approved and sent to the Senate a measure requiring the Department of Public Health to study the possible creation of a voluntary health [illegible]. The registry would include information provided voluntarily from biological parents of adopted persons about family and parental health histories and would allow adoptees to update their personal [illegible]. The study would also examine how the information could be kept anonymous and confidential and be updated by the parents and accessed by the children.

WHO'S THE CHAMP? (H. 4905): The House approved [illegible] Senate legislation designating the town of Natick as "The Home of Champions" and the city of Brockton as "The City of Champions." Both communities have been [illegible] The bill included only Natick's designation but was later amended to include Brockton.

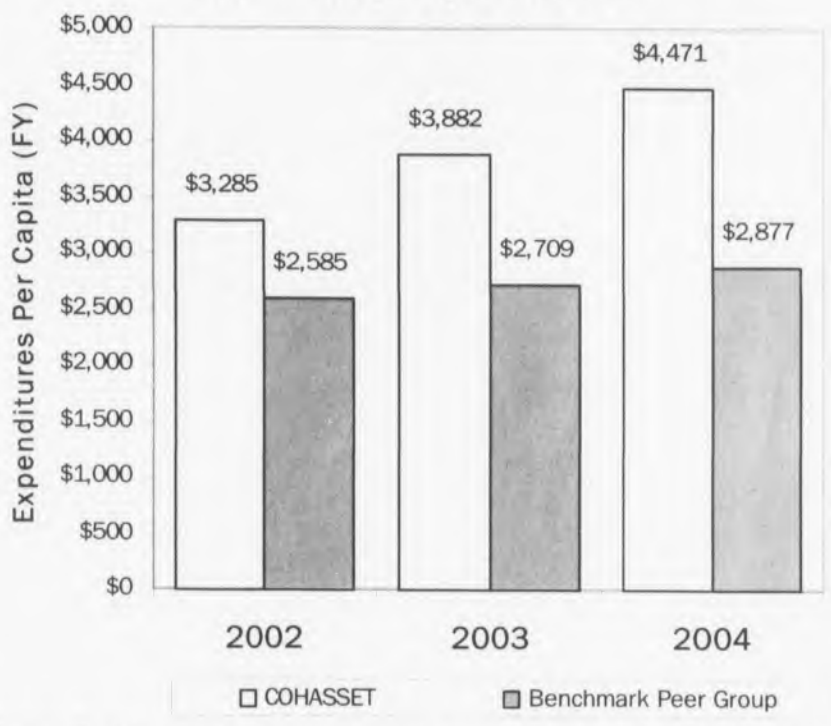
How does Cohasset measure up?

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

Community Expenditures



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Expenditures are general fund expenditures.

This chart looks at Cohasset's expenditures per capita for fiscal years 2002, 2003 and 2004. By looking at aggregate expenditures on a per capita basis, one can get a sense for how much Cohasset has spent to serve each resident. The chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

HEALTH NOTES

Trying to make trans fats history

on the amount of hydrogen or saturation in the molecules, of which they are made.

Saturated and Unsaturated fats — Food chemists use three levels of saturation for fats, saturated, monounsaturated, polyunsaturated, plus unsaturated (for oil) . Fats and mixtures have different melting points depending on the degree of saturation. Trans fats are oils completely saturated with hydrogen in an industrial process. The polyunsaturates are incompletely saturated oils.

So, what is to be done?

It's all on the label — In January, percentage of trans fats will be on all food labels. But even now they are already listed on many. If you're interested in lowering or removing trans fat from your diet you should visit the only health store in Cohasset. It's called All the Best at 1 Pleasant St. on Depot Court in the village, a natural foods supermarket with no trans fats anywhere.

If it tastes good people will eat more — However, the biggest change in our diet over the past few decades is not the ingredients but the quantity of food that we eat. When coupled with a simultaneous decrease in exercise, the number of excess calories consumed has exploded (along with our waistlines). The trans fat diet exported by companies like MacDonald's, etc. has become a major driver for the outbreak of obesity worldwide not only just in the U.S.

Girls soccer aims for trifecta over Carver

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The odds were pretty high that the Cohasset High girls soccer team would run into a familiar foe when the Div. 3 state tournament kicked off this weekend.

The Skippers were one of six teams from the South Shore League to qualify for the postseason, joining league champion Norwell, Abington, East Bridgewater, Carver and Mashpee.

Cohasset has earned the 5-seed in the sectional, and will host 12th seeded Carver in the first round. Date and time were unavailable at the Mariner's press time on Thursday, but all pairings and schedules are available today on the MIAA's tournament web site, miaa.ezstream.net.

The Skippers finished the regular season with a 13-3-2 record, with a 9-3-2 league record that was good enough for third place (and just one point behind second place Abington). Cohasset also enters the tournament with momentum, as the team is riding an eight-game unbeaten streak and a three-game winning streak.

Cohasset also enters the tournament with momentum, as the team is riding an eight-game unbeaten streak and a three-game winning streak.

The most recent of those wins came Monday over Holbrook in a 3-0 decision. Sophomore Maggie McGoldrick scored two goals, with fellow sophomore Torey Hart tallying the other.

This was also Senior Night, as the team's 10 graduates-to-be played in their last regular season home game. Those 10 are: Emily Coggins (captain), Caren Garber (captain), Lara Novak (captain), Kara Wilcox (captain), Shalea Daly, Alyssa Hinman, Karoline Holt, Haley Haracz, Jamie Genovese and Colleen Richardson.

Skippers head coach Deb Beal described Monday's game as a rather physical affair, as Holbrook had a lot on the line in its last game of the season.

"They needed a point to qualify for tournament, and we made it clear they weren't going to get it from us," said Beal.

And with that, the girls have spent the rest of the week preparing for what they hope will be a deep tournament run. The Carver game will feature the league's two top scorers, the Crusaders' Tina Gillen and Hart, who finished second with 38 points (17 goals, 21 assists).

Field hockey hopes 3rd time with EB is a charm

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Today marks an important milestone for the 2006 Cohasset High field hockey team.

The Skippers enter their first and, hopefully, not their last game in the Div. 2 state tournament. They travel to East Bridgewater to square off against the Vikings.

Yes, the Vikings won the South Shore League, earning an 8-seed in the tournament. The Skippers, finishing third in the league, are seeded ninth. And the Skippers have tied (3-3) and lost (3-0) to the Vikings during the regular season.

"The fact that we've already played them works both for us and against us," explained senior captain Molly Gallagher. "We know that aside from a few superstars, they're not a deep team. Still, they can be somewhat intimidating, which is something we'll need to get over."

"It will be a challenge, but this is a very winnable game," said head coach Deb Bostwick. "It will be essential to put a damper on Jessica Roberts."

Roberts, an All-American, recently tallied her 100th career goal.

The Skippers have a lot going for them at this key point in the season. When the lights finally went out at the end of the regular season, the Skippers finished with a 12-4-2 record.

This admirable finish earned a third place tie in the league with nemesis Carver. Part of the success lies in the highly effective diagonal defense that has worked wonders for Cohasset. Of the 12 wins in the regular season, seven of them came in the form of shutouts.

"These shutouts start with the solid defense of the midfielders," observed Bostwick. "Then, the defense seems unbreakable. We have such a deep defensive bench that they never tire. Finally, Alyssa [Mullin] always stays on her toes. She's a very smart player. Alyssa has really improved her positioning skills."

No surprise to find Cohasset well represented on the SSL All-Star team. Senior captains Sheelah Scott and Laura Campedelli, along with junior Sally Meehan made the cut. Senior captains Caitlin Hurley and Alida Tangherlini and junior Corinna Durham earned honorable mentions.

Bostwick pointed out a couple specific areas in need of improvement if the players expect to make waves in the playoffs. Defensively, the Skippers need to improve their weak side coverage in their infamous diagonal defense.

"Outside defenders sometimes cheat over to the middle too much if the ball is coming down on the opposite side. This leaves the weak side opponent open for a shot," said the coach.

The one they've been waiting for

CHS gridders get their shot at Abington

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Skippers at Abington Tonight, 7 p.m.

For the Cohasset High football team, today is a day the players have been looking forward to for a while.

For some, tonight's game against undefeated defending Div. 3 Super Bowl champion Abington has been on minds since the schedule came out last summer.

For those who were part of last year's fixture, a 36-22 Abington win at Alumni Field, tonight's game has likely been on their minds for a year.

"We've been more than happy to remind them of last year and how it happened," Skippers head coach Pete Afanasiw on Thursday. "This is a big game, especially for our seniors. For them, knocking these guys off would make up for the bumps in the road we've had so far."

The coach and his players know this will be a difficult task. Abington is 8-0 this year, 4-0 in South Shore League play, and have done it in large part behind a stout defense.

"We're going to have to be able to move the football, sustain drives and then finish them off," said Afanasiw. "Abington has had something like six goal line stands over the past year. They have that attitude that they're not letting you into the end zone. A big key for us is scoring when we get in the red zone."

One of those goal line stands was in last year's one-point Super Bowl win over Archbishop Williams, and the latest came in last week's 6-0 win at Norwell. The Clippers, having held the ball for the entire third quarter, found themselves with a first-and-goal at Abington's 1.

Four plays later, Norwell still wasn't in the end zone, and instead were playing defense after a turnover on downs.

Cohasset will be aiming for a different outcome, and will be doing so with a new-look running game. Senior Anthony DiPaolo has switched positions, from quarterback to running back alongside junior Brian Hill. Taking over behind center is junior David Snowdale, who has impressed coaches with how quickly he is learning his responsibilities in his new role.

The Skippers have had to make adjustments in their backfield due to the injuries of junior fullbacks PJ McCaw and Kyle McGoldrick (10-12-22) finished second on the team and also in the top five of the league's scoring table. While tournament opponents' defensive focus will start with these two players, Beal points out that they combined for just over a third of the team's goals. Garber, Wilcox, junior Meg Anderson and sophomore Kristin Monaco have all been consistent threats in the Skippers' attack this season and are more than capable of scoring goals if defenders are looking elsewhere.

Beal said the team has continued to practice developing a complete attack, whether it is shooting, passing, supporting or making a run.

"We want to continue our possession style of play and create opportunities that increase our scoring chances," said the coach. "I believe in this team and they believe in themselves. We have made tremendous strides over the past several years and I can see the seasons getting better and better. For now, though, we need to stop, relax, take a deep breath and just play our game."

Beal said her girls are feeling confident going into tournament, but realize nothing will come easy. Cohasset beat Carver twice this season, 4-2 at home and 2-0 on the road, with the scores in both instances being indicative of how the game was played.

The Skippers realize, though, that past results matter little in the postseason.

"They know this is going to be a tough game. I think their heads are on square," Beal said.

Five Skippers named to league All-Star team

At this week's league coaches meeting, five Cohasset players were named to the SSL All-Star team, the most in the program's history.

Hart, McGoldrick, Sarah Coggins, Sammie Lehr and Johanna Brophy were all voted to the team by league coaches. Only Norwell, with six, had more representatives.

"We were very fortunate to get five players selected to the team and I firmly believe they are some of the best in the league," said Beal. "And the best part is, they are all sophomores."

FROM HOCKEY, PAGE 17

In the midfield, Bostwick plans to work on positioning so the girls' feet don't get in the way of the ball (a turnover results from kicking the ball, even accidentally). With a few minor adjustments, these pesky turnovers can transform into Cohasset possessions.

Finally, Bostwick feels that her forwards need to capitalize more on their offensive corners. A combination of improvements in these areas all over the field will hopefully give the Skippers an edge in the week to come.

Aside from the points mentioned above, the Skippers put on a show in their final three regular season games.

The first win came in a decisive 4-1 victory over Westwood. Fifteen minutes in, Meehan assisted Campedelli. Two minutes later, junior Katina Martone knocked in a pass from senior Virginia Spofford. Aside from a Westwood goal with five minutes in the half, the Skippers controlled the field.

Still not satisfied, junior Corinna Durham found the net eight minutes into the second half. Scott sealed the envelope on a goal assisted by Campedelli with two minutes left.

Two days later, on Wednesday the 25th, the Skippers hosted Silver Lake on Cohasset's Senior Day. Apparently, the recognition of their accomplishments lit a fire under the seniors, as "every single one of them played an outstanding game," according to Bostwick.

With seconds left in the first half, Campedelli connected with Meehan on an offensive corner. Meehan then assisted Martone to put the Skippers up 1-0 at the half.

The second half featured more Cohasset domination, with Martone feeding Scott with nine minutes left to seal a 2-0 win. Sophomore midfielder Georgia Murley also received recognition for an outstanding game.

Two days later, the Skippers delighted in another opportunity to govern as they made the trip over to the Silver Lake field.

This time, Spofford struck first on a scuffle eight minutes into the game. Later in the first half, Campedelli put in goal number two from a textbook give-and-go play with Meehan. Martone sent one home late in the game from Hurley to earn the Skippers another shutout, this time 3-0.

While the Skippers could not have ended their regular season on a better note, they need to maintain this momentum as they charge into the postseason.

The body language of Paul St. Pierre said it all in the closing seconds of the Skippers' 36-22 loss to Abington last season. St. Pierre and his teammates will be aiming for a different result tonight (Nov. 3) when they take on the undefeated Green Wave.

Pinkus. McCaw has able to play sparingly with a cast protecting a broken knuckle but, in general, the lack of a healthy starting fullback had led Cohasset to change its gameplan on offense.

Missing McCaw and Pinkus has also affected the defense, as both are starting linebackers. That has forced other players to step up in other positions, and one that has done so is Cliff Musto. The junior defensive end has averaged a sack a game over the last four contests, and despite playing mostly on the offensive line to begin the season, has become a dependable part of the defensive group.

Against a big Abington team, Cohasset will need its offensive line to be on top of its game. Afanasiw said senior Paul St. Pierre has emerged a key part of the picture in that area.

"Offensively, Paul is one of our most consistent lineman, along with (junior) Jake (Cuneo)," said Afanasiw. "He's always in the right place and doing what he's supposed to be doing."

Cohasset has had an extra week to prepare, as the team had a bye last week. That also gave the coaching staff a chance to scout the Abington-Norwell game, and guess who the Skippers play next week? That's right, the Clippers.

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST... YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan℠". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this...

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you... you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn the details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 19-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

RECEIVE $1,000

The first attendee who submits a disposable, non-returnable, copy of their estate planning documents that do not have any of the problems addressed in this article will receive $1,000! Bring your documents to the workshop for a complimentary 12-15 point written analysis.

YOU CANNOT STOP THE WORLD FROM CHANGING...BUT YOU CAN USE NEW TECHNIQUES TO PROTECT YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES.

Don't wait until you actually have a problem before you deal with it. By waiting until the problem happens you typically can only minimize the damage, rather than prevent it. Let's prevent it! By attending this FREE workshop you will receive a 19-point review of your existing trust, or a review of your estate planning goals and help creating a personalized plan. We will tell you the areas of vulnerability your estate has and how to protect your assets.

- Clients of Dennis Sullivan & Associates do not qualify, as many of their trusts address each of these issues.
- Any Attorneys and/or Financial Advisors in attendance will be charged a fee of $1,000.

activists are deeply concerned about the staggering cost of the Iraqi war in both human lives and dollars. They point to the thousands of United States troops as well as the tens of thousands of Iraqi soldiers and children who have been killed or wounded, the damage to Iraqi homes and the infrastructure, and the $300 billion that has been spent on the war to date.

For four years, SSPF members have held a weekly vigil for peace on Tuesday from 11:30 a.m. to noon at the Hingham Post Office on North Street. Their philosophy is to use peaceful means, not violence, to resolve conflicts and bring security.

"Our being there with our signs and flags each week in all kinds of weather, witnessing for peace, certainly demonstrates our commitment to peace and, I hope, will perhaps cause others to start thinking about it as well," Brown said. "But the main reason, for me, is to prevent deaths and horrible wounds to all the people involved in the war. Life is the most important thing. Who wants to take the life of another? I am acquainted with grief and do not want others to suffer it."

Community response to these vigils is more positive now than it was when the war first began, Tebbetts said. "Many passersby stop to thank us for working for peace because they believe it's a better outcome than war. What's more important – to say it's not working and we have to get out despite the consequences or to keep doing what we're doing – getting in deeper and deeper everyday? What is this war accomplishing?"

Fellow Forum member Gay Dane, also of Cohasset, noted that "people sometimes make the mistake of thinking they're somehow being unpatriotic if they are promoting peace. But you can still love your country and speak out against the war," she said.

Peace doesn't just happen, said Tebbetts. "You have to be constantly working on it. We need to find ways to solve conflict without resorting to violence. War is a deliberate decision to kill and intimidate people. Conflict only makes it harder to achieve peace because more and more people are angry and hurt. The war is creating more enemies [of our country]."

Dane believes that "the war as a template for democracy in the Middle East has failed. I think Iraq is on the cusp of a civil war, and we have no business being there," she said.

Following the vigil each week, Brown rings the bell at Old Ship Church in remembrance of the many United States troops and Iraqi civilians who have been killed or wounded and for the dead of September 11, and for all those who have lost their lives to war.

"War is basically a sign of failed policy — failure on the part of the countries engaged in war to solve their differences without fighting," Tebbetts said. "No school would be allowed to remain open if kids were being taught to solve problems by going to war."

The Forum was formed in the early 1990s when talk about a possible Gulf War broke out. The group was active throughout the conflict, hosting forums and vigils. The Forum was reactivated briefly in the late 1990s when the United States threatened to bomb Iraq and again as a means of praying for United States soldiers and Afghan citizens killed in Afghanistan.

Over the past few years, the SSPF has sponsored a number of events, including a large informal discussion with Congressman William Delahunt on peace, security, and civil liberties, a forum on the implications of the Patriot Act at Hingham Public Library, and a forum focusing on veteran concerns — issues they face in Iraq and others faced upon their return from Afghanistan and Iraq. Those events allowed for free discussion of ideas, providing an opportunity for those of differing opinions to exchange views.

The Rev. John Beuhrens, former president of the Unitarian Universalist Association, also spoke upon his return from an interfaith Christmas in Iraq. In addition, the Forum showed two films, one about the domestic impact of the Administration's handling of the Iraq crisis and the other about a family struggling with loss as a result of the attack on the World Trade Towers.

The Forum has also welcomed and fed Buddhist monks as they passed through Hingham on their walk across Massachusetts.

Earlier Forum-sponsored public discussions centered around a number of topics, including peace between the Israelis and Palestinians, United States-Japanese relations, and the death penalty debate.

Iraq question is on the Nov. 7 ballot

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

"The public is growing more aggrieved with the policy, or lack of it, daily, and we're stuck in a deep, deep hole."
— Catha McSweeney, South Shore Peace Forum

For the first time, many Massachusetts voters will have the opportunity to officially register their position on the war in Iraq.

Members of the South Shore Peace Forum collected enough signatures on a "Home from Iraq" petition calling for the immediate end of the war in Iraq to place a non-binding question on the Nov. 7 ballot. Sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee (Quaker),United for Justice With Peace, and other groups, the question will appear on the Nov. 7 ballot in the 3rd Plymouth District, covering Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and North Scituate, as well as on ballots in 36 state representative districts across the state which include part or all of 139 communities.

On Nov. 7 voters in these cities and towns, located across the length and breadth of Massachusetts, will vote on the following question:

Shall the State Representative from this district be instructed to vote in favor of a resolution calling upon the President and Congress of the United States to end the war in Iraq immediately and bring all United States military forces home from Iraq?

"Non-binding or binding, this is the first chance to publicly express our feelings about the war in Iraq, as well as the entire policy of this administration concerning terrorism and the way the President and his advisors have chosen to fight it," said longtime Forum member Catha McSweeney of Hingham. "So far we seem to be losing on all fronts. The public is growing more aggrieved with the policy, or lack of it, daily, and we're stuck in a deep, deep hole."

In a massive volunteer effort this spring and summer, citizens from one end of the state to the other collected the thousands of signatures needed to place this non-binding referendum on the November ballot.

"Like Vietnam, we have passed over compromise and gone directly to war, only this time, we have an even blinder, more blood-thirsty 'leadership,'" McSweeney said. "And we don't know yet why we are in this war — only that it has made terrorism stronger and more widespread around the world than ever before."

AFSC member Paul Shannon, who serves as a coordinator of the campaign, explained the Committee's involvement: "Not only is this dirty war bringing death and unlimited pain to United States soldiers and their families. It has destroyed Iraqi society," he stated. ". . .We hope that Massachusetts voters will seize this opportunity in November to vote in favor of ending it now."

SSPF member June Freedman of Hingham said the ballot question is an opportunity for voters to "directly express their opinions to our elected officials, many of whom don't seem to be hearing the wish of the majority of the people for an end to our involvement in the conflict."

This "Home from Iraq Now" ballot initiative is also sponsored by Military Families Speak Out, Mass. Peace Action, and the Boston Chapter of Veterans for Peace who form The Statewide Campaign to Bring Our Troops Home Now.

Independent candidate Christy Mihos, and Grace Ross of the Green-Rainbow party. The lieutenant governor candidates include: Democrat Tim Murray, Republican Reed Hillman; independent candidate John J. Sullivan; and Green-Rainbow party candidate Martina Robinson.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is running against Republican Kenneth G. Chase; State Senator Robert L. Hedlund, a Republican, will face Democrat Stephen A. Lynch of Marshfield; Martha Coakley is facing Larry Frisoli for the Attorney General seat; Secretary of State William Francis Galvin's seat is being challenged by Green-Rainbow party candidate Jill E. Stein; State Treasurer Timothy P. Cahill is facing James O'Keefe of the Green-Rainbow party; Congressman William Delahunt is being challenged by Republican Jeffrey K. Beatty and Independent candidate Peter A. White; Auditor A. Joseph DeNucci is facing Working Families party Rand Wilson; Democrat Peter H. Collins and Republican Thomas E. Gorman are running for county commissioner.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, a Hingham Democrat; District Attorney William R. Keating; Fourth District Councilor Christopher A. Iannella, Jr.; and Registrar of Deeds William P. O'Donnell are running unopposed.

Ballot questions

Question One – the Wine at Food Stores Initiative — would allow selectmen to issue licenses for food stores to sell wine. Based on its population Cohasset would qualify for six new wine licenses.

Question Two would allow candidates to be nominated by more than one political party or designation, and have their names appear on the ballot for each nomination. Their votes would be counted separately and added together to determine the winner.

Question Three would allow licensed and other authorized child-care providers in private homes under the state subsidized child-care system to bargain collectively with relevant state agencies.

Question Four seeks to instruct the state representative from the district to vote in favor of a non-binding resolution calling upon the President and Congress to end the war in Iraq immediately and bring all US military forces home from Iraq.

Further information is available in the Official Massachusetts Information for Voters booklet mailed to every household in the state. A facsimile ballot is available in the Town Clerk's office.

Town Clerk's office has absentee ballots

Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person.

Absentee ballots for the State Election on Tuesday, Nov. 7 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, Nov. 6, 2006 at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

- Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
- Physical disability.
- Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by Nov. 7 to be counted.

Spinnaker hits the newsstands

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Halloween and the Spinnaker debut have come and gone. Ferris Bueller sums up the Halloween issue nicely: "It is so choice. If you have the means, I highly recommend picking one up." It is now November, and Senior yearbook write-ups are due! If your Senior son or daughter is a truant, please have them complete their write-up and turn it in STAT. Also, Juniors and Seniors are ordering their Powder Puff T-shirts, so make sure your kids get their money in. Fall sports seasons are wrapping up, and tournament teams are gearing up for the long haul. Good luck to all the sports teams in their endeavors. The academics are not forgotten though, and as always there are about a million things going on at the school. Here is this week's news.

- Guys and Dolls continues to rehearse for the upcoming show.
- The High School Jazz Ensemble is continuing their weekly sessions. If you haven't heard them yet, be sure to watch out for their stellar performances at our school concerts.
- Powder Puff practices start this coming Monday. Although it is a flag football game, we might need to have paramedics on standby. Once that testosterone gets pumping, anything goes.
- Wednesday the School Council met after school.
- Wednesday night the School Committee met.

This year's Spinnaker crew at Cohasset Middle High School.

- The Basketball Boosters met Wednesday night.
- There was a PSO Principal's meeting Thursday morning.
- Wednesday and Thursday Bus evacuation drills took place during school.
- Debate team is almost up and running! The teams are coming together and beginning to form this year's plan.
- Saturday the SATs are up at the High School in the foreign language classrooms. If you're taking the test, the best advice I can give you is be aware of the time limits.

Some of the trees outside are almost bare. It's almost time for the snow to start falling. The first quarter of this school year is almost over. Time flies, and yet one class seems like it takes a lifetime when you can't keep your eyes off the minute hand of the clock. It's strange how that works out. That's enough contemplation for now; I've got to get going on this work! Take it easy everybody.

Informal screening

The Osgood Preschool staff in conjunction with the school nurse will hold informal screenings for children on the third Friday of every month from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. The remaining dates are Nov. 17, Dec. 15, 2006; Jan. 19, Feb. 16, March 16, April 27, May 18, 2007.

These screenings will consist of a play group activity as well as opportunities for vision, hearing and posture screening. These screenings are to assist in identifying those students who should be referred for an evaluation to determine eligibility for special education.

If you are interested in having your child participate, contact one of the preschool staff at 781-383-6117 no later than the Wednesday prior to one of the scheduled screenings.

Osgood book fair is Wed., Nov. 15

The Joseph Osgood School Parent School Organization, PSO, will host a Scholastic Book Fair Fundraiser on Wednesday, Nov. 15 from 2 - 7 pm, at the Osgood School, 211 Sohier St.

The PSO is a non-profit organization. The role of the PSO is to act as an advocate for public education. It is the official link between parents and schools. The PSO voices parental responses to school issues, and provides forums for administrators, teachers, and students to present their programs and policies to the public. Through fundraising efforts, like the upcoming Book Fair, the PSO provides programs and activities that enrich the school experience for students, teachers, and parents. Families, teachers, and all members of the community are invited to attend the Fair, which will feature a special theme: Reading Rain Forest.

The Book Fair will offer specially priced books and educational products, including new releases, award-winning titles, children's classics, interactive software, adult books, and current bestsellers from more than 150 publishers.

Attendees can help the school build classroom libraries and the school library by purchasing books for teachers through the Classroom Wish List.

Teen dance scheduled for Nov. 17

There will be a dance at the Teen Center Friday, Nov. 17, from 7 to 10 p.m. Everyone in grades six through eight is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold.

This is not a school function.

Hockey calendar raffle starts Nov. 5

Attention Cohasset Residents! It's almost time for the Cohasset Varsity Hockey team's annual Holiday Calendar Raffle event! On Sunday, Nov. 5th members of this year's Varsity Hockey team will be going door-to-door throughout Cohasset selling $5 raffle tickets to the famous Holiday Raffle Calendar.

Local merchants throughout Cohasset have generously donated fabulous prizes, which will be awarded every day throughout the month of December. Every $5 ticket has 31 chances to win so it is hoped you all open your doors, your hearts, and your wallets to support Cohasset Varsity Hockey. All proceeds go toward supporting the team, including ice time, the assistant coach, and team jackets. Thanks to all of the merchants and contributors who've helped support this event!

Parents Advisory Council to meet Nov. 7

The Cohasset Parents Advisory Council will host a "Meet and Greet" on Tuesday, Nov. 7. The PAC is looking forward to meeting some new faces in our school district and some familiar ones too!

The meeting which starts promptly at 7:30 p.m. will meet at the Osgood School Library, (located behind Deer Hill School), 210 Sohier St.

Welcomed are all parents and guardians of students who receive special education services, including families whose children have an Individualized Education Plan (IEP), 504 Accommodation, or Out-of-District placement, etc. Additionally the PAC welcomes the involvement of educators and all other interested parties. The PAC is a resource for parents who think their child may have some learning, behavioral, social or attention issues.

All workshops and presentations are free and are sponsored by the PSO/PAC

The Cohasset PAC has joined with other local PAC members in the South Shore area to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. The South Shore PAC Network hopes to meets informally throughout the year. If you would like to be added the e-mail network for updates please forward your contact information to: southshorepac@comcast.net.

Dr. Evans speaks on 'Family Matters'

On Tuesday, Dec. 12 at 7 p.m., author Dr. Robert Evans will be in the Cohasset High School auditorium to speak to the community about his latest book, "Family Matters: How Schools Can Cope with the Crisis in Childrearing."

Evans is a clinical and organizational psychologist and the Executive Director of The Human Relations Service in Wellesley, Massachusetts. He is a former high school and preschool teacher and for many years a child and family therapist. He has served in schools for more than 30 years and now speaks widely at educational conferences and consults to schools throughout the U.S. and internationally, working with teachers, administrators, and boards. He also works with human service agencies and corporations.

Evans is a graduate of the Germantown Friends School and received his undergraduate degree from Princeton and his doctorate from Harvard. His interests have focused on change and resistance to it in schools and organizations, and on the challenges of leading innovation. He is currently concentrating on the changes in American families and their impact on schools.

Coastal Nissan and Pilgrim Bank are sponsoring the event. For more information or if you are interested in attending, please contact Jean Roche at jeanroche@comcast.net.

Learn to ski program

Cohasset Recreation Department, in conjunction with Buckles and Boards Ski Shop of Marshfield, announce registrations for a learn-to-ski/snowboard program will take place Tuesday, Nov. 14, from 3 to 6 p.m., at Cohasset Recreation Department office, 41 Highland Ave. Town Hall. Trips this year include Ragged Mountain, Cannon and Bretton Woods.

The program will be open to all ages, but children must be able to participate on their own. There will be an adult chaperone to assist; however, children must be able to function with minimal assistance, ie: age 7 and older.

This season, for security purposes, Buckles and Boards will require a current 2-inch by 2-inch photo of the child. This photo will be affixed to the registration form and for identification purposes.

The fee for the program is $289.99 per student, and rental information will be available at registration.

This year, there will be one Sunday and four Saturday trips starting Dec. 10, then Saturdays, Jan. 6, Jan. 27, Feb. 10 and March 3. There will be four one and a half hour lessons and five full-day ski lift tickets included in the $289.99 package.

Book donations at St. Stephen's

Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church at16 Highland Ave., Cohasset will accept donations of slightly worn hardcover and paperback books, DVDs, and CDs for its annual book sale, part of the ecumenical Village Fair that is scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 2, on Cohasset's scenic common.

If your shelves are spilling onto the floor, they have the solution for you. Donations can be brought to the church in bags or boxes and placed inside the parish hall door marked "Church Offices." Use the "Reserved Parking" spot to unload your books during church office hours, which are Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Alternatively, they would be happy to make arrangements to pick up of donations. For donation pick-up or information, call D'Anne Avotins at 781-923-1104.

Books are sorted at St. Stephen's Church in Walton Rodgers Hall every Tuesday from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Donations will be accepted through Saturday, Nov. 25. They regret that they cannot accept old textbooks, romance novels, damaged or moldy books or books with notes and/or highlighting.

The monies raised from the book sale will be used to send underprivileged children and their families to the Barbara C. Harris Camp in Greenfield, N.H. Your donation of books, DVDs and CDs will help change lives and strengthen the community.

For information about this wonderful facility, visit www.bchcenter.org.

Holiday floral arranging class

Tuesday, Nov. 14, the Scituate and Norwell Garden Clubs are co-hosting a presentation by floral designer and author Dana Markos. Markos is the author of two books, "Flowers for the Home" and "Flower Arranging by Color." He is also owner of A Secret Garden, a floral studio specializing in weddings and special events. His work has been featured at Art in Bloom at the Museum of Fine Arts and in magazines such as "Modern Bride," "Town and Country," and "Boston Bride."

Markos's presentation, which is free and open to the public, will take place at 7 p.m. at the Cushing Memorial Center, 673 Main Street, Norwell. The floral arrangements he creates during the evening will be raffled off at the end of his presentation. Light refreshments will be served. For additional information please contact Polly Pyne, program co-chair, Scituate Garden Club, at 781-545-5036 or Grace Carty, program co-chair, Norwell Garden Club, at 781-659-7027.

Osgood book fair

The Joseph Osgood School Parent School Organization, PSO, will host a Scholastic Book Fair Fundraiser on Wednesday, Nov. 15 from 2 - 7 pm, at the Osgood School, 211 Sohier St.

The PSO is a non-profit organization. The role of the PSO is to act as an advocate for public education. It is the official link between parents and schools. The PSO voices parental responses to school issues, and provides forums for administrators, teachers, and students to present their programs and policies to the public. Through fundraising efforts, like the upcoming Book Fair, the PSO provides programs and activities that enrich the school experience for students, teachers, and parents. Families, teachers, and all members of the community are invited to attend the Fair, which will feature a special theme: Reading Rain Forest.

The Book Fair will offer specially priced books and educational products, including new releases, award-winning titles, children's classics, interactive software, adult books, and current bestsellers from more than 150 publishers.

Attendees can help the school build classroom libraries and the school library by purchasing books for teachers through the Classroom Wish List.

OBITUARIES

Frederick Piepenbrink Jr.

Mechanic and welder

Frederick "Chip" Piepenbrink Jr., 50, of Cohasset and Hingham, a mechanic and welder, died Oct. 21, 2006 at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

The son of the late Frederick and Shirley Piepenbrink, he was born and raised in Cohasset and was a graduate of South Shore Vocational Technical High School.

Mr. Piepenbrink enjoyed building his Ford Pinto into a racing car and bringing it to cruise nights on the South Shore.

He leaves three brothers Thomas S. Piepenbrink and his wife Barbara of Kingston, Kirk and his wife Keri of Marshfield and Robert T. and his wife Jennifer of Cohasset; nephews and nieces, Daniel, Calie, Kyle, Cody, Kati and Taylor.

A graveside service was held Oct. 26, at Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, in Cohasset handled the arrangements.

Donations in Chip's memory may be made to the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project (A.S.P.) c/o Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Dorothy May Pattison

Regent of Col. Lothrop Chapter DAR

Dorothy May (Bates) Pattison, 90, of Cohasset and Del Ray Beach, Fla., died Oct. 26, 2006, at Cardigan Nursing Facility in Scituate.

Mrs. Pattison was born in New Bedford and raised in Cohasset. She attended Cohasset schools and was a graduate of the old Joseph Osgood School.

She worked for New England Telephone in Cohasset from the 1940s through the 1950s, and was a regent of the Col. Lothrop Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She was an avid yard sale hunter and loved traveling, especially to Portugal and the west coast of Florida. Mrs. Pattison enjoyed her miniature poodle, Missy, but what was most important was spending time with her family and grandchildren.

Wife of the late Frank O. Pattison, she leaves her daughter, Joanne Cogill of Cohasset; her grandchildren, Brian, Bethann and Brett Cogill of Cohasset, and David and Dennis Pattison of Florida; and 13 great-grandchildren. She was the mother of the late David Pattison, and the sister of the late Joseph Bates.

A memorial Mass will be celebrated Saturday, Nov. 11, at 11 a.m., at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. Interment in Woodside Cemetery. Arrangements are by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to Scituate Animal Shelter, 161 Driftway, Scituate, MA 02066.

John T. Barnes Sr.

Retired from Cohasset DPW

John T. Barnes Sr. 77, of Cohasset, died Oct. 30, 2006, at South Shore Hospital after a long illness.

Born and raised in Cohasset, Mr. Barnes was a graduate of Cohasset High School.

He worked for Cohasset Department of Public Works until his retirement. Mr. Barnes and his late brother, Sonny Barnes, were co-owners of William T. Barnes & Sons, a trash removal and landscape company in Cohasset.

Husband of the late Jane (Smith) Barnes, he leaves his children, John Barnes Jr. of Weymouth and Scott Barnes of Scituate; his sister, Helen E. Babb of Cohasset; five grandchildren; and his longtime friend, Ruth Jason Graves, and her son, Robert. He was the brother of the late Sonny Barnes, Velma LaFlamme and Virginia M. Barnes.

A funeral service will be held Friday, Nov. 3, at 11 a.m., at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset. Interment in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

The Old Ship Meeting House, shown here in winter, is now the oldest wooden building in continuous use as a church in the United States. It is a National Historic Landmark.

Founding Stories — from one parish to four churches

First Parish in Hingham, formerly known as the Old Ship Church, will host "Founding Stories: From One Parish to Four Churches," Sunday, Nov. 5, at 4 p.m. Learn about the founding stories of the four congregations which descended from First Parish in Hingham, the Old Ship Church. Why did each congregation separate? Was it politics, religion, population shifts, or all of the above? Learn the answers at this presentation.

The ministers of the four congregations, which descended from First Parish, will gather to share the founding stories of each congregation and each church building. They include Rev. Ken Read-Brown, minister of Old Ship; Rev. Jan Carlsson-Bull, minister of First Parish in Cohasset, originally Second Parish in Hingham, founded in 1721; Rev. Paul Sprecher, minister of Second Parish in Hingham, originally Third Parish in Hingham, founded in 1746; and Rev. Thomas Kepler, minister of New North Church, originally the Third Congregational Society of Hingham, founded in 1806. There will be time for questions and conversation as well.

First Parish in Hingham will celebrate the 325th anniversary of their building, the Old Ship Meeting House. First Parish gathered as a congregation in 1635 and built their second Meeting House in 1681. The Old Ship Meeting House is now the oldest wooden building in continuous use as a church in the United States. It is a National Historic Landmark. Old Ship's minister since 1987, Rev. Read-Brown, is a descendant of the first minister of the parish, Peter Hobart.

This event is free and open to the public. Old Ship is at 90 Main Street near Hingham Square. The building is wheelchair accessible and there is a sound system for those with hearing impairment.

For information, contact the office of First Parish in Hingham (Old Ship Church) weekdays at 781-749-1679 or visit oldship@verizon.net.

Lecture on spiritual needs of inmates

Glastonbury Abbey presents, "Listening to Other Voices: The Fears That Binds Us," Thursday, Nov. 16, at 7:15 p.m., in the Glastonbury Conference Center at16 Hull St., in Hingham.

Sisters Kathleen Deneven and Ruth Raiche have been serving the spiritual needs of the inmates of MCI-Norfolk for a combined total of 34 years and will describe their daily work. Eighty percent of the 1,400 inmates are serving life sentences for murder. In addition, they will talk about their extensive volunteer support programs within Norfolk and aftercare transitional programs for former inmates.

Sister Kathleen is a Franciscan nun and psychotherapist who retired in Feb. 2006, but remains active at the penitentiary and Sister Ruth is a Third Order Dominican who has worked at Framingham and Norfolk prisons for more than 18 years.

The free lecture is a part of Glastonbury Abbey's Inter-Religious Lecture Series. Donations are gratefully accepted. Reservations are recommended and can be made by calling 781-749-2155.

Book, craft, bake sale

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham, will host a book, craft and bake sale Sunday, Nov. 5, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., in the Social Hall.

A variety of books and crafts from local artisans will be featured.

The Altar Boyz

Boys will be 'Boyz'

Musical comedy a religious experience

When Choreographer Christopher Gattelli first learned that the Christian boy band at the center of the musical comedy "Altar Boyz" would come complete with high energy dance moves accompanying each song, he jumped at the chance to work on the off-Broadway show now at Boston's Colonial Theatre on its first national tour.

"I knew, because it was a show about a boy band, that it would involve non-stop choreography," explained Gattelli. "I watched a lot of footage of the Back Street Boys and N 'Snyc and quickly realized that their choreography stops and starts and is very specific to each song. Our show is about a concert, but our cast never gets the chance to just mark time. They're always on the go. The fun part of this show is that it has to keep topping itself."

It also has to maintain a certain respect for its subject matter since it depicts a Catholic quintet — complete with members named Matthew, Mark, Luke, Juan, and Abraham — whose goal it is to inspire more kneeling and praying and less bumping and grinding among today's youth.

"The challenge of doing a musical, even a parody, about a Catholic boy band is in making sure it has all the right energy of a boy band, but without any of the conscious sexuality. We had to convert the obvious sexuality of real-life boy bands to something else altogether. Instead of making girls scream, our boys have to stick to moves that are comical."

Now in its second year at New York's New World Stages, and winner of the 2005 Outer Critics' Circle Award for Best Musical Off-Broadway, the show has developed almost a cult following among celebrities, including Kathy Bates, Joan Rivers, Liza Minnelli and Rosie O'Donnell, who see the show over and over. Gattelli believes the reason for the show's success is simple.

"Gary Adler and Michael Patrick Walker's music is amazing and Kevin Del Guila's script, from Marc Kessler and Ken Davenport's concept, is hysterical, but the story also really touches you," says the Philadelphia-born Gattelli, 33, of the show, now in its second year off-Broadway.

While he keeps one eye on all things "Altar Boyz," including the New York company and national tour and a recent production in South Korea, Gattelli is also focused on Broadway where he has two shows running, "Martin Short: Fame Becomes Me" at the Brooks Atkinson and "High Fidelity," fresh from its tryout run in Boston, at the Imperial Theatre. In addition, he is also directing "How to Save the World and Find True Love in 90 Minutes" which will open off-Broadway later this month. Gattelli freely admits that having four shows running in New York at the same is pretty heady stuff.

"The Broadway shows are right across the street from each other and the two off-Broadway shows share a wall so it's quite thrilling and exciting. I'm just lucky to have truly great assistants who help me keep my head on straight," says Gattelli, whose work with one particular show business veteran is bringing him particular pleasure.

"Martin Short is not only a genius, but also an absolute dream. Working with him has just been an unbelievably good, rewarding experience. He has created so many amazing characters in his career and somehow he remains open to new ideas. He is just a real pro."

"Altar Boyz" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through Sunday. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit broadwayacrossamerica.com.

Movie review

Harold & Maude & Ron Weasley

"Driving Lessons" (B+)

By: JAMES VERNIERE
FILM CRITIC

Shy teenager Ben (Rupert Gint) gets some life lessons from feisty retired actress Evie Walton (Julie Walters).

A "Harold and Maude" for a new generation, "Driving Lessons" teams up Julie Walters and Rupert Grint, who play mother and son Molly and Ron Weasley in the "Harry Potter" films, as generation-spanning soulmates. If you liked "Mrs. Palfrey at the Claremont," you will enjoy this.

The debut of screenwriter Jeremy Brock ("Mrs. Brown," "The Last King of Scotland") as writer-director, the film is another exploration of the joining of two distinctive souls.

Grint is Ben Marshall, a lonely adolescent on the brink of manhood whose poetry is rejected by the teenage beauty he longs for and who is downtrodden by his domineering, hypocritical mother, Laura (American Laura Linney with a British accent).

Ben's mother is a devout Christian married to a curate (Nicholas Farrell) but having it off with another young cleric (Jim Norton). Ben's sad and withdrawn father locks himself up in his study after dinner, perusing a book about birds and practicing birdcalls. Ben's mother uses her son's need for driving lessons as an excuse to stop at her lover's vicarage, leaving Ben alone in the car. Release from his mother's tyranny comes in the form of Lady Evie Walton (Walters), a retired, eccentric, outspoken actress who needs help around the house.

When Lady Evie, who once played Ophelia for the Royal Shakespeare Company, decides she wants to go camping in a late husband's vintage Citroen DS, Ben's mother's objections go unheard. Later, Ben gets to accompany Evie on a speaking tour.

Like "Mrs. Palfrey," "Driving Lessons" is a modest gem of a movie, featuring a great cast and marvelous chemistry between its male and female leads. As the young man suffering from an acute case of "social autism," Grint is both poignant and unsentimental. Walters is especially good in scenes in which Evie inspires Ben to pursue his dream to become an artist.

Reportedly, vicar's son Brock spent a summer in the employ of Dame Peggy Ashcroft. This is his thank-you note to her.

"Driving Lessons" contains profanity and sexual situations.

Money focus of Town Meeting

VILLAGE ZONING ALSO EXPECTED TO TAKE CENTER STAGE

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

One of the most anticipated days in Cohasset is coming a little early this year. While for the past two years the fall Special Town Meeting has been held the first week of December, this year it will be held Monday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium.

Funding and zoning changes are the two major topics on the Warrant, or Town Meeting agenda. Voters will take up 28 articles, or items of business. Warrants have been mailed to every household in town and extra Warrants will be available at the meeting.

A quorum of 100 registered voters is required before Town Meeting can begin. Town Manager Bill Griffin said in his opinion, getting quorum won't be hard. "There is a lot on the Warrant for everyone," he said, which is sure to draw a crowd.

Once a quorum is determined at the start of the meeting, it is assumed a quorum is present unless challenged. If challenged, the number of voters will be counted, and if a quorum does not exist, the meeting will be adjourned.

Griffin said he believes the funding issues will cause the most discussion, especially due to the fact that the Advisory Committee did not recommend approval for some, including items in Article one, Article five, Article six, and Article 19.

Article one would amend the fiscal 2007-operating budget. The article will ask residents to approve a series of supplemental appropriations due to additional revenue received from the state and other sources after the budget was approved at the Annual Town Meeting. Supplements include an increase of $8,000 in the Town Manager's line item for a street light consultant; an increase of $200,000 for the school department — the amount the town received in Chapter 70 funds; an increase of $5,000 for the Public Works department for drainage design; an increase of $10,281 for library custodial hours; an increase of $5,418 for additional library cleaning services; and an increase of $38,413 to cover sewer-related debt service.

Article two will ask the town to fund the fiscal 2007 cost items contained in collective bargaining agreements between the town and unions representing the firefighters, library employees, clerical employees and non-union and contract employees salary adjustments.

Article three requests funding for vari-

Cohasset split on governor's race

But Patrick wins big victory statewide

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"He reminded people what government is all about, what we should be working for and how a candidate can inspire you."

— Agnes McCann, Democratic Town Committee

When Tip O'Neil said, "all politics is local" he could have been talking about Cohasset.

In this seaside town where strong opinions are rivaled only by the rocky coastline — town politics can stir up the population almost like nothing else.

While other communities only draw big turnouts for presidential elections, Cohasseters love to vote in large numbers and do so in most elections.

But even though at 69 percent, the turnout was not quite as big as expected, the passion — which is so evident for selectmen, school committee and override elections in town — just wasn't there Tuesday along Highland Avenue's "campaign row."

When the polls closed at 8 p.m., 3,625 Cohasset voters had cast ballots. While gubernatorial candidate Deval Patrick handily won the state - Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey drew 65 more votes than he did in Cohasset, beating Patrick 1656 to 1591.

Ballot Question One, the Wine at Food Stores initiative, did not pass muster with local voters, with 2,108 voting "no" to keep the status quo.

Voters in the Third Plymouth District, that includes Cohasset, were also asked their views on the Iraq War. Here, 1,616 voters want US troops withdrawn from Iraq right away. But 1,470 voted against Ballot Question 4 and 530 left the question blank.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said the polls were busy all day. She said the turnout was in line with other gubernatorial elections. In 2002 about 71 percent turned out for the Mitt Romney-Shannon O'Brien race and 68 percent voted in 1998 when Gov. Paul Cellucci was challenged by then Massachusetts Attorney General Scott Harshbarger.

By state law, campaign workers and sign-holders must stay at least 150 feet from the polls. So in Cohasset, where both precincts vote at Town Hall, Highland Avenue provides the best venue for politicking on Election Day.

Chartis Tebbetts, who is a member of the Democratic Town Committee, was holding a Deval Patrick sign in one hand and an Iraq ballot question sign in the other. She said the lack of fervor for Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey's gubernatorial bid among Cohasset Republicans contributed to the lack of excitement.

She noted there were about twice as many Hedlund signs around town than Healey signs.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, a Republican, who had an opponent from Marshfield in Democrat Stephen Lynch, won in a landslide.

Cohasset Republicans slightly outnumber Democrats in town, which means the town is more Republican than most in a state where the GOP makes up only about 12 percent of the electorate.

Both Tebbetts and fellow Democrat Agnes McCann, who was also waving to voters along Highland Avenue, agreed Healey did not run a positive campaign.

Kids to pitch in

To help seniors with fall cleanup

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Getting a house ready for winter is not always an easy task. There are leaves to be raked, air conditioners to be removed, and storm windows to be installed.

To that end, the Cohasset PSO is sponsoring a fall cleanup "Make A Difference Day" on Saturday, Nov. 18 in partnership with the Council on Elder Affairs. Seniors who need any kind of help winterizing their homes, may call up and ask for some assistance, and help will gladly arrive.

The CEA has already received 36 requests and there is still time to register.

"It's that last little piece of winterizing," said Lisa Rosen, special events coordinator for the Osgood PSO, adding raking up leaves in the fall and then disposing of them can be a daunting task for anyone, not just seniors. However, if left in the yard, leaves can become very slippery and with one rainstorm can become particularly dangerous and the volunteers who help out during the day are glad to both rake the leaves up, and take them off site.

"This has been an Osgood tradition for the last 15 years," said Rosen. She said for at least the past 5 years, the school has partnered with the CEA to provide at least one event per year that is geared toward providing some assistance to the town's eldest residents. This year, she said she is especially excited, as the other two schools have agreed to help out as well.

"All the schools are participating for the very first time," she said. As the coordinator, Rosen brought the program to Osgood first because she had a student there, who has since moved on to Deer Hill and brought her and the project along. Due to the high response from seniors already, Rosen decided to reach out to the middle-high school as well. "It's exciting. The middle high school and high school were so excited to be asked and the Student Council has really embraced it. They're trying to get the whole student body involved."

Make A Difference Day is a national event, created by "USA Weekend" magazine. It takes place annually on the fourth Saturday of October. Anyone can

Employee charged with stealing drugs from pharmacy

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 20-year-old Scituate woman is accused of stealing drugs from the pharmacy at Walgreen's, police said.

Chief James Hussey said the chain's loss prevention department conducted the investigation.

"We responded to a call from the loss prevention people," Hussey said. He said Walgreen's determined there were pills missing after the employee, who was brought into the pharmacy on occasion to wait on customers, had been there.

According to the police log, the employee was caught on tape stealing the drugs.

"We brought her in for booking purposes," Hussey said. Alisha M. Tsimbidaros, 20, of 533 Country Way, Scituate, is facing charges of larceny of drugs and possession of Class D and Class C (prescription drugs).

Parking lot accidents

On Monday (Oct. 30) a witness reported seeing a vehicle hit in the Osgood School parking lot and called police. The driver of the Toyota Camry that backed into the blue Explorer had taken his child into the school.

"He told the officer he had planned on coming back and dealing with the problem," Chief James Hussey said. However, a background check revealed the man was driving on a suspended license, so police ended up towing his car and summonsing the man to court on the charge of driving without a license after suspension.

Hussey said there was minor damage to the Explorer

In an unrelated incident, a woman reported her car was damaged while parked in the Town Parking Lot at about 1:30 p.m., Wednesday (Nov. 1). Further investigation revealed damage to her rear bumper but there was nothing around the car, such as broken glass, from the other vehicle.

Hussey urges motorists who accidentally hit another car in a parking lot to leave a note with contact information on the windshield if they cannot find the owner of the car right away.

"If you cause visible damage to a vehicle, leave a note," he said. Otherwise, he explained, the offender could be charged with leaving the scene after property damage.

Female upset

On Monday (Oct. 30) police were able to calm down a female customer at a local car dealership who was screaming and spitting following a verbal altercation.

"We calmed her down and explained what the process was to deal with the problem," Chief Hussey said, noting it was a civil matter. "She was apparently loud enough that someone at the dealership called the police."

Suspect car

Police say a Cohasset car that matched the description of a vehicle used in a Weymouth robbery was not likely the same car.

After receiving a bulletin from Weymouth to be on the lookout for a black Honda, Cohasset police observed a similar car on Hull Street at about 1:15 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 30). However after speaking to the vehicle's owner and gathering the necessary information – it did not appear that person or vehicle was involved in the robbery, Hussey said. "The individual was very cooperative," Hussey noted.

Not intoxicated

Reports that an elderly woman was intoxicated in Shaw's parking lot proved to be untrue. The woman had parked her car at an angle, taking up several spaces, so it would not get any "dings," Chief Hussey explained. "When someone saw her park like that, they called the police," he said, adding the lady checked out to be fine.

Rooftop pranksters

Chief Hussey said police do not doubt that several youths were on top of Tedeschi's in the Village at about 9:30 p.m. on Halloween. An employee contacted police to report there were kids on the roof throwing things at cars. Some customers also told the employee that kids were atop the hill at St. Stephen's doing the same thing.

Hussey said when police arrived the kids were gone and they could not find any evidence of wrongdoing. He said there was a function going on at St. Stephen's and police checked it out and determined there was no one there who did not belong.

No firearm

The FBI recently contacted Cohasset about an individual seeking to purchase a gun in Maryland. As it turned out the male had outstanding warrants for larceny. He was not allowed to buy the firearm, Chief Hussey said.

Fox put down

A sickly fox that had been spotted around town during the daytime over the past two weeks has been put down.

The police log details three sightings last week alone describing a sick fox or coyote on the front steps, on the street or sitting on a walkway.

Chief Hussey said the animal, which was not looking healthy, had eluded police. But on Sunday at about 11 a.m., an officer responded to a call about the fox and put the animal down.

Flat tire

Two elderly, Weymouth women in a 1991 Buick were traveling along Atlantic Avenue last Wednesday (Nov. 1) when they came around a corner and the light temporarily made the driver lose sight of the road, causing her to drive onto the shoulder, hitting a tree, police said.

The front end and right side, front fender were damaged. The women, who were apparently looking for a gas station, drove on a flat tire to Town Hall. There were no injuries.

Holbrook man summonsed

A Holbrook man is being summonsed on charges of operating an unlicensed business and larceny by false pretenses for incomplete work on a Cohasset home. Chief Hussey explained the homeowner contacted police and investigation revealed the man, who was hired to put in an alarm system, was not licensed or sanctioned to do the work.

The homeowner had paid the individual and discovered the work was never completed. "We looked into in and are seeking the complaint," Hussey said.

Shoplifting teens

A manager of CVS has asked that two teenage girls, who were spotted shoplifting, not be allowed back in the store.

The manager told police the girls had been warned prior to the incident that occurred at about 6:15 p.m., last Friday (Nov. 3).

When police arrived, the girls had left the store but the officer found them in the plaza. The girls denied taking anything and said they threw the items on the floor before leaving CVS.

The girls were released to one of their parents. The manager did not want to take the matter any further.

Boat fire, a mirage

Friday (Oct. 27) at about 11:15 p.m., callers reported a large boat fire in the water off Sandy Beach. The Coast Guard and Harbormaster responded.

Apparently the lights on two oil tankers awaiting arrival into Boston Harbor gave the impression there was a fire when viewed from the shore, police said.

Road closings for Veterans Day

Border Street in Cohasset will be closed to through traffic at Atlantica Restaurant Saturday, Nov. 11, from 1 to 3 p.m., for the dedication of the Veterans Memorial at the intersection of Border and Summer streets. Traffic will be able to access Atlantica Restaurant from the Scituate side.

Also, Summer Street and the entire Cove will be closed to traffic Nov. 11, from 1 to 3 p.m.

Ambulance billing service fee reduced

Acting Fire Chief Robert Silvia has negotiated a reduction in the service fee for ambulance billing services from 7 percent to 4 percent.

Based on current billing levels, Town Manager Bill Griffin told the Board of Selectmen at its Oct. 30 meeting it will save the town approximately $10,000 annually.

The reduction will save the town approximately $10,000 annually.

The fire department does not have any clerical staff that can bill ambulance fees, so the town contracts out with a company that essentially charges a percentage to the town, similar to a commission.

Griffin said on a related note, he had previously raised the option of turning unpaid ambulance bills over to a third-party collection service as a means of increasing the town's revenue.

"There was hesitancy among board members to do so, but I believe further consideration should be given," he said.

Griffin added the best approach might be to develop a set of guidelines to govern those collection practices that would be brought back to the board for its consideration.

Schools to lend seniors a hand with fall cleanup participate, and in 2005, 3 million people volunteered across the country, accomplishing thousands of projects in hundreds of towns.

Rosen said typically, the Osgood School has three or four Make A Difference Days throughout the course of the year. She said one of the projects is always geared toward helping the school, and one is always geared toward helping those residents who use the CEA's services.

During last year's cleanup, Rosen said the CEA had between 10 and 12 requests for assistance. This year, the CEA has already received 36 requests and there is still time to register. "All you have to do is call and leave your name and number. We'll be accepting calls until Monday, Nov. 13," said CEA Director Linda Elworthy. She added families would be paired up properly with each request. For example, if a home needs lawn furniture put away for the winter or an air conditioning unit removed, she will make sure there is a strong volunteer available who can easily lift the items.

Elworthy said by pairing the schools up with the CEA, residents of all ages are able to come together. "So many seniors have grandchildren or great-grandchildren who live far away," she said, that having children come by to visit and help out at their home is a welcome treat.

Rosen added with so many people's family members living far away, something that might only take a few minutes, such as rolling up a hose and turning off the water, goes undone, simply because there isn't anyone available to help. She said through Make A Difference Day, no task is too small to be overlooked and she will find a volunteer to help.

The PSO is still accepting volunteers for Make A Difference Day. Rosen said participating is a great way to teach children about community service. "We're looking for a two-hour commitment," she said, and any help is appreciated. Tasks assigned will be age and ability appropriate. Any families interested in donating their time during Make A Difference Day may call Lisa Rosen at (781) 383-6491.

Seniors who would like some help winterizing may call the CEA at (781) 383-9112 and leave their name and phone number as well as their preferred time to have volunteers over the house. In turn, the CEA will work with Rosen to match up appropriate families for the job. Rosen said in the event the volunteers cannot get to every home on the list on Nov. 18, they will try to schedule volunteers for the remainder of the week and into next weekend. "We're going to try to meet all the requirements," she said.

Historical Society opens new exhibit

The Cohasset Historical Society will open a new exhibit of 1930s fashions and memorabilia Friday, Nov. 10. The exhibit, will be open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. until the end of the year at Society Headquarters, located at 106 S. Main St., in the Paul Pratt Building, and ties in with the latest Cohasset Dramatic Club production of "The Women."

The exhibit will feature afternoon wear in a living room setting, lingerie and dressing gowns in a bedroom setting and evening gowns in a setting reminiscent of the Casino Roof. The exhibit highlights a portion of the Society's extensive clothing collection, which is rarely put on display. The exhibit will also feature theater materials and scrapbooks from the era, including a script from the 1942 CDC production of "The Women," and images from the original Broadway production debut in 1936.

In celebration of the exhibit, the Society will host a 1930s cocktail party Dec. 1 from 7 to 9 p.m. featuring cocktails and hors d'oeuvres. Tickets are $20 for Historical Society members, $25 for non-members and may be purchased by calling the Society at (781) 383-1434

Button Wood Book Group to meet

Buttonwood Book Group will meet Tuesday, Nov. 14, at 7 p.m., at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset. Selected book is "The Shadow of the Wind" by Carlos Ruiz Zaffron.

Reservations are not necessary, and all are welcome. For more information, call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

Seawall repair grants awarded

The Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation has awarded the town three seawall repair grants totaling $466,750. The Border Street seawall project will receive $272,500, the Lawrence Wharf seawall will receive $162,500 and the Sailing Club Seawall project will receive $31,750.

At the Nov. 6 Board of Selectmen's meeting, Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town is required to match the grants in the same amount. "We are asking the Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting to amend the scope of a previous bond issue authorization to allow that bond to serve as the town's match," he said.

Griffin thanked Christine Player of Vine Associates, who has been working with the town on the seawall projects, as well as Greenbush liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan for their hard and quick work to prepare grant applications. He also thanked the town's legislative delegation for "working hard to fund this grant program and support our specific grant applications."

McCann said Patrick on the other hand was positive and focused on moving forward.

"He reminded people what government is all about, what we should be working for and how a candidate can inspire you," McCann said.

Republican Polly Logan, who was holding a Kerry Healey sign on Tuesday, blamed Healey's advisors for having her sound so negative. "She has had the worst campaign," said Logan, who knows Healey personally. "It is not her demeanor to be that way – she has received poor advice."

But Republican Kevin O'Donnell had not given up Tuesday afternoon. "I am shocked by the size of the turnout," he said. "It gives me great hope. I think all the advertising (about the races) has been forcing people to get out and make a decision."

Noting Cohasset has its share of Republicans, he quipped, "If Kerry Healey doesn't win here – she's not going to win anywhere."

A small contingent of "Vote No on Question One" supporters was also along "campaign row" on Tuesday afternoon.

Peter Logan, wine manager at Curtis Liquors in Tedeschi Plaza, said he sensed voters were evenly divided on the issue of whether or not to allow wine-only licenses for grocery stores.

Some worry about the public safety issue with so many more licenses and others want the convenience of buying wine at a supermarket, he said.

Peter Logan said wine amounts to more than 50 percent of the sales at Curtis and the new law could hurt business. He also noted the supermarket lobby spent about twice as much on the "Vote Yes" campaign as the "Vote No" side.

Jeff Beatty, Republican candidate for the US 10th Congressional District, was making the rounds and stopped by Cohasset mid-afternoon.

As he shook hands along Highland Avenue, he praised campaign workers on both sides of the "political aisle" for participating in the process. He said he had already been in 15-20 places that day. Beatty, who was seeking US Rep. Bill Delahunt's seat, quoted a woman he had met along the campaign trail as saying "career politicians are like fish and house guests – they go bad after a while and you have to throw them out."

However, the voters were not convinced and returned Delahunt to Congress. In fact, Delahunt tallied nearly 1,000 more votes than Beatty in Cohasset.

For full election results, see page 16.

Conservation kudos for the harbormaster

The Cohasset Conservation Trust recently thanked Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons for the Bassing Beach clean up she initiated. In a letter dated Oct. 31, Conservation Trust President Gary Vanderweil explained Bassing Beach is the Conservation Trust's first property and is probably the best known and certainly the most visible.

Vanderweil wrote the trust appreciates "your taking the initiative to coordinate with Jack Buckley and arrange to have students from his Community Service Class work with you to clean up these beaches. Also, for coordinating with the Bassing Beach Tenants Association and arranging to have them use the wood from the abandoned boat cradles which littered the marshes. This was a creative win-win solution. We are aware of the litter generated through the course of a season by all the residents and visitors who use the beach, and your work has greatly benefited the Trust's land maintenance program."

"Our thanks also go to Jack Buckley and his four students — Nick Cambi, Jack Gilbert, Ryan Kucinski and Chris Riihimaki — who worked with you to clean up the beach," he said.

Long-time Cohasset letter carrier delivers triplets!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

SEEING TRIPLE!

Congratulations to Dennis "Skip" Reardon, long-time mail carrier here in Cohasset. Dennis and his wife Kathy are proud parents of triplets born on Nov. 2 at South Shore Hospital. Sean weighed in at 4 lbs 13 oz.; Noah at 5 lbs 2 oz.; and Victoria at 4 lbs 8 oz. The babies will hopefully be joining their two older brothers at home in Plymouth by the end of this week. The Reardons' many friends here in Cohasset are adding "Good Luck" to our Congratulations! What wonderful news.

BOOK ANGELS

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Rt. 3A, is sponsoring its annual Book Angel Program to benefit local children. The goal of the program is to promote literacy and give the gift of reading to a local child. The book angel (you!) selects an angel from the tree in the store and buys a book for the child described on the angel. Buttonwood will give a 15 percent discount on the book and deliver the book to the appropriate agency. The program recipients are Wellspring in Hull, Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth and the Blue Hills Healthy Families (serving the South Shore). This is the thirteenth year Buttonwood has sponsored the Book Angel Program. About 200 books were donated last year. The program runs from Nov. 17 through Dec. 22. Please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 if you have any questions.

ALUMNI SOCCER

The 3rd annual Cohassset Alumni Women's Soccer Game is being planned.. The game is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 25th at 1 p.m. on Miliken Field. All women alumni and current soccer players at CHS are welcome to play. We'll play two 40-minute halves. Anyone interested send an email to pumkinpumper@gmail.com or 781-962-6049 so that a headcount and team organization can happen. It's odd-year grads vs. even-year grads.

There is also a men's game being organized by Jeff Donze (jeff.donze@comcast.net). That game will also be Sat. Nov. 25th at 1 pm on Miliken Field. Make sure to let him know if you will be there.

JINGLE BELL WALK

The South Shore Community Center invites Families & Friends to our 12th Annual Jingle Bell Walk held on Friday, Nov. 24th. Come to Cohasset Harbor (2 pm) and watch Santa and Mrs. Claus and their many elf assistants arrive by boat. Santa passes out jingle bells and in a horse drawn wagon make their way to the Community Center for hot cocoa, punch and cookies. Enjoy the community sing-along of traditional holiday favorites sung by Mrs. Claus & Santa with Frosty, Rudolph and the merry Elves. There will be photos with Santa, open bowling, face painting a turkey trot and hayrides on the Common. Rusty Skippers Band will entertain and at the end of the day the Christmas tree is lighted on the Common. This day is sure to put you in the Holiday Spirit.

COMING HOME

FALL CLEANUP HELP

On Saturday, Nov. 18, the community outreach event for Make-A-Difference Day organized through the Osgood and Deer Hill PSOs will take place. For the first time, students of all Cohasset Schools and their families are welcome to participate and to provide fall clean up for the senior citizens of Cohasset. Clean-up activities include raking, removing window air conditioners, and putting up storm windows. Volunteers are asked for a two-hour time commitment. Please call Lisa Rosen at (781) 383-6491 to schedule a time to volunteer or for more information.

'WOMEN' ON STAGE

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is getting ready for a wonderful show called " The Women." Directed by the talented and Cohasset's own Lisa Pratt and produced by another Cohasset wonder, Susan Jaffe, this classic comedy by Clare Boothe Luce is being presented on Nov. 10, 11, 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. and Nov. 12 at 2 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. Cohasset residents in the play are Barbara Baumgarten, Laura Coletta, Peggy Corrigan, Jennifer Dean, Barbara Elliot, Jo-An Heilman, and Roberta Raffa They are joined by many other women from all over. Tickets may be purchased in advance at Buttonwood Books, Front Street Books in Scituate or by calling 617-697-2115 and are also available at the door. The cost for this delightful evening out is $12 per ticket with group tickets available for groups of 8 or more. A great show for all and a whole lot of fun!

That is all for this week. Send in your news no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

Buttonwood fundraiser for Scituate Animal Shelter

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A is hosting a fundraiser for Scituate Animal Shelter Saturday, Nov. 18, beginning at 10:30 a.m. Buttonwood has arranged for Emily Carreiro of the Blue Hills Trailside Museum, managed by Mass Audubon, to be at Buttonwood from 10:30 a.m. to noon. She will bring a screech owl, box turtle and a black rat snake to be viewed and admired. Carreiro will also bring touch items – objects that can be handled.

Carriero is a teacher/naturalist and will be available during her visit to answer questions. Buttonwood will be donating 20 percent of the day's receipts to the "3A Farm Fund," the name of the fundraising campaign established to raise money to purchase the 3A Farm in Scituate.

Scituate Animal Shelter is a no-kill shelter. It serves the town of Scituate, and Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Norwell on an as needed basis.

Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 for more information.

Clean?

Hosing off your driveway or sidewalk sends dirt, motor oil, fertilizer, and animal waste into our rivers – the very water we drink. So please, sweep instead of hosing. Limit your fertilizer use and avoid applying it before a rainy day. Take care when changing your motor oil. And tidy up after your pets.

Your rivers are closer than you think – thanks for keeping them clean.

School board pleased with Cohasset Education Foundation gift

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department may not receive any money from the town for technology upgrades this year, if Town Meeting votes to approve the Board of Selectmen's recommendations. However, through a donation of $25,000 from the rejuvenated Cohasset Education Foundation, the Osgood School will see 24 new computers with flat screen monitors and updated software in its computer lab regardless of Monday's outcome.

At the Nov. 1 School Committee meeting, members of the newly rejuvenated CEF, including Catherine O'Callahan, Emily Brown and Sarah Murphy, announced the group would be working hard to raise funds privately for the schools. The $25,000 grant was paid for by funds raised by the former CEF. The School Committee was ecstatic to accept the donation.

The schools received funding for the computers Tuesday (see related story, page 9), and Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said it would be used to replace equipment (24 units) in the Osgood School computer lab. "These were the oldest in the district," she said of the computers, as they were purchased in 1998. Coincidentally, those computers were the first purchase made using CEF grant money.

...the CEF will be designing a Web site that will provide information on its initiatives as well as upcoming events and news.

Walsh noted, however, the school department requested $100,000 from the Capital Budget Committee for annual computer replacement throughout the district, which is a request separate from the CEF request. She said the $100,000, which is up for consideration at the Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting, would update technology equipment at a rate of 20 percent each year for a 5-year period.

The school department had requested the Capital Budget Committee recommend $505,000 in requests to the Board of Selectmen. The board then makes a recommendation to Town Meeting, which votes to allocate capital budget funding. The school department had asked for the money to cover the cost of roof repairs, technology upgrades, a science exhaust fan, an emergency generator at Osgood, a new back turnaround/walkway at Osgood, the replacement and repair of playground equipment at Osgood and the repair of the high school track. None of its requests was recommended for approval at this time.

The CEF was founded in 1992 by a group of parents, for the purpose of providing private funds for school projects and programs that might not otherwise be funded. While the group had lost momentum over the years, O'Callaghan explained after the failed overrides in May, many Cohasset residents decided it was time to spring into action.

During the "Together Cohasset" forums, which brought residents together to come up with ways to move forward collectively in the aftermath of the vote, some residents decided to create an educational fund as well as an endowment fund for the town's schools. O'Callaghan said that group of residents has joined forces with the former CEF and together, have become a new revitalized CEF.

"Two weeks ago, we merged with the former CEF. They gave us their name and their tax ID status," as well as the funds left in the account, said O'Callaghan, adding there are now both longtime members and new members on the CEF. The goal of the committee is to help the schools provide high quality education to the town's students, by supporting programs that enhance and enrich the schools in ways that are not supported by public funding or the town and school budgets. O'Callaghan noted while the funds are available to help the schools make purchases, "This is not a solution for overrides in the future."

School Committee member Rick Flynn said he was on the original CEF when it was formed 14 years ago. "The first project we funded was the computer lab at the old Osgood School," he said.

Flynn said when the school building projects were going on, the CEF fell by the wayside because many needs were being paid for as part of the building projects. Now that the projects have been completed, he said this is a great time to get the foundation back up and running.

O'Callaghan said her group is happy to be able to provide the grant funding for the computers and is going to continue raising funds for additional grants in the future. In addition, the CEF will be designing a Web site that will provide information on its initiatives as well as upcoming events and news.

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said he thinks the grants being given by the CEF are outstanding and he would encourage staff at the schools to apply for grants on their own whenever possible. "There are a number of co-curricular things we're trying to get going at the high school, like JETS (Junior Engineering Technical Society) that are not necessarily in the core curriculum but provide great opportunities," he said, and funding outside of the budget would help make them a reality.

Emily Brown of the CEF said the more ideas in the pipeline, the better, and the group is looking forward to being able to prioritize then formalize those ideas through grant funding. "We will continue to work with the superintendent to be sure our priorities are right," she said. School Committee member Steve Fusco said in his opinion, the CEF should be applauded for its efforts. He is the School Committee's liaison to the group and said the attendance at its meetings says a lot about the dedication of its members.

Supt. Walsh added, not only is there great attendance, those who attend enjoy it. "The enthusiasm is there and they've been very sensitive," to input brought forth by teachers and administrators. "These funds are not to supplant the budget — some things will never be funded through the budget." Walsh added whatever support the CEF needs, the school department will be happy to give.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said she is extremely proud to have dedicated volunteers working for the schools. "You have stayed very focused and I'm very excited for the Osgood School."

At CVS/pharmacy, we put a lot more into the communities we serve than a store. Like promise, through our work with Meeting Street — a nationally acclaimed school enabling children of all abilities to learn together. Support, by helping the Learning Center for Deaf Children build a new library and media center. And hope, by partnering with St. Jude Children's Research Hospital to raise over $3 million over the past two years. We do all this because every community that we serve is also a community where we live. This is our home. And home is always where your heart is.

CVS/community. Working in it. Working for it.

CEF funds Osgood Computer Lab

By Catherine O'Callaghan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The new computer lab will provide up-to-date technology to meet the needs of the entire school.

The Cohasset Education Foundation recently announced the complete funding of the Osgood School computer lab. The grant of $25,000 was paid for by funds raised by the former CEF. This money will purchase 24 new desktop computers, flat panel display screens and Microsoft Office Professional Edition 2003 software.

"It is a pleasure to fund the computer project at the Osgood School with the funds raised by the former CEF," says Midge Stone, Board member of the former CEF. "I am pleased that our groups came together and looking forward to working with this new energetic group of parents to raise money to fund needed projects in the schools."

Superintendent of Cohasset Schools Dr. Denise Walsh marked the Osgood computer lab as a priority. This gift will benefit nearly 400 students currently enrolled in grades K-2 and will also increase computer education and training opportunities for faculty to improve technology integration in the classroom. The new computer lab will provide up-to-date technology to meet the needs of the entire school. The equipment will support and extend valuable learning and increase the educational opportunities for Osgood students. Osgood will now be able to provide improved computer education and offer advanced training opportunities for its faculty.

The Osgood School was not able to install the necessary software or access Internet sites that complement and support their curriculum due to outdated computers. Faculty could not access critical components of their new curriculum.

"Osgood students will now have the opportunity to participate directly in learning activities related to literacy, math and other content areas," says Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan. Osgood students will now be able to use tools such as interactive books, graphic organizers and writing assistants.

The CEF is accepting grants for projects at all the Cohasset schools. The projects funded by the CEF fall outside of the school and town operating budgets, and are not included in the school's Planning and Technology Committee Report. For more information on the CEF, visit: www.cohasseteducation .org.

The CEF is looking for volunteers to help with the upcoming Spelling Bee and Gala event planned for the spring. Please contact CEF secretary Catherine O'Callaghan at 781-383-6868.

Twenty-eight articles on agenda

ous capital projects and equipment for town departments. Based on current finances, Town Manager Bill Griffin told the Capital Budget Committee — which recommends capital expenditures to the Board of Selectmen — he felt comfortable recommending spending $300,000 in free cash for capital projects. With roughly $1.6 million in requests put before the committee, it had some tough decisions to make. Ultimately, voters will decide if the money should be spent (see related story).

Article four will ask the town to approve recommendations made by the Community Preservation Committee. Under the Community Preservation Act, the CPC recommends to Town Meeting how funds raised through local taxation and state matching funds are to be spent in support of projects consistent with the Act (see related story).

A number of committees will come forward at Town Meeting to ask for funding to hire consultants. Article five will ask voters to approve allocating roughly $10,000 to allow the Alternative Energy Committee to hire a consultant to assist in the investigation of alternative energy options for the town. Article six will ask Town Meeting to approve allocating $10,000 for the new Stormwater Management Committee to hire a consulting engineer. The money would allow the committee to hire a consultant that specializes in applying for grant funding and helping towns identify and find solutions for their stormwater issues.

Article seven has come before Cohasset voters before and was passed, but must be approved again to allow the town to re-file it with the state. The article proposes home rule legislation that would change the income limit for residents who wish to defer their taxes. Assistant Assessor Debra Krupczak explained to the Board of Selectmen, the article was passed at the fall 2002 Special Town Meeting, but fell through the cracks at the state level.

When Town Meeting originally approved the article in 2002, its passage raised the maximum qualifying salary for seniors wishing to defer their taxes to $50,000. Seniors who opt to defer their taxes must meet age and income requirements. Prior to the vote, the salary requirement had been up to $40,000. Deferred taxes must be paid back, either when the house is sold, or if the resident passes away.

After Town Meeting approved the article, it was required to be sent on to the Legislature, which at that time was working on its own revision to the state requirements. In turn, the state passed a bylaw that did not have the wording Cohasset sought, and Cohasset's bylaw was never passed by the state. Therefore, the town needs Town Meeting approval again to re-file the bill with the state.

Article eight will amend a previous article passed by Town Meeting, which deals with seawall repairs on Cohasset Harbor. Currently the project is confined to the area on Border Street from Atlantica to the Mill River Marine boatyard, but the town would like to expand the project's scope. The state recently approved grant applications that would provide the funds for the expansion, and Town Meeting will be asked to approve the town's providing a 50 percent funding match.

The area along the seawall is a heavily traversed pedestrian area, and the walkway along the seawall is cracking and is in need of repair for safety reasons. Over the years the seawall itself has also begun falling apart. Repairs were made to the wall in the early 1990s, but the solution was only temporary. Past Town Meetings have appropriated $15,000 to fund preliminary studies of the area; $25,000 to cover preliminary engineering and design costs; and most recently at the 2004 fall Special Town Meeting, $600,000 was appropriated for final engineering, design, and repair costs.

Recently, the state announced a new grant program, which allows towns to apply for funding up to $1.2 million. This week, the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation awarded the town three seawall repair grants totaling $466,750. The Border Street seawall project will receive $272,500, the Lawrence Wharf seawall will receive $162,500 and the Sailing Club Seawall project will receive $31,750.

At the Nov. 6 Board of Selectmen's meeting, Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town is required to match the grants in the same amount. "We are asking the Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting to amend the scope of a previous bond issue authorization to allow that bond to serve as the town's match," he said.

The Board of Selectmen put Article nine on the Warrant for the Water Commission. At the 2004 Annual Town Meeting, the town authorized the Water Commission to acquire all rights in Old Road, a road which exists only on paper, laid out in 1670. Old Road was acquired in a taking by the Water Department on Aug. 30. The article asks Town Meeting to abandon Old Road (the land) as a public way and prohibit public use. Old Road abuts the town's watershed.

The Water Commission would also like to see the town vote in the affirmative for Article 10. At the December 2005 Special Town Meeting, voters authorized the Water Department to purchase a parcel of land (55-51), and upon title review, Town Counsel discovered the parcel had recently been combined by the assessors with another parcel of land (55-52). The combination of the lots was not the result of a deed transfer, but apparently for record keeping convenience. Although the Water Department technically owns both lots due to their being combined, Town Counsel believes Town Meeting must specifically authorize the purchase of lot 55-52.

Article 11 has five parts that together will help clean up the town's books. Town Meeting will be asked to rescind and/or reduce several authorized bond issues that are no longer required by the town for various reasons. If approved, Griffin said the action will be viewed as positive by the bond rating agencies (see related story).

Articles 12, 13 and 14 will also help the town's bond rating by increasing its reserves. Article 12 will transfer money into an existing stabilization fund and Articles 13 and 14 will form new stabilization funds (see related story).

Article 15 was suggested by the Cohasset Police Department and would establish a process of documenting the receipt and sale of secondhand items and jewelry, which in turn would reduce the chance that stolen items would be unwittingly sold by local businesses.

Police Chief James Hussey said there has been no problem with second-hand sales to date, but being preemptive is never a bad idea. However, he said it used to be very common for thieves to bring stolen goods to pawnshops to sell them quickly and take the cash. Pawnshops have become more restricted in recent times, which has led criminals to look to "secondary markets" when selling their loot, such as jewelry or antique shops.

To that end, the police department would like to see Article 15 passed, which would require a 14-day hold on selling items such as used electronic equipment bearing serial numbers, jewelry, old metals, items made of gold, silver or platinum, decorative porcelain figurines, furs, rugs, one of a kind objects of art. Items such as stamps, coins, books, clothing, furniture or factory made mass-produced ceramics, glass and decorative items would not be subject to the freeze, so as not to prevent second-hand stores from selling items purchased at estate sales or conducting similar business.

The Board of Selectmen put two articles on the Warrant. The first, Article 16, would give the Board of Selectmen the discretion to begin the Annual Town Meeting at a time the board sees fit. Currently, the Annual Town Meeting must begin at 10 a.m., and by changing the wording the Board of Selectmen could set the start time at 9:30 a.m. or 11 a.m., or any other time, depending on the circumstances. Article 17, while listed on the Warrant, will be indefinitely postponed as after some discussion, the board agreed there is no need to change the town's election schedule at this time.

Article 18 will ask the town to approve reimbursing the school department's operating budget in the amount of $65,097. The funds were spent during the course of the fiscal year to complete school security improvements for the middle-high school, Deer Hill

Twenty-eight articles on STM agenda

School and Osgood School. The school department had money left over from the middle-high school and Deer Hill building projects for security system upgrades, and to save money and complete the project while the students were out of the building over the summer, the department went ahead and asked Griffin to put the Osgood project out to bid as well. That way, the schools could ensure all three security systems would be compatible. The school department feel the item is a capital expense, and not having a capital budget, has asked the town to reimburse the cost. If the town votes no, the school department will use money it has in a foundation reserve account to pay for the system.

Articles 19 and 20 are both Sewer Commission articles. Article 19 will ask the town to borrow $1 million to make repairs to the town's sewer system. Currently, there is excessive water coming into the town's sewer system due to infiltration and inflow. In other words, some of the town's sewer pipes have cracks and are allowing water to infiltrate from the inside out, which is putting further stress on the town's wastewater treatment plant.

The money would be used to implement studies, evaluations, investigations, design, permitting and construction of various sewer infrastructure improvements to abate I&I. Funds would be paid back through sewer revenue and/or direct betterment based upon the nature of the improvements.

The Sewer Commission would also like the town to vote favorably on Article 20, which would authorize it to acquire temporary and permanent real estate easements within private or common ways for the purpose of laying, constructing, replacing, improving or otherwise operating and maintaining sewer collection pipes, manholes and appurtenant equipment and structures, in connection with the Little Harbor, Atlantic Avenue, Jerusalem Road (Deep Run/Rust Way) Sewer Districts and related sewer expansion projects.

Article 21 is a zoning bylaw amendment sponsored by the Planning Board that would ask the town to amend the Senior Multifamily Residence Overlay District bylaw. The change comes primarily due to the Cedarmere development, which is the only project that will be built under the bylaw. The Planning Board would like to see the language changed, as currently no children are allowed to live in housing built under the bylaw for more than two weeks at a time. The bylaw would preclude residents in the 55-and-up complex from having a grandchild visit for a few weeks in the summer, or from having a college-age child live with them during the summer months. The new language would allow for extended stays for non-Cohasset residents, ensuring the development would not add children to the school system.

Article 22 would change downtown zoning in the Residential A zoning district. If passed, the article would provide zoning relief only for homes in the Residential A district whose lots are smaller than 18,000 square feet and are nonconforming. At the 2003 fall Special Town Meeting, the town amended the zoning bylaw to limit structural coverage to 20 percent of the lot area.

However, the Residential A district in Cohasset contains mostly older homes built on smaller lots. The existing buildings on many of these lots already exceed the 20 percent structural limit and the owners do not have the flexibility to build additions, porches, garages, or tool sheds which otherwise comply with zoning. The article would increase the allowable percentage of structural coverage in a pre-existing nonconforming lot from 20 percent to 25 percent, or 3,600 square feet, whichever is less, thus allowing residents to make small changes to their home, such as enclose a porch or build a deck. The Planning Board, which recommended the article, said it was not the intent of the bylaw to preclude residents from making minor changes on their property.

Articles 23 through27 are all citizens' petitions, which deal with zoning changes in the Village (see related story). Article 28 is tied to those zoning articles, as it will ask the town to appropriate funds to retain a professional consulting/planning firm to produce a series of build out analyses for public review and input. The Planning Board would like to see the consultant hired before any of the zoning changes suggested by the citizens are carried forward.

The fall Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium. Warrants have been mailed to every household, and extras will be available at the meeting. In the event the meeting does not finish Monday night, as the moderator typically allows discussion to continue until 11 p.m., it will carry over to Tuesday night.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

'Stabilizing' bond rating

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset has been fortunate to be able to maintain its AA+ bond rating for the past 5 years. While the town continues to enjoy that rating, this summer Standard and Poor's, one of the two leading bond rating agencies, put Cohasset on a watch list, due to its financial situation.

To help ensure the town does not lose its bond rating the next time it is evaluated, Town Manager Bill Griffin has placed three articles on the Town Meeting Warrant which will increase the town's reserves, which is one of the areas bond rating agencies look at. To do this, he has suggested the formation of two new stabilization funds, and a transfer of money into the existing stabilization fund.

The stabilization fund is an actual trust fund that has money in it and earns its own interest, rather than just a budgeted item. This means funds in the stabilization fund are available from year to year. Town Meeting authorization is required to transfer money from the stabilization fund for any lawful purpose. Usually funds spent from the reserve fund are for one-time expenses. Other than interest being earned, the only way the stabilization fund increases is if Town Meeting votes to put money into it.

Article 12 will ask for Town Meeting approval to transfer funds from the sale of the right-of-way and school building projects into the stabilization fund. The town sold the train right-of-way for $1.6 million, and that money was at one time in the stabilization fund. In addition, the town borrowed the full sum of money necessary for the school building projects, which made $500,000 in interest. Together, both sums of money left the town with $2.1 million, all of which was earmarked to help pay off the bonds for the school construction project.

However, the reimbursement from the state for the school building projects was awarded earlier than anticipated and the $2.1 million was not needed to cover those costs. Instead, it has been used to "patch holes" in the budget, including covering costs associated with special education out-of-district tuitions, police overtime costs and legal bills.

While the $2.1 million was originally in the stabilization fund, Director of Finance Michael Buckley said at one point in time the Legislature was thinking of tying in a town's local aid to the amount it had in its stabilization fund, and essentially penalize towns for having more in reserves. To be safe, the town put the money in a line item in the budget, appropriated to pay for debt service. The plan never panned out with the Legislature, and now the town would like to put the money back into the stabilization fund where it belongs.

For the past few years, Buckley said towns in Massachusetts have been able to set up special stabilization funds, which hold money for specific purposes. That is exactly what he and Griffin would like to see happen with the approval of Article 13. Griffin and Buckley have proposed starting a sewer betterment stabilization fund which will hold all betterments in one account to be used specifically for making annual principal and interest payments on sewer-related debt service.

Buckley explained when the North Cohasset, Straits Pond and Central Sewer projects began, the town issued betterments for half the cost of the project, which was payable over 20 years. The town took out bonds to pay for the other half of the project. Many people paid the entire amount up front, as it is typically customary to pay off the whole betterment when selling your house. Buckley said therefore, more money came in than anticipated, and the surplus was set aside for when it would be needed in later years when a constant stream of money was not coming in due to those which had already paid. That money would now be set aside in its own account, and would need a two-thirds vote of Town Meeting to be spent.

The town will also be asked to form a new pension reserve stabilization fund through Article 14. Buckley said in the late 1970s and early 1980s, former Town Accountant Bill Signorelli realized the town was not putting enough money aside for its annual payments to the Norfolk County Retirement Board. "He had the foresight to ask Town Meeting to put money aside to pay the bill when it came due," Buckley said, and currently, the town has $538,548 in its pension account. Griffin and Buckley would like to see a stabilization account set up for the funds. Funds will only be used to pay future pension payments subject to a two-thirds vote of Town Meeting.

Cleaning up the books

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Article 11 on the Town Meeting Warrant is basically a housekeeping article. In order to clean up the town's books in a way that will hopefully be looked upon favorably by bond rating agencies, voters must either rescind or reduce several authorized bond issues.

•Voters will be asked to rescind a vote, which took place in March 1999. Town Meeting approved borrowing $200,000 to essentially allow the town to take over maintenance of private septic systems. The initiative never went forward and the town decided against maintaining private systems, which means the money was never borrowed. Without a Town Meeting vote to rescind the first vote of approval, the town's record shows it is authorized to borrow that money, and bond rating agencies look at that approval as potential debt. If it doesn't come off the books, it looks as if someday the town will borrow it.

• Town Meeting will also be asked to reduce the amount authorized for two appropriations for school-related projects. At the December 1999 Special Town Meeting, the town authorized borrowing $390,000 for the purpose of developing construction drawings and bid documents for the improvements at the middle-high school and Deer Hill. The town received funding from the state and therefore only needed to borrow $156,000. The town will be asked to vote to approve the $156,000 that was borrowed, which will allow the$234,000 that was not used, to come off the books.

• Voters at the March 2000 Town Meeting authorized the town to borrow $41.8 million for renovations and reconstruction of the middle-high school and Deer Hill School. The town received state reimbursement for this project and therefore borrowed $16.72 million. Voters will be asked to take back the original Town Meeting vote and authorize the actual amount, taking roughly $25 million in potential debt off the books·

• At the November 2001 Special Town Meeting the town authorized borrowing $3.9 million to design, construct, convert and equip the Paul Pratt Library. However, through a combination of grants and gifts to the library, the town only needed to borrow $650,000. Through the efforts of the Trustees of the Library, which had a very successful fund-raising campaign, Cohasset will be able to take roughly $3.25 million in potential debt off the books.

• Lastly, the November 2002 Town Meeting approved borrowing roughly $1 million to purchase a parcel of land at the end of Heather Drive known as the "Barnes Property." Through state funding and money from the Community Preservation Committee, the property was purchased and the appropriation was not necessary. Therefore Town Meeting must rescind its vote to approve the appropriation and take it off the books.

– Parachute regiment fought in Battle of Bulge –

WWII vet's web site helps the 517th stay connected

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

"What I did was no big deal really. We were just a bunch of young kids doing our jobs for our country," said Ben Barrett.

The Cohasset resident was a member of the 517th Parachute Regiment Combat Team that fought in the Battle of the Bulge during World War II.

As Barrett spoke of the war, his Regiment, its accomplishments and his passion to keep its legacy alive — he was flanked by photos, posters, books and medals carefully displayed at his desk. A photo of Barrett in uniform revealed that with the exception of distinguished white hair, at age 88 he has changed very little. Barrett was hesitant to accept any personal credit for what had been achieved during that infamous conflict, but the photos, memorabilia and written accounts tell a story of remarkable courage, brotherhood and patriotism.

Following World War II, Barrett went to Boston University on the GI Bill. It was there that he met Fran, who had been an Army nurse, and married her on Veterans Day in 1949. Despite the patriotism that had been demonstrated by the couple via their military service, the wedding date had no symbolic message attached.

"It was a Saturday, we both had the day off and the church was available," Barrett explained. "I missed a big football game that day, too because of it!"

The couple settled north of Boston in Saugus and started their family. Barrett, despite his war wounds was able to carry on with life and work and raising his six children. Though enjoying ordinary life in the country for which he had fought and sacrificed, he carried with him memories of the sights and sounds of war and suffering, especially those accumulated during the legendary battle in the cold and snowy Belgian countryside.

The Barretts moved to the town two years ago to be near their daughter, Joanne and grandson, Eric Weinstein.

When his children were growing up, Barrett never talked about the war, said Joanne. "It is only as adults that we learned so much about his involvement in the Battle of the Bulge," she said.

"At the time I thought, 'Why talk about it? I can't explain it. Who would understand it?'" Barrett said. "You couldn't understand it unless you had been there. I don't understand it myself. I was so young and I remember it all but I don't remember being very scared.

"We were like brothers though, and we would have 'pacts' with our fellow soldiers that if something happened to one, the other would be sure to be in touch with the family when we returned home."

As a young man in the frigid forests of Ardennes, Belgium, Barrett surely was unaware how much he would contribute to this code of honor more than half-a-century later. For Christmas in 2000 his children gave him a computer. His son, Bob, created a website for him telling the story of his life and honoring his Regiment. The site: www.517PRCT.org has grown to be a source for veterans, their families and friends to remain in touch, connect with people who may have known a loved one, research facts about soldiers and their families and learn about the Battle of the Bulge.

"I hope that our children and grandchildren will continue to remain in touch with each other. Our regiment was a brotherhood and learning about its contribution to World War II is important."
— Ben Barrett

In addition to helping people close chapters and begin new ones in their lives by finding answers to questions that have been unsolved for years, Barrett also has united many grateful residents of Europe with the veterans who fought for their freedom. The European citizens, who enjoy freedom today as a result of the 517th, are able to visit and communicate via this website on a daily basis with their American friends and their families. Among these is a group of citizens from Belgium that greet the American troops when they visit. This committee continues to see that the soldiers are remembered and honored for liberating them from the Germans.

Irma Targnion was four years old during the Battle of the Bulge and has very clear recollections of that time. She has written her story and it appears on the 517th website. The Mariner contacted her for a comment about this story. She also sent a photo of herself at that time in which she is wearing a dress made from material of a United States parachute. (See related story.)

For the 50th anniversary of the Battle, Barrett returned to Europe with his wife and daughter. He described the reception of the citizens of Belgium to the US paratroopers and how different it is from that in the United States today. "We went into a store to buy a camera," he said. "As soon as they found out I was one of the US paratroopers, they gave it to me for free. Everywhere we went, people would say 'thank you.' Small children learn all about the War and the Battle of the Bulge in school. They are grateful for their freedom and they love Americans. Here in this country, it's become just another day off…a day to go shopping.

"That was when a war brought the country together," he continued. "Everyone was part of the war effort. Of course, that was when women went to work, factories manufactured supplies for the troops and any city you went to you saw about 80 percent of the people walking around in uniform. There were terrible conditions then, too. We didn't have the right clothing for the cold winter that there was, the equipment froze and thousands died. There were times we had to walk by our own injured troops and keep going. Those were our orders. What people don't understand is that these decisions have to be made in split seconds. Sometimes in battle people die so thousands more won't. Of course it was terrible. It was war. I still recall the smell of the battlefield, the brush and the tall grass. Sometimes there was so much fire, there was nothing but red in the sky."

Barrett's journey to one of biggest battles in American history was not a typical one. Upon graduating from high school in 1937, he joined the Civilian Conservation Corps where he earned $30 a month. "I got to keep $5 and the rest was sent home to my family," he explained. "Roosevelt created the program. It was during the Depression and it was a good way to keep guys like me busy and out of trouble!"

He tried to enlist in the service in 1940 in New Hampshire but was rejected because of a heart murmur. A while later, he learned he could try to enlist in Maine and this time was successful.

"After Pearl Harbor, they were looking for paratroopers," Barrett recalled. He then went to Fort Benning, Ga. for training. After earning his paratrooper wings, he volunteered to go overseas for combat duty and eventually joined the 517th Parachute Regiment Combat Team.

When the Germans began their invasion, they chose an area of the border that was lightly patrolled. Referring to the surprise attack of the Battle of the Bulge, he said, "We had a radio and it was very hard to hear what was being said but we knew something was happening. When we headed out, we drove by trucks. It was a cold snowy winter and we had practically no shelter. When we were engaged in the battle, we knew the Germans outnumbered us. When you are the infantry, there is nothing between you and the enemy."

Later in the Battle, Bennett was wounded and eventually returned to the United States on a hospital ship. His long trip home included an "ambulance" ride being strapped to a jeep. "When there would be incoming fire, the driver's orders were to stop the truck, leave us and take cover. Of course if something happened to him, nothing would be accomplished. I was already no good. I remember watching the shells light up the sky over my head. It was beyond belief."

The 517th had been part of the defeat of the Germans in the Battle of the Bulge in which there were more than 80,000 American casualties in fewer than two months.

Shares stories

The website maintained by Barrett and his son tells countless stories of this Battle and the brave troops who fought in it. Hours studying these accounts only begin to capture the essence of the significance of this incredible time in history. The valor, pride and loyalty of these troops and their families are evident in their words and recollections.

"There is a whole new generation becoming interested in learning about the military," Barrett said. "As people go off to fight in war today, their families and friends look for information on the internet about the armed forces, history, locating news of loved ones and others going through similar experiences. That's how they find us. There are so few people left now from World War II. I hope that our children and grandchildren will continue to remain in touch with each other. Our regiment was a brotherhood and learning about its contribution to World War II is important."

Curiosity about relatives or stories without endings that might relate to this time in history can be researched and explored. Barrett encourages others to ask questions, write letters and emails and pay attention to old notes or journals that might be discovered in attics or basements. "If someone wants to try to locate a person or learn what happened in a particular situation during the Battle, they should send an email along on the website. We can share the information and see what others know. I have seen people learn that they live in a town near the person who holds the answer to their question."

The 517th Parachute Regimental Combat Team was together from 1943-1945. It was deactivated in 1945, but its members have remained in touch with each other and attend reunions regularly. Barrett is overseeing the next National Reunion which will be held in Washington D.C. June 27 to July 2, 2007. Registration information is on the website and anyone interested is invited to be part of this event.

"We decided to have it in June because many people have grandchildren they would like to take and combine it with a vacation," said Barrett. "It isn't necessary to attend the meetings for the 517th. Some people come along with us and go sightseeing while taking advantage of our group rates and activities. Of course you can be in Washington, D.C. a month and not see everything. But we thought it might be the last opportunity for many of the veterans to see the World War II Memorial. We hope lots of relatives, friends and neighbors will join us on the trip."

Another popular feature of Barrett's website is his newsletter, "Mail Call." Sent by email, he writes and sends recent news including bits of communication he has received, reunions that are happening, personal updates from members and other topics of interest. "Mail Call" is sent almost daily to more than 350 soldiers, family, and friends of the 517th in the United States, France and Belgium. This communiqué is one of the most popular features of the site, which is recognized by many veteran organizations as one of the most informative military sites on the internet.

"It's nothing fancy," says Barrett, "but there are lots of people who look forward to it. One guy told me recently that when he does his reading, he sits down with the Washington Post and 'Mail Call.' Another guy I know doesn't have a computer but receives the newsletter from his son. The son has said that when he used to go to visit his Dad, he would be asked how he was and how things were going. Now his Dad says, 'Did you bring me Mail Call'?"

Barrett recently gave a presentation at a breakfast group in Hull about the "Battle of the Bulge." He also is participating in a program with the Braintree schools in which students must interview a veteran from a war in which the United States was engaged. The students are to research and study the war during the year and the veterans will be invited back on Memorial Day 2007 for a ceremony.

The recipient of a Bronze Star, Purple Heart and eight other medals, Barrett insisted his service was nothing more than fulfilling his duty to his country. "I was no hero but I served with a regiment of heroes; the 517th Regimental Combat Team. The real heroes never came home."

About the Battle of the Bulge

In the summer of 1944, members of the American Armed Forces rode through the streets of France and were greeted by cheering crowds triumphantly waving flags. It was believed that Hitler was "on the run" and that Eisenhower thought the war would be over completely by Christmas. Unknown to the Allied Forces, Hitler was the mastermind behind what was yet to come: one of the bloodiest battles in history… the Battle of the Bulge.

The enemy was producing an entire new force complete with tanks, other war vehicles and weapons in sophisticated underground factories. This top-secret mission would surprise the Allied Forces by breaking through a thinly patrolled portion of the border and capture Belgium and surround American forces before moving onward.

Just before Christmas that same year the attack was launched. The Americans were outnumbered 10-1 and had inadequate uniforms, boots and other supplies to sustain them through the harsh winter conditions. The battle raged for nearly two months. Despite the challenging circumstances faced and the 80,000 troops who were killed, captured or wounded amidst the coldest winter in Belgian history, the Americans prevailed. The Germans were able to make a "bulge" in the border but were

'We love them as members of our families'

By Irma Targnion

Following, you will find a comment about my feeling and affection for the 517th PRCT and the valorous US soldiers who liberated us from the enemy during the Battle of the Bulge.

For more than 30 years, our reception committee is proud and happy to welcome the US veterans and to pay homage with ceremonies, religious services, flowers at the monuments.. (There are eight US Monuments on the territory of Trois-Ponts – 2,300 inhabitants). The 517th PRCT is very special to us, they liberated Trois-Ponts, Bergeval, Wanne, Logbiermé, Fosse, Arbrefontaine , Stavelot, and later the area of St Vith.

Because of the sacrifice of those great young men who fought for our Liberty, Ardenne is now living in peace and we shall never forget those young men who paid the price of their life freeing us from the enemy. It is difficult to explain the warm feeling and the affection we are having for the 517th's veterans. It is incredible that 62 years after the Battle, we are great friends and I think more and more with the years. We consider them with gratitude and a deep respect but in the same time, we love them as members of our families. We do hope to stay in touch with them a long time; we do hope their children and grandchildren perpetuate this friendship and that our children and grandchildren will perpetuate the memory of the Battle of the Bulge and its heroes. The veterans are now in their 80s but I could not help myself seeing them like young boys of 18 or 20 years old. I also have a deep respect and sympathy for their mothers, wives, fiancées and sisters praying for them during the war. Briefly, in a word, we love all of them and we shall never forget the guardian angels who saved our lives."

Irma's entire story can be read on: www.517PRCT.org

The veterans are now in their 80s but I could not help myself seeing them like young boys of 18 or 20 years old.

In the photo, Irma is wearing a dress made from the material of an American parachute. She wrote that her brothers had shirts made of the same material, too. After the fighting had stopped, the children had been sent out into the meadows and fields to collect anything that might be used to begin to rebuild their homes.

Salute to veterans

The 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, 1918.

The Allied nations and Germany ceased hostilities, for all intents and purposes, bringing an end to World War I and laying the foundation for what is now Veterans Day.

Unfortunately World War I did not live up to its billing as the "war to end all wars" when the Treaty of Versailles was signed on June 28, 1919, officially ending the war. It's legacy, and that of the signing of the treaty, however, has lived on in providing a lasting recognition to those who have fought for our country.

Originally known as Armistice Day, Veterans Day was primarily a day set aside to honor veterans of World War I. Congress made it a legal holiday in 1938, but in 1954 after the United States' involvement in World War II and Korea, Congress amended the Act of 1938 by striking out the word "Armistice" and inserting in its place the word "Veterans."

With the approval of this legislation on June 1, 1954, Nov. 11th became a day to honor American veterans of all wars.

The original concept for the celebration was for a day observed with parades and public meetings and a brief suspension of business beginning at 11 a.m.

While many federal holidays, including Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day and Columbus Day are celebrated on Mondays to insure three-day weekends, Veterans Day is one of the few holidays celebrated on its original date. In 1968, however, Congress passed a law including Veterans Day with the three holidays mentioned above to fall on a Monday to encourage travel, recreational activities and stimulate economic growth by creating long weekends.

Many states, however, did not go along with the decision and continued to celebrate the holidays on their original dates, creating so much confusion that President Gerald R. Ford signed a law on Sept. 20, 1975 returning the annual observance of Veterans Day to its original date of Nov. 11, beginning in 1978.

To this day, Veterans Day continues to be observed on Nov. 11, regardless of what day of the week it falls. The restoration of the observance of Veterans Day to Nov. 11 not only preserves the historical significance of the date, but helps focus attention on the important purpose of Veterans Day: A celebration to honor America's veterans for their patriotism, love of country, and willingness to serve and sacrifice for the common good.

So on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, 2006, let us continue the tradition of not only saluting the veterans who have so dutifully completed their service to our great country, but to those who continue to do so today all across the world.

Cohasset's Veterans Day observances:

On Saturday, Nov. 11 at 1 p.m., the town will dedicate a new monument at Veteran's Park on Cohasset Harbor. The new monument lists the names of those Cohasset residents who have served or are currently serving in the Korean War, Vietnam War, the Gulf War, or the War on Terror.

During the Korean War, 168 Cohasset residents served their country and one, Clifford David Strout, paid the ultimate price. Vietnam saw 263 Cohasset residents travel overseas and eight men — Peter J. Albiani Jr., Peter Cogill, Allen F. Keating, William C. Laidlaw, John Paul Lyon, Edward R. Maree, Dennis J. Reardon, and Craig M. Simeone — lost their lives. There were 30 Cohasset residents who served in the Gulf War and 43 are currently serving in the War on Terror.

The monument is circular and made of the same stone used to make the World War I and II honor rolls, and is sunken into the ground. The circle has a diameter of 28 feet, and is 16 inches tall from the outside and 22 inches tall on the inside. There is a sloped walkway to bring visitors down into the center of the circle where there is a large flagpole.

On the inside of the circle are the names of the town's war veterans on beveled granite, with another plaque below the names indicating the war in which the residents served. There are also blank tablets to allow the town to inscribe the names of residents who may need to be added in the future. Outside the monument, there is grass and a walkway made of bluestone pavers.

Residents interested in contributing financially to the project may send checks made payable to the Veterans Memorial Committee to 42 King St., Cohasset, attention Glenn Pratt. For more information on the town's veterans, please visit the committee's Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Support for the harbormaster

TO THE EDITOR:

As the Commodore of the Cohasset Sailing Club and with unanimous approval from the CSC Board of Trustees, I am writing in support of the Cohasset Harbormaster, Lorri Gibbons, and her request for an upgraded boat, office and dock.

Every summer, the Cohasset Sailing Club teaches over 170 children of this community how to sail and to appreciate and respect the ocean. Safety is our number one priority. In her first year as Harbormaster, Lorri was a breath of fresh air. She was constantly on the water, always willing to lend a hand for a stalled instructors launch or at the ready to retrieve a wayward sailor — young or old. When vandalism and theft hit us early in the season, she was there for us to discuss prevention strategies. Her unprecedented enthusiasm, expertise and service to the Sailing Club are greatly appreciated.

We respectfully, but strongly, disagree with the opinion expressed by Mr. Stone in last week's Mariner that the Harbormaster position should be part-time and that there is no need for updating the Harbormaster's equipment. A reference to how things were 40 years ago is irrelevant. The harbor today bears little resemblance to the harbor of the 1960s to which Mr. Stone refers. The exponential increase in recreational boating, as evidenced by the number of boats moored or privately docked in the harbor and the staggering array of boats anchored at Bassings on any July or August weekend, justifies a full-time position and the equipment to fulfill the safety and policing responsibilities of the position.

Lorri Gibbons has proven herself to be a valuable asset to not only the Sailing Club and the children of this town, but to all boaters – commercial and recreational. Please join us in supporting the Harbormaster's request for funding so that she may continue to ensure the safety and the proper management of the harbor and surrounding waters.

Bring the troops home!

TO THE EDITOR

Through you may I take an opportunity to say how pleased the peace groups, with which I have a connection, are with the outcome of the "Back from Iraq" resolution, and grateful to all who voted in the affirmative on this vitally important, national issue.

And a special thanks to all who collected signatures on petitions that got the question on ballots in Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and part of Scituate, in the first place. And, more heartfelt thanks to those who passed out brochures, held signs at the polls, wrote letters to editors and attended meetings and vigils dealing with this subject.

The votes of people in 139 cities and towns throughout Massachusetts instruct their state representatives to make clear to the President and the (new) Congress that we must end this hopeless and ill-conceived war now, and bring our troops home.

Keep the pressure on, they are finally listening!

War on Terror and the Veterans Memorial

TO THE EDITOR:

Although I can't think of better terminology to use on the new Veterans' Memorial plaque, apparently a few individuals don't think "The War on Terror" is quite right to describe the current military activities in the Middle East. Their argument seems to be that the Iraq adventure is not about fighting terror.

Well, whatever the grievous faults of execution, the Iraq intrusion had a larger purpose or concept than simply ousting Hussein, or preserving oil supply, or countering the ephemeral WMD's. The concept was to establish a focal point in the Middle East (other than Israel) for freedom of thought and expression, and the beginning of the substitution of democracy for repressive authoritarianism. Discontent with that authoritarianism, discontent misdirected at the Western world because it was too dangerous to direct at their own regimes, would be reduced by movement toward democratization. It was theorized, perhaps far too optimistically, that reducing the reasons for the discontent would reduce the terrorism fueled by that discontent.

Granted, the Iraq adventure seems to have encouraged rather than reduced terrorism, and created chaos instead of increasing stability. But perhaps that increase is not long lived, if we persevere responsibly and effectively rather than shrink from the short-term cost. Constructive attitudinal changes in the Middle East, beneficial to this nation, may be achieved in the long term. (And perhaps not, thanks to the errors of execution such as lack of forward planning and insufficient troop levels to maintain control and preserve the physical infrastructure). But, muddled as it has been, the intrusion was intended to address the root causes of terrorism..

So, if attempting to address one of the root causes of discontent surely is a part of the war on terror, why not include it under the label "War on Terror"?

Seeking solution to stormwater flooding

COMMENTARY

JIM KINCH

Over the weekend of Mother's Day 2006 in Cohasset the rainfall came steadily for several days and the water rose. Along James Brook the water over topped its banks and kept coming, soon the Post Office parking lot was under. Many of us may not have noticed because we don't live in lowlands of the town watersheds. But the reality was very different for those who faced a real threat of being flooded and forced out of their homes. By Sunday the Depot Court, the lower end of Ripley Road and the Post Office lot were under water. Homes abutting James Brook were badly affected but flooded basements and overtopped roadways were only part of the problem, later tests in the flooded areas revealed that dangerously high bacterial levels were found in the submerged backyards.

The Mother's Day flood was the latest manifestation of a problem that is becoming a larger issue in Cohasset and in most coastal towns, and it came as a wakeup call. Stormwater is an old issue but why is this

Train 'unfinished business' list

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

We get more calls about the "bumps" in these two crossings than any other issue. When we ask CBB about these problems they either don't call back or say that there are no available crews.

More safety – Sometimes we just have to get on our "High Horse" about this project, so, no photos this week, only words — serious words.

This week it was reported to us by a runner that the rubber strips that are used between the tracks at the railroad crossings are very slippery after a hard frost. This is probably a form of "black ice" that plagues drivers on the roads after a hard freeze. So, whether you are a runner, a biker or a driver, slow down and be careful these frosty cold mornings whenever you cross the railroad tracks.

Unfinished business — My Dad always told me to finish what I started. This was especially true in my younger years as I was noted for starting a project and leaving it half finished in everyone's way. Well, CBB and the MBTA seem to have the same affliction. From one end of Town to the other Cohasset residents have to put up with half-finished projects. We have met with CBB many, many times on these issues, but the project is primarily focused on placing rail and other issues seem to get lost in the shuffle.

At Beechwood Street the grading and drainage does not work. We have been pleading with CBB for over a year to fix the drainage so it doesn't go into residents' driveways. Their idea of a fix was to put berms at each driveway. Well, not only are the resulting bumps aggravating for the residents, but due to incorrect grades at catch basins, water just pools up in the street. In our discussions with the project, they recognize the issue and own up to the problem. But, they insist they lack the crews to fix it. We really don't think this is right with winter on the way.

The Sohier Street and King Street crossings are half finished, for going on a year. Both are listed on the project schedule to be "paved by fall." Well fall is here and nearly over and no paving. We get more calls about the "bumps" in these two crossings than any other issue. When we ask CBB about these problems they either don't call back or say that there are no available crews.

On Rocky Lane, CBB was extremely eager to get the bridge open. So eager in fact that we still don't have the proper stripes in the road to separate the lanes or stop lines at the stop signs as required. Further, a recent rainstorm absolutely demonstrated that drainage on the "old" Rocky Lane side of the bridge is incorrect in spite of the personal assurance from the chief CBB engineer to the contrary. The rainwater which is supposed to follow the gutter lines into the catch basins, instead, goes to the center of the road and covers the road. That will be fun in freezing weather. If my Dad were still around, I'd have him call them and tell them "to finish what they started."

We have mentioned before that the new Rocky Lane access road now presents a very different approach for bikers, runners, baby strollers and pedestrians. Before the new access road, adults and children could easily get off of the road over a shallow asphalt Cape Cod berm onto the wide flat grass areas alongside the road. Now, a 6-inch granite curb separates any safe haven area from the roadway. Plus, the stretch that connects from the bridge to Main Street is quite steep. The Town Manager sent a request to the project to provide a sidewalk. The MBTA insists that there was no sidewalk there before so they are not obligated to provide one now. The new bridge has dramatically changed the environment of the pathway pedestrians use to access the rest of Town. That is why the Town feels the sidewalk is now required.

On Nov. 1, 2006 a number of Rocky Lane residents came to Town Hall to express their concerns about the many safety issues with the recently opened bridge. While we understand that the bridge construction is not complete, we all worry about how long these concerns will be left hanging. The Board of Selectmen has now drafted a second letter expressing the collective view of the Town to a senior manager at the MBTA. Our position is simple — if the reason the bridge was built was for the safety of the Rocky Lane Residents why can't the bridge be made safe?

A last little bit of business – Within the next two weeks we are going to be starting a small drainage project on Forest Avenue near the entrance to Wheelwright Park. The project should take approximately two weeks to complete. Everyone who drives Forest Avenue will be very pleased to know that after this drainage is completed we will be allowed to pave Forest Avenue. Look for the paving next spring.

Countdown to my class reunion

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

"Everybody's coming back to take stock of their lives. You know what I say? Leave your livestock alone."
Minnie Driver, Grosse Pointe Blank

There it was: the invitation to my 20th high school reunion. That can't be right, could it? I quickly do the math. Whoa. Who would've thought I could ever be this old? Or, that I might actually be considering going? But two minutes later, I was in my closet trying to find an outfit that just screamed "successful businesswoman, supermom and glamorous divorcee!"

It took less than an hour to exhaust every depressing possibility in my wardrobe before I gave up trying to capture all three in a single outfit. Instead, I settled for "glamorous divorcee," or so I hoped. Because, when it comes down to it, all anyone cares about at reunions is how you look. And I wanted to look good. Yet, with only four weeks to go, the clock was ticking.

"I wanna run through the halls of my high school. I wanna scream at the top of my lungs..."
John Mayer, No Such Thing

"What do you mean you can't fit me in for highlights and a haircut?" I cried (literally) a week later to my hairdresser. "You don't understand, it's my high school reunion!" Fortunately, he understands. After all, he went to high school once, too. And my wonderful stylist (and most consistent man in my life), opens up early for me the next morning to banish all roots from my head.

Outfit. Check. Hair. Check. Weight? Actually not bad — same approximate weight, just a bit of shifting around. Check. Teeth whitening strip in place for the evening? Check. Then I make the mistake of peering a little too closely into the mirror. Where did those wrinkles come from? And are those age spots? I never noticed them before — oh my God! I grab my kid out of bed (well, he wasn't actually asleep yet) and race over to CVS. Luckily for me, my son points out the teeth-whitening strip before we actually get inside the store. As we hit the glycolic peel/microdermabrasion aisle, I start to panic as I read all the boxes. Six to eight weeks for results?! But I only have three!

"You know? I bet in high school, everybody made somebody's life hell."
Lisa Kudrow, Romy and Michele's High School Reunion

Two weeks to go. As I model my reunion outfit for a friend, I finally feel like things are under control. Besides, I was pretty geeky in high school, so I have nowhere to go but up. My friend, however, is panic-stricken about her own reunion which takes place less than two months after she gave birth. "I've worked hard for 20 years to stay in shape, and now I'm going to be fat at reunion," she complains over dinner. I try to console her. "But you don't understand," she wails, "I was the homecoming queen. Everyone is rooting for me to be fat." She does have a point there.

"I just honestly don't know what I have in common with those people anymore... or with anyone, really. I mean, they'll all have husbands and wives and children and houses and dogs, ... And what am I going to say? 'I killed the president of Paraguay with a fork. How have you been?' I just think it'll be depressing."

It's now a week before reunion and my checklist is almost complete. Yet, there's still one outstanding item. I hadn't given thought to the fact that I'm about to walk into my class reunion and face prom queens, football stars, band boys, drama geeks, national merit scholars and their respective spouses, all by my single self.

Who am I to think that I can do this? I certainly wouldn't have gone to Prom alone. But, I'm not in high school anymore, am I? I'm the "successful businesswoman, supermom and glamorous divorcee!" Right? At least I sort of look the part, don't I? However, just in case I chicken out, I'm packing all my high school insecurities away in a hypothetical lock box (along with memories of bad Princess Di haircuts, leg warmers and Flashdance sweatshirts) and then I'm throwing away the key. Permanently. Because we can never go back ... but then again, do we ever really want to? Guess I'll have to go to reunion to find out!

HEALTH NOTES

Too much 'super-size me' leads to obesity

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last week, we talked about some of the harmful things in a modern diet and later in the column about the forces, which push us into overweight. It should be obvious that we ought only to eat enough to satisfy our bodies. Who, in this day, says "Eat your food. It's good for you."? Maybe some do, but probably the newer response is to try to make everything taste good.

Some foods taste lousy. I never liked okra. But the story today is about the American diet in general. It's not that there's a lack of a spectrum of healthy foods, as much as there's almost never any attempt to serve either a healthy selection or reasonable quantities.

Last Saturday your health scribe had to pick up his brother-in-law at the North Station. The terminal is a tunnel of a room with train gates on one side, a few benches, a McDonald's, Dunkin Donuts, and doors at each end. Having arrived early, I decided to get a mid morning snack. The first thing I noticed was how far away from "eat it, it's good for you" we've really come. The inducements to soak up literally millions of calories were bewildering.

Finally deciding that a cup of coffee and something would be good, I went to Dunkin and requested a small cup of coffee and a Munchkin. The counterman said, "We don't sell single Munchkins" I said, "'There it is, on the Board,' 'Munchkins – 79 cents'. You advertise Munchkins – 79 cents, well, I want a Munchkin!." So the man picks up a Munchkin and after asking which of three kinds, puts it into a bag and gives it to me for free! I offer to pay, but he says "Naw, take it" "That's not right! I don't want a free Munchkin, which leaves me feeling guilty about not paying for something I ordered."

Now, with 58 million overweight; 40 million obese; 3 million morbidly obese; eight out of 10 over 25s overweight; 78 percent of Americans not meeting basic activity level recommendations — we have a population which is 25 percent completely sedentary. We have a 76 percent increase in Type II diabetes in adults 30-40 yrs old since 1990. Dramatic rises in type II diabetes, cardiovascular disease related to obesity, breast and colon cancer diagnosed among obese individuals, and about a quarter of the population with High blood pressure.

Later, I remember hearing about a Dunkin that gives three Munchkins to dogs, also for free. I don't know what obesity statistics say about dogs, but they're surely on the list somewhere. They get goodies at the Cohasset's RTF (town dump). The UPS and Fedex compete to give them out, and mailmen have been known to bribe dogs with goodies so as not to get themselves chewed.

When I took my brother-in-law to the South Station to continue his trip to New Jersey, he said after three days eating healthy, he needed a donut fix, and so we stopped at the Dunkin on Bridge Street in Weymouth. Lo and behold, that Dunkin sells single Munchkins! — 21 cents. And so it's not a law, or a corporate rule; the manager has some latitude. And that means a town has a chance of affecting the diet (within limits) served by local eateries.

So, if you believe in your heart that a place serves too much food, and that you always have to get a doggy bag, say something, maybe they'll add some dishes that are reasonable in size. They're catering to what people want, and maybe fat people are more persuasive than skinny ones — especially when talking to waiters. Anyway, it wouldn't hurt to mention while you're at a Dunkin or your favorite restaurant that you'd like smaller servings.

But there's another problem and it's with labeling packages. There are truth-in-lending laws, but evidently not truth-in-packaging label laws. According to the Center for Science in the Public Interest (CSPI), "Many single-serving food and drink containers are misleadingly labeled as several servings, despite some companies' recent moves to relabel single-serve products."

The Center for Science in the Public Interest (CSPI) says that the steady growth in sizes of soft drinks, snack cakes, candy bars, and other foods that are clearly meant for one person to consume in a single sitting is helping fuel the obesity epidemic. Recently, this nonprofit food-safety and nutrition watchdog group formally petitioned the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to update its labeling rules so consumers can easily see exactly how many calories they're getting in single-serve bottles and packages.

The real problem is that the advertising on labels — misleading or not — is bigger than the warnings and advice. Such is not the case with dynamite and chlorine, and taken in the aggregate the results are far more deadly.

Senior and high-risk adult flu clinics

Flu clinics, sponsored by Cohasset Board of Health, will take place Tuesday, Nov. 14, from 1 to 3 p.m., and Monday, Nov. 20, from 1 to 3 p.m., at Cohasset Town Hall auditorium, 41 Highland Ave.

This flu clinic is open to all citizens of Cohasset older than age 65, and for those adults who are at high risk.

Some examples of high risk are: Asthma, chronic pulmonary disease, diabetes, heart disease, health care workers involved with direct patient care, parents of infants under 6 months old and pregnant women.

Those attending a flu clinic are asked to wear a short-sleeve shirt. Seniors are reminded to bring Medicare Part B and/or senior health insurance cards. For more information, contact the Board of Health at 781-383-4116.

New endings for old flicks

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

(Tom Henshaw is on vacation. The following is a column originally published on Sept. 21, 2005. — editor.)

Have you ever watched the film "Casablanca" and secretly wished that it was Ilsa who stayed behind with Rick while Captain Reneault got on the Lisbon plane with that insufferably heroic Victor Laszlo?

Stick around. You may have a chance.

There is talk about shooting a movie with two endings: one for the theaters, the other for DVDs.

If you don't like one, try the other.

"An alternative ending is a great way to provide added value because it brings film fans into the creative process," said Ken Graffeo, executive vice president of Universal Studios Home Entertainment.

With twice as much money in their pockets, he neglected to point out.

Even more intriguing, given Hollywood's penchant for remaking (and ruining) old classic flicks, is the prospect of shooting them all over again with two, three, maybe four different endings to satisfy various pressure groups.

Like rewriting Little Red Riding Hood to win a G rating from PETA.

An outfit called New Line Home Entertainment is currently doing alternate endings for selected movies going back to 1997.

How long will it be before the Ku Klux Klan is wiped out in a new ending of "The Birth of a Nation" to satisfy the NAACP?

The possibilities are endless.

Suppose, in a new ending of "Casablanca," starring Tom Cruise and Britney Spears, Major Strasser outdrew Rick, shot him dead, and took Victor to a concentration camp. How would that sell to German audiences?

Or suppose the Moroccans (that's where Casablanca is, you know) arose, kicked out the Germans and the French, and set up the Moroccan Islamic Republic. How would that sell in Osama's outdoor drive-in in Afghanistan?

Instead of getting off the most memorable line from "Gone With the Wind" — "Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn" — suppose Rhett Butler had taken Scarlett into his arms and they rode off to live happily ever after at Tara.

Suppose, instead of accepting homage from his capos, Michael Corleone had told them to find someone else to be Godfather because he was going off to New Hampshire with Kay to run a ski lodge, leaving Fredo to be boss of the family.

Suppose Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid hadn't died in that gunfight in the Bolivian mining town but lived to return to the States and made a fortune portraying themselves in motion pictures under the names of Paul Newman and Robert Redford.

And suppose they remade the ending to "The Witches of Eastwick" and, instead of vanishing in a puff of smoke, Darryl Van Horne runs away with Chris Gabriel, his boy friend — just as the author, John Updike, had written it.

Zoning articles need full airing

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

Most of the zoning bylaw proposals on the warrant for the Nov. 13 Special Town Meeting either have not had full public examination or are bad policy.

1) Starting with Article 21, the proposed amendment to the senior overlay district, let's make no mistake about the effect of this amendment: it essentially eviscerates what we had been told was the purpose of the overlay district, namely, to provide an affordable housing alternative for our senior citizens who were looking to remain in Cohasset after selling their single family home. Under the proposed by law change, even teenagers will be able to live in the so-called senior overlay district. Every middle-class empty-nester in this town who still held out hope that there might be a development within their needs and income range will see those dreams shattered because developers will be able to attract buyers from a broader market who will pay the high prices they are seeking. In short, we now are transforming the senior overlay bylaw to cater to the needs of developers, rather than to the middle-class residents of our town for whose benefit we adopted this by law a few years ago.

2) Articles 23 through 27 seek to transform our village into an area of high-density residential and commercial buildings. The Planning Board was going to bring a similar article before the spring Town Meeting, but they withdrew it because they had overlooked a couple of things, as do Articles 23-27:

First, there is no semblance of a plan, which informs residents of the potential build-out and attendant consequences if we turn the village into a high-density residential/commercial area. Just a few questions that need to be answered are: How many units could possibly be built in our village under the proposed zoning by law? Precisely on what lots will they be built and what will they look like? Who will be the likely owners/renters? What will be the impact upon our schools if families are attracted? Conversely, if singles/couples are the target market, how will that affect the nature of our family-friendly village? Where will they have parking? If Avalon is approved by the court (and it already has been approved by our ZBA), do we want or need more high-density housing in Cohasset?

Second, there is no sewerage capacity in the central district for a high-density housing plan. The central sewer district has just 12 hookups left.

Second, there is no sewerage capacity in the central district for a high-density housing plan. The central sewer district has just 12 hookups left. If there is a free-for-all among developers of property in the village, there is only one guarantee: there will be a flood of lawsuits for those 12 permits and a suit to force the town to enlarge the sewer plant, at enormous expense to the town. It is a fundamental tenet of a major zoning change in any community that there be adequate infrastructure either in place or in contemplation. But what is being proposed is a major zoning change without any forethought about the consequences.

3) On the other hand, the request by the Planning Board in Article 28 for funds to create a Village District Master Plan is precisely what is needed before the town approves zoning changes of the sort proposed in articles 23-27. That is the only article that makes sense on this issue at the present time.

4) Article 22 basically is a housekeeping measure designed to alleviate an inequity for one family stemming from recent and restrictive changes in the zoning by laws in the village area. As a matter of fairness, it should be approved.

suddenly a problem? It is possible that climate change has resulted in wetter weather locally. But a key to this issue is the loss of infiltration areas.

If rainwater strikes a roadway or roof, it seeks the lowest point. Most roofs and roads are designed to get this water off quickly and that usually means empting into a gutter and a sewer and quickly into the streams. But with increases in the impervious areas of roadways, parking lots and roofs, more water is reaching the streams and harbors faster. But there is a better way and the difference is infiltration.

The new philosophy on stormwater is based on the scientific observation that it is best to keep the rainwater where it falls. Porous parking lots, green roofs, rain gardens, are examples of infiltration galleries and all of these ideas are considered best management concepts that promote infiltration. Remember the price of low infiltration is the direct impacts manifested as a sudden flood in James Brook, polluted beaches and contaminated harbors. As the weather adage goes everyone is talking but no one is doing anything, however the Stormwater Management Committee, comprised of concerned citizens has been working behind the scenes to create a unified policy and Article 6, on the special town meeting warrant next Tuesday (Nov 14), is a request to fund this plan of action.

The new philosophy on stormwater is based on the scientific observation that it is best to keep the rainwater where it falls.

The Stormwater Management Committee has been formed by concerned members of Water Commission, Harbor Health Committee, Conservation Commission, Water Resource Protection Committee, the Planning Board and private citizens. In Article 6 the StormCom requests for funding for two key purposes, engineering support to prepare successful grant applications to state and federal agencies to underwrite the necessary engineering and monitoring studies to assess and begin to correct the problems, and to simultaneously collate and catalog the information and observations pertinent to the stormwater issue in Cohasset and the region and to make it accessible over the internet. Stormwater management has always been an issue is some parts of Cohasset, but changes occurring within our watersheds are now affecting more parts of town more often, our time to act is November 14.

Please attend the town meeting and support Article 6.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Voters to decide fate of capital spending projects

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The fall Special Town Meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium. Warrants, or Town Meeting agendas, have been mailed to every household. Extra Warrants will be made available at the meeting.

While the Board of Selectmen has made its recommendation for capital project spending, Town Meeting will have the last word.

The board has recommended funding in the amount of $307,600 for a total of nine different items, but some residents are not happy with the items that have been approved.

Due to the town's current state of finances, Town Manager Bill Griffin said he felt comfortable spending $300,000 in free cash. Therefore, the Capital Budget Committee, which makes capital spending recommendations to the Board of Selectmen, had some tough decisions to make when $1.6 million in capital requests came in. Of those requests, $505,000 was for the schools. None of the school requests were funded, including $100,000 in technology upgrades for the schools, which has caused disappointment among the school community.

To that end, the rumor mill has been churning and voters could decide to change the recommendations brought forward by the Capital Budget Committee and approved by the board on Monday night.

• First on the list for capital funding is $68,000 for roofing repairs at the police department. The CBC said by making the repairs, it will not only stop further damage from occurring, it will increase usable space at the department.

• The CBC also recommended $10,000 in electrical and carpentry repairs at the harbormaster's office. Currently, the harbormaster cannot even run a computer in her office and Town Facilities Manager Brian Adams told the CBC if repairs are not made to the building right away, the town might be forced to rebuild the entire building in the near future.

• Another $40,000 was recommended to replace a 1995, 2500 utility truck, which is one of two trucks the Department of Public Works asked to be replaced. Another $13,000 was recommended to make roof repairs at the library.

• With a vote in the affirmative, Town Hall will receive $8,600 to replace or repair a number of information technology items.

• The CBC has recommended the most funding for the harbormaster position. Members said prior to meeting with new harbormaster Lorren Gibbons, they had no idea how dire the situation was. Gibbons is responsible for Cohasset's waters 3 nautical miles out and from Black Rock to the Glades. She enforces environmental law and she regularly assists mariners.

She is currently using a 17-foot skiff, which cannot tow or take a swimmer aboard in open seas. To that end, the CBC recommended purchasing a new 28-foot boat with equipment for $70,000. Gibbons often collaborates with the fire and police departments during emergencies, and the boat will benefit all their efforts. The CBC estimates the boat itself will have a life of 20 years but the engine will need to be replaced in roughly 5 years.

• To help generate more revenue for the harbor, the CBC also recommended allocating $10,000 for additional docks for Parker Avenue and Government Island. The committee said the additional space could pay for itself through harbor fees over 5 to 10 years.

• The police department could be purchasing a motorcycle for $15,000 if the CBC's recommendation is approved by Town Meeting. The motorcycle would replace one of the department's cruisers and could save the department $15,000 over the next 10 years. The CBC also recommended allocating $48,000 for mobile data terminals for the police department.

• At the fire department, $25,000 has been recommended to allow for a new ambulance billing and reporting system. The system would run on a wireless secure Internet network that would have a unit in the ambulance, and when the ambulance backs into the station, the information filled out in the vehicle during the transport would automatically download onto the hard drive at the station. The time saved with the electronic system would allow the department to respond to other calls instead of filling out paperwork, which will result in more ambulance fee revenue for the town.

Caution on downtown zoning changes

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen would like to see a planning consultant on board before it agrees to completely endorse changing the zoning bylaws for downtown. At its Nov. 6 meeting, the board voted on five citizens' petitions articles, which are included in the Town Meeting Warrant, and was cautious in its recommendations.

Scituate resident John Tedeschi, formerly of Cohasset, has filed five citizens' petitions. His attorney Richard Henderson has been representing him at meetings with the Board of Selectmen.

Tedeschi owns a parcel of land on Smith Place, formerly owned by Richard Brown. After roughly one year of trying to gain approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals, Brown received permission to raze the small building currently located at 2 Smith Place and replace it with a 7,500-square-foot structure. The project Brown had envisioned building was nothing like what was permitted, and he therefore sold the project. While Tedeschi can build Brown's project as permitted, he would like to instead build a Nantucket shingle style multi-use building with 8 retail spaces on the bottom and 8 housing units on the top. To make that dream a reality, the town's zoning bylaws would have to change.

Selectmen recommended Articles 23, 24 and 26. Article 23 will ask the town to approve creating a separate zoning district, the Cohasset Village Business District, for the so-called Cohasset Village area. Currently, there are three areas defined as the Downtown Business District: the Cohasset Village area, a portion of the Harbor area and a small area in the Beechwood section. If the article passes, the Village Business District would be a separate zoning district to be governed by its own dimensional provisions which would have more liberal standards with respect to the creation of multiple family housing than would exist in other business districts.

Article 24 will ask the town to formally put the new district on the town's zoning maps.

Article 26 would impose the same use provisions on the Village Business District that already apply to the Downtown Business District. In essence, the use provisions would remain unchanged.

The Board did not recommend Articles 25 and 27. Article 25 would create new dimensional requirements for dwellings occupied by more than one family in the Village Business District. The current Downtown Business District requires that in order to have a dwelling for more than one family, it must be on a 40,000-square-foot lot. For each additional residential unit (more than two) an additional 4,000 square feet of land area is required. The article would reduce the minimum lot size for multi-family dwellings to 3,000 and would require only 1,500 square feet of land area for each additional residential unit. No lot could be improved with more than 10 residential units.

Article 27 would waive certain parking requirements for businesses within 500 feet of the new Pleasant Street parking lot. The municipal parking lot was recently altered in connection with the installation of the Greenbush rail line and new additional parking was provided for the Downtown Business District in a small lot off Pleasant Street. The amendment would extend to businesses within 500 feet of the new Pleasant Street Parking lot the same exemption benefiting businesses within 500 feet of the municipal parking lot, located off South Main Street.

The board agreed recommending the articles they did would send the message that they are willing to work together to come to a solution in terms of developing the downtown area. However, they said without proper data regarding the "what ifs" that could take place if zoning is changed, they did not feel comfortable recommending all the changes at this time.

CPC presents three proposals

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Those who attend Town Meeting on Monday will have the opportunity to decide whether funds should be allocated for various preservation projects in town. Thanks to the Community Preservation Committee, three options are on the table, which it believes will make a valuable contribution in town.

The CPC has recommended allocating $25,000 for town record preservation, plus an amount to be determined for electronic scanning of preserved records. An additional $300,000 has been recommended to complete the Beechwood Ballpark restoration project as bid, with $150,000 being appropriated and $150,000 bonded for a period of no more than 5 years. The CPC has also recommended allocating $15,000 to be combined with $15,000 recommended under article 28, to hire a consultant for the purpose of Village planning services.

Chairman of the CPC Stuart Ivimey said Town Clerk Marion Douglas has town records, some of which date back to the 1700s that she would like to have preserved for the town as a record of its history. "Some of these are literally dusting in your hands," he said, and the $25,000 donation from the CPC would allow the town to hire a conservator to preserve the records. An additional amount of money may also be sought to allow the records to be electronically scanned once they are preserved, giving the town both hard and digital copies.

The CPC has also recommended allocating $300,000 to make improvements through the Beechwood Ballpark restoration project. The town allocated $300,000 for the project, based on estimates given by an engineer, and when bids came in, they all had prices, which were double the estimate.

"That is the only we field we've got in that area of town," said Ivimey, adding he drives by it every day on his way to work and always sees people using it. He said various baseball and soccer teams use it, as well as neighborhood children. There is a basketball court and playground, which are also heavily used, but everything is in disrepair. He also noted if there has been any rain, it takes days before children are able to run around on the grass without wearing galoshes. Upgrades to the park would include complete drainage and reorientation of the field to allow it to be better utilized by both baseball and soccer teams, updating the basketball court and "tot lot" playground, and installing public lavatories.

Rather than be cash poor going into the future, the CPC would like to appropriate $150,000 now and bond the remaining $150,000 for a period of no more than 5 years. "It's a lot of money, there's no doubt about that," Ivimey said, but added it is a quality of life issue and there have been no significant improvements to the Beechwood area of town in a long time.

The third funding recommendation would be to allocate $15,000 for half of the cost of a consultant for the Planning Board. Currently, the town does not have a Town Planner and there are many issues dealing with zoning in the downtown area, which need to be addressed by an expert. The Planning Board is asking the town to approve allocating $15,000 in article 28 as well.

Canton ousts CHS field hockey squad

But not before Skippers earn big first round win over East Bridgewater

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

As the Cohasset High field hockey players boarded the bus bound for East Bridgewater last Friday, their enthusiasm saturated the air.

As soon as the bus crossed the town line into East Bridgewater, a silence set in among the athletes. Nerves shook as the Skippers prepared to face off against the South Shore League champion Vikings squad in the first round of the Div. 2 South playoffs.

Having lost once and tied once to this intimidating team, Cohasset knew it had its hands full, especially in visitor territory. Under these edgy conditions, the Skippers played their best game of the season, earning a 2-0 victory.

"The girls were ready in every way," said head coach Deb Bostwick. "Two things in particular stood out in their play: composure and stamina."

Those two traits provided the winning formula not only for this exciting showdown but for the whole season as well.

Against the Vikings, the girls capitalized on the offensive opportunities that came their way. The resulting goals boosted Cohasset's confidence. This confidence, in turn, created a sense of composure that allowed the Skippers to remain clear-headed throughout the entire frenzied game.

Game observers could not help but notice the physical stamina the Cohasset players brought to the field. Bostwick had expressed enthusiasm about how well the girls had conditioned themselves prior to the start of the season. By building on this foundation of fitness throughout the season, the Skippers could gain the upper hand in the showdown against the Vikings.

It was essential, for example, that Cohasset shut down All-American superstar Jessica Roberts. Bostwick called upon junior Olivia Kimla to take on this challenge during the first half. Kimla took Roberts out of the game. As a result, East Bridgewater could not get any sort of grip on the game.

In the second half, senior captain Sheelah Scott continued the punishing defense, leaving Roberts with little opportunity

4 turnovers lead to demise in Abington

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

ABINGTON – It's tough to beat any team in the game of football when you commit four turnovers.

When you're playing an undefeated defending champion, and three of four turnovers come in your end, just staying competitive on the scoreboard becomes a challenge.

The Cohasset High football figured this out the hard way last Friday night, as the host Green Wave converted three of those turnovers into touchdowns to run away with a 35-7 win.

Two of those Skipper giveaways came on simple dropped balls, one on a sweep and another on an option pitch. Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw said much of the difference between the two teams were exemplified in their abilities to take care of the ball.

"Abington doesn't make those mistakes. That's why they're undefeated right now,"

Lady Skippers' dream ends in WB

Win over Carver had earned CHS a berth in Div. 3 South quarterfinals

By Paul Teves

WEST BRIDGEWATER – The West Bridgewater High girls soccer team scored a pair of goals in the first half and then hung on for a 2-1 victory over visiting Cohasset in Monday's Div. 3 South sectional quarterfinal game.

The Lady Wildcats, who are headed to the semifinal round for the first time in the program's four-year history, dominated the play in the first half, limiting Cohasset to just three shots on goal, while also getting solo tallies from junior Julie Conrad and eighth grader Krista Ledin to take a 2-0 lead into the intermission.

"We came out rattled and overplayed the ball a little bit," Cohasset head coach Debbie Beal said of her club, which closes out the season at 14-4-2. "West Bridgewater won every 50-50 ball. We had some communication problems, and we struggle when we don't have space. We are not a very physical team; we've had to learn to become physical."

The Wildcats (16-3-1 overall) had no trouble being physical, as they dominated the midfield and limited opportunities in their own back third.

Senior sweeper Nicole Olson spearheaded a physical and talented defensive unit, which also consisted of freshmen Mary Brinkmann, Susan Feeley and Angelina Lampros.

"The defensive game plan consisted of knowing your marks and sticking with them," West Bridgewater coach Michelle DeCastro said. "The goal was to be first to the ball every time and we did that. The defense really

JV gridders tie unbeaten Abington

Cohasset's JV football team greeted Abington one blustery afternoon, prepared for battle.

The Green Wave arrived, undefeated, and looked to remain that way after an opening drive touchdown off an 83-yard pass, going up quickly 8-0 over the Skippers.

However, the Skippers remained undaunted and marched up the field off solid rushing from Dana Valentine and Mike Froio. Deep in Abington territory, it looked promising for the Skippers but quarterback Johnny Maher threw one to the goal line that was picked off like an apple from a tree by the Abington safety.

The stalwart Cohasset defense held Abington and Cohasset took over at midfield. The offensive line of Nick Lieberman, Kevin O'Connell, Dan Sullivan, Matt Wasel and Will Lynner opened up holes for Froio and Valentine to continue the rushing game. Valentine broke one open for a 42-yard touchdown run to put the first points on the board. The two-point rushing conversion failed and Abington led 8-6.

Cohasset held Abington on their next offensive series and the Skippers got the ball back midfield. The O-line came up huge again allowing the running game of the Skippers to be successful. Froio took the ball into the end-zone on a nine-yard rush to put the Skippers up 12-8, and the two-point conversion from Maher to Derek Schwantner was good, boosting them to 14-8. Abington then marched back the length of the field and tied the game.

Defensively, Valentine, Andrew DiPaolo, (who broke up Abington's final two-point conversion attempt), Alec Livingstone and Brendan Doonan did a great job stopping the Abington attack. The D-line of Lieberman, Sullivan, and Thomas Barrett played well.

Coach Brian Pattison commented, "It was a good day. Our special teams kept Abington pinned deep in their own territory all day and that has helped set up the short field for us. The offensive line did an excellent job and that is what helped Valentine run with such success.

"The team has been playing with great confidence and poise and that has helped us in the fourth quarter, which hasn't always been the case. With two games left I hope we can keep playing as a team and continue to get better each day."

The Scituate-Cohasset Sharks, the youth football program's eighth grade team, are 9-0 heading into the Super Bowl this Sunday in Bridgewater against Marshfield. In last year's seventh grade Super Bowl, Marshfield topped Sci-Coh. Sci-Coh won the first meeting between the two teams this year, 6-0, on a score with 3 minutes left in the game.

said Afanasiw. "That's how you win games, that's how you win league championships, that's how you win Super Bowls – avoiding those little mistakes. We're still trying to figure out how to eliminate that factor from our game."

The Skippers got off to a decent enough start, particularly on defense, where they forced a turnover on downs on Abington's first possession. Senior running backs Jeremy Brandon and Joe Gabriele each had 12-yard runs to start a drive, and an eventual five-yard run by junior Webster Rogers on a fourth-and-1 gave Abington a first down at Cohasset's 31.

There, the Skippers' defense clamped down. Cohasset senior Justin Alexander made a big tackle on Gabriele to force a third-and-14. After Abington senior quarter John Creamer hit classmate Tim Wells with a 12-yard pass, Abington again went to Rogers for the fourth down conversion.

This time, Alexander and junior Jake Cuneo made the play for Cohasset, and the Skippers took over. An 11-yard run by junior PJ McCaw and a five-yard play by junior Brian Hill gave the Skippers some apparent momentum as the first quarter came to a close with no points on the board for either side.

On the first snap of the second quarter, however, came disaster for the visitors, as a fumble gave Abington the ball at the Skippers' 40-yard line. Eight plays later, Brandon scored the first of his two touchdowns on the night, taking 17 yards around the left side of the line behind a great block by senior tackle Ronny Dunn. Abington made it 8-0 on a well-executed fake extra point, with Wells coming around from the left side to take a toss from the holder and finding an open Mitchell Dillon in the back of the end zone for two points.

For Cohasset, it was the just the beginning of a long night.

Another fumble on the Skippers' third play from scrimmage on the next possession put the Green Wave at the 50. After a 22-yard pass and three strong runs by Gabriele, Abington scored again on a 10-yard touchdown pass from Creamer to Wells. The receiver ran a quick slant from the left side, and Creamer hit him in stride for the score.

Senior Mike Bruning made the extra point for a 15-0 lead, and that would be the score heading into the halftime. It could have been closer, but Cohasset's mistakes were killers.

"We thought we had a pretty good game plan when we did have the ball. We were able to move the ball relatively easy on them," Afanasiw said. "But after three plays, when you cough it up, there's not much you can do there, especially when you give it up in your own territory."

Abington received the ball to begin the second half, and it took one play for them to increase the lead. It was another run by Brandon around the left side, and once he turned the corner, he left two Cohasset defensive backs in the dust en route to a 63-yard touchdown.

Brandon finished the evening with a game-high 142 yards on just eight carries.

Cohasset's next possession ended prematurely with another fumble, and it again took the home team just one play to score. Creamer passed to Wells along the right sideline, and Wells made an incredible play to break a tackle and then dive past multiple Skipper defenders to hit the pylon and get the six points.

Wells scored Abington's fifth and final touchdown with 1:50 to go in the third quarter, simply jumping over two Cohasset defensive backs to haul in a 30-yard pass.

"Wells made some unbelievable, highlight reel types of catches. It's tough to compete with that," Afanasiw said.

The Skippers earned a consolation touchdown with 5:19 remaining, as junior quarterback David Snowdale hit senior wideout Nick Zappolo for a two-yard touchdown pass. Senior running back Anthony DiPaolo sparked the drive with a nice 41-yard run to bring it to the Abington 11.

That did little to ease the pain for the Skippers (3-3-2 overall, 1-2-1 South Shore League), whose coach lamented mental mistakes on situations the team had gone over in practice specifically for this game.

"They're such good kids; it's tough to get mad at them," Afanasiw said. "I know they're trying, and I am really kind of beside myself with regard to why everything keeps snowballing like it is. It's a matter of staying positive, working hard and, if you keep doing that, good things are going to happen."

Cohasset doesn't have any time to feel sorry for itself, however, as they host archrival Norwell tonight at 7. The Clippers are coming off a gritty 9-7 win over East Bridgewater, and the week before that, lost a 6-0 Homecoming heartbreaker to the Green Wave.

"We're still at .500. It's not like this is a tanked season in any way, shape or form," said Afanasiw. "There's still two games to go. If we play our cards right, we'll end up with the exact same record as last year."

Abington (9-0), meanwhile, plays for all the marbles tonight at 7 when they host Mashpee. Both teams are 5-0 in the league, and the winner earns the league title and a berth in the Div. 3 playoffs.

other than to yell in frustration.

Offensively speaking, the Skippers quickly drew first blood. Only five minutes into the game junior Sally Meehan sent a bomb down the right side of the field off a free hit. Junior Corinna Durham received the pass and rocketed a shot off the pads of the Viking goalie. Senior captain Laura Campedelli picked up the rebound and sent it home.

"Over and over again in our drills we practiced this long hit scenario," exclaimed Bostwick. "It was so satisfying for all of us to have it come to use."

The second half brought more of the same stellar Cohasset play. Durham sent in a ball to senior captain Caitlin Hurley, who dished it to senior Virginia Spofford for the Skippers second and final goal.

While the offense and middies get the statistical glory, the defense did more than their part, holding the frustrated EB to only seven shots.

Senior captain Alida Tangherlini, seniors Molly Gallagher and Michelle Madge, and juniors Meehan and Paige Strecker crushed any Viking threat in the Skippers' half.

In general, Bostwick cited this as the best played game by every single person on the team.

"The girls played for each other," said Bostwick. "They each knew how much the other wanted the win, and they put together their best game to date."

Unfortunately, this high point in the season took a back seat when Cohasset squared off against top-seeded Canton in round two.

Two factors set the Skippers at a serious disadvantage in this game. For starters, the Bulldogs play on a turf field, something the Skippers had never experienced before.

Next, Canton's incredible skills, technical strategies, and unwavering discipline set them apart from every other team they faced. Even Cohasset.

"The girls were definitely ready and focused," explained Bostwick. "They just had no idea how quickly the game moves on the turf, and had trouble adjusting on the spot."

The day before the Canton loss, Bostwick conducted her team drills on pavement hoping to simulate the turf conditions her players would face the next day. Still, even this change in practice could not prepare the Skippers for the Bulldogs' talent.

Canton scored four goals in the first half, and two in the second, concluding the game with a season-ending 6-0 loss for the Skippers.

While Bostwick showed little disappointment in the Skippers' play, she said that the girls were very disappointed.

"This is such a great team with such great chemistry," said the coach. "It was just hard for the girls to call it quits."

Sophomore goalie Alyssa Mullin added, "Naturally, the loss disappointed us. For the most part, we still were satisfied with the way we played. We definitely made an effort."

Despite the loss, Mullin can take solace in her total of eight shutouts this season, including the EB upset.

Yes, the Skippers could not get past the quarterfinals. Yet, they should feel content in beating East Bridgewater through their focused composure, Energizer bunny-like stamina, and their sheer will to win.

shut them down. It was without question our best defensive effort of the season."

The Wildcats finally broke through at the 17:59 mark of the first half when Conrad laced a shot over the head of Cohasset keeper Johanna Brophy.

Conrad also figursed in on the Wildcats second goal, which came less than 10 minutes later. West Bridgewater's Colleen Liston delivered a brilliant cross into the middle of the box off a corner kick that Conrad headed on goal, forcing Brophy to make a dazzling diving stop. The rebound, however, squirted to the right and Ledin was in perfect position to tap the ball into the yawning net.

"Krista was just following her shot," DeCastro explained. "That's something we were working on all week, and in the past two games they have done exactly what we have worked on in practice. The execution has been excellent."

Cohasset did have a couple of key opportunities in the first half go by the boards. The first came in the 30th minute when senior Karoline Holt's shot rattled the post and bounced out.

Freshman Christine Coner had a bid of her own in the final minute of the half. Coner was running onto a long through ball that would have put her on a certain breakaway had it not been for West Bridgewater keeper Sam Preston storming out of the net and taking the ball out from under her feet.

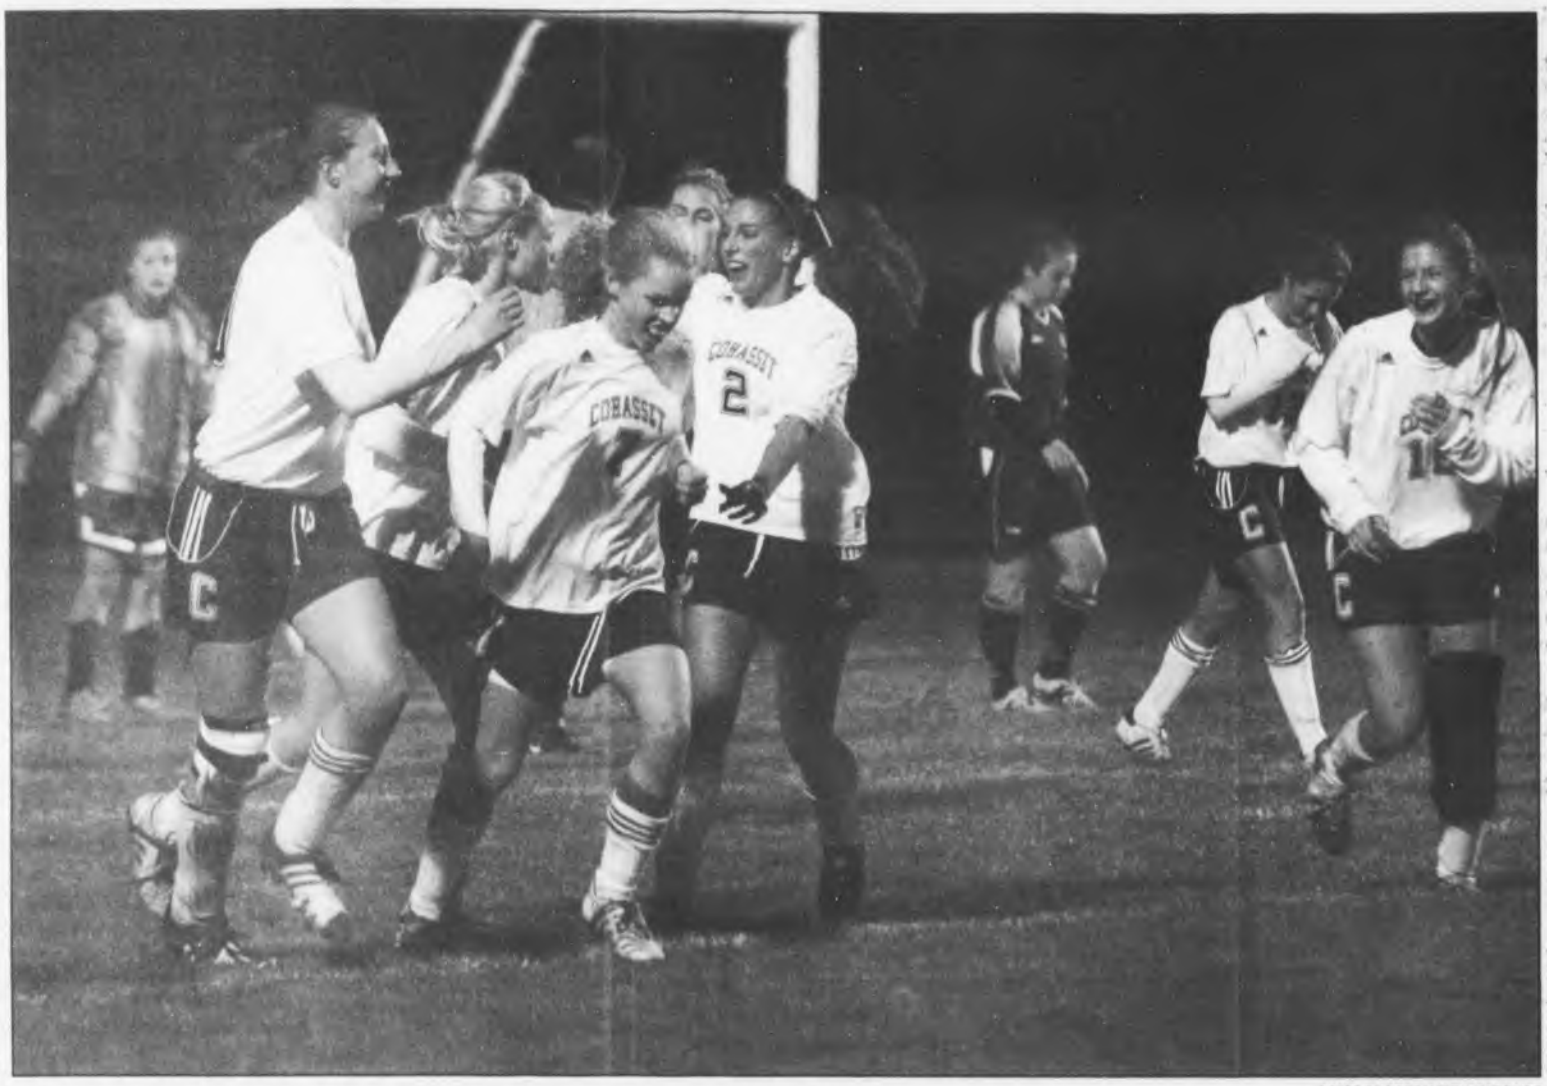
Cohasset finally broke into the scoring column in the 66th minute when Torey Hart's corner kick hit off a West Bridgewater defender and caromed into the goal.

"Once we got that one goal, it was game on," Beal said. "We had some very good opportunities throughout the game, we just didn't capitalize. We had them on their heels at the end. If we had 10 more minutes it might have been a whole new game."

Preston was dazzling in net, making nine stops including six in the second half. Brophy turned aside 10 West Bridgewater shots in the losing effort.

Skippers 3, Carver 0

A few days after the fact, Beal admitted she was a little nervous going into Saturday's first round matchup with South Shore League foe Carver.



STAFF PHOTOS/MARK GARDNER

The girls celebrate Torey Hart's goal late in the second half that accounted for the final score in their 3-0 win over Carver.

Cohasset outplayed the Crusaders in both of their regular season meetings to the tune of a 6-2 aggregate score, and Carver had come into the game with some serious momentum, as they had to go on a major winning streak just to get into the playoffs.

Before the opening whistle, however, Beal stopped worrying. She said her team made it clear from the pre-game warm-ups that they had come to play on this day.

And play, they did.

In what Beal described as a "total team effort," the Hart sisters (Mackenzie and Torey) and Meg Anderson all scored to support a sterling defensive performance in a 3-0 win.

The coach said Alyssa Hinman was "the game's MVP" off the bench for Cohasset, as she was all over the field marking Carver star Tina Gillen and helping to keep the league's leading scorer off the board. Beal said Hinman, Anna Haggerty and Sammi Lehr kept things together in the back for Cohasset.

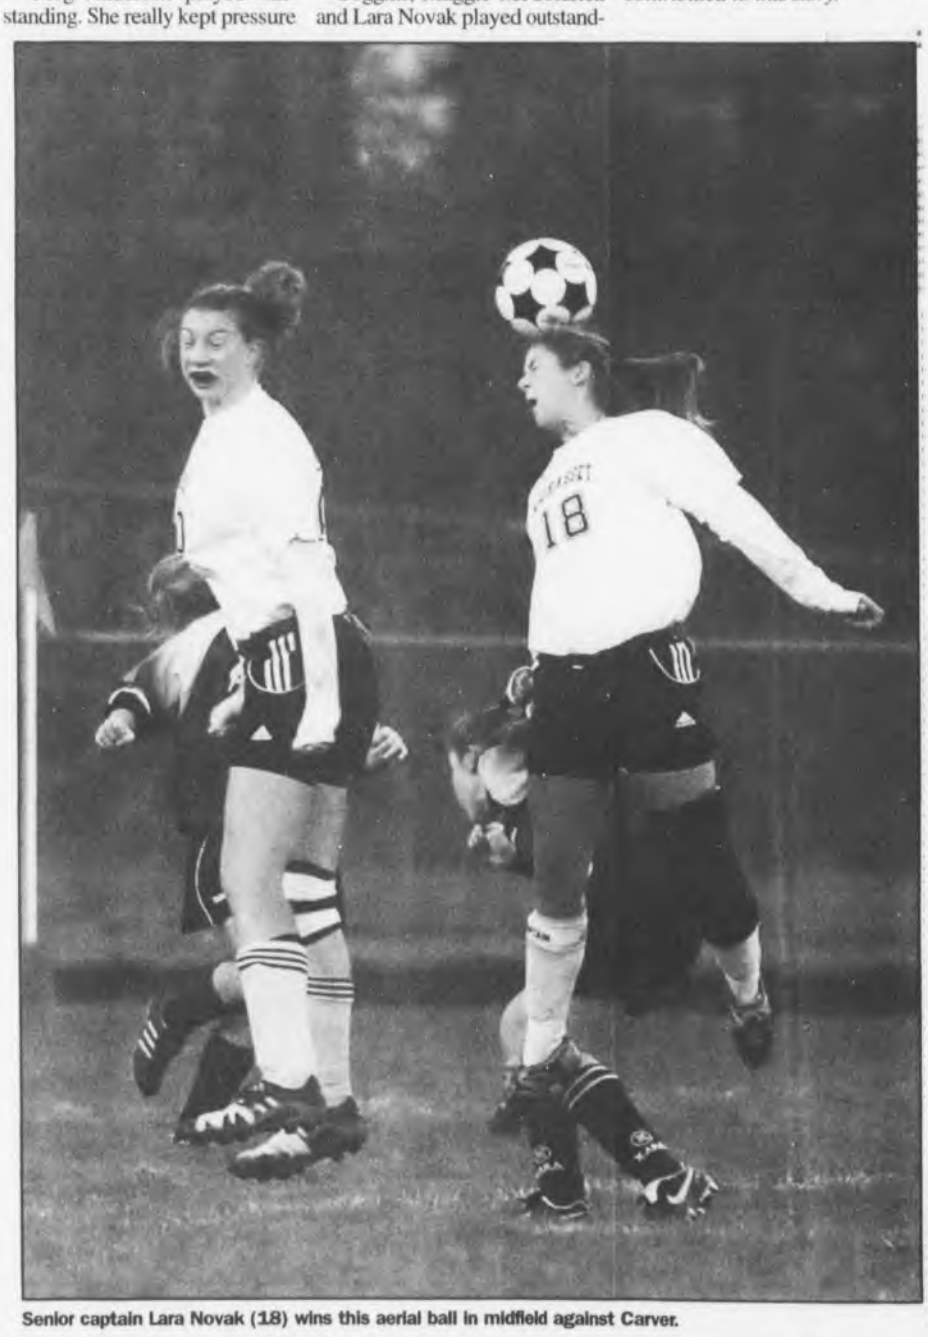
With the defense playing well behind them, the attack went to work, and eventually scored late in the first half when Mackenzie Hart finished a rebound from a Sarah Coggins free kick that had rocketed off the crossbar.

Halfway through the second, Anderson doubled the Skippers' lead. Beal said the junior forward's goal was a just reward for her hard work throughout the match.

"Meg Anderson played outstanding. She really kept pressure on the defense and out-hustled them to every ball," said the coach. "She was such a threat up there and her presence there gave us an advantage."

Coggins, Maggie McGoldrick and Lara Novak played outstanding in the midfield. Beal said their "constant communication kept them on task and kept the ball moving from field to field."

Sports editor Mark Goodman contributed to this story.



Senior captain Lara Novak (18) wins this aerial ball in midfield against Carver.

CHS winter sports preseason mandatory sign-up meeting

Monday, Nov. 20, 6:45 p.m., Gymnasium

On Monday, Nov. 20 there will be a mandatory sign-up meeting for all high school (grades 9-12) student-athletes interested in participating in a winter sport at Cohasset High School.

The meeting will begin at 6:45 pm. School officials ask that all student-athletes be accompanied by at least one parent or guardian to the meeting. Principal Joel Antolini and Athletic Director Ron Ford will be on hand to review the Cohasset High School Athletic Department and Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association policies and answer any questions you may have.

There will also be a ceremony to dedicate the jersey of late Cohasset High School student-athlete Kurt Gritzan. Kurt's family will be presenting his ice hockey jersey for permanent display in the lower gym lobby.

Student-athletes and parents will then meet with the CHS coaching staff to distribute schedules, discuss team rules and expectations, and answer any questions you may have. The athletic trainer will also be on hand to discuss any injuries and address any concerns you may have.

User Fee

The new user fee structure for the 2006-07 school year will be $250 for the first and second sport and $150 for the third sport. There will be a family cap of $900 for the 2006-07 school year. Each student-athlete will receive one adult complementary pass to all on-campus home games for each season they participate in.

We also ask you to bring the user fee payment to this meeting.

Physical Exams

All student-athletes need an up-to-date physical exam performed by a physician within the past 13 months prior to the start of the season in order to participate in a high school sport. No student-athlete will be allowed to participate in practices or games without a current physical exam on file at the Cohasset High School nurse's office.

Dr. Steven Golden, the school physician, will provide free physical exams for student athletes on the following date (this will be the only date offered in the winter): Friday, Nov. 17, 2 p.m., Cohasset High School nurse's office

First Practices

Practices for all high school winter season sports will begin on Monday, Nov.r 27 unless your coach announces otherwise at the meeting.

Sports Offered

The following sports are offered during the Winter season: boys and girls basketball, cheerleading, gymnastics (co-op program with Norwell), ice hockey, wrestling (co-op with Hull), skiing (funded by the Cohasset Ski Club), and swimming (co-op with Scituate, funded by the Cohasset Swim Club).

CHS Athletic Department Website

Be sure to check it out at www.cohassetk12.org . From the home page you click onto the www.highschoolsports.net link for up-to-the minute schedule changes.

To view 2006-07 winter schedules click onto "Select a Team" and choose the team's schedule you wish to view. Once you have chosen a team go below and select the "2006-07" school year. You then click onto "View Schedule" and the winter schedule should come up.

All winter schedules are subject to change and may not be complete until Nov. 20

Sports Notes

Alumni soccer games

The third annual Cohassset Alumni Women's Soccer Game is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 25 at 1 p.m. at Milliken Field.

All female alumnae and current soccer players at Cohasset High School are welcome to play. The game will be played between odd year graduates vs. even year graduates, and will consist of two 40-minute halves.

Anyone interested should contact Alyssa McNamara at pumkinpumper@gmail.com or (781)962-6049.

There is also a men's game being organized by Jeff Donze (jeff.donze@comcast.net). That game will also be on Nov. 25, 1 p.m. on Milliken Field.

Rec hoops program

The Cohasset Recreation Basketball program will start Saturday, Nov. 18 at the Cohasset Middle High School gymnasium with a skills clinic and evaluation for all participants.

The schedule is: 8 to 9 a.m. boys first and second grade, girls second and third grade; 9 to 10 a.m. boys third grade, girls first, fourth and fifth grade; 10 to 11 a.m. boys fourth and fifth grade, girls grades 6-8; 11 to 12 a.m. boys grades 6-8.

Coaches will select teams after the clinic and will contact each player. Games start on Saturday, Dec. 2 at all three schools. The program's website is in its final stages of construction; look for all information at www.cohasset-basketball.com

This year the program asking all children to bring their own basketball so as to maximize their experience. Austin at Good Sport can assist you in getting the right size basketball for your child. Please mark your ball with your child's name in indelible ink.

Finally, please note that there is no parking in the circle at the Middle High School gym.

South Shore Outlaws

Plymouth's semi-professional football team, the South Shore Outlaws, is looking for players. Anyone interested in trying out for next season should contact general manager, Ron Rezendes, at (508) 747-6083.

The Outlaws would like anyone interested in cheerleading to contact Michelle Griffin at (508) 317-3113.

SCHOOLS

One quarter down, three to go

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Election results are in, and Deval Patrick will soon be governor of Massachusetts. Some CHS students of voting age participated in the election process. Personally, this reporter witnessed those still electioneering when it was almost too dark to make out the names on the signs. Talk about commitment

This week marked the end of the first quarter at CHS. One down, three more to go. Also, today there is school due to Veterans Day, which falls on a Saturday this year. I hope that everybody who has served our country has the day off. The students aren't in school today, but there is no shortage of news here at CHS.

• Congratulations to CHS graduates Aidan Buick and Chelsea Grossman who were recently published in Teen Ink magazine! Teen Ink is a national publication, and this is quite an honor.

• Winter sports physicals are scheduled for Friday, Nov. 17 at 2 p.m. in the nurse's office with Dr. Golden. Any student planning on participating in a winter sport needs to have an updated physical (within the last 13 months) on file in the nurse's office.

• Congratulations to Cohasset's Mathletes! They beat Notre Dame, Hingham, Weymouth, Norwell and Scituate in a recent meet. Their combined efforts earned them a victory of 11 points. They will continue to compete throughout the year.

• Mr. Buckley's Law class went to Hingham District Court last Friday to observe some actual cases. They had a chance to hear from the honorable Judge Hurley, and learn outside of a classroom environment.

• The Basketball boosters met Monday night in the Library

• A joint high school and middle school faculty meeting was held Tuesday after school to make teachers aware of the Massachusetts DOE upcoming English Language Learners (ELL) requirements.

• First term ended Wednesday. Quarterly classes began Thursday.

• Together Cohasset had a meeting in the Cafeteria Wednesday night

• The PSO President's Council met Thursday morning

• Department Heads met Thursday after school

• Varsity Football kicks off against Norwell at 7 p.m. sharp tonight on Alumni. Don't be late!

• The Pep Band will (weather permitting) be playing at the football game.

That's about it for the news. Let's talk movies: Has anyone seen Borat? If the movie is anything like the comedian's HBO series "Da Ali G" show then it will definitely be worth seeing. I'm fairly certain my mother wouldn't like it, so keep that in mind before you go see it. For those of you looking for a movie that looks to be fun for all ages, "Happy Feet," an animated penguin film featuring the voices of Robin Williams and Elijah Wood, is coming out later this month. Well guys, the first quarter is over. Graduation day seems years away, but it's coming. Keep those grades up and keep your noses clean. Until next time, Cohasset.

Child Find conducted by Cohasset Schools

Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with federal law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.00, are in the process of conducting Child Find.

Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age 3 through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange an evaluation of young people ages 16 through 21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.

Anyone who has a child they suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services can call the director of Student Services, Linda Gill, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

The Joseph Osgood School Parent School Organization, PSO, will host a Scholastic Book Fair Fundraiser on Wednesday, Nov. 15 from 2 - 7 pm, at the Osgood School, 211 Sohier St.

The PSO is a non-profit organization. The role of the PSO is to act as an advocate for public education. It is the official link between parents and schools. The PSO voices parental responses to school issues, and provides forums for administrators, teachers, and students to present their programs and policies to the public. Through fundraising efforts, like the upcoming Book Fair, the PSO provides programs and activities that enrich the school experience for students, teachers, and parents. Families, teachers, and all members of the community are invited to attend the Fair, which will feature a special theme: Reading Rain Forest.

The Book Fair will offer specially priced books and educational products, including new releases, award-winning titles, children's classics, interactive software, adult books, and current bestsellers from more than 150 publishers.

Attendees can help the school build classroom libraries and the school library by purchasing books for teachers through the Classroom Wish List.

Girls flip over Halloween gymnastics!

South Shore Community Center hosted its annual Halloween Gymnastics meet Saturday, Oct. 28. All gymnasts arrived in costume for the costume parade. USA judges Sue Morgan and Karin Viafore judged the costume parade. Prizes were awarded to: First place, Abby Concannon and Meghan Steeves; second place, Amber Silvia; and third place, Melanie Stewart.

Level 2, 3 and 4 gymnasts all had strong performances:

Melanie Stewart received a 7.9 on vault; Erin Murray, 8.4 on bars; Sarah Whilton, 8.0 on beam; Gabrielle Weissman, 8.6 on floor; Mollie Chipman, 8.05 on vault; Julia Noble, 8:35 on vault; Francesca Genello, 8.55 on floor; and Read McNichols, 8.7 on beam and vault.

Optional Girls had some great routines as well:

Marisa Stewart, 7.70 on vault; Micaela Durkin, 7.50 on floor and vault; Christina Tedeschi, 7.50 on vault; Kelsey McCunney, 7.40 on floor and vault; Meghan Steeves, 7.30 on floor; Erin Gerhard, 7.65 on beam and vault; Abby Concannon, 7.70 vault; Amber Silvia, 8.0 on floor; Grace Barlow, 7.70 on floor; and Juliette Karp, 7.95 on floor.

Amber Silvia won second place for her costume; she also scored 8.0, 7.50 on bars and 7.95 on the vault.

Melanie Stewart, as Dorothy, won third place in the costume parade and also had a great performance in every event.

Coaches are Amy Maree, Nancy Durkin and Rebecca Butman, and director Ruthann Ardizzoni.

An upcoming meet will take place at South Shore Center and Joan's Olympic Gym Saturday, Dec. 2, at 1 p.m.

Meghan Steeves and teammate Abby Concannon placed first in the costume competition. Abby was strong on the floor with a 7.05 and 7.7 on vault. Meghan scored 7.3 on the floor.

Christina Tedeschi was a superstar and teammate Micaela Durkin was an ice cream cone.

Folks flock to Antique Appraisal Day

Staff photos/Robin Chan

Pat Mullaney of Cohasset brought some of her miniature dolls to be appraised during the CEA's Antique Appraisal Day, held Nov. 4. Proceeds from the event will help supplement the CEA's budget.

Meg Tiedemann of Marshfield waits patiently for her turn to bring an antique forward to appraisers who will assess its value. Appraisers from Skinner Auctioneers and Appraisers, who are often featured on the hit PBS show "Antiques Roadshow" were on hand Nov. 4 at St. Anthony's Parish Hall thanks to the CEA, who coordinated the event as a fund-raiser to help boost its budget.

Ruth Kelley of Scituate confidently saves a seat for friend Marie Pratt of Cohasset thanks to Pratt's Civil War sword. The sword was given to Pratt's father, who served in the Union Army and saved a boy's life in West Virginia in 1935. The sword once belonged to Col. Briggs and Pratt brought the item to be appraised during the CEA's Antique Appraisal Day

Sara Wishart, an appraiser from Skinner Auctioneers and Appraisers, assesses the value of a painting for Jim Ward of Cohasset during the CEA-sponsored Antique Appraisal Day. The painting dates from the mid-1900s

Stuart Whitehurst, an appraiser from Skinner Auctioneers and Appraisers reads the name of the manufacturer and date on a chair brought in by Mary Laugelli Merritt of Scituate, to help assess its value. Appraisers were on hand at St. Anthony's Parish Center Nov. 4 to provide appraisals for South Shore residents, the proceeds of which will benefit the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs.

Anthony Manieri of Johnston, R.I., brought an impressive clock to the Antique Appraisal Day. The clock was made in Providence in 1815 and showcases Perry's victory on Lake Erie during the War of 1812.

Mary (Barbara Baumgarten) and Peggy (Tammy Cupples) play out a scene from "The Women," which is on stage this weekend at Town Hall.

'The Women' on stage this weekend

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is getting ready for a wonderful show called " The Women." Directed by the talented and Cohasset's own Lisa Pratt and produced by another Cohasset wonder, Susan Jaffe, this classic comedy by Clare Boothe Luce is being presented on Nov. 10, 11, 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. and Nov. 12 at 2 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall.

Cohasset residents in the play are Barbara Baumgarten, Laura Coletta, Peggy Corrigan, Jennifer Dean, Barbara Elliot, Jo-An Heilman, and Roberta Raffa They are joined by many other women from all over.

Tickets may be purchased in advance at Buttonwood Books, Front Street Books in Scituate or by calling 617-697-2115 and are also available at the door.

The cost for this delightful evening out is $12 per ticket with group tickets available for groups of 8 or more.

Osgood book fair

The Joseph Osgood School Parent School Organization, PSO, will host a Scholastic Book Fair Fundraiser on Wednesday, Nov. 15 from 2 - 7 pm, at the Osgood School, 211 Sohier St.

Families, teachers, and all members of the community are invited to attend the Fair, which will feature a special theme: Reading Rain Forest.

The Book Fair will offer specially priced books and educational products, including new releases, award-winning titles, children's classics, interactive software, adult books, and current bestsellers from more than 150 publishers.

Attendees can help the school build classroom libraries and the school library by purchasing books for teachers through the Classroom Wish List.

Call Jenni Milanoski at 781.383.6898 with any questions.

Turkey Trot to raise funds for DMD

Runners have a great way to help others on Thanksgiving, while also making room for that extra helping of pumpkin pie. Dan McCarron of Cohasset, founder and chairman, announces the sixth annual Turkey Trot will take place Nov. 23, Thanksgiving morning. All funds raised will benefit the Jett Foundation of Pembroke, to combat Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy.

The 3.1-mile race, which starts on Cohasset Common at 8 a.m., follows the town's Little Harbor along its route. Registration will begin at 7 a.m, on the Common. Those signing up by Nov. 16 are guaranteed a number and a runner's shirt. Registration fee is $20 before Nov. 16, and $25 thereafter. Families of four or more are capped at $100. Register online at cohassetturkeytrot.com, which will link to the Jett Foundation Web site, or go directly to jettfoundation.org.

This year's charitable event is cosponsored by Decision Mortgage of Cohasset and Sam's Club, Plymouth. The Jett Foundation, founded in 2001 by the McSherry's of Pembroke, for their son, Jett, raises funds for research and clinical trials to combat DMD, the most common and lethal genetic disorder in the world. DMD affects one in every 3,500 male births; 20,000 new cases are diagnosed each year. It is a muscle-wasting disease and most boys are wheelchair bound by 12 and don't live beyond their teen years.

South Shore Community Center invites families and friends to its 12th annual Jingle Bell Walk Friday, Nov. 24. Attendees can go to Cohasset Harbor at 2 p.m. and watch Santa and Mrs. Claus and their many elf assistants arrive by boat.

Santa will pass out jingle bells, as he makes his way in a horse-drawn wagon to the Community Center for hot cocoa, punch and cookies. Those attending can enjoy the community sing-along of traditional holiday favorites sung by Mrs. Claus and Santa with Frosty, Rudolph and the elves. There will be photos with Santa, open bowling, face painting a turkey trot and hayrides on the common. Rusty Skippers Band will entertain, and at the end of the day the Christmas tree will be lighted on the common.

Mistletoe Boutique

The fourth annual Mistletoe Boutique will take place Sunday, Nov. 12, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., at Red Lion Inn in Cohasset Village. Personalized gifts, hand-painted children's furniture and one-of-a kind gifts from more than 50 vendors will be sold, and children can have their picture taken with Santa.

The event is sponsored by the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum. All proceeds go directly to the Our World CGDM. Admission is free.

LIBRARY CORNER

Independent film night is Nov. 16

Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For information on programs and events, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Who's Camus Anyway?" Thursday, Nov. 16, at 6 p.m. Free admission and refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Art Exhibit – South Shore Art Center is sponsoring an exhibit of Diana Rousseau's landscape paintings through Dec. 31 at the Paul Pratt Library. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesday and Friday, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sundays, from 2 to 5 p.m.

Holiday Closing – The library will be closed Saturday, Nov. 11, in observance of Veterans Day.

Knitting Group – The knitting group will meet two Wednesdays each month. November meeting is Nov. 15, from 10 to 11:30 a.m., in the Meeting Room. Edna Finegan from the Senior Knitting Group will be the instructor. All knitting levels welcome.

Library Book Group – Join the group for coffee and discussion of Stephanie Kallos' book "Broken For You" on Wednesday, Nov. 29, at 10 a.m., in the Meeting Room. All are welcome.

FOR CHILDREN

Starred Reviews – Looking for a good book but don't know where to start? Look for the stars on the spine labels. All new fiction and non-fiction featured as a starred review in School Library Journal, Booklist and other journals will be labeled with a star sticker.

MamaSteph – will perform in the Meeting Room of Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 10:30 a.m., Mondays, through Nov. 27. All ages and communities welcome. Registration is not required. Funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Drop-in Story Time – will take place in the Children's Story Room Tuesdays, through Nov. 21, at 10:30 a.m. This is a lap-sit program that welcomes all ages and communities. Children must be accompanied by a caregiver.

Letters About Literature –This program asks students in grades four through 12 to write letters to authors whose work has made a difference in their lives. It invites personal and reflective writing about reading.

LAL is sponsored in Massachusetts by the Massachusetts Center for the Book, with funding from the Calderwood Writing Initiative at the Boston Athenaeum, and is a project that feeds into the national program that is run by the Library of Congress with funding from Target.

Local winners receive their awards in a ceremony at the State House. Last year, Madeline Blackburn and Foster Eymer won level 1 honorable mention.

To view their letters and read more award-winning letters go to massbook.org. Entry forms are available at massbook.org, Paul Pratt Memorial Library and school libraries.

OUR WORLD

The following fall programs will be offered at Our World Museum at 100 Sohier St., Cohasset. For information call 781-383-3198.

Mistletoe Boutique - Featuring over 50 vendors from the South Shore and across Massachusetts, Mistletoe Boutique is a wonderful opportunity to do some holiday shopping. The event will be held at the Red Lion Inn, Sunday, Nov. 12, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. All proceeds benefit Our World programs, operating costs, and exhibit development.

Spanish for Kids – Children can join Emilia Buckley for a fun beginning Spanish language and culture class. Using music, visuals, and lots of imagination, children will be introduced to and enjoy the benefits of early language learning. Classes for 3-to 5-year-olds will be held Fridays from 10 to 11a.m. Classes for 4- to 5-year-olds will be held Thursdays from 1 to 2 p.m. Classes begin Nov. 16 and run for 5 weeks. The cost is $81 for members and $90 for non-members. There is a maximum of 5 children in the class, so that special attention can be given.

Mid-Week Camp - Elementary School students can spend the afternoon at Our World on Early Release Days. Sessions include craft, snack, lesson, and play time and run from 1:15 to 3:30 p.m. Register in advance. The schedule currently accommodates students from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Norwell, Hanover and Braintree. The cost is $30 per class for non-members and $25 for members.

Messy Art – Children can join Julie for two sessions Wednesday afternoons to do the messy projects they hesitate to do at home. Classes run from 1 to 1:45 p.m. and 2 to 2:45 p.m. All ages welcome, but drop-off is available for ages 5 and up. The cost is $5 per child.

It's Music Time – Children are invited to join Jim Armstrong on an international musical adventure, which is an "Our World" exclusive. Parents and their children, ages 18 months to 4 years, can join Jim for six weeks of musical and educational fun. Every class begins with a classic campfire sing-along around a realistic-looking (but pretend) campfire. With Jim leading the sing alongs and playing guitar, mandolin, and ukulele, children will learn how to sing and perform simple and fun hand and body movements to favorite songs sung by children around the world. Highlights of the six-week session include participating in a dress up parade while marching and dancing to music from many cultures, a Mexican Hat Dance party and a Hawaiian Luau. Classes begin in January and will be held Tuesdays at 9:30 a.m.

French for Kids – Instructed by Liliane Miller. Invite your child to come join a native French speaker and learn a little French through the use of songs, nursery rhymes, poetry, and simple conservation. Your child will be exposed to a new language in a fun and vibrant way. Classes for 3 to 5-year-olds will be held Wednesdays from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. and 1 to 1:45 p.m. The cost is $60 for members and $70 for non-members. Classes for 5 to 8 -year-olds will be held on Wednesdays from 4 to 5 p.m. The cost is $70 for members and $85 for non-members. All classes begin Wednesday, Nov. 8 , and run for six weeks.

Help us fill in the Blanks – A creative and unique gift for the Holiday Season. A great present to honor families, children, grandparents, teachers or members in community. A donation of $100 will reserve your brick to add to our sidewalk. The funds will support the maintenance of the outdoor playground and indoor play area, plus the aquition of additional play structures and museum exhibits. Those who prefer can purchase a granite paver for $500.

Family Friday Nights – Starting in December, the third Friday of every month will be dinner and a movie at the museum. $10 per adult and $5 per child with a maximum of $25.

Kids Night Out – Starting Friday, Dec. 1. Drop kids off in P.J.s at 5:30 p.m. They will have dinner, play games, and see a movie. Pick up by 8:30 p.m. For ages 3 and up. The cost is $10 per child 50/50 Raffle – Tickets are $20 each or 6 for $100. The total is $2,000 so the winner is guaranteed $1,000. The drawing date is Nov.12.

Birthdays – They do the set up and clean up and everything in between. They provide decorations, napkins, plates and cups and you bring the cake and whatever you want to serve. Call 781-383-3198 to reserve the day.

Christmas Raffle - Come in and see the adorable ride ons: a pink tricycle, a firetruck, and an airplane, all waiting to be won and put under the tree. Tickets are $10 each or three for $25.

Getting ready for Cohasset Holiday Village Fair

(This is the first in a three-part series on the Cohasset Holiday Village Fair taking place Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Cohasset Common. Three town churches coordinate the fair. These articles will highlight not only what each congregation does for the fair, but will also look at how the parishes use proceeds generated by the event. The Second Congregational Church and the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church will be featured in the next two articles.)

With any luck, a light snowfall could decorate the Town Common in Cohasset for the upcoming annual Village Fair.

If it does snow, it will make for a picture perfect setting for the fair, but inside St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, everyone will be thinking about canoeing, swimming and hot July afternoons in the woods of New Hampshire. That's because money raised by St. Stephen's during the annual fair is used by the church to sponsor scholarships for children from around the state to attend a summer camp run by the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

The camp is in Greenfield, N.H., and is called the Barbara C. Harris Camp and Conference Center, named after the diocese first woman bishop. The camp brings together children from throughout the state and from various ethnic and economic backgrounds. While at camp, children enjoy swimming, camping, archery, rock climbing and sports, along with Bible study and worship services twice a day that incorporate Christian rock music.

The camp does not turn down any young person who wants to attend its summer programs. For children from families without the financial resources to send their children, the camp offers scholarships. These scholarships are funded in part by parishes throughout the diocese, including St. Stephen's.

"Its really nice to imagine that when people are buying books from us during the Village Fair, they are actually helping some child go to camp – a child who might otherwise not have the chance to swim or walk in the woods," said Colette Wood, who works with St. Stephen's outreach committee. "When you imagine that buying baked goods from us at the fair will eventually send the message to some child somewhere that he or she is cared for – it really is what the season is about."

At this year's Village Fair, St. Stephen's will have its traditional used book sale, the Country Kitchen with hostess gifts, a café with snacks and the Secret Santa room for children. For nearly two months, parishioners at St. Stephen's have been collecting and sorting through gently used books, videos and CDs to sell at the fair.

Enter the fair by walking up Highland Avenue behind the church. For more information on St. Stephen's and to find links to the diocesan Web site with summer camp information, go to ststephenscohasset.org.

Obituaries

Daniel Clark Cotton

Active in Cohasset civic and church affairs

Daniel Clark Cotton, 93, of Cohasset, died Oct. 31, 2006, at Sunrise Assisted Living Facility in Cohasset.

Born in Waltham, he attended school in both Arlington and Malden. A graduate of Kimball Union Academy, Class of 1931, Mr. Cotton graduated from Dartmouth College in 1935. He worked for many years in industrial sales and later as an industrial real estate broker.

As a member of First Parish Church in Cohasset, Mr. Cotton served on the Parish Committee and volunteered in the Sunday School and adult education program. He also helped with many fundraising drives at the church during his nearly 60 years of membership. In addition, he was active in town affairs, serving on the Zoning Bylaws Committee, Advisory Committee, Town Hall Study Committee, Planning Board, School Committee and Public School Survey.

Daniel Clark Cotton

Mr. Cotton also worked to raise money for numerous local charities and Cohasset Central Cemetery.

Husband of the late Jean E. (Barton) Cotton, he leaves his children, Elizabeth Sherblom and her husband, John, of Bangor, Maine, and Mary Jane Low of Albuquerque, N.M., and Montville, Maine; his grandchildren, William D. Gause and his wife, Alyssa, of Beverly, John P. Gause and his wife, Phoebe, of Bangor, Maine, and Richard B. Gause of Portland, Maine; and four great-grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held Saturday, Nov. 11, at 3 p.m., at First Parish Church, 23 North Main St., Cohasset Commons. Interment is private. Arrangements are by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be made to First Parish Meetinghouse Fund, 23 North Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Robert L. Bowman

Employed in telecommunications field

Robert L. Bowman, 73, of Cohasset, died Oct. 4, 2006, after a long illness.

A leader in the telecommunications field, Mr. Bowman was chief executive officer and president of Enhanced Service Providers of Pembroke, and was the former president of Telco Systems in Norwood and Artel Communications in Hudson. Mr. Bowman's career included positions at Raytheon Data Systems, Rockwell International, Comsat and Hughes Aircraft.

His career highlights included launching the first satellite communication system in Indonesia, as well as working with Anwar Sadat establishing a communication system for Cairo and Alexandria, Egypt.

Mr. Bowman attended UMass-Amherst and the University of New York at Rochester, and graduate studies at Stanford University.

He leaves his wife of 45 years, Barbara King Bowman; his daughter and son-in-law, Melissa and Douglas Clark of Cohasset; his sister, Judith Florian of Farmington, Conn.; his brother, William Bowman of Illinois; and two grandsons, Christopher James Clark and Andrew Philip Clark of Cohasset.

Memorial services were private.

Memorial donations may be made to Cohasset Fire Department, 44 Elm St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Richard D. Marques

Owned consulting firm

Richard D. Marques, 78, of Hingham, died Nov. 1, 2006, at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

Mr. Marques was born in Boston and raised and educated in Quincy, graduating from Quincy High School. He had been a Hingham resident since 1964.

He was a U.S. Navy veteran of World War II. He enjoyed boating, fishing, golf and playing pool.

Many years ago, Mr. Marques was a sales manager for the Patriot Ledger and later worked in sales in the oil industry, first for Quincy Coal & Oil Co., then with Shultz, Doyle & Stoddard of Scituate. In recent years, he established his own consulting firm, Enersol, a business dealing in home heating equipment.

He leaves his wife, Jean L. (Ericson) Marques; two sons, Peter Marques of Conway, N.H., and David Marques of Hadley; one daughter, Linda Kelley of Norwell; a brother, Raymond Whitehouse of Cohasset; and five grandchildren.

A service was held at Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, Hingham. Interment was private.

Men's music with a woman's touch

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Growing up in Neponset in the 1960s, Sheila Fahey was a Bobby Darin fan of the first order. So when Fahey - best known for her many starring roles with the former Quincy Community Theatre - and her music director, Mark Donahue of Milton, decided to create a new show where women sing songs made famous by men it was a given that one of Darin's many hits would make the songlist.

"I loved, loved, loved Bobby Darin. I actually even got to see him in concert once at the old Steuben's Nightclub on Boylston Street near the Colonial Theatre in Boston. I'm not sure I fully appreciated it back then, but he was a wonderful entertainer," recalled Fahey last week by telephone. "We do his 'Dream Lover' in our new show, 'Guys By Dolls.'"

The musical revue debuts next Friday at Raffael's Nantasket, with a second show on Saturday at the Sheraton Hotel in Braintree. As in her previous musical outing, "Connie, Patsy, Brenda, and Me!," Fahey will again be joined by her daughter, Jennifer Fahey of Dorchester, and her niece, Patty Lee of Braintree, as well as Maryellen Anson of Braintree and Kathryn Teevens-Fitzpatrick of Quincy, with Donahue at the piano.

"We had been doing the Connie Francis, Patsy Cline, and Brenda Lee show for about four years and we were really comfortable with it, but we still knew it was time to do something completely new. My voice is in a lower range, so I've always thought it would kind of fun to sing men's songs."

With that idea, Fahey and Donahue invited the other cast members to the Neponset equivalent of a Broadway workshop at Fahey's home. "Once Mark and I came up with the concept, the six of us sat down on my back deck and — over a couple of bottles of wine — we started looking at what music each of us wanted to do. When we started out, there were literally hundreds of songs being considered. We originally thought we would do four to five songs by each of our favorite male singers, but we soon realized that would mean our show would end up being 12 hours long."

The cast of "Guys by Dolls" includes Sheila Fahey, Jennifer Fahey, Patty Lee, Kathy Teevans-Fitzpatrick, and Mary Ellen Anson. Music direction by Mark Donahue.

While most of the music is familiar to Fahey, some is brand new to her castmates.

Fahey and company ultimately decided to divide the show into four sections: crooners (Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin and Perry Como), crossovers (Bobby Darin, Engelbert Humperdinck, and Johnny Mathis), rock (Elton John, Tom Jones, David Cassidy and Elvis Presley), and a final boy bands section that runs the gamut from The Mills Brothers to N'Sync. Once they figured out what they wanted to do, they set about deciding how to do it right.

"We haven't changed a single lyric. If the song is written to a woman, then that's how we sing it. And we don't do any impersonations, we just sing the songs the way the men would. We don't engage in any male bashing either, except for one or two gentle asides about what makes men different from women. I can only really tell stories about what I have lived through. I'm just not the kind of person who can make things up and then put them in the act. I've been very fortunate to have a lot of very wonderful men in my life so you won't hear me criticizing the opposite sex."

You will, however, hear a song that is special to Sheila and the man who has sat opposite her at the breakfast table for more than 25 years. "I do a very beautiful Nat King Cole song called 'That Way, That Sunday, That Summer' that perfectly evokes the summer when I met my husband on the Cape in the late 1960s. I've listened to it and loved it for years and now I am getting the chance to sing it in a show for the very first time."

While most of the music is familiar to Fahey, some is brand new to her castmates. "The girls are easy to work with, but the hardest thing about this show was that they didn't know the songs I knew and they had to learn a lot of the music from scratch. It took a great deal of work to get everything just right, but it was also a lot of fun. Rehearsals and shows are so different from all of our everyday lives. I can still remember when I was a meter maid, I would be ticketing cars all the while running lines and learning new songs in my head. We're all very busy with families and day jobs, so I always remind the girls that these shows are a piece of our lives that belong to no one else."

On Nov. 17. at Raffael's in Hull and Nov. 18 at the Sheraton Hotel in Braintree, JM Productions will present "Guys by Dolls." In Hull, dinner-and-show and show-only packages are available, while the Braintree date offers a choice of three packages including show, dinner and show, and dinner and show and a night at the hotel. Jerky 'Borat' jokes around U.S.A.

"Borat: Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan"

(B)

By: James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Meet the Jackass from Eurasia.

Frequently uproarious, occasionally slack and sometimes just plain sophomoric, "Borat: Cultural Learnings of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan" has generated a "Snakes on a Plane"-like buzz but may not deliver enough laughs to sustain a mainstream hit. The film takes the comedy of inappropriateness to new levels of outrageousness and shock.

It's the same brand of humor as "Jackass" and "The Aristocrats," and the character has roots in Steve Martin's and Dan Aykroyd's wild and crazy Czech brothers. The package has its appeal, especially among those eager to chart extreme territory and claim it as their own. That's all fine with me, especially when I'm laughing along with them much of the time.

But some stretches of "Borat" are barren. Along with his grossly overweight colleague Azamat Bagatov (Ken Davitian), anti-Semitic, homophobic, sex-fiend Borat Sagdiyev (British comic Sacha Baron Cohen) is a kind of cultural correspondent from Kazakhstan making a "tourist film" in America. Before embarking, however, he takes on us a tour of his village, where we meet the town rapist and his sister, with whom he has an incestuous relationship. Inside his home are his VCR, CD player and ox. We see the yearly event known as "the running of Jew."

In America, where Borat has brought "a jar of gypsy tears" to protect him from AIDS, the visitor becomes obsessed with Pamela Anderson and goes on a quest to meet and marry her.

The premise of the film, another variation of the theme of Gore Vidal's "Visit to a Small Planet," is that Cohen, who co-wrote the script with four colleagues, does not tell the people he encounters that he is an entertainer until after he films their exchanges and has them sign a release.

This makes a sequence involving racist college students deeply disturbing. Are Southern fundamentalists mere figures of ridicule, knowing the political power they wield and how that power has shaped our country? You laugh at them at your peril.

A sequence in which Borat and Azamat wrestle in the nude is hilarious, if also disgusting. Also funny is a scene in which Cohen releases a chicken on a subway car, and Anderson, a talented comic actor, turns out to be a real sport. But seeing Borat drink from a toilet or pleasure himself in front of a shop window featuring scantily clad mannequins is not funny.

Also unfunny are scenes in which innocent people are cruelly treated. The reductio ad absurdum of this sort of humor is treating torture as a joke, which is where we are headed.

Some critics have compared Cohen to the great Peter Sellers, and he seems to have taken the compliment to heart. In one sequence out of the "Pink Panther" films, Borat goes into a California antique shop and wrecks the place.

It was funnier, if no more original, when Sellers did it.

Rated R. "Borat" contains nudity, profanity and lewd and offensive humor.

Dennis (Michael Aronov) attempts to charm Mary (Laura Latreille, front) into telling him the story of how she and Jackie (Marin Ireland, rear) came to acquire their stamp collection in the Huntington Theatre Company's world premiere production of "Mauritius" by Theresa Rebeck, running through Nov. 12 at the Calderwood Pavilion, Boston Center for the Arts.

'Mauritius' gets stamp of approval

The fall theater season has only been underway for a few weeks, but it already has its first "must-see."

The Huntington Theatre Company's "Mauritius" may revolve around the seemingly sedate world of stamp collecting, but the play offers a riveting look at the taut tug-of-war that erupts between two half-sisters over which one is the rightful heir to their late mother's collection of rare, potentially priceless stamps.

Playwright Theresa Rebeck — whose "Bad Dates" was a highlight of the Huntington's 2003-2004 season — has earned deserved praise for her work, not only in regional theaters but also on television where she was a producer on "NYPD Blue." With "Mauritius," which takes its name from the African island where the first postage stamp was created, Rebeck uses the simmering tension between the estranged siblings — and the dubious intentions of a trio of stamp dealers — to bring the story to a can't-take-your-eyes-off-of-it boil.

Playing on the themes of avarice and sibling rivalry, Rebeck has crafted a compelling story of shifting alliances that keeps us wondering who to trust from start to finish. She has also created five distinct characters, each with his or her own voice. Things are never quite what they appear to be for this uneasily allied band of loners and never quite what they want them to be either. Younger sister Jackie (Marin Ireland) is a hard-edged, nervous type who sees the stamps as her ticket to a better life when the repressed Mary (Laura Latreille), who left Jackie and their mother behind years earlier, returns to claim what she says is her rightful inheritance from her paternal grandfather. The battle for control extends beyond family lines, however, to include a preening, perpetually-on-the-make dealmaker, Dennis (Michael Aronov), who uses his obvious sexuality to equally obvious advantage; a tightly wound buyer, Sterling (James Gales), whose desire for the stamps borders on dangerous obsession; and a timeworn stamp expert, Phillip (Robert Dorfman), whose expertise is a commodity he isn't always willing to sell.

Director Rebecca Bayla Taichman has a done a wonderfully deft job of maneuvering her first-rate cast through the many ups and downs in Rebeck's script that masterfully blends moments of comedy with menacing drama. The evocative set by scenic designer Eugene Lee and just-right costumes by Miranda Hoffman also contribute to making this powerful new play one that theatergoers won't want to miss.

"Mauritius" will be at the Huntington Theatre Company's Stanford Calderwood Pavilion at the Boston Center for the Arts, 527 Tremont St., Boston, through Nov. 12. For tickets and information, call 617-266-0800 or visit www.huntingtontheatre.org.

Bonding with Bond

Spy on world's exotic locales in footsteps of 007

By DAVID WHITLEY
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

There are few people who have been lucky enough to see as many of the world's glamorous locations as British secret agent James Bond. Over the course of 21 films, the all-action spy has covered the globe . . . in 007 style.

With the 22nd Bond film, "Casino Royale," hitting the big screen on Nov. 17, it's the perfect time to revisit some of the amazing places "Bond, James Bond" has been to over the years. For those wanting to follow in his footsteps, we've tracked down some of those exotic hot spots.

Where: Bangkok, Thailand

Film: "Tomorrow Never Dies"

What happens: Making their escape from a scary media mogul, Bond (Pierce Brosnan) and his Chinese cohort (Michelle Yeoh) make their way down a giant skyscraper, desperately grabbing a poster of the man who's just tried to kill them. They finally stop falling in time to kick their way through an office window and make their way out of the building for a motorbike chase.

How to get there: In the movie, the setting was Saigon, but Bangkok stood in. The actual building that Brosnan and Yeoh make their way down is the luxurious Westin Banyan Tree Hotel (www.banyantree.com/bangkok), the tallest hotel in the Thai capital. Room rates are from $330.

Where: The Verzasca dam, Lugano, Switzerland

Film: "GoldenEye"

What happens: 007 (Brosnan), attempting to infiltrate a Russian chemical weapons base in Archangelsk, Russia, bungee jumps down the face of the biggest dam you've ever seen. As he plunges down 656 feet, he pulls out a grappling gun, which he uses to attach himself to a roof. He makes his way into the building, via the men's toilets, disturbing the quiet, peaceful read of a bemused man going about his business.

How to get there: This is one of the few Bond stunts that you can replicate yourself, albeit without having to fall in on a fat man in a compromising position. It is one of the biggest bungee jumps in the world, and you can do the full 656-foot drop if you can bear standing at the edge while they strap you up without chickening out. The "GoldenEye" jump can be booked through www.trekking.ch/eng and costs about $215.

Where: Laughing Waters, Ocho Rios, Jamaica

Film: "Dr. No"

What happens: Bond (Sean Connery) is asleep on the beach and awakes to the sight of Honey Ryder (Ursula Andress) walking out of the water in a bikini. While she sings "Underneath the Mango Tree" and collects shells, 007 has a good, old-fashioned ogle, and the Bond girl tradition is born.

How to get there: The Dunn's River Falls are Jamaica's top tourist attraction, and Laughing Waters and the beach are at the end of the falls. Entry to the park is $10. To go whole hog, stay at the nearby luxurious Goldeneye Villa where Ian Fleming wrote many of the James Bond books (from $750 per night; www.islandoutpost.com).

Where: Phang Nga Bay, Thailand

Film: "The Man With The Golden Gun"

What happens: Piloting a seaplane, Bond (Roger Moore) does a scenic circling of a bay full of beautiful tropical islands, before landing in the water and sliding onto the beach. The island is home to assassin Scaramanga (Christopher Lee) who, after popping the cork of a champagne bottle carried by his midget assistant, challenges Bond to a shootout. After much chasing, 007 predictably wins.

How to get there: In a world-class example of how to milk your 15 minutes of fame, the island is now known as James Bond Island and is full of entrepreneurial Thais trying to sell you things. This, of course, means it's the complete opposite of the serene tropical paradise you're led to believe it will be. A tour to the island, including canoeing in sea caves, costs about $61 (www.hotelthailand.com).

Piz Gloria in Switzerland

Where: The Arecibo Observatory, Puerto Rico

Film: "GoldenEye"

What happens: Having chased rogue agent Trevelyan (Sean Bean) to Cuba, Bond (Brosnan) discovers one of those underground lairs he keeps happening to stumble upon. Disguised by a lake, it's really a giant radio telescope. After lots of fighting and explosions, Bond ends up dangling off a ladder, looking certain to fall, but manages to swing things around to let his former colleague plunge to his death on the metal plating way, way below.

How to get there: The "Cuban" scenes were filmed nowhere near Havana. The Arecibo Observatory is in Puerto Rico and is the biggest single-unit radio telescope in the world. Visitors are welcome to view the massive structure in its jungle setting, about 60 miles from San Juan. Entry is $5 (www.naic.edu).

Where: Murren, Switzerland

Film: "On Her Majesty's Secret Service"

What happens: After his cover as a genealogist is blown by Blofeld (Telly Savalas), Bond (George Lazenby) has to escape the cat-stroking bad guy's mountain lair. This involves climbing out along the wires of a cable car, then hurtling down a mountain on one ski while Blofeld's goons give chase.

How to get there: Only accessible by cable car or helicopter, the Piz Gloria revolving restaurant on Mount Schilthorn was named after the research center in the film. It was under construction at the time of filming and the movie producers had to help fund a helipad and the technology to make the building spin round. The Bond connection has been milked ever since. Schilthorn (www.schilthorn.ch) also has excellent skiing.

Where: The Stoke Park Club, Stoke Poges, Buckinghamshire, England

Film: "Goldfinger"

What happens: With a bar of gold at stake, both Bond (Sean Connery) and Goldfinger (Gert Frobe) are prepared to resort to a bit of downright cheating to win the last two holes in their golf competition. Sinister caddy Oddjob (Harold Sakata) replaces Goldfinger's ball at the 17th, but Bond gets the last laugh, making a ball switch himself. With a smirk, James claims the last hole, but the fat villain shows that he's dangerous by getting Oddjob to knock a statue's head off — with a flying hat.

How to get there: An 18-hole round at the course costs from about $94.50 per person. The Stoke Park Club is a short drive out of London (www.stokeparkclub.com). The club, incidentally, also appeared in "Bridget Jones' Diary."

Where: Sugarloaf mountain, Rio De Janeiro, Brazil

Film: "Moonraker"

What happens: Taking a bit of time out from sightseeing, Bond (Moore) gets into a cablecar with CIA agent Holly Goodhead (Lois Chiles). He hasn't reckoned on metal-mouthed villain named Jaws (Richard Kiel) snacking on the wires. After a series of highly unlikely decisions from all concerned, they end up fighting on top of the two cars swinging in the middle of the cableway. Bond and Goodhead escape by looping a chain around the cable and sliding to safety.

How to get there: The cable cars up to Sugarloaf can each carry 75 people. The trip serves up views of the whole city and is more than a half mile long, but takes just over six minutes. It will set you back $16 (www.riodejaneiro-turismo.com).

Where: The Great Hypostle Hall, Luxor, Egypt

Film: "The Spy Who Loved Me"

What happens: Against all sane logic, Bond (Moore) is chasing metal-toothed Jaws (Kiel) to get hold of a vital microfilm. Accompanied by the not entirely trustworthy Russian agent Major Asamova (Barbara Bach), they run furtively through a hall of pillars before getting into a big fight involving Bond narrowly escaping death and a lot of collapsed scaffolding.

How to get there: Despite the impression that this is all taking place in one of the pyramids, they are nowhere nearby. The filming took place at the Temple of Karnak near Luxor — the pyramid shots were sandwiched in because it looked cool. The temple was built 3,500 years ago and was once regarded as the most important place of worship in Egypt (www.touregypt.net).

Town Manager Bill Griffin speaks with Director of Finance Michael Buckley during Monday's Special Town Meeting. The meeting lasted until midnight and voters took up 28 articles of business.

Capital concerns

Decision on projects raised spirited debate

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It didn't take a crystal ball to predict Article 3 on this year's Special Town Meeting Warrant would generate much discussion. With just $300,000 to spend on capital budget items this year and $1.6 million in capital requests, voters took roughly two hours discussing every request and allocated funding where it felt it is needed most.

While the article had originally requested one vote to approve all the capital requests at once, a motion was made to separate them and take individual votes for every item, as was done with Article one, which balanced the budget.

In the end, voters approved the recommendations brought forth by the newly restored Capital Budget Committee, which the Board of Selectmen and a majority of the Advisory Committee endorsed. While additional amendments were floated to the article, which would have included funding additional items, they were defeated and $307,600 will be spent.

Discussion began with Selectman Gary Vanderweil and Advisory Committee member Donna McGee commending the CBC for its work. "The town is trying to work its free cash back up to 5 percent of its operating budget," said Vanderweil, and limiting

Downtown zoning changes defeated

By Samantha Brown

A cluster of zoning articles voted together as a package did not pass muster with voters at Monday's Special Town Meeting.

Articles 23 through 26 asked residents to approve establishing a new downtown zoning district. After literally hours of discussion and a voice vote so close it required a hand count (55 in favor, 67 against), it was determined the articles did not have the required two-thirds approval.

Scituate resident John Tedeschi, formerly of Cohasset, filed five citizens' petitions, which were presented at the meeting as the packaged Articles 23 through 26 and a separate Article 27. His attorney Richard Henderson has been representing him at meetings with the Board of Selectmen and spoke to the articles during the meeting.

Tedeschi owns a parcel of land on Smith Place, formerly owned by Richard Brown. After roughly one year of trying to gain approval from the Zoning Board of Appeals, Brown received permission to raze the small building currently located at 2 Smith Place and replace it with a 7,500-square-foot structure. The project Brown had envisioned building was nothing like what was permitted, and he therefore sold the project. While Tedeschi can build Brown's project as per-

Pamela Miles raises a question during discussion on Article three, which dealt with capital budget requests. If funding was allocated for roof repairs at the library and police station, she wondered why funding had not been allocated for the high school roof.

Balancing act

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The fiscal 2007 operating budget is balanced, but it took a while to get there.

Balancing the budget was the first item tackled during Monday's marathon Special Town Meeting, which lasted until midnight. There were 28 total items on the warrant and the Town Clerk's office said 258 residents were in attendance at the meeting.

The article asked residents to approve a series of supplemental appropriations due to additional revenue received from the state and other sources after the budget was approved at the Annual Town Meeting. Those supplements included:

- An increase of $8,000 in the Town Manager's line item for a street light consultant;
- An increase of $200,000 for the school department - the amount the town received in Chapter 70 funds;
- An increase of $5,000 for the Public Works department for drainage design;
- An increase of $10,281 for library custodial hours;
- An increase of $5,418 for additional library cleaning services;
- An increase of $38,413 to cover sewer-related debt service.

The meeting was spirited from the

A monumental tribute to veterans

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset is a town that prides itself on paying tribute to its veterans. This year, the town's Veterans Day observance not only honored the brave men and women who have served the country so selflessly over the years, it dedicated a new monument in their honor.

With four young men having recently returned to Cohasset from serving overseas, dedicating the new honor roll monument — which pays tribute to those who served in the Korean and Vietnam Wars, the Gulf War and the War on Terror — could not have come at a better time.

The monument is circular and made of the same stone used to make the World War I and II honor rolls, located at Veterans Park on Cohasset Harbor, and is sunken into the ground. There is a sloped walkway to bring visitors down into the center of the circle where there is a large flagpole. On the inside of the circle are the names of the town's most recent war veterans on beveled granite, with another plaque below the names indicating the war in which the residents served. There are also blank tablets to allow the town to inscribe the names of residents who may need to be added in the future. Outside the monu-

Town Meeting Action

In a spending mood

CPC funding projects approved

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Community Preservation Committee was given the OK to dole out $340,000 in funding for three projects at Monday's Town Meeting.

With the help of $25,000 from the CPC, Town Clerk Marion Douglas will be able to preserve ancient town records, which are currently on the verge of falling apart. CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey said some of the records date back to at least the 1700s, and the funds would allow the town to hire a conservator to preserve this piece of the town's history.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said his board had recommended spending the money by a vote of 3-0. Moving forward, Dormitzer said most likely at the spring Annual Town Meeting, he would like to see a request come forward to fund having the preserved documents scanned and turned into electronic copies as well.

Advisory Committee member Roger Hill said his committee unanimously agreed the project is a "Very good use of CPC funds." Town Meeting agreed and voted unanimously in favor of allocating the funding.

Next on the agenda was a $300,000 request for Beechwood Ballpark funding. The town allocated $300,000 for the project at a previous Town Meeting, based on estimates given by an engineer, and when bids came in, they were significantly higher than anticipated.

Ivimey said he drives by the park every day on his way to work and always sees people using it. He said various baseball and soccer teams use the park, as well as neighborhood children and Special Olympics athletes. Upgrades to the park would include complete drainage and reorientation of the field to allow it to be better utilized by both baseball and soccer teams, updating the basketball court and "tot lot" playground, and installing public lavatories.

Cohasset Town Meeting Voters participate in a spirited debate Monday.

Rather than be cash poor going into the future, the CPC recommended appropriating $150,000 now and bond the remaining $150,000 for a period of no more than five years.

Martha Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road asked why the CPC was splitting up the $300,000 in the same article. She said she thought taking out the bond was a separate question altogether and should be voted on separately.

Ivimey explained the bond would be paid back using CPC funds and not funds from the operating budget. He said therefore, Town Meeting must approve the CPC's spending the $300,000 regardless of whether half of it will be bonded.

Advisory Committee Chairman Merle Brown spoke to the article as a private citizen and member of the Beechwood Ballpark Committee. He said his committee has been trying to raise funds to complete the project, but it has not been enough. He added his committee will continue fund-raising and any money brought in will be deducted from the CPC donation.

Brown also praised the efforts of local Eagle Scouts who have worked to restore the bleachers at the ballpark and have worked on the playground as well. He said he is hopeful more donations from the community will be forthcoming. Town Meeting was happy to allocate the funding and the article passed by the required two-third majority.

The third CPC funding recommendation was bumped back to end of the warrant. At roughly midnight, voters first approved Article 28, which allocated $15,000 toward hiring a consultant for the Planning Board. With that having passed, the town then voted to approve a CPC matching donation of $15,000 for the same position. Currently, the town does not have a Town Planner and there are many issues dealing with zoning in the downtown area, which need to be addressed by an expert.

In other related news, Ivimey said the CPC closed out fiscal 2006, $76,000 ahead of where it projected it would be. Money for the fund comes from a 1.5 percent real estate tax surcharge and state matching funds, and this year the town received a 100 percent state match. In addition, Director of Finance Michael Buckley worked with the CPC and was able to put some of its funds into a certificate of deposit for 6 months to earn interest, which has left the CPC in good financial shape.

To make a donation to the Beechwood Ballpark Restoration Project, send checks to the Cohasset Town Treasurer, 41 Highland Ave., made payable to the Beechwood Ballpark.

Schools reimbursed for Osgood security

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department will be reimbursed for the cost of a new security system at the Osgood School. Article 18, which asked for a transfer of $65,097 from the town's operating budget to the school department budget, passed by a majority vote at Town Meeting.

However, while the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee both gave full support for the funding, both said in the future the school department should inform the town ahead of time if it will be looking for reimbursement for purchases it has made.

School Committee chairman Adrienne MacCarthy addressed Town Meeting and explained when the building projects were being completed at the middle-high school and Deer Hill, it was determined there was enough money left over to make upgrades to both schools' security systems. With the security issues faced at the middle-high school last year — including bomb and gun threats as well as vandalism — the school department agreed that would be the best use for the funds. "There was no money for Osgood," she said, as that school building project had been finished years before, "but we didn't want to leave it not secure."

To that end, the schools approached Town Manager Bill Griffin and asked if they could include the Osgood School in the Request for Proposals. The department said it would pay for the cost of the system up front, but felt it was a capital item that should not be paid out of the school budget. "We would like to ask Town Meeting to reimburse us for the cost of this expense," she said. In the event the article did not pass, the school department has money in a Foundation Reserve account, which it could have used.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said his board voted 3-0 in support of the article. He noted the schools had the opportunity to install the system while contractors were already on site at the other schools and the children were not in the building for the summer. "We believe it was necessary. However, the only courtesy we would have liked is to have been asked at that time, not at this time," he said.

Advisory Committee Chairman Merle Brown echoed Dormitzer's sentiments. While he said his committee voted 5-3 in favor of funding the system, it also voted 8-0 in favor of the following statement: "The Advisory Committee is very disturbed that the School Committee went ahead and made a decision to spend money on the security system without consulting either the selectmen or the Advisory Board. It is fine that they make a decision to spend their money (operating budget), but if they are then going to seek reimbursement from the town, it should first have the blessing of the Selectmen and the Advisory Committee."

Andrew Quigley, of Jerusalem Road, asked whether there is any bylaw or statute, which requires the school department come before any board prior to making a spending decision. He said it looked as if the school department is being singled out when it comes to spending its own budget. "It gets the third degree when others get a free pass," he said.

McCarron family organizes Thanksgiving run for charity

Jett Foundation benefits from Turkey Trot

Daniel and Christine McCarron, with their four boys, are ready for their turkey trot.

The 3.1-mile race, which starts on Cohasset Common at 8 a.m., follows the town's Little Harbor along its scenic route. Registration will begin at 7 a.m. on the Common.

On Thanksgiving morning, most people are looking forward to a feast with family and friends. At the McCarron household in Cohasset, they have added their own holiday tradition, fundraising for a worthy cause. Daniel and Christine (Lagrotteria, who is one of 11 children of another Cohasset family), both 40, with their four boys under six watching, are making last minute preparations to set up on Cohasset Common to greet the more than 200 runners checking in for the sixth annual Cohasset Turkey Trot on Thanksgiving morning (Nov. 23).

The McCarrons are hoping 2006 will be their best year ever, because funds raised will benefit the Jett Foundation of Pembroke, a foundation that combats Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy (DMD). As parents of boys, themselves, what makes this fundraiser even more special to Dan and Christine is that the race receipts will go for research and clinical trials to combat DMD, the most common and lethal genetic disorder affecting boys in the world.

When Dan learned of the Jett Foundation from a colleague at his office, Tim Driscoll of Norwell, whose two nephews have Duchenne, he and Christine felt they had to do something to help fight this fatal disease that attacks the muscles of boys when they are toddlers and kills most by their late teens.

As a senior managing director of Private Client Services at the financial services firm of Bear Stearns in Boston, Dan was deeply affected by the events of 911. He and his wife began the Turkey Trot immediately following the attack, when a lot of Dan's colleagues in other financial services firms were lost in the Twin Towers. Since there were a lot of contributions of aid pouring out to the New York area families, he and Christine decided they wanted to do something to help America heal on a local scale. They learned that Cohasset has no race on that holiday and initiated the first Cohasset Turkey Trot on Thanksgiving morning of 2001. The first race attracted 40 runners and yielded more than $3,000 that they donated to Toys for Tots. Dan funded all the expenses himself and he and Christine did all the organizational work pro bono.

Over the last five years, the Turkey Trot has grown to 200 runners and attracts participants from all over the South Shore. Whole families register and people bring their holiday houseguests. Last year, one man who had moved to Chicago, came back to visit his Duxbury residents over the holiday, especially to run in the race. About 70 percent are from Cohasset and there is always a separate first prize for a qualifying Cohasset runner. Other prizes are best man, woman and person under 18 years old. This year, for the first time, the race will be professionally clocked.

The 3.1-mile race, which starts on Cohasset Common at 8 a.m., follows the town's Little Harbor along its scenic route. Registration will begin at 7 a.m. on the Common. Those signing up by Nov. 17 are guaranteed a number and a runner's shirt, according to McCarron. The registration fee is $20 before Nov. 17 and $25 after. Families of four or more are capped at $100. Runners and their friends are invited to donate even more to this worthy cause. Registration may be made online at www.cohasset-turkeytrot.com/1.html, which will link to the Jett Foundation web site. You may also go directly to www.jettfoundation.org. Dan and Christine hope to see all of you on Cohasset Common running for a worthy cause and to also make room for that extra piece of pumpkin pie!

This year's charitable event is co-sponsored by Decision Mortgage of Cohasset and Sam's Club, Plymouth.

"We are very appreciative of our sponsors' support. Through their help, the registration fees and the additional generous donations of those who support this important cause, we hope top all previous year's fundraising efforts." McCarron said.

Funds raised will be contributed through the Jett Foundation to ongoing research for treatments of DMD. DMD affects one in every 3500 male births; 20,000 new cases are diagnosed each year. To-date, Jett, a five-year-old private foundation, has contributed over $1.3 million to research. For further information on Duchenne, contact the executive director of the Jett Foundation, Christine McSherry, at jettfoundation@aol.com or 877-fly-jett.

Cell phones get lost hikers back on track

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Last Friday, Nov. 10, two hikers called for help from their cell phones while lost in the woods. The first call came in at 12:51 p.m., from a Cohasset resident lost with her two children in Wheelwright Park. The second call came in an hour later at 1:52 p.m., from a Scituate resident who was lost in the area of Turkey Hill.

"We had two in the same day," said Detective Sgt. Gregory Lennon, adding both parties did the right thing by calling for help. When dialing 9-1-1 from a cell phone, the State Police are reached, and they in turn will transfer the call to local police, he said.

Lennon said anyone hiking in the woods should always be familiar with the trails they are on and never stray "from the beaten path." He said there are maps available for local trails through the Trustees of Reservations and the Department of Conservation and Recreation.

Both hikers were kept on the phone until located by Cohasset officers, and were then taken to their cars.

Police seek help for two thefts

The Cohasset Police Department, Criminal Investigation Division (CID) is seeking information leading to the identification, arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for two thefts that took place last weekend.

At some time between 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 11, and 12 a.m. Nov. 12, a residence was broken into on Lamberts Lane and property was stolen, including jewelry.

Between 1:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 12, a wallet was stolen out of a purse that was in a shopping carriage at Stop & Shop. Subsequently, credit cards in the stolen wallet have been used.

Anyone with information regarding either matter should contact the CID Office at (781) 383-1055 x1047 or via e-mail at detectives@cohassetpolice.com. Anyone who provides information may remain anonymous.

License to drive

A routine motor vehicle stop led to the arrest of Hull resident Juan Carlos Rodriguez Wednesday, Nov. 8. Detective Sgt. Gregory Lennon said an officer on patrol in the vicinity of Lamberts Lane observed a vehicle with a defective headlight and pulled the operator over. Rodriguez handed the officer a Mexican license and indicated he did not have a Massachusetts license. Lennon said Rodriguez gave varying answers as to how long he had been in the country and said he works for a local business.

Rodriguez was arrested for an unlicensed operation of equipment violation. He was booked at the Cohasset Police Station and released.

"This is a problem we've been dealing with a lot," said Lennon of coming into contact with foreign licenses. However, he said most have been forged. Officers are handed forged licenses roughly once per week. Most of the fake licenses are owned by operators with questionable status in the country, he said.

The most common forged licenses are Brazilian. "Some of our officers have received special training," in identifying forged licenses he said, but noted Rodriguez had a real Mexican license.

Accident by 3A Starbucks

On Thursday, Nov. 9, a caller reported a motor vehicle crash near Starbucks on Route 3A. A Ford Crown Victoria attempted to pull out of Starbucks and his front end was hit by a Lexus which was traveling northbound on Route 3A. There were minor injuries and neither party was transported to the hospital, said Detective Sgt. Gregory Lennon.

On Sunday, Nov. 12, there was another accident on 3A near Brewster Road, close to the Scituate border. A 1996 Toyota Four Runner heading south on 3A had stopped and was attempting to make a left-hand turn onto Brewster Road and was rear-ended by a 1995 Buick LeSabre. There were no injuries.

Hate crime

After receiving a call from a concerned resident, an officer on patrol at roughly 7 a.m. Friday, Nov. 10, located a sign that had been painted with a red swastika on Forest Avenue. The sign was a "no littering" sign and the Department of Public Works was asked to remove it, said Detective Sgt. Gregory Lennon. There is still no lead as to who may have painted the sign.

"There was no one in the area that we know of that was targeted by this act," said Lennon. "We've noted it and hope it was an isolated incident."

Cohasset police letter campaign

The Cohasset Police Association is conducting a fundraiser via mail this year. Each residence will be receiving a letter within the next week, with a self-addressed return envelope for donations. Funding is earmarked for the many programs the police department is involved with in the community, including Little League; youth football; the PALS program, run by officer Lisa Matos in conjunction with the schools; Law Day with teacher Jack Buckley's high school classes; the safety seat installation program at police headquarters and other charitable organizations.

Cohasset Police Association Secretary/Treasurer Jeff Treanor said in the past, there have been scams in communities where organizations call homes looking for donations for police departments which they have no affiliation with. He said by sending letters to residents, they can be assured this is a true fund-raising campaign for the department and funds will be used in town.

Letters were sent out Wednesday to residences and the police department will be sending letters out to businesses later this month.

Donations may either be mailed or dropped off at the police station lobby. For more information, please contact Treanor at (781) 383-4139 x1034 (voicemail).

THIS WEEK

Legion Auxiliary to host Thanksgiving breakfast

The American Legion Auxiliary will host a Thanksgiving Day breakfast from 7 to 10 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 23 at the George H. Mealy Post 118, located on the corner of Summer and Border streets. Reservations are not required, and the cost is $5 per person for an all-you-can-eat buffet. All are welcome to attend.

TM Griffin praised for contract negotiations

Voters approve changes to union contracts at Monday's Special Town Meeting. While explaining the article, Town Manager Bill Griffin said the contracts had to do with library, firefighter and clerical unions as well as non-union personnel. He said the total impact of changes would be less than 1/10 of a percent with union members and everyone is happy. He noted town union employees are coming off a zero percent increase year.

The non-union positions will remain within 3 percent and he said a few positions will receive modest increases, based on what he has seen for similar positions in the marketplace. "We want to encourage our employees to stay in Cohasset," he said.

Selectman Vice Chairman Rob Spofford said the board gave its unanimous support for the contracts. "We want to compliment Bill. He has done a lot of negotiating and the town owes him a debt of gratitude. He's doing a great job."

Advisory Committee member James Gilman said his committee also supported the contracts unanimously. "Bill did an excellent job negotiating the contracts," he said.

Zoning changes for Res. A district

Homes in the Residential A district will have a little more leeway when it comes to building on their property. With a vote in the affirmative, Article 22 provided zoning relief only for homes in the Residential A district whose lots are smaller than 18,000 square feet and are nonconforming. At the 2003 fall Special Town Meeting, the town amended the zoning bylaw to limit structural coverage to 20 percent of the lot area, and this latest vote will change those standards, only for the Residential A district.

The Residential A district in Cohasset contains mostly older homes built on smaller lots. The existing buildings on many of these lots already exceed the 20 percent structural limit and the owners do not have the flexibility to build additions, porches, garages, or tool sheds which otherwise comply with zoning. The article increases the allowable percentage of structural coverage in a pre-existing nonconforming lot from 20 percent to 25 percent, or 3,600 square feet, whichever is less, thus allowing residents to make small changes to their home, such as enclose a porch or build a deck.

AROUND TOWN

Ushering in the holiday season

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset. Well, I am starting this week by saying Happy Thanksgiving to all next week. Please make sure to travel safe, take a few minutes (well, ok a few HOURS) to enjoy and be thankful for all that we have in our lives and give your love and warmth to family and friends along with maybe a bit to others not as fortunate as us. I heard a weather rumor that it may get a bit cooler next week but either way, warm or cool, let us all be thankful for each day we have and share. A lot of information is starting to come forward about some wonderful events for the holidays for all to enjoy so here goes.

VILLAGE HOLIDAY SET FOR DEC. 16

The merchants and businesses in the Village are busy planning the annual "A Cohasset Village Holiday" for Saturday, Dec. 16, from 4 to 7 p.m. The shops throughout the Village—from S. Main Street and Elm Street through the James Brook Crossing shops, Ripley Road and the Art Center will offer open houses, holiday fare, entertainment, raffles and special offers. This is a super fun event and really brings people together to get ready for the holidays so make sure to save the date!

CONSIGNMENT SHOP TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE

On Nov. 30, The Cohasset Consignment Shop is having an Open House from 4 to 8 p.m. featuring LA DI DA Jewelry and Accessories by Keri Piepenbrink. Proceeds from the sales that evening will help the Social Service League of Cohasset support a family in need this Christmas. Kick off your holiday shopping and join the volunteers of the Cohasset Consignment Shop for an evening of fun. Hope to see you there.

'COHASSET ENTERTAINS' COOKBOOKS AVAILABLE

For this holiday season, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset has reprinted a limited number of the original "Cohasset Entertains" cookbook. This book is a collection of tried and true recipes from the cooks among us and each one is a keeper. The book also contains sample menus and arrangement ideas for your holiday table. Just a few of the delicious holiday recipes included are crab delight, Christmas mapley appetizers, onions celeste, winter squash casserole, pumpkin chiffon pie, and praline ice cream pie with rum sauce. There is also an entire chapter on gifts we bake including cookies, candies and coffee cakes. This would make a great gift for your favorite cook.. Each cookbook costs $15 and is available at Flemings in Cohasset, and The Windsor Tea House. All purchases help fund club programs, services and a scholarship fund. The CGCC is a member of The National Garden Clubs, Inc. and The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc.

VILLAGE FAIR IS DEC. 2

Come celebrate the spirit of Christmas – and get a great start on your holiday shopping – at Cohasset's annual Village Fair on The Common on Saturday, Dec. 2. Three of Cohasset's churches and the non-profit Cohasset Appalachia Service Project will be working together to create this wonderful holiday marketplace on and around Cohasset Common. Beautiful handmade decorations, fresh holiday greens, and great gifts can be found at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, First Parish Unitarian Church and The Second Congregational Church. The food alone will be worth the trip! Santa will again be the guest of honor on the common, and children should stop by the Secret Room at St. Stephen's to pick out an extra special gift for Mom or Dad. Fair hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., and proceeds support the charitable work of the churches and the ASP.

SPORTS PHYSICALS TAKE PLACE NOV. 17

Cohasset High School winter sports physicals will be performed by Dr. Golden's office on Friday, Nov. 17, at 2 p.m. in the high school nurse's office. Any high school student planning on participating in a winter sport needs to have an updated physical on file in the school nurse's office before the start of practice. An updated physical is a physical exam performed by a licensed practitioner within the last 13 months.

REYNOLDS ENROLLS AT DARTMOUTH COLLEGE

Christopher F. Reynolds of Cohasset has enrolled as a member of the Class of 2010 at Dartmouth College. Chris is the son of Jack and Elizabeth Reynolds. Great work and news Christopher!

WELCOME OLIVIA MARIE STONE

Liz and Jeff Stone of Pembroke announce the birth of a brand-new daughter, Olivia Marie, who arrived on Sept. 30, 2006 at South Shore Hospital. Olivia tipped the scales at 8 lbs., 3 oz. and measured 20-3/4 ins. long at birth. Available for extra hugs are maternal grandparents Jane Mahoney of Weymouth and Edward Mahoney of West Roxbury and paternal grandparents Mr. and Mrs. William Stone of Cohasset. Congratulations all!

ATLANTICA AND COHASSET INN BAKE PIES FOR CHARITY

The staff of Atlantica and the Cohasset Inn will once again participate in two events that will enable others to have a special holiday. They have been donating their time and materials for these two events for the last five years. Monday – Nov. 20. Atlantica supports Pie in the Sky, the annual Thanksgiving pie sale to benefit Community Servings - a Roxbury based food shelter. The staff of Atlantica will gather together for this "bake off". The goal is to make and bake 50 pies. These pies will then be sold to support Community Servings in Roxbury. The sale of each pie that is sold will allow a family of four to sit down and share a Thanksgiving dinner - a meal that they would not have otherwise. All pie ingredients and staffing is donated by Atlantica and Cohasset Harbor Inn. Tuesday – Nov. 21 Atlantica will open its doors to serve a special pre-Thanksgiving luncheon for Cohasset Elder Affairs. Approximately 75-100 senior citizens have been invited to join the festivities. Many of the guests once worked at the famous Hugo's, which is Atlantica now. All food and use of the facility are donated by Atlantica. Atlantica and the Cohasset Harbor Inn donate about $10,000 in food and gift certificates each year.

COURSES AND WORKSHOPS OFFERED

The South Shore Art Center announces its winter term of courses and workshops. Courses are available in painting, figure drawing, basic drawing, ceramics, tilemaking, photography, printmaking and more—for artists of all ages and abilities. Visit www.ssac.org for information. Many programs for all.

That is all for this week. Please send me all of your news and info no later than Tuesday by 5 p.m. EMAIL: aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com MAIL: 622 CJC Highway. Fax 781-383-2241

Santa Claus is coming to town!

Cohasset's Jingle Bell Walk is a local tradition

The Jingle Bell Walk begins at 2 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 24 when Santa Claus arrives by boat with his elves at Cohasset Harbor

Cohasset Village has not looked this good since the "Witches of Eastwick" was filmed there 20 years ago. The village revitalization project was completed this fall and includes new sidewalks and freshly planted trees. But the Cohasset Village streetscape is as quaint as ever! All the Village shops will be decked out for the holidays for what is an annual tradition, the Jingle Bell Walk.

The South Shore Community Center, 3 N. Main St., Cohasset invites family and friends to join in the holiday spirit at the Jingle Bell Walk that begins at 2 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 24 when Santa Claus arrives by boat with his elves at Cohasset Harbor (Border Street). After Santa distributes jingle bells to the children, he and his elves will board a fire truck and the walk continues along the sidewalks of Elm Street to S. Main Street in Cohasset Village.

At 2:30 p.m. the South Shore Community Center welcomes everyone to partake in cookies, a beverage and a holiday-sing-along. Holiday music and carols will also be sung by all.

Santa will be upstairs in the Center to pose for pictures with you and your children.

Please also stroll through the village to share in the local shops' holiday ambience.

- At 2 p.m., Santa and his elves arrive by boat at Cohasset Harbor.
- At 2:05 p.m., Santa passes out jingle bells.
- At 2:15 p.m., Santa and his elves proceed by fire truck down Elm Street to S. Main Street followed by family and friends.
- 2:30 to 3:30 p.m., listen to the bells of St. Stephen's play while enjoying a hayride around the Common.
- 3-4 p.m., open bowling and face painting at the community center.
- At 3 p.m. on Cohasset Common there will be a "Turkey Tot Trot" for ages 3 to 10. You may register the day of the event for $3 per participant. Proceeds will benefit the Nursery School. All participants will receive a prize.
- Hayrides will be available from 3 to 4 p.m.
- At 3:45 p.m., gather around the Cohasset Common to listen to the Rusty Skippers Marching Band.
- The festivities culminate on Cohasset Common at 4 p.m. with the lighting of the tree.

There is something for everyone this year at the Jingle Bell Walk. It's a great way to appreciate the picturesque surroundings, while involving the whole family in a Cohasset tradition.

Have your photo taken with Santa at the center from 3 to 4 p.m.(proceeds to benefit South Shore Community Center). In the event of rain, Santa will arrive in the gym at 2 p.m.

WEDDING

Irwin-Connolly

Megan Walsh Connolly and Thomas L. Irwin, both of Manhattan, N.Y., were married Saturday, Aug. 26, 2006, at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. The nuptial Mass was celebrated by the Rev. John R. Mulvehill.

The bride is the daughter of Betsy and Ed Connolly of Cohasset and Osterville. She is a 2003 graduate of Catholic University of America. She is a specialty sales representative for Shire Pharmaceuticals in Manhattan.

The groom is the son of Monica and Thomas Irwin of Orchard Park, N.Y. He is a 2001 graduate of Fordham University in New York City and is an associate director for UBS Wealth Management in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Irwin

Maid of honor was Caitlin Walsh Connolly of Boston, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Kayleen Devine of Boston, Ellie Graham of San Francisco, Sarah Irwin of Washington, sister of the groom, Daina Slekys of Boston, and Tori Scurlock of Natick, cousin of the bride. Caroline Walsh McCann, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl.

James Commerford of Cleveland served as best man. Groomsmen were Sean Connolly, brother of the bride, Matt Griffin, Kevin Shaw and Aaron Stetter of Washington, and Scott Nowakowski of Chicago. The ring bearers were Jamie Walsh of Centerville and Nicholas McCann of Londonderry, N.H.

A reception took place at Atlantica in Cohasset.Harbor, and an after party at the Light keeper's Inn, Cohasset.

After a wedding trip to the Greek isles, the couple is residing in Manhattan, N.Y.

First Parish gets ready for Village Fair!

First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset is busy again preparing for their part in this year's Christmas Fair on the Common – Dec. 2nd. Its fabulous Estate-Ish Sale and Swedish Bake Shop are found in the Parish House across the Common. The Rusty Skippers Band performs its Holiday Concert at 12 noon, and tickets will be on sale for the annual Christmas Concert by the Unicorn Singers to be held on Dec. 10th at 4 p.m.

Come to Trueblood Hall in the Parish House from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and find hidden treasures at the "Estate-ish" Sale! Jewelry, books, decorative objects, small furniture pieces, toys and more await the keen-eyed hunter. Find a treasure for yourself or a gift for someone else. Please call the Parish House (781 383-1100) for donation instructions.

Accompanying this sale is the Swedish Bake Shop with its Cinnamon Buns and Baked goodies served with coffee, tea and juice. The Swedish Bake Shop has been part of the Village Fair since 1993 when Sine Pounder and Ellyn Packard brought their cinnamon buns, cardamom breads and Swedish holiday delights into First Parish's kitchen.

An annual treat is the Appalachian Service Project's sale of crafts brought back from their venture this past summer. This has become an annual sale to benefit the work of the Project where young people and their chaperones from Cohasset spent a week in Appalachia helping to construct or repair homes for low-income families. The Rev. Gary Ritts from the Second Congregational Church heads up the ASP in Cohasset.

Tickets are available during the Village Fair at the Parish House on Main Street for the 28th Christmas Concert of the Unicorn Singers with Margo Euler. This year the Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale have joined with Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull to present two Christmas concerts to benefit the Wellspring Diane Edson Fund, providing direct financial aid to people in crisis. Concerts are at First Parish in Cohasset on Dec. 10 at 4 p.m. and at the House of Prayer Lutheran Church in Hingham Dec. 9th at 8 p.m..

TOWN MEETING ACTION

get-go as Tucker Glavin, Nichols Road, who is on the Advisory Committee but spoke as a private citizen, made a motion to separate the six funding allocations into separate line items requiring their own votes. The way the article was originally presented, all six items would have been decided together as a package.

"These are six different items," he said, for which voters may have many different opinions. He said for some residents, deciding to allocate funding in one area might be an easy decision, but for others, the decision may not. By separating the items, everyone can have a fair say for each item, he said.

Town Meeting agreed with Glavin and the items were separated.

First to be taken up was allocating $8,000 for a street light consultant. Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer explained National Grid charges the town for its street lights, including electricity used, maintenance and a rental fee. The total cost billed to the town each year is roughly $60,000 and $40,000 of that money is rental fees. National Grid could sell the poles to the town for $57,000, and in 2-1/2 to 3 years, the town could see full payback of its costs and actually make roughly $20,000 per year. The town approved allocating the funds for a consultant by a majority vote, to help decide the best route to take.

Next on the list was allocating $200,000 in Chapter 70 money to the schools. "The money was earmarked for that purpose," and the board agrees it should be given to the schools, said Dormitzer.

Roy Fitzsimmons, Doane Street, asked specifically how the school department would use the $200,000. School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said it would be spent on teacher salaries. "We made a commitment not to cut teachers when we lost the override vote," she said, referring to the override that failed at the ballot box this spring. The school department replaced five retiring teachers, knowing the Selectmen and Advisory Committee supported allocating the Chapter 70 funds to the schools.

There was very little discussion when it came to the Public Works department's funding for drainage design request, and it passed by a majority vote.

Leonora Jenkins, Jerusalem Road, said she had heard the population at the schools has decreased since last year, and asked by how much it had decreased. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said there has been a decrease of 29 students district wide. As of Oct. 1 the school department had reported a decrease of 19 students, and Walsh said she would be giving an update on enrollment at the committee's Nov. 15 meeting. The line item passed by a majority vote.

There was very little discussion when it came to the Public Works department's funding for drainage design request, and it passed by a majority vote. Stacey Weaver, Nichols Road, spoke to the importance of increasing library custodial hours and cleaning services and the town voted in favor of those as well. The town also passed allocating additional money to cover sewer debt service.

mitted, he would like to instead build a Nantucket shingle-style multi-use building with eight retail spaces on the bottom and eight housing units on the top. To make that dream a reality, the town's zoning bylaws would have to change.

The package of articles would have created a separate zoning district, the Cohasset Village Business District, to be governed by its own dimensional provisions, which would have more liberal standards with respect to the creation of multiple family housing than would exist in other business districts. The new district would have been put on the town's zoning maps, new dimensional requirements for multi-family housing would have been established, and a set of use provisions, which would be the same as currently exist, would have been put in place.

Through Article 27, which was almost pulled from the warrant after the package of articles failed, parking requirements would have changed for downtown businesses within 500 feet of the new Pleasant Street parking lot. That motion was defeated by a 2/3 vote as well.

A two related votes, taken on Article 28 and Article four, allocated funding in the amount of $30,000 ($15,000 in each article) from the town's operating budget and the Community Preservation Committee to pay for consulting services for the Planning Board. Both articles passed and the Planning Board will use the person hired to help plan future build-out for the downtown area.

Women's cooperative hosts holiday boutique

Shopping event slated for Nov. 24

By Sara Mason Ader
CORRESPONDENT

About two dozen high-end specialty businesses will gather to present their wares to the public on Nov. 24 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Hingham Community Center in the first event sponsored by the newly formed South Shore Women's Cooperative.

The SSWC was the brainchild of Kim McGeoghegan of Hingham and her sister Stacey Grealish of Cohasset. When the two started up their own business — Shenanigan's Children's Clothing — about six months ago, they were hard-pressed to find the right venue to exhibit their unique line of embellished clothing for kids.

They initially tried a private trunk show and several local crafts fairs to get the word out about their products, which include appliquéd T-shirts, dresses and other garments for babies and children up to size 8. The response was encouraging, as was their reception at several local boutiques including Hingham's Island in the Square and Olivia Rose in Marshfield, the sisters say.

However, they found that distribution through these channels involves several major challenges: The craft and trunk shows occur only periodically and involve significant preparation time. As for the retail stores, the mark-ups are substantial with a hefty portion of the profits going to the store.

"We love seeing our things in the store displays, but obviously we make the most money when we can sell the items ourselves," says McGeoghegan, a mother of three who left her job as a fixed-income analyst in Goldman Sach's wealth management division after 12 years to spend more time with her family. She has an MBA in finance and marketing from Boston College, where she also completed her undergraduate degree in theater and economics.

McGeoghegan and Grealish figured they were not the only local business owners struggling with these challenges. About two months ago, they began reaching out to other local artists and vendors whose hand-made or unique products they admired.

"We figured there must be lots of other women on the South Shore selling high-end products out of their homes who were in the same position," says Grealish, a former estate planning attorney who — like her sister — also left a highly skilled job behind to focus on her two daughters (a third child is expected in May).

As McGeoghegan and Grealish had suspected, many of the local women they contacted shared their dilemma about a meaningful local distribution network. Thus, the SSWC was born to create a forum for these women-owned businesses to showcase their products and gain a wider public reach. Although the Holiday Boutique is the only event on the agenda so far, McGeoghegan and Grealish plan to poll the SSWC membership to brainstorm ideas to help their businesses thrive.

"Where this is going, we are not really sure," Grealish says. "We're hoping to pull people together who can offer each other advice and support." She also mentions the possibility of bringing in speakers, staging more events, and even gauging interest in shared storefront.

Some of the business owners participating in the Holiday Boutique say they are interested in the group primarily to help them build up a local clientele. Kerry Bolster, for example, formed her company Little Lids six years ago. The Hanover-based online retailer of children's hats has drawn customers from such distant locations as London, Australia, California and Texas. "But we don't have that much local business," Bolster says.

Another exhibiter, photographer Cynthia Vallino, is hoping to expand her local following in advance of the gallery she plans to open Ripley Road in Cohasset in late November. Until now, her photographs have mostly sold through private shows, including one that has run for a few months at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham.

Like many of the women entrepreneurs they have attracted to the SSWC, both McGeoghegan and Grealish squeeze their business pursuits in between carpooling, nap schedules and other family responsibilities. "It's chaos, but we get 10 minutes here and there when it's really productive and we manage to get things done," Grealish says.

TOWN MEETING ACTION

capital spending will help the town reach that goal. "Five percent is considered prudent by financial managers and bond agencies. It'll affect our bond rating if we don't get it back up. We agreed with the priorities set by the Capital Budget Committee and the dollar amounts."

McGee echoed Vanderweil's sentiments. "Requests were pared down to a manageable amount," she said, as the CBC was originally faced with $1.6 million in requests. "There are not enough reserves to support everything they, and we, would like to see accomplished," she said, but commended the group for its hard work.

On the other side of the issue was Advisory Committee member Pat Waters who commended the CBC for its efforts and a job well done, but did not agree with the recommendations. He encouraged Town Meeting vote against the article.

Waters said the fiscal 2007 budget was voted on at the Annual Town Meeting this spring with a fixed dollar amount that everyone agreed upon, with the option of adding funding to the budget through an override. "Both override amounts were not passed by a majority," he said, which left the town with a balanced budget to work with. He said before any funding is added to the budget, the town needs to set priorities, and suggested the money that would have been used to fund capital projects be invested and used at a later date.

Town Manager Bill Griffin then addressed the meeting and explained the capital items up for consideration would be paid for with free cash. Free cash is strictly a Massachusetts term, which is used for surplus funds. The calculation is completed at the end of the fiscal year, which is June 30, and with the Annual Town Meeting held in April, free cash had not yet been certified.

At the end the fiscal year, Director of Finance Mike Buckley prepared a balance sheet for the town, which was sent to the Department of Revenue. It then reviewed the balance sheet, and certified the amount of free cash, or surplus, the town has. Free cash can be transferred by Town Meeting for any lawful purpose. From year to year, free cash can vary greatly based on how much the town collected in revenue over and above what was predicted, how much money was turned back to surplus from budget appropriations and other Department of Revenue calculations. Free cash is somewhat of a misnomer as it is neither "free" nor "cash" and is essentially an accounting calculation, rather than an actual account with money.

Leland Jenkins questions why the roof was not redone at the police and fire station when renovations were in process during discussion on Article three, which dealt with capital budget requests.

At the end the fiscal year, Director of Finance Mike Buckley prepared a balance sheet for the town, which was sent to the Department of Revenue.

"This is an appropriate way of using free cash," said Griffin, adding free cash is typically used for one-time costs. He noted the ambulance billing system which was on the table would actually help save the town money as the ambulance billing service the town contracts with has already agreed to a reduction in the service fee it charges from 7 percent to 4 percent, which will save the town roughly $10,000 annually. "We'll have total payback of the system over 2-1/2 years," he said.

With $1,007,737 in certified free cash and $300,000 being spent, Andrew Quigley, of Jerusalem Road, asked what would happen to the remaining roughly $700,000. Griffin said free cash should be thought of as a savings account. If it is not spent, it gets turned back to the town's surplus funds. Over the last 20 years, the town has, on average, had $725,000 in free cash every year. He said while individual years have varied — one not too long ago saw $1.5 million in free cash while two years ago there was $350,000 — having $700,000 in reserves is where the town wants to be. "We don't want to use it in our operating budget. We're trying to wean ourselves of that," he said.

Griffin also noted the town will not have $700,000, it will have roughly $620,000 as Articles 18 and 28 were still on the docket and would allocate $65,000 for the Osgood School security system and $15,000 for a planning consultant if passed. He also noted that likely, $300,000 of free cash would be used at the Annual Town Meeting to support the budget, as there are often items which come up that need funding such as the snow and ice deficit, legal fees and special education costs, which will leave the town with $320,000.

Griffin pointed out having free cash to use is a positive thing for the town. "This is the first time in two fiscal years any capital projects are being done. This is a good thing," he said.

Roof repairs

The first item up for consideration was $68,000 to make roofing repairs for the police station. Leland Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, asked why the roof was not done when the police and fire station was redone.

Stephen Gaumer of the CBC noted when the renovations were being done to the building, "The town decided to cut funds back," and the roof was not completed. He said taking a tour of the facilities, he has seen part of the roof is caving in. "We need to learn from lessons taught the hard way. We now have two unusable garage bays," he said.

Pamela Miles, of Linden Drive, said both the library and schools requested funding for roof repairs. "Why was $68,000 recommended for the police department and not the other repairs?" she asked.

Gaumer explained the library has a slate roof, which will cost $362,000 to replace. He said after speaking with the library trustees, they agreed $13,000, which was one of the requests on the list of items they recommended, would temporarily fix the problem and get some more life out of the roof the library has. With the schools, Facility Manager Brian Adams said the leak could be the fault of the contractor and the town is waiting to see what happens with that. "At this point, there is no danger of physical damage," he said.

Jean Patterson, Ledgewood Farm Drive, made a motion to amend the amount of funding allocated for capital projects. She suggested changing the amount for roof repairs from $68,000 to $118,000 to include the $50,000 necessary to fix the high school's roof. She said the town could fix the problem now and still go after the contractor and receive reimbursement from the contractor later, rather than let the leak continue.

Leonora Jenkins, Jerusalem Road, asked whether there would be any guarantee the school department would in fact go after the contractor. At a School Committee meeting, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said the leaks were found last winter, and Jenkins said she was not convinced "anyone will go back to the contractor if they haven't already."

Facility Manager Adams said he has been in touch with the contractor and the investigation is ongoing. "Right now, we don't have a definite answer as to what is causing the leak," he said.

Without knowing what is causing the leak, Martha Gjesteby, 81 Old Pasture Road, asked how the town knows how much it will need to fix the problem.

"It's our best guess," said Adams, based on the likely cause of the leak.

Town Meeting voted against the amendment that would have added $50,000 for school roof repairs, for a total of $118,000, and a majority voted to approve the $68,000.

Harbormaster

There was $80,000 in requests for the harbormaster's office, including $10,000 for additional docks for Parker Avenue and Government Island, $70,000 for a new 28-foot boat with equipment.

Residents were concerned about dishing out so much money to the harbor when mooring fees have not been raised, yet many other town departments have had to raise and/or implement fees for service to cover the cost of the operation.

Griffin said the Harbor Committee has been asked to come up with a fee structure which will see increases for next year's boating season and the committee is coming before the Board of Selectmen Dec. 4 with its recommendations. He said while he was not 100 percent sure, he thought the committee planned to bring an increase forward of $3 per foot, bringing the cost from $6 per foot up to $9 per foot.

Griffin explained the rationale behind bringing in the new boat for the harbormaster is strictly a public safety issue. "It is my responsibility to put her out in a safe boat, not only for her safety, but the safety of those she rescues," he said. The new boat would be a 25-foot boat used for search and rescue. The town's current boat, a 17-foot Boston Whaler, is too small and its sides are too low to be able to accommodate fire or police department members who may be required during an emergency, and the new boat would make that possible. "We could assist any kind of boater during a medical emergency," said Harbormaster Lorren Gibbons.

Jean Patterson said the town could look into purchasing a used boat and potentially save money. Gaumer, of the CBC, said they had looked into that option, but the new boat market is currently very soft and the town could strike up a great deal. In addition, the town will get a warranty with a new boat. "We're dealing with the health, safety and welfare of the town and those who visit the community and we think we're making a wise investment," he said.

Adding new docks to the harbor was also questioned. Gibbons explained the town currently has an overcrowding problem on its docks and there is a great demand for more. "We have a 20-year wait list for moorings," she said, and adding more dock space would allow roughly 30 to 50 more townspeople to use the harbor, thus generating more fee revenue. Gaumer added the docks would most likely pay for themselves in 3 years.

Andrew Quigley, Jerusalem Road, said in a time when money is being rationed, it didn't make sense to him to give such a large allocation to the harbor, which in his opinion is used for luxury. "We have to pay for ambulance rides, bus rides for our kids, athletic fees," he said, and he thinks there should be more of a correlation between the fees and what the town is spending.

However, Agnes McCann, Doane Street, said the harbor is not just for pleasure, as there are commercial fishing boats that use it every day. "We have a harbor and it's like a road. We have to maintain it because people use it," she said.

Leonora Jenkins added the harbormaster provides services, which are critical to the community. "She was there to rescue those children (who were stranded on Bassing Beach) who are not paying mooring fees," she said.

Town Meeting voted to approve both allocations for the harbor.

Allocations for the library roof, police department motorcycle, mobile data terminals for the police station and a new ambulance billing service generated much less discussion. All were passed by majority votes. While Andrew Quigley made a motion to add $100,000 to the request — $75,000 for technology upgrades for the schools and $25,000 for a new exhaust fan for a chemistry lab at the middle-high school — the Selectmen, Advisory Committee and members of the School Committee all said they would be working together to remedy the technology situation on a more global scale, and now was not the time to support the funding.

Mr. & Ms. Anonymous

Last week we had an "anonymous" call from a reader chastising us for some sloppy writing on the part of the editor. We were writing the "police beat" for Hingham and misidentified the officer who made the arrest in the second reference in the brief.

"Write a wise saying and your name will live forever."

—Anonymous

The caller "lit into us" but did not leave his name or number so we could call him back.

Many readers may be surprised that in the newspaper business, we welcome and encourage feedback. Both the positive and negative. We like to know that you are paying attention. We love a "pat on the back" but also want to hear from you when we come up short.

However, if you don't identify yourself then we are limited in what we can do to follow up. In this case, we read over the police brief and agreed with the caller, but would like to tell him so personally.

We often operate like many of our readers in their own jobs — working long hours and often with a reduced staff. But that is still no defense; our readers deserve better. We will endeavor to be more careful.

However, the phone call got us to thinking. While remaining anonymous is admirable in philanthropic endeavors – such as donating to a worthy cause – anonymity in the newspaper business is usually not a good thing.

We ask all letter writers to identify themselves and include their street address. Even though it can require courage to put pen to paper, we feel letters have far more impact and validity when a name and address are attached to them.

When we get a news tip, we take it far more seriously if the person tells us their name. That does not necessarily mean he or she would be identified as a source in a story, but putting a name to an issue helps us to follow up and do the necessary legwork to bring the matter to the forefront.

We rarely use "unnamed sources" in story – but should we do so, those sources are not anonymous. We know who they are but are willing to protect their privacy for reasons that both the source and the newspaper have discussed and agreed upon.

The most famous anonymous source in newspaper history is undoubtedly "Deep Throat," who provided the clues that led to the Watergate scandal and brought down the Nixon presidency in the 1970s. Washington Post writers Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, who broke the story, helped their newspaper win the Pulitzer Prize.

Suffice it to say, all good reporters will follow up on big stories regardless of whether the tip is anonymous or not.

But we urge you to leave your name and phone number when making the call to us – whether it is a tip on a story, information about potential wrongdoing, or criticism about something we have done.

When it comes to stories, anonymous tips often mean the tipster has an ax to grind and hopes we will be jump at the bait.

In the "community" newspaper business – investigative reporters are the same people who write the warm, fuzzy features and cover Town Hall.

So if you have something to say, tell us who you are and how we can get back to you. The results will be more satisfying for both of us and could lead to shedding important light on a particular situation or issue of concern.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Harboring more thoughts

TO THE EDITOR:

I want to thank everyone for all the positive comments I received on my previous posting.

Maybe I was not too clear in stating those comments were not directed personally at the present harbormaster, but rather at the system which is escalating the position unnecessarily.

It is true I have not worked for the town, except occasionally, for 40 years. During that time, I have been either on or around the harbor just about every single day and you don't have to be a member of the Harbor Department to observe what is going on. Fishermen, by nature, are very aware of their environment, and in addition are like old ladies in a sewing circle, talking about every little thing. I can assure you there is very little happening on Cohasset Harbor that we don't know about. One thing that has not changed is the size of the harbor. It is still a tiny mud-hole with limited access at low tide. As a matter of fact, if you deduct the area sold to the CYC, the part of Bailey's Creek claimed by Scituate, the Parker Avenue marina, the sailing club floats and the Old Salt House marina, there may be less mooring space than there was available in 1960.

I am happy the harbormaster was able to assist the disabled CSC boat. I'm sure she used the work skiff, as it is the most practical. The proposed boat would be too big to bother with for something such as this. This boat would also be useless for patrol duty because everyone knows the worse thing you can do to a large engine is have it idling for hours at a time. There is not enough room in the harbor to run it fast. The truth of the matter is if there were no harbor patrol, someone going by would have towed you home. This has been happening for 200 years.

Mr. Porter brought up the matter of security at the harbor. It's funny that I was in a similar situation a few years ago. Some people vandalized six or eight fishing boats moored in front of the Atlantica parking area. It cost each boat a few hundred dollars apiece. This is a well-lit area, close to shore, and no one saw anything. I got the same song and dance he did. I think I would rather have no patrols and take my chances, using the money saved to cover the occasional incident. I really don't need a shoulder to cry on.

I resent being forced to pay either through increased taxation or harbor fees, for services I never requested, never have used or will ever use. Of course we all have a few problems and need help sometimes, but there are plenty of boats already out there.

Thanks, Sarah Murphy

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to publicly thank Sarah Murphy for generating the strong grass roots effort that helped to secure increased educational funds (Chapter 70 monies of $200,000) from our state government. Since February, Sarah has been reminding private citizens of their opportunity and duty to communicate their dissatisfaction with decreased state funding alongside increased standards for our schools.

She spent many hours researching other town-wide efforts across Massachusetts and built an e-mail campaign to bring our town's voices together to demand more financial support from our State legislature. After our state budget had been finalized, I received a letter from Senator Hedlund congratulating Cohasset on this effort.

I would like to congratulate Sarah Murphy and all who participated on a job well done in support of our entire community. Thank you.

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Thanksgiving is coming up, which means it's time to count the damned blessings again, even if you're not particularly in the mood because you just discovered your car needs a new head gasket and your Christmas cold came a month early this year. So let's get right to it, shall we?

Of course I'm thankful for my kids, yada-yada-yada, but I read a story yesterday about a 9-year-old boy in Texas who unstrapped himself from the back seat, climbed onto his unconscious mother's lap and steered their KIA Sportage safely onto the shoulder of a highway. He then dialed 911 and kept his younger siblings calm while waiting for help to arrive. I thought for a minute about what any of my kids might be capable of if faced with a similar situation, and I have never felt so cold and alone. Is it fair that some parents are given children who right out of the box can drive an SUV and save lives, while the rest of us are stuck with ones who go into a screaming panic at the sight of an empty toilet paper roll?

Now my car, on the other hand, has been a faithful companion and valuable member of my family for almost 20 years, and I was thankful for it until I was driving home from BJ's the other day and noticed the temperature gauge registering about 8,000 degrees Kelvin. The crankcase had sucked all the coolant through a hole in the head gasket and nearly fried the engine.

After refilling the radiator I managed to limp home, but I haven't dared look under the hood since. I was able to stock our basement storeroom with a $100 worth of much-needed paper towels and toilet paper though, so I was thankful for that.

And I was thankful for our house, which is not so much ours as it is Washington Mutual's, but at least we got to pick the window treatments. Unfortunately, the storage room sump pump failed about an hour after I had left all my BJ's purchases on the floor. So I was less thankful then. For the record, if your flood emergency plans involve 40 double-rolls of Bounty, think again.

On a brighter note, I'm thankful for my fairytale marriage, and for my wife, who sometimes sits beside me while I write these columns, making suggestions here and there. She's a lovely person, with a real instinct for grammar.

OK, she's finally gone to get some coffee. It'll be 10 below outside and she'll still order an iced coffee. Does this make any sense to you?

I'm thankful my political party finally has a chance to clean up the biggest mess since Vietnam circa 1969, which is when the Republicans won the opportunity to clean up a similar mess made by the Democrats. Should be a similarly rewarding experience.

I'm thankful for these black bean chips we get at Whole Foods. Those are really good.

I'm also very thankful for my hair, which is the only thing my grandsons are likely to inherit from me.

A few weeks ago I would have said I was thankful for the gorgeous, colorful fall leaves. Now, not so much.

However, I am very thankful for my health, and diligently maintain it, since it's the one thing I have on my 70-year-old parents. Hey mom, watch me fall on my hip while digesting milk! Woo hoo!

But most of all I'm thankful for global warming, which will allow me to put off painting the back of my house an extra two weeks this year, and may make Massachusetts a tropical zone by the time I retire. I figure anything that helps me avoid setting foot in Florida must be part of God's grand plan.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset. He promises to be less crabby and more thankful next week, when he looks forward to eating home-baked turkey and apple pie a la mode. Unfortunately, his wife is buying a ham and some cranberry sherbet.

Work progresses on town parking lot

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Town Parking Lot Work

As we speak, CBB is working in the Town Parking Lot preparing it for its final paving. Most of the work is taking place from Adamo's to the Teen center. Old paving around the edges is being removed and a suitable sub-material is being added and rolled so that it will support paving. At the Teen Center the old roadway is being partially removed so that the paving can be renewed. Behind the Citgo station, curbing will be set with a small area that will be landscaped. This curbed area will offer protection to cars that will be parallel parking behind the gas station.

Paving is currently scheduled to start this coming Monday, November 20th, pending acceptable weather. A rain date for paving will be the following Monday, November 27th.

Unfortunately, the lot will not be completely finished this fall. Additional parking spaces need to be added adjacent to the Teen Center. Some ledge needs to be removed for this to happen. CBB plans to do this next spring. In addition, our dispute with the MBTA regarding the number of parking spaces they have agreed to provide is still an open issue. So, the final lot configuration is still not known.

The town parking lot gets its final paving.

More On Safety

We have spoken about safety numerous times in these pages. Yet, residents tell us and we have witnessed first hand serious breaches of safety along the railroad right of way. Children routinely still cross the tracks even though the MBTA and CB are operating heavy equipment on the rails. Parents, please, please, please address this with your children. This is absolutely not a safe place. Especially since the fences are not all in place yet. But, as we have said before fences will not make a safe railroad. The modern conveniences that permeate kids lives such as cell phones and ipods make it even harder for them to be aware of their surroundings when equipment travels on the rails.

We are also working with the MBTA Safety and Training Departments to develop training programs for the entire Town. One of the first elements for creating safety awareness is the up-coming Operation Life Saver (OLS) program that will be presented jointly by the Cohasset Police Department and the MBTA at the Deerhill School in December.

OLS personnel have been talking with us about the possibility of other programs geared to other segments of our Community. Several months ago a presentation was made courtesy of the Senior Center. Discussions are also underway about the possibility of a program about safety on our cable access channel. We'll let you know more about this as plans mature.

HEALTH NOTES

FLU facts

If you missed last Tuesday's Flu Clinic, cheer up, there's one next Monday, November 20 between 1 PM and 3 PM. If you attended last Tuesday's flu clinic, you'll know there was an adequate supply of vaccine available. In addition to the nurses and other volunteers providing services for the clinic, Captain Bob Silvia has sent two medical technicians from the Fire Department to take blood pressure and other vital signs if desired by those attending the flu clinic. This service will also be available on Monday at the second clinic.

Cohasset has received a hundred percent of it's allotted supply and some 300 doses were administered last Tuesday. The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) has received an additional 318,000 doses of influenza vaccine, the bulk of MDPH's remaining order. To date, MDPH has received 624,260 doses of vaccine or 92% of the total allotted. According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), close to 1.1 million doses of influenza vaccine had been distributed in Massachusetts as of October 27. This includes both privately purchased and state purchased vaccine. Inclusive of the latest shipment just received by MDPH, at least 1.4 million doses of influenza vaccine have now arrived in Massachusetts as of November 8.

If you know seniors or high risk friends who didn't get the vaccination, tell them about the clinic next week, and remind them to bring their Medicare Part B or Senior Health Insurance card. Also, ask them to remember to wear a short sleeved shirt.

Influenza vaccine available for purchase

Supplies of inactivated influenza vaccine remain available for purchase from pharmacies like Brooks, Walgreen's and CVS. A list of influenza vaccine distributors is maintained by the Health Industry Distributors Association (HIDA) and is available at http://www.hida.org/document.asp .

Flu Mist is a good alternative for health care workers and other contacts of people at risk for complications from influenza, including families and caregivers of infants younger than 6 months of age who are too young to be vaccinated themselves. FluMist is also appropriate for non-pregnant healthy people who are seeking preservative-free influenza vaccine. To purchase FluMist, call MedImmune at 877-FluMist (877-358-6478).

Influenza disease activity

From October 22 through October 28, 2006, a low level of influenza activity was reported in the U.S. The proportion of patient visits to sentinel providers for influenza-like illness (ILI) and the proportion of deaths attributed to pneumonia and influenza were below baseline levels. Two states reported local influenza activity; 10 states reported sporadic activity; and 36 states reported no activity (two states did not report). For the 2006-2007 influenza season through October 28, WHO and NREVSS laboratories have tested 5,715 specimens for influenza, 49 of which were positive (70% type A, 30% type B).

As of October 28, one culture specimen has tested positive at the State Laboratory Institute for influenza type B and MDPH has received reports of 10 positive rapid influenza tests. Influenza-like illness (ILI) reported by sentinel surveillance sites in Massachusetts remains below baseline and no clusters of ILI have been reported thus far this season. For more information on influenza surveillance, visit the MDPH Flu Website at www.mass.gov/dph/flu and click on Seasonal Influenza, Information for Providers, Influenza Surveillance.

Other things you can do to avoid catching flu

Perhaps the simplest and most effective way is to wash your hands often— with soap and warm water. Rub your hands vigorously together and scrub all surfaces. Wash for at least 20 seconds. It is the soap combined with the scrubbing action that helps dislodge and remove germs. Use regular soap. Antibacterial soap is not necessary. These soaps may contribute to the growing problem of antibiotic resistance. When you're out and about, a good alternative to soap and water is alcohol-based disposable hand wipes or gel sanitizers. You can find them in most supermarkets and drugstores. If using a gel, rub the gel in your hands until they are dry. The gel doesn't need water to work; the alcohol in the gel kills germs that cause colds and the flu. However, alcohol-based disposable hand wipes or gel sanitizers do not remove dirt.

If you feel ill, stay home from work and keep sick kids home from school or daycare. And keep in mind; most people with flu will recover just fine.

TogetherCohasset meets in fourth forum

TOGETHERCOHASSET

DICK AVERY

After a summer hiatus, the nascent group of Cohasset citizens who were interested in imagining what's possible (after the spring override failure) convened for another forum of TogetherCohasset. On Nov. 8 in the Cohasset High School Cafeteria, 20 members of the community reviewed the work that has been done so far to bring together polar opposite groups in town to find common ground for action. Small, involved groups appear to be alive and actively working toward positive outcomes for the whole town.

As the meeting progressed with a balance of voters from both override camps plus Town Manager Bill Griffin, it was stressed that participants did not have to subordinate their ideals to accommodate other points of view. Instead, focus was on those areas of improvement that overlapped for multiple constituencies.

A statement of purpose was presented and received favorable comments prior to adoption. Likewise, the forum approved the distillation from a score of ideas a set of four main topics to explore in coming months that would be of interest to elected town boards. Subgroups interested in each of these four topics will report back by late January on their initial scope with a plan for further exploring concepts. Topics being actively researched include:

- Understanding pros and cons for regionalization e.g., sharing resources and opportunities such as purchasing consortiums, use of technology, school elements, town services, etc.
- Learning best practices from other school districts in order to place our students in the top 10 or similar rankings.
- Looking into additional funding sources for schools beyond the efforts of the revitalized Cohasset Education Foundation to create an endowment fund.
- Propose additional communication initiatives to educate the residents on town budgeting processes, board decisions, issue resolution, and current financial status.

The operative mission statement drafted for the Forum is as follows: TogetherCohasset is intended to bring various segments of the Cohasset community together to solve common problems in the community, to act in effect as a broad-based research and development partner for the various agencies of town government. It will draw from the various experiences and expertise of the citizenry to assist town government in solving problems and improving efficiency and effectiveness of town services in an economically reasonable and sound manner. The goal is to see that Cohasset can continue to provide affordable, quality services and excellence in education.

Questions and comments on this endeavor or interest in participation can be forwarded to Dick Avery at dandsavery@comcast.net. Prior TogetherCohasset forum reports are available online at www.togethercohasset.com.

Dick Avery is a member of the TogetherCohasset Agenda Planning Subgroup and lives at 22 Surry Drive.

Patrick stays positive, wins corner office

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

CRAIG SANDLER

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

Well, it turned out that voters did in fact want two-party rule — 450 miles south of the State House.

Kerry Healey was left with almost exactly the opposite of what she argued for, Deval Patrick was left with a vindication of positive campaigning, along with the keys to the Corner Office, and the Massachusetts Republican party was left with a question: "Is Mitt Romney the worst thing that ever happened to us?"

The answer lies somewhere between "looks that way" and "yes." Romney swept in from Utah, swept aside the core of the Welducci political operation and replaced it with vestiges of Joe Malone's infrastructure; moved sharply to the right and away from his constituents on social issues; failed to elect any new Republican legislators; mostly steered clear of the hustings and the pro-choice Healey during the general election while 31,000 voters ended their enrollment as Republicans; and now will be free to pursue the presidency full time while the Senate Republican caucus is left to ponder whether ordering a large means they'll have too much pizza.

Meanwhile, the Democrats are in full agreement with Healey for the first time since — well, for the first time. Two-party rule does, in fact, have its virtues. Just ask Ed Markey. Kept from the purse strings and the power for 12 years, the all-Democratic Massachusetts congressional delegation now will flex its seniority in Washington in a way that might make it easier for Gov.-elect Patrick to answer the top question of 2007: "Together we can what?"

In some measure, the race had turned into an experiment over whether a Democrat could finally succeed by staying on the high road. When Patrick's numbers were slipping during the "LaGuer scare" of a few weeks ago, his party was frightened to death he was repeating the self-destructive Mike Dukakis/John Kerry scenario of not turning just as nasty as the other guys.

The defining moment of Patrick's course through that crisis occurred Oct. 16 when Bill Clinton came to Boston, and Patrick told a packed ballroom, "I will not break faith with you" by abandoning his inclusive and high-toned approach. A Zogby poll a few days later showed his slide was over, and Patrick's numbers kept improving from there; Healey's negative ads boosted her unfavorable rating more than Patrick's. Her campaign kept finding ways to make her less popular.

She was also swept aside by a force just as powerful as Patrick's charisma: a remarkable surge in public sentiment away from Republican leadership everywhere. For example: when Healey warned about one-party rule coming to Massachusetts, she probably never anticipated it was about to come to New Hampshire, too. Or Colorado. Both are now blue states entirely. In state legislatures nationwide, 275 seats switched from R to D, and nine chambers, including the first southern shifts to the Democrats since 1982.

The trend was reflected faintly in Massachusetts, faint only because the state is running out of Republican legislators. Rep. Susan Pope lost, and the Senate seat vacated by departing minority leader Brian Lees was won by Gail Candaras of Springfield, a Democrat. Democrats picked up two seats in the House and one in the Senate.

By Tuesday evening (Nov. 7) , everyone was clear what was going to happen. How brief was the suspense? Put it this way: having dispensed with the governor's race, Channel 5 was back to its main priority — "Dancing With the Stars" — by 8:02 pm. And the Democrats were dancing in the streets, or at least at the Hynes.

• Convention recesses with gay marriage still in limbo — Cheers and horns resounded off the State House marble Nov. 9 and went on long after the Constitutional Convention voted to recess without advancing the initiative petition for a constitutional amendment banning gay marriage. The convention recessed until Jan. 2, and the vote signals the near-certainty that the question will not be allowed to appear on the ballot. The action was in conflict with public opinion as expressed in polls by the News Service and Channel 4 — most respondents say the Legislature should not be blocking progress on a measure for which 170,000 people signed petitions. Interestingly, though, on the question of a gay marriage ban itself, 63 percent of the residents in the State House News poll said they would vote against the ban if it appeared on the ballot.

• Patrick drawn immediately into hot topics — The governor-elect had a cordial meeting and a smiling photo op with Gov. Romney Nov. 8, and immediately was faced with questions about the other big stories of the week — gay marriage and the MBTA fare increase. He expressed a willingness to re-examine the hike, and in a press release said an increase was the "wrong answer" for fiscal woes on the T. He was more circumspect about gay marriage, saying he has no authority yet and will wait to assume office before wielding influence.

•T board votes to increase fares — Subway fares will increase to $1.70 and bus rides to $1.25 under a new fare schedule approved by the MBTA Board of Directors Thursday. Members of the T Riders Union lambasted the move. Some increases were trimmed in the final vote: surcharges for using cash instead of Charlie Tickets will be 30 cents instead of 55 for subways, and 25 cents instead of 40 cents for buses; the increase for some monthly passes will $3 less than originally proposed.

ADJOURN CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION UNTIL JANUARY 2, 2007

Constitutional Convention (09/87) approved a motion to recess the convention until 2 p.m. on January 2, 2007 - the final day of the 2006 legislative session. The recess would postpone until that date any possible action on the proposed constitutional amendment to "define marriage only as the union of one man and one woman." The amendment does not include language nullifying any same-sex marriages that have already taken place. The measure needs the votes of 50 out of 200 legislators in both the 2006 and 2007-2008 legislative sessions in order to appear on the November 2008 ballot. It is sponsored through the initiative petition process by an anti-same sex marriage group that gathered the necessary 65,825 signatures to bring the matter before the convention. Most supporters of adjournment generally oppose the ban and are supporters of continuing to allow same-sex marriages. They argued that same-sex marriages have worked well and that it is unfair to write any form of discrimination into the constitution. Some opponents of adjournment support the ban and oppose same-sex marriages. They said that it is anti-democratic that the Legislature is forced to debate voting on the proposal and are fearful that proponents of same-sex marriage will filibuster on January 2 until midnight when the proposal dies. Other adjournment opponents actually oppose the ban and support same-sex marriages. They said that they voted against adjournment because despite their personal opposition to the ban, they feel that voters should have the right to vote on it. (A "Yes" vote is for adjournment. A "No" vote is against adjournment). The exact language of the proposal reads: "When recognizing marriages entered into after the adoption of this amendment by the people, the Commonwealth and its political subdivisions shall define marriage only as the union of one man and one woman."

BAN EXISTING AND FUTURE SAME-SEX MARRIAGES (H.65)

Constitutional Convention (11/06) rejected a proposed constitutional amendment providing that "only the union of one man and one woman shall be valid or recognized as a marriage in Massachusetts." Supporters and opponents of same-sex marriage all opposed this proposal. They said that it is unconstitutional because it would essentially dissolve the 9,000 same-sex marriages that have already taken place. (A No" vote is against the amendment). The exact language of the proposal reads: "To safeguard the public policy of this Commonwealth to protect the unique relationship of marriage, in order to promote, among other goals, the stability and welfare of society and the best interests of children, only the union of one man and one woman shall be valid or recognized as a marriage in Massachusetts. Any other relationship shall not be recognized as a marriage or its legal equivalent, nor shall it receive the benefits or incidents exclusive to marriage from the Commonwealth, its agencies, departments, authorities, commissions, offices, officials and political subdivisions."

EXPAND ABSENTEE VOTING (S.9)

Constitutional Convention (9/06) approved a proposed constitutional amendment allowing the Legislature to approve laws permitting any qualified voter of the state to vote by absentee ballot for any reason. Currently, the constitution allows voters to vote by absentee ballot only if they are absent from their city or town at the time of the election, have a physical disability that prevents them from voting at their polling place or hold religious beliefs that conflict with voting on Election Day. Supporters of the amendment said that "unconditional absentee voting" would increase the number of votes cast and involve more voters in the process. Opponents of the amendment said that it goes too far and argued that absentee ballots should only be available to voters who qualify under current law. The proposal now needs the approval of the 2007-2008 Legislature prior to going on the ballot for voter consideration in 2008. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment allowing expanded absentee voting. A "No" vote is against the amendment allowing expanded absentee voting).

ELECTION OF JUDGES (S.15)

Constitutional Convention (1/89) rejected a proposed constitutional amendment providing for certification of judges by the voters. Judges would be initially be appointed by the governor but would only be reappointed if approved by the voters every six years following the initial appointment. The measure also requires that the state publish each judge's sentencing and bail setting record on certain offenses for the previous six years in county newspapers, public access television channels and courthouses at least three weeks prior to the election. Supporters of the amendment said that it would make judges more accountable to the people and perhaps require judges to defend their sometimes controversial decisions to the voters. They noted that it would also publicize each judge's record and allow the voters to examine it. Opponents of the amendment said that requiring judges to be elected, run a campaign and raise monies would destroy their independence and result in a lawyer attending fundraisers of the judges who will be hearing his or her case. They noted that the state has a commission that monitors judicial abuses and that the Legislature has the power to remove judges. (A "yes" vote is for the amendment requiring the election of judges. A "No" vote is against the amendment requiring the election of judges).

Girl Scouts read to Osgood students

The fourth graders in Girl Scout Troop #4775 paid a visit to the Osgood School's Integrated Preschool last week. Troop members include: Elizabeth Baker, Clara Baumgarten, Alexa Bleicken, Caty Gilman, Carly Gundersen Madison Hagearty Cassandra Lieberman, Carly Norton, Lilly McCarthy, Dagmar Seppala, Emma Steele, and Valerie Farren, who was not able to attend.

The 11 girls in the troop introduced themselves to the children and read "The Very Hungry Caterpillar" out loud to 13 students during their circle time. After, they broke into small groups and read their favorite childhood books to the students.

After, they broke into small groups and read their favorite childhood books to the students.

The children who attend the preschool are both typically developing students and special needs students with various disabilities. Troop leaders Leesa Bleicken and Kristin Norton prepared the Scouts by talking to them about disabilities and explained some children might not communicate with words just yet, and may instead use pictures or sign language.

"The Girl Scouts did a beautiful job! I was impressed with their maturity and ease with the students. The classroom teacher was surprised with how well all the children did. They even invited us back to visit again and perhaps run a craft for the students," said Bleicken. "It was so special, and you never know what Girl Scout event will touch the girls and make them shine."

Visiting the preschool will enable the girls in Troop #4775 to earn their community project badge.

ment, there is grass and a walkway made of bluestone pavers as well as new sidewalks.

Under bright blue skies and unusually warm weather for Veterans Day in New England, chairman of the Veterans Memorial committee Glen Pratt asked the crowd to salute Spc. Grant Emde, USMC; Cpl. Brenden Anti, USMC; Cpl. Jamie Litchfield, USMC; and Pratt's son, Lt. Christopher Pratt, US Army, who were all deployed in Iraq a short time ago.

The Rev. John Mulvehille of St. Anthony's Church said it was a fitting, silent tribute of the gratitude the town owes to those who have served the country. The playing of the National Anthem by the Cosmo Legion of Brockton followed his comments.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, also on hand for the ceremony, noted, "This is wonderful," adding he had been to three of the eight towns he represents prior to coming to Cohasset, and "this is by far the best turnout."

Hedlund read a proclamation, which commemorated the day and honored the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee for its work on the memorial. "Congratulations to everyone who made this possible and my thanks to all Cohasset veterans who have served for us."

State Rep. Garrett Bradley began his comments by paying tribute to Cohasset resident, 12-term state representative and Marine Mary Jeanette Murray, who passed away Oct. 23. "They just don't make them like that anymore," he said, adding she was a great mentor to him.

Bradley said the most selfless act a person can perform is to serve their country. "I'm always in awe of those who put on the uniform," he said. Bradley then read a proclamation from the House of Representatives honoring Glenn Pratt for the completion of the monument. "Congratulations to you, Glenn, and the entire Committee."

On behalf of the Board of Selectmen, Chairman Ralph Dormitzer also read a proclamation formally recognizing the monument. He asked residents to take the time not only to contemplate the bravery of those individuals who serve our country, but to also take the time to come visit Veterans Park and the monument.

Lt. Christopher Pratt said he is honored to be able to stand before the residents of Cohasset and help honor the hard work and sacrifice of all of America's military veterans. "Right now, this country has hundreds of veterans in harm's way who are fighting to protect our way of life," he said.

Pratt said having been part of the War on Terror in Iraq, "I've seen first hand...your military is doing an incredible job."

There were other speakers who took the crowd back to the days of the Gulf War, Vietnam War and Korean War. A wreath was placed at the entrance to the new monument in memory and in honor of all the Cohasset residents who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, and their families.

The firing squad shot three shots into the air for the departed soldiers while the trumpet played "Taps." While Lilly Sestito sang "America the Beautiful," a flock of white doves was released, many of which kept circling the monument, high above the flags.

Residents interested in contributing financially to the Veterans Memorial Committee may send checks made payable to the Veterans Memorial Committee to 482 King Street, Cohasset, attention Glenn Pratt. For more information on the town's veterans, please visit the committee's Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

'Cohasset Entertains' cookbook available

For the holiday season, Community Garden Club of Cohasset has re-printed a limited number of the original "Cohasset Entertains" cookbook. This book is a collection of tried and true recipes from local cooks, and also contains sample menus and arrangement ideas for the holiday table.

A few of the holiday recipes included are crab delight, Christmas mapley appetizers, onions Celeste, winter squash casserole, pumpkin chiffon pie and praline ice cream pie with rum sauce. There is also an entire chapter on gifts club members bake including cookies, candies and coffeecakes.

Each cookbook costs $15 and is available at Flemings in Cohasset. All purchases help fund club programs, services and a scholarship fund.

CGCC is a member of the National Garden Clubs Inc. and Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts Inc.

Sustainable Cohasset to meet on Nov. 28

The third meeting of the newly formed Sustainable Cohasset will be held at the Second Congregational Church on Tuesday, Nov. 28 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. All are welcome. Sustainable Cohasset is the local chapter of Sustainable South Shore. Many residents were introduced to this non -partisan coalition at the forums held after the showing of Al Gore's "An Inconvenient Truth" this summer at the Loring Theater.

At the first meeting about 20 concerned residents and members of several town boards including the Alternative Energy Committee and the Conservation Commission were in attendance. Inventories of town environmental concerns, organizations and active committees were generated and small group breakouts had lively discussions about topics ranging from clotheslines in private planned communities to public windmills generating power for municipalities.

At the second meeting, support for the upcoming town wind turbine forums, the Carbon Fund, an international renewable energy foundation, and "Zero Emissions" environmental models were discussed. Participation in the Nov. 19 MCAN, conference at MIT's Stata Conference Center was a goal for those in attendance. Plans for future educational forums with expert speakers and a film series about global warming are being planned. Keeping in mind that climate stabilization should be everyone's goal, all are encouraged and welcome to attend on the 28th.

CHS field hockey hopes to build on an exceptional season

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

So what do you think of a sports team that jumps in only one year from an 8-7-1 record to 12-4-2?

That's what the Cohasset field hockey team accomplished in 2006 compared to last year's finish.

What caused this turnaround?

"Complete selflessness this year," said head coach Deb Bostwick. "Everyone played for each other. People were happy for others' successes. These attitudes established an outstanding team chemistry."

"People were happy for others' successes. These attitudes established an outstanding team chemistry."
Skippers coach Deb Bostwick

Even more interesting, as the 2006 season unfolded, the results migrated from boredom to absolute excitement. By the close of September the team compiled a so-so 4-3-2 record.

Then the October fireworks started. The Skippers would pile on eight wins in their next nine games. What makes the victories even more sweet?

"The league proved more competitive in 2006 than in previous years," observed Bostwick. "This year, more than one team dominated the league".

Signs of future promise surfaced from the very first game against a difficult East Bridgewater team. Cohasset managed to tie the Vikings, on Viking turf no less. Bostwick thought to herself, 'Wow! This team exhibited both the talent and capability to go far. I need to maintain this situation.'

The next few weeks in September proved challenging. On offensive corners forwards struggled to capitalize on scoring opportunities.

Then, Oct. 5 marked both a turning point and a historic event. After 17 years of losing to Harwich, Cohasset eked out a 2-2 tie on Alumni Field.

But, to put it mildly, the tie proved controversial. League officials would later reverse the game referees' call that Harwich had won this game.

At this point, the floodgates of Cohasset's victories opened up.

"The girls realized their capabilities," said Bostwick. "This Harwich outcome boosted our confidence and gave us tremendous momentum for the rest of the season."

Indeed, with the exception of a Carver slip-up and the tournament loss, the Skippers remained undefeated for the rest of the year.

"I think a main factor in our sudden improvements came from a new level of trust," explained senior captain Alida Tangherlini. "We always knew where each other were on the field, and we played with more confidence."

So how did they develop so quickly in a variety of areas? Assistant coach Abby Coakley worked closely with goalie Alyssa Mullin to improve her footwork. Mullin ended the sea-

Another agonizing defeat

Mistakes cost CHS gridders in loss to rival Norwell

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

When the Norwell High football team took possession of the ball with 6:23 left in the second quarter last Friday night, it had amassed to that point four yards of total offense.

Incredibly, the Clippers also had 16 points.

A blocked extra point run back for a two-point conversion, an interception returned for a touchdown, and a 19-yard touchdown pass from Ryan Kane to Doug Farinick were enough for Norwell to pull out a 16-15 victory over the Skippers.

Cohasset also had two touchdowns called back on penalties, and in the third quarter muffed a punt that would have given them possession in Norwell territory. After the game, a clearly frustrated Pete Afanasiw was left to wonder what could have been.

"I think we outplayed them," said the Skippers' head coach. "We gave them nine points in the first half, and we had two touchdowns called back because of stupid penalties. Having penalties that call back touchdowns is not a way to win games."

Nonetheless, the Skippers had chances down the stretch. With his team down 16-9 with less than five minutes left in the game, Cohasset junior Mark Flibotte picked off a Kane pass and returned it 22 yards to the Clippers' 21. Norwell senior Bill Dooley made a touchdown-saving tackle on the play.

On the ensuing snap, however, Skippers senior Anthony DiPaolo (18 carries, 191 yards) ran 21 yards for the touchdown, hurdling over a Norwell defender at the 10 to go the rest of the way and bring his team within one.

Cohasset senior Anthony DiPaolo, shown above in action against East Bridgewater, ran for 191 yards in last Friday's 16-15 loss to Norwell.

The extra point was missed, however, and it was still 16-15 for Norwell.

Cohasset's defense forced a three-and-out, and the Skippers took over at its own 44 with 2:25 left for one final shot. Five straight DiPaolo runs brought Cohasset to Norwell's 25, but when junior quarterback David Snowdale was stuffed for no gain on a scramble to his left, it was fourth-and-five at the 25.

The Super Bowl champion Scituate-Cohasset eighth grade football team poses with its trophy after Sunday's win over Marshfield.

8th graders are Super Bowl champs

As seventh graders, the Scituate-Cohasset youth football team lost to just one team all year: Marshfield.

In fact, the team lost to Marshfield three times, including the Super Bowl.

So, when the two squads faced off again in this year's eighth grade Super Bowl, the boys in blue had a little revenge on their minds. Sure, they had defeated Marshfield 6-0 in the regular season, but getting a win against their rivals in the Super Bowl would really do the trick.

Consider it mission accomplished, as the Sci-Coh Sharks posted their fourth shutout of the season with a 14-0 win over Marshfield in the Super Bowl. The win completed an undefeated season for the Sharks at 10-0.

The Sharks' defense has been superlative all season, as Bridgewater was the only team all season to score more than one touchdown against them all season. That play continued in Sunday's big win, as four different players – Deshawn Williams, Westley Hawkins, Jake Kissick and Robert Jones – all intercepted Marshfield passes to preserve the win.

The Sharks, who are coached by Cole Hawkins, also got touchdowns from Westley Hawkins and Tony Antonino. Antonino's touchdown came on a nice pass from Sci-Coh quarterback Tyler Park.

CHS winter sports preseason mandatory sign-up meeting

Monday, Nov. 20, 6:45 p.m., Gymnasium

On Monday, Nov. 20 there will be a mandatory sign-up meeting for all high school (grades 9-12) student-athletes interested in participating in a winter sport at Cohasset High School.

The meeting will begin at 6:45 pm. School officials ask that all student-athletes be accompanied by at least one parent or guardian to the meeting. Principal Joel Antolini and Athletic Director Ron Ford will be on hand to review the Cohasset High School Athletic Department and Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association policies and answer any questions you may have.

There will also be a ceremony to dedicate the jersey of late Cohasset High School student-athlete Kurt Gritzan. Kurt's family will be presenting his ice hockey jersey for permanent display in the lower gym lobby.

Student-athletes and parents will then meet with the CHS coaching staff to distribute schedules, discuss team rules and expectations, and answer any questions you may have. The athletic trainer will also be on hand to discuss any injuries and address any concerns you may have.

User Fee

The new user fee structure for the 2006-07 school year will be $250 for the first and second sport and $150 for the third sport. There will be a family cap of $900 for the 2006-07 school year. Each student-athlete will receive one adult complementary pass to all on-campus home games for each season they participate in.

We also ask you to bring the user fee payment to this meeting.

Physical Exams

All student-athletes need an up-to-date physical exam performed by a physician within the past 13 months prior to the start of the season in order to participate in a high school sport. No student-athlete will be allowed to participate in practices or games without a current physical exam on file at the Cohasset High School nurse's office.

Dr. Steven Golden, the school physician, will provide free physical exams for student athletes on the following date (this will be the only date offered in the winter): Friday, Nov. 17, 2 p.m., Cohasset High School nurse's office

Practices for all high school winter season sports will begin on Monday, Nov.r 27 unless your coach announces otherwise at the meeting.

Sports Offered

The following sports are offered during the Winter season: boys and girls basketball, cheerleading, gymnastics (co-op program with Norwell), ice hockey, wrestling (co-op with Hull), skiing (funded by the Cohasset Ski Club), and swimming (co-op with Scituate, funded by the Cohasset Swim Club).

CHS Athletic Department Website

Be sure to check it out at www.cohassetk12.org . From the home page you click onto the www.highschoolsports.net link for up-to-the minute schedule changes.

To view 2006-07 winter schedules click onto "Select a Team" and choose the team's schedule you wish to view. Once you have chosen a team go below and select the "2006-07" school year. You then click onto "View Schedule" and the winter schedule should come up.

All winter schedules are subject to change and may not be complete until Nov. 20.

Skippers running back Brian Hill tries to avoid the tackle of Scituate's Nick Mullin (50) during the teams' September meeting. Hill and his Cohasset teammates hope to end their season with a win on Thanksgiving Day at home against Hull. Kickoff is scheduled for 10 a.m.

Snowdale appeared to have senior receiver Nick Zappolo open for a first down, but a good play by Norwell junior Cam Evans to close out on the pass forced an incompletion and sealed the deal for the Clippers (6-4 overall, 3-3 South Shore League).

The Clippers' defense made just enough plays to pull out the win. The Skippers (3-4-2 overall, 1-3-1 league) struck first when junior PJ McCaw scored on an 11-yard run just over three minutes into the game. Clippers junior Kevin Helm blocked the extra point, however, and junior Tom Finkenstaedt ran it back the length of the field to make it a 6-2 game.

On Cohasset's ensuing possession, Norwell senior Chris Dawson anticipated a screen pass to Cohasset senior Justin Alexander, cut in to pick it off and went 58 yards for the score.

After a bad snap on a Cohasset punt was compounded by a dubious intentional grounding call, the Clippers took over on their next possession at Cohasset's 12. After two running plays led to a combined loss of seven yards, Kane found Farinick wide open along the left sideline, and the senior running back beat Flibotte to the pylon to go in for the score.

It was Norwell's only play the entire night that went more than seven yards, but it was enough thanks to a defense that did what it had to do.

"We didn't have a strong offensive game, but it's a full game, and defensively we played awesome," said Clippers head coach Jim Sullivan. "[Finkenstaedt] running back the blocked extra point was an awesome play. It's one of those things where mistakes were made on both sides and we were able to capitalize on more of those."

The Farinick touchdown made it 16-6, but an impressive 37-yard field goal by Cohasset junior Pat Doonan brought the Skippers back within a score.

Unfortunately, Cohasset couldn't come all the way back.

"I feel horrible for the seniors. They played well enough to win," Afanasiw said. "This is their last time under the lights; I wanted so much for them to come away with a positive memory."

JV Gridders win over Norwell

As the sun began to set behind the tree line, the fog rolled in and set the stage for a well-played gridiron contest between the Cohasset JV Skippers and the Norwell Clippers.

Cohasset received the opening kickoff and ended their first drive of the game with a Dana Valentine touchdown run. Cohasset started with good field position from a Derek Schwantner kickoff return and Valentine brought his team into Norwell territory with two big runs.

Andrew DiPaolo got the Skippers to the 10-yard line, setting up the Valentine score. Quarterback Johnny Maher got on the board next for the boys in blue with a one yard sneak over center Dan Sullivan's right shoulder for the touchdown.

The Skippers' defense played solidly all game long, forcing Norwell to a three-and-out on its first possession. Alec Livingstone was the cornerstone of the linebacking crew, making the big plays throughout the game. The D-line, including Charlie Mushin, Will Lynner, Matt Wasel and Cam Washack, closed up the middle running game for Norwell, forcing them outside for much of the game. Ther,e the Clippers had to contend with not only Livingstone, but Brendan Doonan, Mike Froio, Valentine and DiPaolo.

Norwell's best field position came on a completed pass to the five-yard line of the Skippers as the clock wound down the first half. Any Norwell momentum was stopped by the stalwart Cohasset D. Valentine had an interception, Froio sacked the quarterback for a huge loss and he batted a pass attempt leading to a Cohasset recovery and another offensive series. Nick Savage, on special teams, dropped the Norwell punt returner deep in his own territory.

Coach Craig Davis commented, "I think it was the best we have played all year. We established the running game and the entire offensive line (Will Lynner, Thomas Barrett, Kevin O'Connell, Dan Sullivan) did a great job. This allowed Valentine, DiPaolo, Froio and Maher to move the ball on the ground. We had 18 players contribute defensively which allowed everyone to get some rest and gave us many different defensive looks.

"I'd like to thank varsity assistant coach Donny Silvia for coming to our game and lending his expertise and support."

The JV Gridders travel to Hull, today at 5 p.m.

Sports Notes

Football alumni event

The Friends of Cohasset Football are sponsoring a football alumni event on Wednesday, Nov. 22 from 7 to 11 p.m. at the American Legion at Cohasset Harbor.

There will be a meet-n-greet with the current CHS coaching staff, a silent auction, appetizers and sign-ups for the alumni newsletter. All proceeds will go to the Friends of Cohasset Football.

Alumni soccer games

The third annual Cohassset Alumni Women's Soccer Game is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 25 at 1 p.m. at Milliken Field.

All female alumnae and current soccer players at Cohasset High School are welcome to play. The game will be played between odd year graduates vs. even year graduates, and will consist of two 40-minute halves.

Anyone interested should contact Alyssa McNamara at pumkinpumper@gmail.com or (781)962-6049.

There is also a men's game being organized by Jeff Donze (jeff.donze@comcast.net). That game will also be on Nov. 25, 1 p.m. on Milliken Field.

Rec hoops signups

Recreation Basketball will be taking walk in signups on Saturday, Nov. 18 in the lobby of the high school gym. Evaluations and team selections will be as follows: 8-9 am, boys first and second grade, girls second and third grade; 9-10 am, boys third grade, girls first, fourth and fifth grade; 10-11 a.m. boys fourth and fifth grade, girls grades 6-8; 11-12 a.m., boys grades 6-8

Save the Date – Dec. 14

The Harlem Rockets are coming to Cohasset on Thursday, Dec. 14 at the CMHS gym at 6:30 p.m. for a night of comedy basketball entertainment. Come early to get a good seat. Look for more details coming soon.

FROM HOCKEY, PAGE 17

son with an impressive seven shutouts.

The defensive line tirelessly practiced their diagonal formation. This effort produced a gritty back line that even the best teams came to fear. In the midfield, the Skippers learned to maintain possession. They made use of space wisely on the field. This improvement, in turn, led directly to the success of the forwards.

Bostwick called the '06 Skippers "one of the best scoring teams I've ever coached."

From weak side coverage to controlling the midfield, the Skippers stepped up their game across the board and made it to the second round of the tournament.

Encompassing a team spirit in every sense of the word, Cohasset established itself as one of the dominant teams in the league. Oddly enough, the Skippers had the same record at home and on the road.

Hopefully, the graduation of many key players will not severely disable the Skippers in 2007. Defensively speaking, fans will miss Tangherlini, Michelle Madge and Molly Gallagher as they move on.

In the midfield, the departures of captains Laura Campedelli and Caitlin Hurley will certainly leave some holes. Cohasset will also experience the loss of both captain Sheelah Scott and Virginia Spofford up front.

Bostwick voiced optimism about her ability to fill in these gaps. With many returning starters and a pretty strong JV program, the Skippers of '07 hope to pick up where this year's team left off. No doubt about it, a tall order.

Hitching their wagons

Fourth grade student Allison Bodner does some last minute updates on her Texas Cattle Drive wagon.

Students Emily Livingstone, Jack Chamberlain and Christine Guinne head down the state wagon parade route Wednesday morning. Fourth grade students chose a state and designed a wagon around a given state and what it offered.

Deer Hill fourth grade student Emma Davis picked Wisconsin as her state. Here Emma wears a large wedge of yellow cheese on her head as she pulls her Wisconsin wagon .

Tee for two

Father, son swing into Miami to take on famed Doral

By STEVE MARANTZ
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

And what better place to bond than the Doral, the venerable Florida resort with five courses and a PGA pedigree — the annual Ford Championship on the famed Blue Monster?

MIAMI — When my son was a boy we played catch in the driveway. Now that he's a man, at 20, we tee it up. Golf is how we connect, even if plenty of our shots don't.

And what better place to bond than the Doral, the venerable Florida resort with five courses and a PGA pedigree — the annual Ford Championship on the famed Blue Monster?

Alex was between college semesters and we had 72 hours to golf, eat and sleep, but mostly to golf. The property has five restaurants (one, Windows on the Green, featuring panoramic views of the Blue Monster's 18th hole), a health club and European-inspired spa, swimming pools too numerous to count (think waterpark), and lovely manicured grounds, fountains and statuary. If his mother and sister had been along we would have indulged. However, as two guys golfing, we just golfed.

The Great White was first, and I'll remember it for two reasons.

One, it is framed in lovely white coquina (crushed shell and sand) that gives it a desert feel. Where most American courses have rough, Great White has hard-packed coquina. An errant shot that stops in rough will skitter and run on coquina. Sometimes this is good (the ball runs clear of trees), and sometimes not (it runs out of bounds). You can ground your club on coquina and try to blast your way out.

It's not a problem if you stay in the fairway. And that brings me to the second reason I'll remember Great White. The tee shot on the par-4, 404-yard ninth hole carries over 180 yards of water. Hitting into a strong gusting wind, my tee shot ballooned and splashed into the drink. Alex followed with a low rocket that not only found land, it rolled to within 100 yards of the green. (Whoa. I used to push his stroller.)

Great White, playing 6,085 yards from the white tees, with water on 14 holes, and small greens, put a whoopin' on us. We had the pleasure of playing with head pro Jeff McCormick, who assured us that the Greg Norman-designed course was tougher before 100 pot bunkers were eliminated last year.

"The members complained that it was too hard," McCormick said.

Our second day found us on the Blue Monster, soaking up the vibes left by Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson in their memorable 2005 final-round, head-to-head duel, which Tiger won by a stroke. The tournament distance is 7,288 yards, but we played the whites, at 6,281.

Blue Monster actually rates slightly easier than Great White, despite long fairways, undulating greens and water on 13 holes; and with a softer breeze, we improvised. Most of our problems came from a deep Bermuda rough where balls vanish — gulp! — as if swallowed. Finding your ball in the rough is just slightly less difficult than hacking it out.

We both played a strong back nine and were on a roll as we came to the much-anticipated 18th, featuring the famous signature fountain and ranked by Golf Magazine as one of the top 100 holes in the world. Water borders the left side and guards the front left of the green.

Alex outdrove me by 15 yards. My second shot, a 5-iron, carried the water and dropped softly, about 25 feet from the pin. His second shot, an arcing 6-iron, fell inside my ball. Neither of us converted, but with tap-in pars, we felt like a million bucks.

Playing at Doral is half the fun; staying there is the other half.

Craig Parry, the 2004 Ford winner, claims he won only because his room was close to the Blue Monster's first tee. Parry awoke 15 minutes before his tee time in the first round. He threw on some clothes and made it to the tee just in time to avoid disqualification.

Day Three we hit the Gold Course (there are also Red and Silver courses), narrow and tree-lined, with water on 16 holes. It's not as dramatic as Great White or Blue Monster, or quite as challenging. However, any smugness I acquired on the first 17 holes vanished on the 18th, a par-4 with an island green. I put three lob wedges into the water — feeling like Kevin Costner in "Tin Cup" — before landing a pitching wedge on the green. Alex, meanwhile, drained a 25-footer for a scrambling bogey, and said, "I'm hungry."

Greens fees from $125 to $295 for hotel guests; $150 to $295 for nonguests. Hotel room rates from $165 per night. Two-night packages with accommodations, 18 holes on the Blue Monster and on Great White, and replay on the Red, Silver or Gold courses, from $309 per person. For reservations, call 305-592-2000 (golf), 800-713-6725 (resort). Or go to www.doralresort.com.

Book Angel Program to benefit local children

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, is sponsoring its annual Book Angel Program to benefit local children. The goal of the program is to promote literacy and give the gift of reading to a local child, and will take place Nov. 17 through Dec. 22.

The book angel selects an angel from the tree in the store and buys a book for the child described on the angel. Buttonwood will give a 15 percent discount on the book and deliver the book to the appropriate agency. Program recipients are Wellspring in Hull, Friends of the Homeless in Weymouth and Blue Hills Healthy Families, serving the South Shore.

This is the 13th year Buttonwood has sponsored the Book Angel Program, and about 200 books were donated last year.

Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 for more information.

Lisa A. Laugelle

Lifelong Cohasset resident

Lisa Anne Laugelle, 50, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, died Nov. 11, 2006, after along illness at South Shore Hospital.

Born and raised in Cohasset, she graduated from Cohasset High School in 1974. She attended the Quincy College Nursing program and graduated in 1998. Ms. Laugelle worked for many years at the Cardigan Nursing Facility in Scituate.

She leaves her husband, Shawn DeCruz of Cohasset; a son, Jerry Cogill of Cohasset, a daughter, Kyralea and her husband, Jeff Purcell of Maine and two grandchildren, Zakary and Adajean of Maine; her father, Rocco Laugelle of Cohasset; two brothers, Paul and Sean and a sister, Meka-Mari Carmody.

She also leaves Denise and Charles Alexander of No. Carolina; Lynn and Bob Zelms of Florida and several aunts and uncles. She was the daughter of the late Margaret J. (Noble) Laugelle of Cohasset.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Nov. 16, in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. Interment is in Beechwood Cemetery in Cohasset. Arrangements were handled by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Bassing Beach Tenants Assoc., c/o Pilgrim Coop Bank, 48 South Main St., Cohasset, MA. 02025.

Lisa Anne Laugelle

Bradley Jay Youngman

Former Cohasset resident

Bradley Jay Youngman, 55, of San Isidro, Costa Rica, formerly of Cohasset, died suddenly Nov. 3, 2006.

He attended Western Washington State University and received a master's degree in business administration from Johns Hopkins University.

Mr. Youngman was a marketing executive with more than 20 years of experience in the international business world, including former executive vice president of IPCO, Singapore, corporate executive with Morrison Knudsen International and numerous other international companies and affiliates. During his lifetime he visited every country on earth, with the exception of two.

He was well read, well educated and well traveled. Mr. Youngman was loved by his family and his friends from many nations.

He leaves his wife, AnaMaria Vallejo, and her children, Daniel and Ximena; his son, Derek Youngman; his father, Donald Youngman; his former wife, Ellen Murphy-Youngman of Cohasset; and his brother, Barry Youngman of Idaho.

Private services were held in Costa Rica.

Anger management

'Cheers' star Wendt turns to drama

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

George Wendt may be playing juror number one in the national tour of the intense courtroom drama "Twelve Angry Men," now at Boston's Colonial Theatre, but it shouldn't surprise anyone that the actor actually prefers lighter material.

"I'm more comfortable with comedy. Drama is a bigger challenge for me. That said, I am always pleasantly surprised when people consider me for dramas," explained Wendt, 58, recently by telephone. "You're typecast very easily in this business and that can mean having to scratch and claw just to be considered for certain parts. So I was thrilled when they asked me to do this play."

George Wendt

For Wendt, who portrayed Norm Peterson in all 269 episodes of the long-running sitcom "Cheers" (1982-1993) and also spent six years with Chicago's famed Second City comedy troupe, his role in the Roundabout Theatre Company stage adaptation of Reginald Rose's classic 1954 "Studio One" teleplay is a departure. As fans of the 1957 feature film version, starring Henry Fonda and featuring Martin Balsam as juror number one, will recall, in "Twelve Angry Men," a jury has to decide whether or not a 16-year-old Hispanic boy is guilty of killing his abusive father. What at first seems like an open-and-shut case to 11 of the 12 jurors soon becomes a story of their prejudices and preconceptions of the trial, the defendant, and each other.

"Juror number one is the foreman. He takes his job very seriously, but he is railroaded by the bullies on the jury. He's helped by juror number eight (played in this production by Richard Thomas) who sees a reasonable doubt from the outset and sets about changing his fellow jurors' minds and keeping the boy from the electric chair."

Roundabout Theatre Company's Twelve Angry Men.

For Wendt, who makes his home in Los Angeles with his wife, actress Bernadette Birkett, and their four sons and one daughter, the play not only tells an important story, but also makes some significant points along the way.

"It is an awesome responsibility to be on a jury which has to decide whether a person lives or dies. I can really relate to my character's desire to keep the peace. There's a lot of ranting and raving that goes on and some of it is pretty racist. The play also makes a very clear case for the rights of the accused, which is very relevant in today's climate when we're witnessing the decline of habeas corpus. The rights of the accused are a cornerstone of the Bill of Rights. It is vitally important that we never forget that."

Thanks to "Cheers" reruns, Wendt's portrayal of a fictional bar stool-warming Bostonian will probably never be forgotten. If the actor has his way, however, he may also one day bring a real Boston legend to life in "Tip According to Tip," a play about former Speaker of the House Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill by local humorist Dick Flavin.

"That show was meant to play Boston, but so far it just hasn't happened. I was attached to the project for a while, but at this point they may be looking at another. If they still want to talk to me, however, then I am still interested. In fact, I'm hoping to get together with Dick Flavin while I'm in town," explains Wendt. "I didn't really have a Boston accent on 'Cheers,' but I will if I ever play Tip O'Neill."

(The Roundabout Theatre Company's production of "Twelve Angry Men" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through Nov. 19, for tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadway-acrossamerica.com)

Movie review

'Flushed' with success

"Flushed Away" (A-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Without doubt the worst title of the year, "Flushed Away" is also the best animated film of the year, and if you didn't think it was possible for slugs to be funny, think again.

Brought to us by DreamWorks ("Shrek") and those magnificent pixies at Aardman Animations ("Wallace & Gromit: The Curse of the Were-Rabbit"), the film is a delightful journey from the surface to the sewers of London, featuring a cast of unforgettable, unforgettably acted CGI characters.

Forget "Barnyard," "Over the Hedge" or "Under the Bush" or whatever prefab title Hollywood has attached to its latest generic, plasticene computer-generated cartoon. "Flushed Away" may sound slightly distasteful, but it's a winning formula.

Roddy St. James (the omnipresent Hugh Jackman) is a rat, and I really mean that. When Roddy, a pampered pet who has only dolls as companions, is flushed down a toilet by Sid (Shane Richie) the sewer rat, Roddy finds himself on an "Alice in Wonderland"-like adventure. Beneath the surface of Kensington, Roddy finds another, smaller London, created by a host of rats dwelling underground in rodent harmony.

He also meets a brave and sexy sailor named Rita (Kate Winslet). Rita, who wears a pair of low-riding Union Jack slacks, is the skipper of a boat, and she has something of value belonging to the crime lord known as The Toad (another inspired bit of ham acting by screen Magneto Ian McKellen).

The Jabba-the-Hutt-like Toad is this film's surrogate James Bond villain, and he has an evil plan to flush away all the rats in the sewer and install amphibians in their place. His cohort in his infernal quest is his French "cousin" Le Frog (a terrific Jean Reno) and his band of Franco-ninja froggies.

Think "The African Queen" with rats and frogs and McKellen channeling the late great English character actor Robert Morley. The film has everything from funny references to mime Marcel Marceau to singing maggots and a Kafka joke. Some may also detect more than a little Cary Grant in Roddy St. James.

The feature-length debut of directors David Bowers and Sam Fell based on a screenplay by Fell and six colleagues, "Flushed Away" brings CGI techniques to the patented Aardman claymation style of such films as "Chicken Run" and the aforementioned "Wallace & Gromit." The results bode well for animation and audiences.

Rated PG. "Flushed Away" contains crude humor.

Volunteers, Legion groups lead effort for troops

This week, many families all over the country sat around the holiday table, giving thanks for all they have. Many of those families have sent their sons and daughters off to war this year, and the American Legion, Sons of the American Legion, American Legion Ladies Auxiliary and Cohasset residents are working to ensure those brave men and women know they have not been forgotten during the holidays.

South Main Street resident Ann Marie Goff, in partnership with the Legion, has been collecting items for soldiers since September, and last Thursday, sent four 45-pound care packages to soldiers serving in Iraq. "We really did well," she said, adding she, along with Kitt Coffey and Maureen Harrold, spent one Saturday

School count steady

But 8th-graders leave the district

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The fiscal 2008 budget season is about to begin. For the schools, building the budget begins by taking a look at projected enrollment figures and allocating funds accordingly.

The school department received its yearly report from the New England School Development Council Nov. 9, which displays the past, present and projected enrollments for the district. The school department provides the data used by the Council to make its projections.

"It's nice to have this as we're building our budget," said Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh, who presented the committee with the NESDEC report at its Nov. 15 meeting.

NESDEC's enrollment projections for fall 2005 were high by 59 students. In a letter sent by members of the demographic team, which compiled the district's results, it said, "In talking with Jean Callahan at Central Office (superintendent's office), we learned that a school override failed. This may account for some of the dramatic outmigration, which the district experienced. Last year's eighth grade had 128

In keeping with a 14-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Marjorie "Margie" Steele — "the heart and soul of the Cohasset Food Pantry" — as Citizen of the Year, for being a great role model through her long-time commitment to the important service, which has helped countless families over

'Monday Funday' held in Cohasset

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Driving through South Shore towns, early morning commutes are often dotted with stops from buses picking up children to be delivered to school. It is not unusual to see moms and dads wave goodbye and hop into their cars to go off in a separate direction from their children for the day.

But for many families, the school day begins in the home and ends in the home, with parents serving as the classroom teacher. While the majority of lessons are taught in a designated learning space in the house, many families venture off during the day to participate in classes with other homeschooled children.

Every Monday since the beginning of October, homeschoolers from across the South Shore have been congregating at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library for the South Shore Home Learners' "Monday Funday" program. Monday Funday is held specifically to engage homeschoolers in activities with other homeschooling students from the area. Classes range from chemistry, to chess, to art and include students of all ages in every class.

"This is what we've been looking for," said Tina Conlon, a SSHL director, of the program's new location in the Paul Pratt library. She said the program had been running out of Weymouth, but with the wide age range of children who participate and the growing interest in participating in the program, being able to rent the library as well as the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, has fulfilled the needs of all homeschooled children regardless of their age.

Noah Young, 10, of Pembroke, moves his chess piece as Rafael Brantley, 8, of Milton watches. The two participate in a chess class as part of a program held at the Paul Pratt Library, run by the South Shore Home Learners.

"This is a perfect combination that has come together in this beautiful space," said Krishyon Young, another SSHL director. "We're so grateful for people giving us the opportunity. They've been so accepting and welcoming," she said of the library staff, especially children's librarian Sharon Moody.

Homeschooling is a trend that is rising on the South Shore and across the nation. In fact, according to the National Center for Education Statistics, roughly 1.1 million students were being homeschooled in the United States in the spring of 2003, which is 2.2 percent of the population. That number is up from its estimated 850,000 students who were being homeschooled in the spring of 1999, or

Alleged store purse-snatcher nabbed

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 36-year-old Hull woman is being held on $5,000 cash bail after being arrested following a purse-snatching from a woman's pocketbook in a carriage at Super Stop & Shop in Lincoln Plaza in Hingham

Hingham police say Susan C. Taylor of 165 Nantasket Ave. is a suspect in purse-snatchings in supermarkets from Quincy to Cohasset.

"Miss Taylor had a pretty good racket going," Hingham Lt. Michael Peraino said. "She would follow women in the aisles, wait until they reached for something from a shelf or to look at an item, and take their purses from inside their pocketbooks."

Peraino said the alleged victims would not know their purses were missing until they reached the cash register.

Before Taylor's arrest there had been reports of three such incidents in Hingham, as well as others Weymouth and Quincy, and one in Cohasset.

Hingham Police Detective David Galvin had been working with other towns to solve the crime spree.

Police watched videotapes from places such as CVS, gas stations, and Lowe's where purchases were made with credit cards allegedly taken from the victims' purses.

"Police watched hours of tapes and had a suspect but did not know who she was," Peraino said. On one video police got a view of the vehicle – a silver pickup with ladder racks — but the video did not reveal the plate number. An attendant at a gas station, however, noted the pickup had Rhode Island plates.

Then last Friday (Nov. 17), Galvin, who was in uniform and on patrol, heard about another purse-snatching case that had just occurred in Quincy at a Stop & Shop. Galvin, who was looking out for the vehicle, was on patrol on Beal Street at 3:20 p.m. when he observed a silver Toyota pickup with ladder racks and Rhode Island plates in front of Hingham Stop & Shop.

> "She would follow women in the aisles, wait until they reached for something from a shelf or to look at an item and take their purses from inside their pocketbooks."
> — Hingham Police Lt. Michael Peraino

Police called store security and gave a description of the woman seen on the videotapes. Store security found her on camera and followed her all over the store. While on camera, she allegedly stole a purse from a woman's carriage. In the meantime, Hingham officers responded to the scene and formed a perimeter so when the suspect came out of the store, they could apprehend her.

Store security alerted dispatch the woman was leaving the store and stuffing the money into her pants. Peraino said she left the store and went over to the Toyota pickup where a male was seated in the driver's seat. When they started to drive away, police boxed them in.

Det. Galvin positively identified the woman as the one he saw on the videotapes and she was placed under arrest. The operator of the pickup, Daniel S. Foster, 41, also of 165 Nantasket Ave., Hull, was arrested for driving without a license.

Taylor is facing four counts of larceny of $250 or less and three counts of uttering a forged instrument (credit cards) for alleged crimes in Hingham. She was also charged with giving a false name to a police officer. She is being held on $5,000 cash bail in the Framingham correctional facility. Weymouth, Quincy police will also be seeking charges, Peraino said.

Cohasset Chief James Hussey said Cohasset detectives are reviewing the case and will determine if there is enough evidence to seek larceny or other charges. He said there was one incident in Cohasset.

Even though the suspect has been apprehended, Hussey urged shoppers not to leave their pocketbooks unattended.

"We want to discourage people from leaving pocketbooks unattended in their shopping carriages," Hussey said. "It's the same as leaving valuables in plain view in an unlocked car. People should consider leaving their pocketbooks at home or locked in their car's trunk. This way you just take what you need into the store to make your purchases, keeping it on your person and under your control."

Wave of motor vehicles accidents

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There were four motor vehicle crashes last week, one of which involved a motorcycle and sent its driver and passenger to the hospital.

The motorcycle accident occurred at about 7:30 p.m., Thursday (Nov. 16) and involved a car following too closely, Chief James Hussey said.

A 2005 Mercedes was behind the 2005 Harley Davidson on Route 3A heading southbound toward Pond Street when the light turned red. The Mercedes, which police say was following too closely, could not stop in time and struck the motorcycle pushing it into a 2004 Volvo station wagon.

"The passenger and the operator of the motorcycle were transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries," Hussey said.

The driver of the Mercedes was cited for following too closely.

• At 6:40 p.m. on Wednesday (Nov. 15), a northbound 1999 Mercury Grand Marquis hit a 1996 Nissan Sentra when it tried to make a left from Route 3A into Shaw's Plaza.

Police said the driver of the Mercury failed to yield to oncoming traffic.

"Cars turning left must yield to oncoming traffic," Chief Hussey said. "People often think they have enough time to make the turn when in fact they don't."

> "People often think they have enough time to make the turn when in fact they don't."
> — Police Chief James Hussey

The operator of the Sentra was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. Both vehicles were towed. The driver of the Mercury was cited for failing to yield to oncoming traffic, Hussey said.

• On Sunday (Nov. 19) at just past midnight, a 1997 Isuzu SUV hit a parked 1998 Dodge Ram pickup on Ledgewood Drive, police said. Chief Hussey said the Isuzu driver, who was leaving her driveway when she hit the truck that was parked on the road, reported the incident to police and left a note on the windshield for the pickup's owner, who was not around at the time of the mishap. Hussey said there was minor damage.

• At about 10:20 p.m., Sunday (Nov. 19), an accident involving a 2000 Mercedes sedan and 1990 Toyota Camry occurred on Elm Street. Police said the Mercedes tried to pass the Toyota when it was turning left into a driveway. Both cars were traveling from the harbor toward the police station.

Chief Hussey said the operator of the Toyota was cited for having no license in his possession and for defective equipment (no tail light or directionals); the operator of the Mercedes was given a verbal warning and told to take more care when passing.

Fire investigation

Chief James Hussey said a fire that engulfed a large excavator off Meadow Lane is being investigated by the state Fire Marshal's Office.

The call came in at just past 11 p.m., Sunday (Nov. 19) from a resident of Beach Street who could see the flames through the woods. Meadow Lane is off Atlantic Avenue.

"There were no workers there, so the Fire Marshal was contacted," Hussey said. "The cause of the fire is definitely suspicious."

Hussey said Cohasset detectives would be working with the Fire Marshal to determine the cause of the fire, which was "burning pretty good" when police and fire personnel arrived.

The excavator was there due to some land clearing that was being conducted. However, at that time of night there was no one around," Hussey said. He said "it seems odd" that the vehicle would burst into flames.

Skateboarders

Tuesday night is "all-you-can-eat" pizza night at Papa Gino's and police say some youthful pizza-lovers brought their skateboards along on Tuesday (Nov. 14). The onslaught caused the owner of Cohasset Plaza to complain to the police.

Chief James Hussey said some parents dropped their kids off with plans to pick them up later. He said police told the kids they could not skateboard there and they were cooperative.

"We have not had a lot of complaints (about skateboarders)," Hussey said.

In neighboring Hingham, the Square has become a big draw for kids with skateboards. Scituate Harbor has also had problems in the past.

Parking dispute

Police were able to "restore peace" during a parking dispute at Fiori's Exxon last Wednesday (Nov. 15) at about 9:10 a.m. Chief Hussey said a verbal altercation ensued over a parking spot and one of the parties flagged down an officer, who was able to get the incident under control.

Car nap

Police checked on a report of a woman sleeping in her car that was parked on South Main Street across from French Memories last Wednesday (Nov. 15) at about 11 a.m. Chief Hussey said the woman checked out fine and was just taking a nap.

Hussey said if an individual feels they are too sleepy to drive, it is a good idea to stop and walk around or get a cup of coffee.

He said there is no problem with taking a nap in the car as long as the car is not running. Carbon dioxide can build up in a vehicle that is idling, he said.

Coyotes about

Over the past few weeks, police have received numerous calls about coyote sightings. The animals appear healthy and are roaming around. It's not clear if it is mating season or if they are looking for food, Chief Hussey said.

There have also been a couple of coyotes hit by cars recently in Cohasset – one at 3A and lower King Street and another on Summer Street.

Residents are encouraged not to leave garbage outside in unsecured containers that might attract the animals.

Coyotes are normally afraid of humans, Hussey said.

Erratic operation

Chief Hussey said State Police contacted Cohasset with a report of an erratic driver whose car was registered to a Cohasset resident.

Police found the vehicle at the registered owner's address and passed the information on to the State Police who will follow up.

Drug request

Teens on Beechwood Street reported three white males in a dark-colored Jeep Grand Cherokee were either asking for drugs or looking to sell drugs. The youths were not sure exactly what was said, Chief Hussey said. The incident occurred Saturday (Nov. 18) at about 6:50 p.m.

The teens got a partial plate number of "45." Police were unable to trace the vehicle but did put out an "all-points bulletin" to other towns to be on the lookout.

Other people in the area also saw the car drive away at a high rate of speed, so the report of the incident is legitimate, Hussey said.

Planning board office hours

The Planning Board Office is open during the following hours: Tuesday: 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; Wednesdays: 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; Thursdays: 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Please note that the office may occasionally be unattended during these hours due to site visits and staff meetings.

Enrollment steady, but 30 eighth-graders leave district students. This year's ninth grade has only 98. This represents a 24 percent decrease in class size and is a change from the historical patterns with less than 10 percent out-migration at this grade transition."

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz asked whether in her opinion, the superintendent thought the reason for the decrease in enrollment is due to the fact that the override failed, that students are opting to attend private schools instead, or a combination of both.

"We have anecdotal comments as to why people left," said Walsh.

Slanetz asked if some of those comments could be compiled and given to the School Committee. Walsh said she would and that she is also considering sending out a survey to parents whose children are exiting the district.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said she is considering sending out a survey to parents whose children are exiting the district.

Going back to 1996, the school's total enrollment was 1,213. Enrollment was 1,515 in 2005, which is when the district added a new integrated preschool program. It is interesting to note in 2004, prior to the preschool's opening, there were 1,500 students in the district. This year, enrollment is 1,490, or a loss of 25 students. However, enrollment figures are reported as of Oct. 1 and since that date the district has lost four more students.

Projecting five years out, NESDEC estimates enrollment figures will drop in 2007 by roughly 20 students. In 2008, it anticipates enrollment figure will be back up to roughly 1,494 and remain there, plus or minus one, for 2009. In 2010, the district could see a slight increase to perhaps 1,507, and another increase of roughly nine more students in 2011.

"Our enrollment is nothing different from what's happening in the rest of the state. We're seeing a leveling off and it appears to be flat for the next five years," said Walsh.

To compile its report, NESDEC estimates the cumulative effect of many factors that impact enrollment, such as migration in or out of the schools, births and deaths and housing growth, which bring more children to the town, and therefore the schools. To see a full copy of the report, please visit the district's Web site at www.cohassetk12.org.

Fiscal 2008 school budget calendar

Town Meeting is over, which means the town has a green light to pursue budget planning for fiscal 2008. The school department has a calendar of dates for meetings it will hold to discuss the budget, which it plans to send to all pertinent town boards and parties as well as members of the PSO.

"Everyone needs to know they are invited to attend," said School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz. He added every line item ties back to goals set by the district and now is the time for the community to come and learn about the school's vision for the future.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said during last year's budget process, it was frustrating to hear members of the community say they were not fully informed about the school's budget. She said this year, she hopes people will attend School Committee meetings and become a part of the process from the beginning and watch how the budget is formed.

- Nov. 27: Superintendent reviews preliminary budget
- Dec. 4-15: Central office staff prepares fiscal 2008 budget materials.
- Dec. 20: Superintendent presents proposed fiscal 2008 operating budget to School Committee (overview, enrollment projections, accomplishments, needs).
- Jan. 3: School Committee budget sub-committee meeting (Osgood School, Janet Sheehan; Deer Hill School, Keith Gauley; Student Services, Linda Gill; Technology, Ken Cisneros).
- TBD: Budget summit with the town.
- Jan. 10: School Committee budget sub-committee meeting (Cohasset Middle High School, Joel Antolini; Athletics, Ron Ford; Curriculum and Professional Development, Nancy Mrzyglod).
- Jan. 17: School Committee budget meeting.
- TBD: School Committee presents budget to joint meeting of Selectmen and Advisory Committee.
- Feb. 28: School Committee public hearing on budget/ School Committee votes final adoption of budget and certifies budget figure.
- March 5-16: Central office staff prepares Town Meeting budget materials.
- March 16: Budget document ready for distribution.
- TBD: Annual Town Meeting.

The school department's budget calendar can also be found on the district Web site at www.cohassetk12.org. School Committee meetings are held in the Community Meeting Room at the high school, near the superintendent's office

Community gardeners host 'Christmas Traditions' program

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

BUSY TIME

Hello Cohasset. I hope this week's column finds you all happy and well fed after enjoying Thanksgiving with family and friends. There are many events happening in our town over the next few weeks for the holidays as it is a fun-filled and busy time for all. I know that I am going to try to find some time each day to enjoy the small things in all the holiday hoopla. It is so hard though...

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Happy Birthday to you... Miss Abbey Johnson, a very special young lady who is near and dear to me is celebrating birthday number 6 next week! Abbey, you are such a big girl and doing so well in Kindergarten.

Your Mom and Dad, along with big brother Jake and your dog Maxie and the rest of your family and friends all wish you the best 6 year old birthday in the world. We all love you Princess!

PLANT POWER

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly general meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 28 in Bates Hall at the Second Congregational Church. All members interested in exhibiting in the miniflower show must submit their entries by 8:30. The program is titled "Christmas Traditions" and will interpret holiday traditions in design will be presented by Betty Call, a floral designer and a Life National Council Flower Show Judge.

DELICIOUS RECIPES

For this holiday season, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset has reprinted a limited number of the original "Cohasset Entertains" cookbook. This book is a collection of tried and true recipes from the cooks among us and each one is a keeper. The book also contains sample menus and arrangement ideas for your holiday table. Just a few of the delicious holiday recipes included are crab delight, Christmas mapley appetizers, onions celeste, winter squash casserole, pumpkin chiffon pie, and praline ice cream pie with rum sauce. There is also an entire chapter on gifts we bake including cookies, candies and coffee cakes. This would make a great gift for your favorite cook.. Each cookbook costs $15 and is available at Flemings and The Windsor Tea House in Cohasset. All purchases help fund club programs, services and a scholarship fund. The CGCC is a member of The National Garden Clubs, Inc. and The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc.

CANCER RESEARCH

For some, finishing the Boston Marathon is only part of the race. Those who run for a charity celebrate success in both running and fundraising.

As a member of the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge team, Laura Vigneau of Cohasset completed the Boston Marathon on April 17 and helped raised $4.1 million for the Claudia Adams Barr Program in Innovative Basic Research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. DFMC participants are given official numbers to run in the Boston Marathon as part of the Boston Athletic Association's Boston Marathon Charity Program. In return, the runners pledge to raise a minimum of $2,500 to benefit the Barr Program.

Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge is also supported by Dana-Farber trustees Delores Barr Weaver and Wayne Weaver, principle owners of the NFL's Jacksonville Jaguars. The Weavers established the Barr Program in 1987 to honor Mrs. Weaver's mother, who lost her battle with cancer 30 years earlier. Barr Investigators receive support for their work to unravel the mysteries of cancer's origins and growth. One of the institute's primary objectives is the speedy translation of laboratory discoveries into clinical therapies and the Barr Program is integral to that success. The total amount raised includes a challenge gift of $262,000 from the Weavers.

For more information about the DFMC, go to danafarber.org/dfmc; call 617-632-1970; or send contributions payable to DFMC, 10 Brookline Place West, Brookline, MA 02445-7226.

HONORED

Quincy Medical Center recently hosted an Employee Service Awards event to honor the commitment of longstanding employees at the medical center. And among the 105 Quincy Medical Center employees honored was: Cohasset's Linda Farrag, of the Emergency Department, honored for 35 years of service.

"The employees of Quincy Medical Center work each day to deliver advanced, high quality care and to provide educational opportunities to the next generation of healthcare leaders," said Gary Gibbons, MD, President and CEO. "During the annual Employee Service Awards, we celebrate the long standing service of our employees and their tremendous contributions to the health and education of our community."

In total, 105 Quincy Medical Center employees were recognized for reaching and surpassing service milestones of 5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30, 35, and 40 years of employment at Quincy Medical Center.

VILLAGE FAIR

Be sure to save the date! On Saturday, Dec. 2nd, from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m., the churches surrounding the common will transform their parish halls into a holiday marketplace full of fabulous gifts and foods and treasures of all kinds. Best of all, 100 percent of the proceeds raised will support the good works of the Second Congregational Church, the First Parish Unitarian Church and St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, as well as the non-profit ASP and Metco Programs. Make sure to bring your appetite! Don't miss First Parish's famous Swedish Bake Shop while you shop their Estate-ish sale. Then head to The Second Congregational Church's holiday boutique and Chowder Bar for lunch. And don't miss St. Stephen's Country Kitchen for all sorts of delicious treats and hostess gifts. See you there!

Laura Vigneau, middle, of Cohasset, helped to raise $4.1 million for the Claudia Adams Barr Program in Innovative Basic Research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute by running on the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge team. Here she is pictured with her daughters, Lieran, left, age 4, and Lydia, age 5, who was treated at Dana-Farber. Vigneau will be running for the DFMC again in 2007.

MAMASTEPH

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plazawelcomes local performer, Mamasteph, to Buttonwood on Wed. Dec. 6 at 6:30 p.m.. Mamasteph will host an interactive holiday musical event certain to delight children and their parents. Come in your pj's's, bring your favorite stuffed animal,and plan for a special evening. Mamasteph is a well-know personality on the South Shore. She has been performing at area libraries, nursery schools and other venues for years. Her CD, "Simply Mamasteph", available at Buttonwood, features 15 original tunes that children of all ages will enjoy. This is a free event. Reservations appreciated. Please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 to reserve.

JINGLE BELL WALK!

The South Shore Community Center invites Families & Friends to our Twelfth Annual Jingle Bell Walk held on Friday, November 24th. Come to Cohasset Harbor (2:00pm) and watch Santa and Mrs. Claus and their many elf assistants arrive by boat. Santa passes out jingle bells and in a horse drawn wagon make their way to the Community Center for hot cocoa, punch and cookies. Enjoy the community singalong of traditional holiday favorites sung by Mrs. Claus & Santa with Frosty, Rudolph and the merry Elves. There will be photos with Santa, open bowling, face painting a turkey trot and hayrides on the Common. Rusty Skippers Band will entertain and at the end of the day the Christmas tree is lighted on the Common. This day is sure to put you in the Holiday Spirit.

HELPING OTHERS

The Cohasset Consignment Shop, located on Route 3A in Tedeschi Plaza will host a jewelry party featuring La Di Da Jewelry and Accessories by Kerry Pipenbrink, Thursday, Nov. 30, from 4 to 8 p.m.

Proceeds will go to help a family in need this Christmas. The event will be a great way to kick off your holiday shopping.

The Cohasset Consignment Shop has been owned and operated by the Social Service League of Cohasset for more than 50 years.

For information call Marita Carpenter, manager, at 781-383-0687.

FLU CLINIC

An adult flu clinic, sponsored by Cohasset Board of Health, will take place Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to noon, at Cohasset Town Hall auditorium, 41 Highland Ave.

This flu clinic is open to all adult citizens of Cohasset. Parents of young children should check with their pediatrician to see if the shot is available at the physician's office.

Participants are reminded to wear short-sleeve shirts. Seniors must bring Medicare part B and/or senior health insurance cards.

For more information please call Judy Fitzsimmons, registered nurse, at 383-2210.

That is all for this week. Please make sure to send in all of your special event news, birthday and special occasion wishes and anything else for this column to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm. We all love to get word of the events happening out and about but it really is nice to read about our residents in town, both young and old!

WEDDINGS & ENGAGEMENTS

Atherton - Barton

Sarah Whitfield Atherton, daughter of Laura and Terry Atherton of Cohasset and Scott Donald Barton, son of Janet and Anthony Barton of Oyster Bay Cove, New York, were married June 24, 2006, at Wolffer's Vineyard in Sagaponak, N.Y.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Terry Atherton. Matron of Honor was Priscilla Goff Donatelli. Serving as bridesmaids were Hope Wilson Barton, sister-in-law of the bride and Emily Harter Calcagno, Elizabeth White Holland, Serene Rokie Karmi, Kerry Medeiros Lombard, Candice Corby Minshall, and Rachel Blair Prehatney.

Christopher Paul Barton, brother of the groom, served as Best Man. Ushers were William Leigh Atherton, brother of the bride, Nicholas Taruja de Almeidia Greenwald, Sean Mathew McNamara, Erik John Neandross, John Edward Postley, III, and Todd Benjamin Rowen.

Flower girls were Paige Elizabeth White Holland and Beatrix Carstairs Postley.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Trinity College in Hartford, Conn. She is an event coordinator at UBS Investment Bank in Charlottesville, Va.

The groom is a graduate of Choate-Rosemary Hall in Wallingford, Conn., and Colgate University. He completed a master's degree in music composition at Brooklyn College Conservatory of Music and is currently pursuing a doctoral program in music composition at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville, Va.

The reception took place at Wolffer's Vineyard in Sagaponak, N.Y.

The couple took their wedding trip to the Amalfi Coast in Italy.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Donald Barton

Fitzgerald-Holway

David and Holly Holway of Cohasset announce the marriage of their daughter, Lindy Ann Holway, to William Francis Fitzgerald, son of Thomas and Marian Fitzgerald of Scituate.

The couple was married July 1, 2006, at St. Anthony Church, by the Rev. Brother Michael James Cuddy, a longtime family friend. The reception took place at Red Lion Inn in Cohasset.

Kelly Holway, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Kelly Blau, Katie Fitzgerald, Kristen Peters, Kerri Mckeever and Abby Wittnebert. Garrick Towle was also an honor attendant to the bride.

Thomas Fitzgerald, brother of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Noel Coakley, Tyler Frick, Conor Holway, Michael Jones, Joseph Kehoe, Geoffrey Robinson and Matthew Nolan.

The bride graduated from Cohasset High School in 1998, and earned a bachelor of science degree in business administration from Babson College in 2002, where the couple met. She currently works for B/S/H Home Appliances Corp. in Canton as a district sales manager for the Thermador brand.

The groom graduated from Boston College High School in 1999 and earned a bachelor of science degree in business administration from Babson College in 2003. He is currently working as a sales executive for Dell Inc.

Following a honeymoon to Turks and Caicos the newlyweds reside in Cohasset.

Mr. and Mrs. William Francis Fitzgerald

This "cigarette girl" costume from the Cohasset Dramatic Club's 1930s production of "The Women" is part of the current exhibit at the Cohasset Historical Society celebrating the play.

'The Women' inspires exhibit

1930's cocktail party planned

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Historical Society headquarters is not typically adorned with zebra fabric. Lingerie is also rarely seen hanging on its mannequins. But from now until the end of the year, the Pratt Building, located at 106 S. Main St., will keep its new look, which celebrates the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of "The Women."

"The Women" originally opened on Broadway in 1936 with an all-female cast that included Arlene Francis and Marjorie Main. The film version was released in 1939 and featured Joan Crawford. While the CDC also put on a production in the 1930s, its latest rendition was on stage this November. While the play is no longer running in Cohasset, the spirit of the show will be celebrated both through the exhibit and during a 1930s cocktail party on Dec. 1 from 7-9 p.m. Tickets are $20 for Historical Society members and $25 for non-members.

Executive Administrator for the Historical Society Lynne DeGiacomo said when she was asked by members of the CDC to present an exhibit in conjunction with the show, she was thrilled to be able to bring out the society's collection of 1930s clothing and memorabilia. The exhibit is set up to depict three scenes from the play, including a bridge game, a bedroom and a cocktail party.

"You don't see style like this very often anymore."
— Lynne DeGiacomo, Historical Society

The bridge game is set in a living room, and DeGiacomo said the society used its "1930s dresses and pieces from our collection," to recreate the scene. There are many dresses on display, which DeGiacomo said are simply gorgeous. "You don't see style like this very often anymore," she said.

DeGiacomo said when she and other Historical Society members were putting together the bedroom portion of the exhibit, it brought some of them back to the days of watching their mothers lace up their undergarments when going out for the evening.

The cocktail party portion of the exhibit also features fabulous gowns and DeGiacomo said one is from the Bancroft collection, although she is unsure which sister wore the dress. Jane Bancroft Cook and her sister Jessie lived in Cohasset and were heiresses to the Dow Jones fortune. DeGiacomo added while the Society has a good number of dresses and items of memorabilia from various time periods, it is always looking to add to its collection and is happy to accept donations of any items with ties to Cohasset's history.

To celebrate the longevity of the CDC, a portion of the exhibit is dedicated to the shows it has put on over the years. There is a scrapbook and playbills from a host of productions, of which many of the names are unfamiliar. "To think, they're still performing at Town Hall," after all these years, DeGiacomo said.

While there are no men in any productions of "The Women" they are talked about a lot, which is why the Society has added some men's attire and memorabilia from the 1930s. There is also a television in the exhibit, which is used to show the film version of the play.

DeGiacomo said she has had a wonderful time pulling the exhibit together. "It was fun bringing our 1930s articles out. They were in very good shape and we had many more than we'd expected," she said. The Society even has photos of the CDC's first production of "The Women," from the 1930s, which were graciously restored by Noble's Camera Shop. Now that the exhibit is complete, DeGiacomo said, "It worked out beautifully."

The exhibit of 1930s fashions and memorabilia inspired by the play "The Women," will be on display now through the end of the year at Historical Society Headquarters, 106 S. Main Street in the Pratt Building. The exhibit is open during regular Historical Society hours, 10 a.m. through 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. The 1930s cocktail party to celebrate the exhibit will be held Friday, Dec. 1 from 7-9 p.m. and will feature hors d'oeuvres from the Borrowed Butler. Tickets are $20 for Historical Society members and $25 for non-members and may be purchased by calling Society headquarters at (781) 383-1434. For more information about the Cohasset Historical Society, please visit its Web site at www.cohassethistoricalsociety.org.

Board of Ed changes MCAS regulations

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh announced to the School Committee at its Nov. 1 meeting the Board of Education has changed the regulations for the Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System, or MCAS test.

"The board feels confident…it is time to raise the bar," she said.

Walsh explained the new regulations will affect students in the class of 2010, and will create an either/or scenario. Students will either need to score a minimum of 240, or proficient, on the English and math MCAS tests, or score at least 220, or needs improvement, and complete an "educational proficiency plan" before qualifying for a high school diploma.

Educational proficiency plans will be administered by the district, which the student attends. "For students who are not able to make it (achieve the necessary scores) it does fall on us," Walsh said.

Each student who scores between 220 and 240 will have a unique plan in place for each content area in which he or she did not score at least a 240. Each plan will include: a review of the student's strengths and weaknesses, the courses the student will be required to take and successfully complete in grades 11 and 12 in the relevant content area, and a description of the assessments the school will administer to the student annually to ensure he or she is making progress toward proficiency.

"This is something we knew was coming, and now it's here."
— Denise Walsh, Superintendent of Schools

The board will review the regulations again no later than 2008.

The class of 2010 will be affected by another MCAS change, as Walsh explained they will be the first class which have to meet the additional graduation requirement of passing a science and technology/engineering (STE) test as well as the English and math.

The Massachusetts Education Reform Law of 1993 states students must pass statewide tests in five academic areas in order to graduate from high school and those tests will be phased in over time, beginning with the STE. "This is something we knew was coming, and now it's here," said Walsh.

Current grade nine students who are taking courses in biology, chemistry, introductory physics or technology and engineering will be eligible to take one of the four STE tests in June 2007. This test is not required in grade nine, but is required in grade 10. Students who pass in grade nine will not have to retake the test in grade 10. All students are required to take and pass an STE test in order to graduate.

For a complete listing of Cohasset's MCAS scores, please visit www.doe.mass.edu.

the years. The deadline for nominations for the 2006 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 5. Please see the nomination form on page 6. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@cnc.com are also welcome.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2006 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2007.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the14th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

1993: Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset": for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

1994: Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

1997: Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

1998: Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

1999: Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

2000: former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

2001: Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

2002: Arthur Lehr for more than 50 years of volunteer service on worthwhile projects including the Boy Scouts; serving on the Zoning Board of Appeals and as a Registrar of Voters; Clerk of the Works for the DPW garage, Little League Complex, and Mariners Park; serving on the Recycling Committee, as town Civil Defense Director, on Gravel Pit Reuse Committee and more.

2003: Marjorie Murphy for touching countless lives through her roughly 25 years as school librarian at Deer Hill. With eyes that twinkle and an infectious smile, Mrs. Murphy devoted her life to helping children discover the wonders of reading and the value of a good book.

2004: John Coe, a WWII veteran, for all his volunteer service at the Senior Center where he helps make the center a warm place where people come and meet friends; for his work quietly behind the scenes helping fellow citizens and his service as the "beloved Town Crier" every year at the Village Fair.

2005: Marjorie "Margie" Steele, who is the "heart and soul of the Cohasset Food Pantry," for her energy and long-time commitment to the important service, which has helped countless people in need over the years.

Eagle Scout proposes sign

The Board of Selectmen gave its approval to Eagle Scout Harrison Schmidt to install two new "Welcome to Cohasset" signs in town. One would be placed on South Main Street at the Scituate border and another would be on North Main Street near the Hingham border. The hand-carved mahogany signs have been designed by David Hassan of Hassan Woodcarving & Sign Co. Harrison would also like to landscape around both signs with a cobblestone border, small dwarf spruce trees and mulch.

Harrison plans to raise the $3,000 to $4,000 necessary for the signs. Town Manager Bill Griffin said when Harrison approached residents who live in the vicinity of where the signs will be placed, they thought the idea was fantastic and began handing out donations for the project. Harrison also plans to approach local organizations such as the Rotary Club, garden clubs, fire and police departments and local businesses for contributions. He said he might also organize bake sales or a car wash to raise money.

Selectmen supported the idea and said they would like to have a site visit to see where the signs would be and get an idea of how big they will be.

Sustainable Cohasset to meet on Nov. 28

The third meeting of the newly formed Sustainable Cohasset will be held at the Second Congregational Church on Tuesday, Nov. 28 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. All are welcome. Sustainable Cohasset is the local chapter of Sustainable South Shore. Many residents were introduced to this non -partisan coalition at the forums held after the showing of Al Gore's "An Inconvenient Truth" this summer at the Loring Theater.

At the first meeting about 20 concerned residents and members of several town boards including the Alternative Energy Committee and the Conservation Commission were in attendance. Inventories of town environmental concerns, organizations and active committees were generated and small group breakouts had lively discussions about topics ranging from clotheslines in private planned communities to public windmills generating power for municipalities.

At the second meeting, support for the upcoming town wind turbine forums, the Carbon Fund, an international renewable energy foundation, and "Zero Emissions" environmental models were discussed. Participation in the Nov. 19 MCAN, conference at MIT's Stata Conference Center was a goal for those in attendance. Plans for future educational forums with expert speakers and a film series about global warming are being planned. Keeping in mind that climate stabilization should be everyone's goal, all are encouraged and welcome to attend on the 28th.

There will be a dance at the Teen Center Friday, Dec. 15, from 7 to 10 p.m. Everyone in grades six through eight is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold.

This is not a school function.

The First Thanksgiving

We've all heard stories about unexpected Thanksgiving visitors bringing tasty treats. It is a tradition as old as Thanksgiving itself. In the fall of 1621, the Pilgrims of Plymouth Colony had planned to feast on duck, until more than 100 Indians showed up unannounced, bringing with them at least seven deer.

That dinner is now one of our nation's founding myths, born of 19th-century exaggeration and sustained by grade-school lessons. It is a myth of cultural assimilation, of brotherhood inspired by faith. In the grade-school telling, Chief Massasoit and his faithful translator, Squanto, show kindness to the English settlers, helping them survive the harsh winter, and are repaid with a fine meal with all the trimmings.

Revisiting this familiar territory, historian Nathaniel Philbrick describes the first Thanksgiving feast as pretty close to the myth. There was probably no turkey, he writes in "Mayflower: A Story of Courage, Community, and War," and no large tables to sit around. Also no forks. The Pilgrims used knives and fingers to eat, so don't feel bad if you picked up that drumstick.

Philbrick recounts many things about our pious forebears some will find surprising. They believed marriage was a civil matter, not a religious one, with the first marriages in Plymouth performed by Gov. William Bradford. Civil marriage was an idea they picked up in Holland, where they lived for several years after first leaving England. They considered Christmas just another workday. When he caught some non-Separatist members of the colony playing games on Christmas 1621, Bradford took away their ball.

He also argues that, contrary to the grade-school lesson, the Pilgrims didn't exactly believe in religious freedom. Yes, they came to a new continent to escape government interference with their own worship, but that was because they believed theirs to be the only correct theology. They had no interest in granting others the right to make up their own minds on matters of religion.

But what Philbrick offers most is context. History started before that famous meal and kept moving after the final course.

In the three years before the Pilgrims arrived, the natives of New England were nearly wiped out by a plague, most likely acquired from European fishermen. The Pilgrims were able to move into a nearly deserted landscape, with fields cleared and prepared for cultivation, because thousands of Indians had died or left their villages.

The plague left Massasoit's Pokanoket tribe decimated and vulnerable to its traditional enemies, the Narragansetts. His alliance with the Pilgrims, negotiated by Squanto, was a strategic move to neutralize this disadvantage, and it didn't last.

In the years after the Thanksgiving feast, Squanto betrayed the Pilgrims and Massasoit, Philbrick writes, manipulating tribal rivalries. There was trade, and even friendship, between the natives and the newcomers, but there was always tension. In 1675, the tension erupted in war, as Massasoit's son Metacomet, known to the English as King Philip, led several tribes against the settlers. King Philip's War remains, by one measure, America's bloodiest conflict: Among the English and the Native Americans, nearly one person in 10 was killed or wounded.

In the end, Metacomet was shot and his body drawn and quartered. Metacomet's wife and sons, along with thousands of other Indians, were sold into slavery in the Caribbean. His head was mounted on a pike outside the Plymouth Colony, where it remained for at least 20 years. For the native inhabitants of a sprawling continent, the bad times had just begun.

In historical context, that long-ago feast may be seen as a brief interlude of fresh food, fellowship and gratitude in the midst of strife and suffering. But context doesn't make the food less sweet or the prayers less sincere.

We hope your family's Thanksgiving also was a haven from life's tribulations, a moment when you put down your grievances and counted your blessings with whatever guests arrived to share the bounty.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'A collective win-win'

TO THE EDITOR:

Last week's Town Meeting met all of my expectations of New England democracy at its finest. I stayed to the bitter end, wondering whether breakfast might have to be served. As a newcomer to the Commonwealth and Cohasset, I was reluctant to speak. Beyond the clearly outlined written procedures, there are always unwritten conventions. It was late when the citizen's petition for a zoning change was considered.

At a certain point, one takes one's life into one's own hands if one dares extend the discussion. I voted against the petition on the basis of procedure, not substance. I think it is important to thank the two developers for what they have already invested in our town and for the kind of project they brought before us. It is the kind of investment we need and the architectural drawings are quite compelling. So thank you.

Please be patient with us as further data is gathered. And for those responsible for gathering this data, please move with dispatch. These are good neighbors who deserve our best efforts to bring the two sides on this issue to a collective win-win. I am prepared to vote "Yes," the next time this is brought to the community.

Cohasset residents again display their generosity

TO THE EDITOR:

This past weekend, a collection was made for the new 3A FARM Animal Shelter. Cohasset residents were terrific: pennies and dollars added up to almost $1,300.

As most residents know, the Eleanor Haughey Animal Shelter on the Driftway supports Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate. The Greenbush Railroad terminus has made the current location untenable (as a volunteer dog walker, I know). The Board of Directors has now bought the beautiful four-acre parcel known as the 3A FARM (opposite the Sunoco Station) and closer to Cohasset. Currently, the 501C(3) non-profit organization has to pay mortgage payments on the land and finance construction of the beautiful new Shelter.

It is a daunting task. Anyone, who missed this weekend's collection and would like to help, can send a check to the 3A FARM FUND, P.O. Box 823, Scituate, MA 02066. Thank you so much.

Ambulance service is excellent

TO THE EDITOR:

On Nov. 11th, my hip that was replaced years ago went out of joint. My wife called 911and the Cohasset ambulance was at my house in minutes. I was treated with expertise, efficiency, and sensitivity, and was taken to South Shore Hospital in record time, where they did a good job of resetting.

I want to publicly thank the Cohasset group of paramedics that took care of me, and remind the town of the excellence of our Fire Dept. Ambulance Group.

Greathearted example of community spirit

TO THE EDITOR:

There's a lot of hand wringing about America's faults, but too little notice taken of its multitude of virtues. For instance: the national program "Make a Difference" Day. The concept is to give back to the community in thanks for the blessings we have. Schools, and perhaps other organizations, execute projects with this intent, and of course the exercise provides some input to character development of the participating students.

In Cohasset, the Parent School Organization has organized the program, under the leadership of Lisa Rosen. The current project was to provide fall yard clean-up, storm window installation and air conditioner removal, at no charge to seniors (over 65) for 33 lucky recipients recruited by the Cohasset Elder Affairs. About 100 students and 80 adults participated. This is the fifth year of the senior clean-up project, which began at the Osgood School, and the first year that all schools participated.

A few individuals worried that this takes work away from earnings of the yard service companies, but there seems to be sufficient work to attract ever more of these, many from out of town. (Any beneficiary of the program can assuage his or her conscience by giving something to the Council on Elder Affairs or other good cause, not necessarily local). Some seniors were hesitant to sign on for fear of some catch, but there isn't any. It's simply another greathearted example of the community spirit in Cohasset. Of course, some of us hesitated to benefit, from false pride at accepting a freebie on the grounds that we are seen as having become old enough to warrant a little help. The counter to that feeling is that accepting the work is recognition that we all have helped others in the past, and still have the potential to do so in the future.

Probably the biggest benefit is to the children who participate; it is their introduction to the idea of giving to the community, that we are each other's keeper, or however you choose to express the idea. The Appalachia project is another shining example of that benefit. I hope the program grows, to the great benefit of children and seniors alike.

And I certainly didn't mind being relieved of many hours of hard and uninteresting labor. (There's still plenty to do, character building or not).

TO THE EDITOR:

At Forum 4 of Together Cohasset on Nov. 8 a mission statement was presented. Their goal is to improve efficiency and effectiveness of town services in an economically reasonable and sound manner while providing quality services and excellence in education. The tenet of this group is to actively listen and respect others even if you disagree with them. Remember that this group was originally begun to heal the forced divide in the town after the failure of the May 2006 override vote.

At the Nov. 13 special Town Meeting members of the Advisory Committee and the Capital Budget Committee discussed the need

HEALTH NOTES

Cohasset shines at coastal caucus

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last Friday, at the Cohasset Lightkeepers hall, 72 environmentalists, scientists from many disciplines, students, teachers, educators, Federal, State and local government officials met to discuss an initiative which began in Cohasset and has gained recognition over the entire New England coastline: The Cohasset Student Coastal Caucus.

The Caucus, using a model created by the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal research has identified perhaps the best method now available to communities that wish to collect and disseminate information on the true state of our environment, its recent changes, and how everyone's way of life will be affected if current human practices and environmental patterns continue.

Hosted by Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR), in collaboration with the Massachusetts Office of Coastal Zone Management and the Mass Bays Program, educators, students, community and watershed representatives, municipal officials, private sector environmentalists, and state and federal leaders assembled to accomplish three significant goals: 1) to examine the quality and results of the Center's recent grant-funded research in the context of data collected by state and federal agencies; 2) to chart steps for tangible water quality improvement and habitat restoration; and 3) to evaluate the interactive processes that the center has applied as a regional model for collaborative effort.

Over the last year, more useful data has been collected about Cohasset's coastal water quality condition than at any other time in our history. In addition to the work done by our students, the EPA's Clean Beaches Initiative and the Mass Bays Water Quality monitoring project have been gathering data, facilitated and assisted by town agencies and town committees. CSCR student data was characterized by individuals from those agencies as "useful, relevant, and dependable."

The driver for all of this activity is the fact that Cohasset Harbor, Little Harbor, the Gulf River Estuary, Straits Pond, Scituate, Green Harbors, and the North and South Rivers are all impacted by bacterial contamination that has resulted in closed beaches and restricted or prohibited shellfishing. All of these coastal waters are identified on the State's 2006 Integrated List of Waters for pathogen impairment, which requires the development and implementation of a targeted pollutant mitigation strategy. Recognizing this condition, in 2003, the Board of Health created such a strategy, the Townwide Stormwater Management Plan, approved by the state and the EPA.

The State has committed substantial continuing support of Cohasset's program with grants covering assessment and planning for mitigation. In fact, the process which CSCR uses —engaging students in scientific environmental assessment for the benefit of town planners and public works projects — has gained widespread acclaim with our Jack Buckley receiving an award from the Gulf of Maine Association.

But many stormwater and other environmental problems of Cohasset begin elsewhere and vice versa. So visionaries in the state have long espoused an approach of grouping towns in their respective watersheds, which means our problems are also those of Scituate, Norwell, Hingham and Hull. It makes no sense to try to fix problems in Cohasset's coastal waters without taking into account the fact that three extensive tidal estuaries from other towns drain into them. Like it or not, we must cooperate with other towns, and that's what the Coastal Caucasus is all about.

So, CSCR's Jack Buckley, Mass Bays' Sara Grady, and CZM's Jason Burtner had invited exactly the right people: knowledgeable state and federal officials who could answer questions; groups of student mentors, teachers and administrators, as well as some of the students to give their viewpoint; and finally those of us in Cohasset and nearby Town governments responsible for cleaning up the pollution and managing the control of our stormwater. The whole overseen by a facilitator who got all of us to mix and talk to each other.

There were two sessions in the Student Coastal Caucus: a morning session which structured the program and allowed us to give a summary of our respective viewpoints, and an afternoon session in which we developed and agreed on what should be done and in what order, based on priorities which we all helped to establish. To teach us something about the process of scientific environmental assessment that CSCR uses, Cohasset and Scituate students representing four important Cohasset watershed investigations gave us a summary of their methods and findings. It was eight hours of exhausting and very exciting work, overwhelmingly favorably received by the participants, according to caucus evaluations.

Caucus proceedings, contact information for attendees, PowerPoint slides, data summaries, reports, and even a DVD of the presentations will soon be available to interested readers and curious web surfers. More important, this information will be used by many in and beyond the South Coastal Watershed to advance cooperative and collaborative strategies designed to "de-list" our treasured resources from the 2006 Integrated List of Waters for pathogen impairment.

I'm confident that all of us who attended the caucus left with more than just a satisfying feeling. Much valuable knowledge was exchanged and invaluable connections made. First, the network of attendees (and invitees unable to participate) connects us personally with scores of experts willing to, and continuing to, assist us here in Cohasset and in our neighboring towns. Second, our network builds our capacity to tap into the understandings of State and Federal positions about mutual environmental problems and what to do about them. Third, our caucus students and adults were mutually invigorated by each others' presence, creating real visions of the practices and paths that youth pursue in their transition to leaders of the next generation in finding solutions to those problems created by the present.

And that, friends; as the ad says, is priceless.

Get ready for the war in books

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Tom Henshaw is on vacation. This is a column he wrote for the March 2, 2003 paper. He will be back next week.

The war in Iraq will be over soon, although maybe not seem soon enough for a generation that has been brought up on microwaved TV dinners and 30-second news bites that pass for in-depth reports.

In a way, I hate to see it — the end of the war, I mean, because that means we will be deluged with war books — good books, bad books, little books, big books, books that are soon to be major motion pictures, most of them starring Tom Cruise.

Already "Bush at War," by Bob Woodward (Simon & Schuster, $28) is 119th on the USA Today list of best-seller; and "Dreaming War," by Gore Vidal (Thunder's Mouth Press, $11.95), subtitled "Blood for Oil and the Cheney-Bush Junta," is 146th.

"The Threatening Storm," by Kenneth M. Pollock (Random House, $25.95), the story of confronting Saddam, is 173rd, and "The War Over Iraq: Saddam's Tyranny and America's Mission," by Lawrence F. Kaplan & William Kristol (Encounter, $25.95), is 178th.

Do you suppose "What Went Wrong?" by Bernard Lewis, is jumping the gun?

Pity poor Sherron Watkins, the former Enron executive who blew the whistle on her boss and told all about it in "Power Failure: The Inside Story of the Collapse of Enron," which was the hot story of the year in . . . geez, was it only a couple of years ago?

She was all lined up for promotional appearances on the major television networks, including Larry King Live on CNN, only to be preempted by a retired general who explained why Baghdad would fall in three days, four at the most.

And to top it off, Doubleday cancelled Sharron's advertising budget, probably anticipating the high cost of flogging the sale of war books in the near future. And not necessarily books about the war in Iraq either.

Since August, 2001, literary agent Amy Williams had been trying to hustle Anthony Swofford's memoir of the Gulf War — "One of the most powerful pieces of writing I'd ever seen," she said — but publishers would have none of it.

Then came 9/11 and the war in Afghanistan and the threat of war in Iraq and . . . last week Swofford's "Jarhead" (Scribner, $24), released early in March, was 45th and climbing on USA Today's best seller list and already in its seventh printing.

Wait until the books on the Iraq war hit the stands, especially since there are more then 500 reporters, many of whom were shut out of the Gulf War, "imbedded" among the fighting men themselves. I'll bet at least 499 of them already have taken notes for the book they are going to write.

Think of how many trees must die so that Ted Koppel can explain what it was like to sit in a tent in the desert and wonder if the Iraqi bringing him breakfast and a copy of the New York Times is really a suicide bomber.

Winning in life without a scorecard

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

On a good day (overcast and slightly drizzly) when there's no one on the Putt-Putt course in front of us, my son and I can complete 18 holes in less than 20 minutes. We call it Speedy Golf. How do we do this? By not keeping score. Now, if you're like me, you're scratching your head and thinking, how the heck can you play miniature golf, let alone anything and not keep score? Keeping score is the American way. Whether we're trying to keep up with the Joneses, or stay two steps ahead of everyone else, we like to know where we stand.

I'm no different. Keeping score was ingrained in me as a child. It didn't matter whether I was on the playing field or performing in an orchestra. (Yes, I had a band geek phase; and don't be fooled — they're just as competitive as the athletes.) I even recall arguing once with a friend at the beach, over whether the two adults paddling a ball back and forth were participating in a sport, game or pastime because, "If you can't keep score and can't win, what was the point?"

Apparently, the point is to have fun — an idea so foreign to me until a round of Speedy Golf last spring. Somewhere around the 9th hole, I realized that I was having much more fun playing my son's way. Stunned at this mind shift, I practically had to sit down. And would have, except that we were at that hole where you knock the ball through that freakishly scary clown's mouth.

Of course, being a rational score-keeping adult, I decided that it was OK to not keep score in Speedy Golf. I'm rarely allowed to win against my son anyhow. But, I wondered if this concept could transfer to grown-up golf. And last summer, since I didn't plan on playing much and therefore wasn't likely to qualify for a Pro-Am, I decided to give it a try.

To do this, I needed the right golf partner; and my friend, K, is an expert at not keeping score. At the end of each hole, as I tried to recount my strokes and would say, "I think I got a 7 on that par 5;" K would reply, "That's what you think you got, but what did the hole feel like? Because for me, that felt like a 6." It wouldn't matter that she scored a 9. If the hole felt like a 6, then it was a 6.

By the end of our first round, I started to get the hang of scoreless golf. Sure, I would shank the ball into the woods and top off a few shots that dribbled pathetically only a few feet ahead of me. But, I also sunk a 40-foot putt. Had I been keeping score, my joy at making the best putt of my life would have been muted by the fact that my overall score for the hole (and for the day) was terrible. Yet, by not keeping score, I just made a darn good, Brandi Chastain "whip your shirt off," fall to the ground, kiss the green, "Cinderella Story," sort of putt!

With my newfound attitude, I'm hoping that before the snow comes, my son and I will have one more shot at Speedy Golf. And you know what? When it comes to that 9th hole, forget about making it through the clown's mouth on my first putt. Instead, I think I'm going to tee off and simply try to whack him in his big, red, taunting nose. Just for the fun of it.

Mixed-use would be healthy for Village

AARON SAWCHUK

First, I feel it is necessary to provide a disclaimer. My father, Wayne Sawchuk, has proposed one of the first of two mixed-use developments in downtown Cohasset Village. I have no direct financial gain for his project, and write this first and foremost as a citizen who is concerned with economic development, and secondarily as an individual who has been exposed to an "insider's view" of my father's effort to construct a mixed-use senior-oriented development in the village over the past two years. This is my, and only my opinion and does not reflect that of anyone else.

On Monday night (Nov. 13), the citizens of Cohasset voted against a proposed zoning change that would have allowed for new mixed-use development in downtown Cohasset village. The specific zoning article allowed for the development of residential housing (apartments or condos) above the first floor of an office or retail space. It created specific criteria for the development, including the maximum lot coverage, maximum apartment density, and maximum number of units that could be created on a single piece of property. The state requirements (and requirements under a "40 B" development) are far more liberal than the proposed amount, and in many ways the proposed zoning changes probably would have inhibited the wide scale development that many citizens fear.

The argument against the proposed zoning change consisted of three main points. First, there was great concern that any further development in the village district may alter the character of one of Cohasset's greatest assets. Second, that while the first two projects that have been proposed have been met with great enthusiasm, there are concerns of the unintended consequences that such a zoning change may have. Finally, there were general concerns about automobile traffic and parking.

Most people will agree that Cohasset Village is one of the premier assets of our town, and we must be careful stewards to ensure that it retains its priceless value for generations to come. Indeed, I dream of a day when I will walk with my children through the village, hopefully showing them one of the buildings that their grandfather helped build. The village is a unique asset, however, because unlike other town treasures like the common, the sailing club, or Government Island, the village consists almost entirely of privately owned land. We depend upon the will of others to risk their investment capital to help maintain this precious asset. Because of that dependence, we must remain constantly vigilant that we produce a climate that encourages and rewards the right kind of development, and does so in a consistent manner.

The biggest threat to the village today is not that some local landowners want to provide some additional investment, but instead it is the risk that the village falls prey to competition elsewhere. Several different speakers against the zoning changes cited not wanting to change the downtown as their reason for voting no. However, we must realize that without further investment it will change forever. In order to survive — and thrive — the village businesses need customers all year long. Like most citizens, I have become extremely sensitive to the ways in which unintended consequences can affect the town. The issues surrounding the unsuccessful Cook Estate and Cedermere projects and the accommodations the town has made to encourage them have been a lesson for all of us. The lesson is: the town should not be in the development business. We should provide our private citizens and landowners with a straightforward process for investing in our community, and we should very closely monitor what efforts we take to mandate any one-development strategy.

I believe that the best way to encourage economic development is to do so in general terms, such as when the overwhelming majority of our community voted in 2003 to allow mixed-use development in the village. The only problem with the 2003 effort is that it left an archaic minimum lot size requirement for residential development — a full acre — criteria that fewer than 5 percent of the properties in the village meet. Chris Ford, who began operating a small business more than 40 years ago in the village, aptly described the purpose of the zoning change — a housekeeping measure. If more than two-thirds of the community supported mixed-use development, then surely they supported it in more than two parcels in the entire downtown village.

In many ways we are in an enviable position. We have individuals who wish to invest in our downtown business district, significantly raising both the residential and commercial tax base. In the two proposed mixed-use projects, the developers, both born and raised in Cohasset, actually proposed building less dense, environmentally friendly projects. Both projects provide more open space than is required, and one case providing a significant amount of private land as public space for the enjoyment of our citizens. It is somewhat ironic that the name of the structure that one of the proposed developments wants to expand is the Samuel Bates House. If Mr. Bates, a member of one of the founding families of our community, were alive today, I think he would find it somewhat absurd that he could not expand his house on the original property for living space. Build an office building or retail complex sure — but housing is strictly off-limits.

The final principle concern raised against the zoning change was an increase in traffic. The reality is that the only increase in traffic is likely to be foot traffic to the various village businesses. The combination of more residents downtown coupled with more shopkeepers and office workers will result in a boom for local businesses. Each of the two proposed developments called for off-street parking, and in total would consist of a maximum of 18 apartments or condos.

I encourage everyone reading this article to speak with business owners downtown. Ask them how the recent revitalization work may have reduced their business by 30 percent or more over several months. Ask them how competition, like the new Derby Street Shoppes is reducing the overall traffic in their stores. Finally, ask them how they could benefit from the introduction of 15 or 20 new citizens living in the village. Dining at one of the restaurants or walking over to do their holiday shopping a little early this year. Or talk to a friend or loved one who is getting older and no longer wants to deal with the hassle of maintaining a home or dealing with stairs. Ask them about the benefits of being within walking distance to all of their daily needs — or how nice it would be to live in a maintenance free building with an elevator. Finally, I would encourage you to speak with your children or grandchildren's teachers. Ask them about where they live, and if they enjoy their commute into our town. When I was a student in Cohasset public schools, the vast majority of my teachers and other school staff lived in our community — from Mrs. Moody in Kindergarten, all the way to Mr. Emmons senior year. How many teachers today do you think could afford to live in our community when a starter home is considered a bargain at more than a half of a million dollars?

Once you speak with the local merchants, your loved ones, and the middle class members of your extended community, I would encourage you to contact your planning board members and selectmen and tell them that you support mixed-use development in our village district. The development study that we authorized is extremely important and we should strongly encourage all parties involved with it to produce a report as quickly as possible without sacrificing quality. However, a long-term development plan should not be considered a prerequisite for any residential development in our village. Before comprehensive rules can be developed, the planning board should continue to evaluate development on a case-by-case basis, and approve those that have merit.

In short, I believe it was a mistake to reject the proposed zoning changes that would have allowed the mixed-use development that our citizens embraced with an overwhelming majority in 2003. Because I believe each citizen or landowner should stand on common footing and adhere to common standards, I strongly supported the proposed zoning changes. However, we must look forward and act decisively, because the threat to our village will not wait another two years until it starts to do real damage to the health of our community and its economic well being. We must encourage our planning board, selectmen, and zoning board of appeals to take what measures are necessary in the short-term to encourage smart investment in our village to ensure it will prosper in the long-term.

CEF, Fusco featured on Our Town

This week on Our Town, Cohasset's very own cable TV show, co-hosts by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiac-omo meet with members of the newly reconstituted CEF(Cohasset Education Foundation) to discuss their goals and plans for upcoming projects.

School Committee member Stephen Fusco joins the hosts on the second half of the show to detail the technology needs of Cohasset schools.

In a very entertaining roll-in segment, viewers can find out about the collaboration between the Cohasset Historical Society and the Cohasset Drama Club to present the 1936 Broadway hit "The Women" in November at Town Hall.

This show airs Monday at 9pm on channel 10 and Tuesdays and Thursdays as well.

Watch every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 9p.m. on Comcast Channel 10.

Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed.

The First Thanksgiving

We've all heard stories about unexpected Thanksgiving visitors bringing tasty treats. It is a tradition as old as Thanksgiving itself. In the fall of 1621, the Pilgrims of Plymouth Colony had planned to feast on duck, until more than 100 Indians showed up unannounced, bringing with them at least seven deer.

That dinner is now one of our nation's founding myths, born of 19th-century exaggeration and sustained by grade-school lessons. It is a myth of cultural assimilation, of brotherhood inspired by faith. In the grade-school telling, Chief Massasoit and his faithful translator, Squanto, show kindness to the English settlers, helping them survive the harsh winter, and are repaid with a fine meal with all the trimmings.

Revisiting this familiar territory, historian Nathaniel Philbrick describes the first Thanksgiving feast as pretty close to the myth. There was probably no turkey, he writes in "Mayflower: A Story of Courage, Community, and War," and no large tables to sit around. Also no forks. The Pilgrims used knives and fingers to eat, so don't feel bad if you picked up that drumstick.

Philbrick recounts many things about our pious forebears some will find surprising. They believed marriage was a civil matter, not a religious one, with the first marriages in Plymouth performed by Gov. William Bradford. Civil marriage was an idea they picked up in Holland, where they lived for several years after first leaving England. They considered Christmas just another workday. When he caught some non-Separatist members of the colony playing games on Christmas 1621, Bradford took away their ball.

He also argues that, contrary to the grade-school lesson, the Pilgrims didn't exactly believe in religious freedom. Yes, they came to a new continent to escape government interference with their own worship, but that was because they believed theirs to be the only correct theology. They had no interest in granting others the right to make up their own minds on matters of religion.

But what Philbrick offers most is context. History started before that famous meal and kept moving after the final course.

In the three years before the Pilgrims arrived, the natives of New England were nearly wiped out by a plague, most likely acquired from European fishermen. The Pilgrims were able to move into a nearly deserted landscape, with fields cleared and prepared for cultivation, because thousands of Indians had died or left their villages.

The plague left Massasoit's Pokanoket tribe decimated and vulnerable to its traditional enemies, the Narragansetts. His alliance with the Pilgrims, negotiated by Squanto, was a strategic move to neutralize this disadvantage, and it didn't last.

In the years after the Thanksgiving feast, Squanto betrayed the Pilgrims and Massasoit, Philbrick writes, manipulating tribal rivalries. There was trade, and even friendship, between the natives and the newcomers, but there was always tension. In 1675, the tension erupted in war, as Massasoit's son Metacomet, known to the English as King Philip, led several tribes against the settlers. King Philip's War remains, by one measure, America's bloodiest conflict: Among the English and the Native Americans, nearly one person in 10 was killed or wounded.

In the end, Metacomet was shot and his body drawn and quartered. Metacomet's wife and sons, along with thousands of other Indians, were sold into slavery in the Caribbean. His head was mounted on a pike outside the Plymouth Colony, where it remained for at least 20 years. For the native inhabitants of a sprawling continent, the bad times had just begun.

In historical context, that long-ago feast may be seen as a brief interlude of fresh food, fellowship and gratitude in the midst of strife and suffering. But context doesn't make the food less sweet or the prayers less sincere.

We hope your family's Thanksgiving also was a haven from life's tribulations, a moment when you put down your grievances and counted your blessings with whatever guests arrived to share the bounty.

MEETINGS

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'A collective win-win'

TO THE EDITOR:

Last week's Town Meeting met all of my expectations of New England democracy at its finest. I stayed to the bitter end, wondering whether breakfast might have to be served. As a newcomer to the Commonwealth and Cohasset, I was reluctant to speak. Beyond the clearly outlined written procedures, there are always unwritten conventions. It was late when the citizen's petition for a zoning change was considered.

At a certain point, one takes one's life into one's own hands if one dares extend the discussion. I voted against the petition on the basis of procedure, not substance. I think it is important to thank the two developers for what they have already invested in our town and for the kind of project they brought before us. It is the kind of investment we need and the architectural drawings are quite compelling. So thank you.

Please be patient with us as further data is gathered. And for those responsible for gathering this data, please move with dispatch. These are good neighbors who deserve our best efforts to bring the two sides on this issue to a collective win-win. I am prepared to vote "Yes," the next time this is brought to the community.

Cohasset residents again display their generosity

TO THE EDITOR:

This past weekend, a collection was made for the new 3A FARM Animal Shelter. Cohasset residents were terrific: pennies and dollars added up to almost $1,300.

As most residents know, the Eleanor Haughey Animal Shelter on the Driftway supports Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate. The Greenbush Railroad terminus has made the current location untenable (as a volunteer dog walker, I know). The Board of Directors has now bought the beautiful four-acre parcel known as the 3A FARM (opposite the Sunoco Station) and closer to Cohasset. Currently, the 501C(3) non-profit organization has to pay mortgage payments on the land and finance construction of the beautiful new Shelter.

It is a daunting task. Anyone, who missed this weekend's collection and would like to help, can send a check to the 3A FARM FUND, P.O. Box 823, Scituate, MA 02066. Thank you so much.

Ambulance service is excellent

TO THE EDITOR:

On Nov. 11th, my hip that was replaced years ago went out of joint. My wife called 911and the Cohasset ambulance was at my house in minutes. I was treated with expertise, efficiency, and sensitivity, and was taken to South Shore Hospital in record time, where they did a good job of resetting.

I want to publicly thank the Cohasset group of paramedics that took care of me, and remind the town of the excellence of our Fire Dept. Ambulance Group.

Greathearted example of community spirit

TO THE EDITOR:

There's a lot of hand wringing about America's faults, but too little notice taken of its multitude of virtues. For instance: the national program "Make a Difference" Day. The concept is to give back to the community in thanks for the blessings we have. Schools, and perhaps other organizations, execute projects with this intent, and of course the exercise provides some input to character development of the participating students.

In Cohasset, the Parent School Organization has organized the program, under the leadership of Lisa Rosen. The current project was to provide fall yard clean-up, storm window installation and air conditioner removal, at no charge to seniors (over 65) for 33 lucky recipients recruited by the Cohasset Elder Affairs. About 100 students and 80 adults participated. This is the fifth year of the senior clean-up project, which began at the Osgood School, and the first year that all schools participated.

A few individuals worried that this takes work away from earnings of the yard service companies, but there seems to be sufficient work to attract ever more of these, many from out of town. (Any beneficiary of the program can assuage his or her conscience by giving something to the Council on Elder Affairs or other good cause, not necessarily local). Some seniors were hesitant to sign on for fear of some catch, but there isn't any. It's simply another greathearted example of the community spirit in Cohasset. Of course, some of us hesitated to benefit, from false pride at accepting a freebie on the grounds that we are seen as having become old enough to warrant a little help. The counter to that feeling is that accepting the work is recognition that we all have helped others in the past, and still have the potential to do so in the future.

Probably the biggest benefit is to the children who participate; it is their introduction to the idea of giving to the community, that we are each other's keeper, or however you choose to express the idea. The Appalachia project is another shining example of that benefit. I hope the program grows, to the great benefit of children and seniors alike.

And I certainly didn't mind being relieved of many hours of hard and uninteresting labor. (There's still plenty to do, character building or not).

TO THE EDITOR:

At Forum 4 of Together Cohasset on Nov. 8 a mission statement was presented. Their goal is to improve efficiency and effectiveness of town services in an economically reasonable and sound manner while providing quality services and excellence in education. The tenet of this group is to actively listen and respect others even if you disagree with them. Remember that this group was originally begun to heal the forced divide in the town after the failure of the May 2006 override vote.

At the Nov. 13 special Town Meeting members of the Advisory Committee and the Capital Budget Committee discussed the need

HEALTH NOTES

Cohasset shines at coastal caucus

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last Friday, at the Cohasset Lightkeepers hall, 72 environmentalists, scientists from many disciplines, students, teachers, educators, Federal, State and local government officials met to discuss an initiative which began in Cohasset and has gained recognition over the entire New England coastline: The Cohasset Student Coastal Caucus.

The Caucus, using a model created by the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal research has identified perhaps the best method now available to communities that wish to collect and disseminate information on the true state of our environment, its recent changes, and how everyone's way of life will be affected if current human practices and environmental patterns continue.

Hosted by Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR), in collaboration with the Massachusetts Office of Coastal Zone Management and the Mass Bays Program, educators, students, community and watershed representatives, municipal officials, private sector environmentalists, and state and federal leaders assembled to accomplish three significant goals: 1) to examine the quality and results of the Center's recent grant-funded research in the context of data collected by state and federal agencies; 2) to chart steps for tangible water quality improvement and habitat restoration; and 3) to evaluate the interactive processes that the center has applied as a regional model for collaborative effort.

Over the last year, more useful data has been collected about Cohasset's coastal water quality condition than at any other time in our history. In addition to the work done by our students, the EPA's Clean Beaches Initiative and the Mass Bays Water Quality monitoring project have been gathering data, facilitated and assisted by town agencies and town committees. CSCR student data was characterized by individuals from those agencies as "useful, relevant, and dependable."

The driver for all of this activity is the fact that Cohasset Harbor, Little Harbor, the Gulf River Estuary, Straits Pond, Scituate, Green Harbors, and the North and South Rivers are all impacted by bacterial contamination that has resulted in closed beaches and restricted or prohibited shellfishing. All of these coastal waters are identified on the State's 2006 Integrated List of Waters for pathogen impairment, which requires the development and implementation of a targeted pollutant mitigation strategy. Recognizing this condition, in 2003, the Board of Health created such a strategy, the Townwide Stormwater Management Plan, approved by the state and the EPA.

The State has committed substantial continuing support of Cohasset's program with grants covering assessment and planning for mitigation. In fact, the process which CSCR uses —engaging students in scientific environmental assessment for the benefit of town planners and public works projects — has gained widespread acclaim with our Jack Buckley receiving an award from the Gulf of Maine Association.

But many stormwater and other environmental problems of Cohasset begin elsewhere and vice versa. So visionaries in the state have long espoused an approach of grouping towns in their respective watersheds, which means our problems are also those of Scituate, Norwell, Hingham and Hull. It makes no sense to try to fix problems in Cohasset's coastal waters without taking into account the fact that three extensive tidal estuaries from other towns drain into them. Like it or not, we must cooperate with other towns, and that's what the Coastal Caucasus is all about.

So, CSCR's Jack Buckley, Mass Bays' Sara Grady, and CZM's Jason Burtner had invited exactly the right people: knowledgeable state and federal officials who could answer questions; groups of student mentors, teachers and administrators, as well as some of the students to give their viewpoint; and finally those of us in Cohasset and nearby Town governments responsible for cleaning up the pollution and managing the control of our stormwater. The whole overseen by a facilitator who got all of us to mix and talk to each other.

There were two sessions in the Student Coastal Caucus: a morning session which structured the program and allowed us to give a summary of our respective viewpoints, and an afternoon session in which we developed and agreed on what should be done and in what order, based on priorities which we all helped to establish. To teach us something about the process of scientific environmental assessment that CSCR uses, Cohasset and Scituate students representing four important Cohasset watershed investigations gave us a summary of their methods and findings. It was eight hours of exhausting and very exciting work, overwhelmingly favorably received by the participants, according to caucus evaluations.

Caucus proceedings, contact information for attendees, PowerPoint slides, data summaries, reports, and even a DVD of the presentations will soon be available to interested readers and curious web surfers. More important, this information will be used by many in and beyond the South Coastal Watershed to advance cooperative and collaborative strategies designed to "de-list" our treasured resources from the 2006 Integrated List of Waters for pathogen impairment.

I'm confident that all of us who attended the caucus left with more than just a satisfying feeling. Much valuable knowledge was exchanged and invaluable connections made. First, the network of attendees (and invitees unable to participate) connects us personally with scores of experts willing to, and continuing to, assist us here in Cohasset and in our neighboring towns. Second, our network builds our capacity to tap into the understandings of State and Federal positions about mutual environmental problems and what to do about them. Third, our caucus students and adults were mutually invigorated by each others' presence, creating real visions of the practices and paths that youth pursue in their transition to leaders of the next generation in finding solutions to those problems created by the present.

And that, friends; as the ad says, is priceless.

Winning in life without a scorecard

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

On a good day (overcast and slightly drizzly) when there's no one on the Putt-Putt course in front of us, my son and I can complete 18 holes in less than 20 minutes. We call it Speedy Golf. How do we do this? By not keeping score. Now, if you're like me, you're scratching your head and thinking, how the heck can you play miniature golf, let alone anything and not keep score? Keeping score is the American way. Whether we're trying to keep up with the Joneses, or stay two steps ahead of everyone else, we like to know where we stand.

I'm no different. Keeping score was ingrained in me as a child. It didn't matter whether I was on the playing field or performing in an orchestra. (Yes, I had a band geek phase; and don't be fooled — they're just as competitive as the athletes.) I even recall arguing once with a friend at the beach, over whether the two adults paddling a ball back and forth were participating in a sport, game or pastime because, "If you can't keep score and can't win, what was the point?"

Apparently, the point is to have fun — an idea so foreign to me until a round of Speedy Golf last spring. Somewhere around the 9th hole, I realized that I was having much more fun playing my son's way. Stunned at this mind shift, I practically had to sit down. And would have, except that we were at that hole where you knock the ball through that freakishly scary clown's mouth.

Of course, being a rational score-keeping adult, I decided that it was OK to not keep score in Speedy Golf. I'm rarely allowed to win against my son anyhow. But, I wondered if this concept could transfer to grown-up golf. And last summer, since I didn't plan on playing much and therefore wasn't likely to qualify for a Pro-Am, I decided to give it a try.

To do this, I needed the right golf partner; and my friend, K, is an expert at not keeping score. At the end of each hole, as I tried to recount my strokes and would say, "I think I got a 7 on that par 5," K would reply, "That's what you think you got, but what did the hole feel like? Because for me, that felt like a 6." It wouldn't matter that she scored a 9. If the hole felt like a 6, then it was a 6.

By the end of our first round, I started to get the hang of scoreless golf. Sure, I would shank the ball into the woods and top off a few shots that dribbled pathetically only a few feet ahead of me. But, I also sunk a 40-foot putt. Had I been keeping score, my joy at making the best putt of my life would have been muted by the fact that my overall score for the hole (and for the day) was terrible. Yet, by not keeping score, I just made a darn good, Brandi Chastain "whip your shirt off," fall to the ground, kiss the green, "Cinderella Story," sort of putt!

With my newfound attitude, I'm hoping that before the snow comes, my son and I will have one more shot at Speedy Golf. And you know what? When it comes to that 9th hole, forget about making it through the clown's mouth on my first putt. Instead, I think I'm going to tee off and simply try to whack him in his big, red, taunting nose. Just for the fun of it.

Mixed-use would be healthy for Village

AARON SAWCHUK

First, I feel it is necessary to provide a disclaimer. My father, Wayne Sawchuk, has proposed one of the first of two mixed-use developments in downtown Cohasset Village. I have no direct financial gain for his project, and write this first and foremost as a citizen who is concerned with economic development, and secondarily as an individual who has been exposed to an "insider's view" of my father's effort to construct a mixed-use senior-oriented development in the village over the past two years. This is my, and only my opinion and does not reflect that of anyone else.

On Monday night (Nov. 13), the citizens of Cohasset voted against a proposed zoning change that would have allowed for new mixed-use development in downtown Cohasset village. The specific zoning article allowed for the development of residential housing (apartments or condos) above the first floor of an office or retail space. It created specific criteria for the development, including the maximum lot coverage, maximum apartment density, and maximum number of units that could be created on a single piece of property. The state requirements (and requirements under a "40 B" development) are far more liberal than the proposed amount, and in many ways the proposed zoning changes probably would have inhibited the wide scale development that many citizens fear.

The argument against the proposed zoning change consisted of three main points. First, there was great concern that any further development in the village district may alter the character of one of Cohasset's greatest assets. Second, that while the first two projects that have been proposed have been met with great enthusiasm, there are concerns of the unintended consequences that such a zoning change may have. Finally, there were general concerns about automobile traffic and parking.

Most people will agree that Cohasset Village is one of the premier assets of our town, and we must be careful stewards to ensure that it retains its priceless value for generations to come. Indeed, I dream of a day when I will walk with my children through the village, hopefully showing them one of the buildings that their grandfather helped build. The village is a unique asset, however, because unlike other town treasures like the common, the sailing club, or Government Island, the village consists almost entirely of privately owned land. We depend upon the will of others to risk their investment capital to help maintain this precious asset. Because of that dependence, we must remain constantly vigilant that we produce a climate that encourages and rewards the right kind of development, and does so in a consistent manner.

The biggest threat to the village today is not that some local landowners want to provide some additional investment, but instead it is the risk that the village falls prey to competition elsewhere. Several different speakers against the zoning changes cited not wanting to change the downtown as their reason for voting no. However, we must realize that without further investment it will change forever. In order to survive — and thrive — the village businesses need customers all year long. Like most citizens, I have become extremely sensitive to the ways in which unintended consequences can affect the town. The issues surrounding the unsuccessful Cook Estate and Cedermere projects and the accommodations the town has made to encourage them have been a lesson for all of us. The lesson is: the town should not be in the development business. We should provide our private citizens and landowners with a straightforward process for investing in our community, and we should very closely monitor what efforts we take to mandate any one-development strategy.

I believe that the best way to encourage economic development is to do so in general terms, such as when the overwhelming majority of our community voted in 2003 to allow mixed-use development in the village. The only problem with the 2003 effort is that it left an archaic minimum lot size requirement for residential development — a full acre — criteria that fewer than 5 percent of the properties in the village meet. Chris Ford, who began operating a small business more than 40 years ago in the village, aptly described the purpose of the zoning change — a housekeeping measure. If more than two-thirds of the community supported mixed-use development, then surely they supported it in more than two parcels in the entire downtown village.

In many ways we are in an enviable position. We have individuals who wish to invest in our downtown business district, significantly raising both the residential and commercial tax base. In the two proposed mixed-use projects, the developers, both born and raised in Cohasset, actually proposed building less dense, environmentally friendly projects. Both projects provide more open space than is required, and one case providing a significant amount of private land as public space for the enjoyment of our citizens. It is somewhat ironic that the name of the structure that one of the proposed developments wants to expand is the Samuel Bates House. If Mr. Bates, a member of one of the founding families of our community, were alive today, I think he would find it somewhat absurd that he could not expand his house on the original property for living space. Build an office building or retail complex sure — but housing is strictly off-limits.

The final principle concern raised against the zoning change was an increase in traffic. The reality is that the only increase in traffic is likely to be foot traffic to the various village businesses. The combination of more residents downtown coupled with more shopkeepers and office workers will result in a boom for local businesses. Each of the two proposed developments called for off-street parking, and in total would consist of a maximum of 18 apartments or condos.

I encourage everyone reading this article to speak with business owners downtown. Ask them how the recent revitalization work may have reduced their business by 30 percent or more over several months. Ask them how competition, like the new Derby Street Shoppes is reducing the overall traffic in their stores. Finally, ask them how they could benefit from the introduction of 15 or 20 new citizens living in the village. Dining at one of the restaurants or walking over to do their holiday shopping a little early this year. Or talk to a friend or loved one who is getting older and no longer wants to deal with the hassle of maintaining a home or dealing with stairs. Ask them about the benefits of being within walking distance to all of their daily needs — or how nice it would be to live in a maintenance free building with an elevator. Finally, I would encourage you to speak with your children or grandchildren's teachers. Ask them about where they live, and if they enjoy their commute into our town. When I was a student in Cohasset public schools, the vast majority of my teachers and other school staff lived in our community — from Mrs. Moody in Kindergarten, all the way to Mr. Emmons senior year. How many teachers today do you think could afford to live in our community when a starter home is considered a bargain at more than a half of a million dollars?

Once you speak with the local merchants, your loved ones, and the middle class members of your extended community, I would encourage you to contact your planning board members and selectmen and tell them that you support mixed-use development in our village district. The development study that we authorized is extremely important and we should strongly encourage all parties involved with it to produce a report as quickly as possible without sacrificing quality. However, a long-term development plan should not be considered a prerequisite for any residential development in our village. Before comprehensive rules can be developed, the planning board should continue to evaluate development on a case-by-case basis, and approve those that have merit.

In short, I believe it was a mistake to reject the proposed zoning changes that would have allowed the mixed-use development that our citizens embraced with an overwhelming majority in 2003. Because I believe each citizen or landowner should stand on common footing and adhere to common standards, I strongly supported the proposed zoning changes. However, we must look forward and act decisively, because the threat to our village will not wait another two years until it starts to do real damage to the health of our community and its economic well being. We must encourage our planning board, selectmen, and zoning board of appeals to take what measures are necessary in the short-term to encourage smart investment in our village to ensure it will prosper in the long-term.

Get ready for the war in books

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Tom Henshaw is on vacation. This is a column he wrote for the March 2, 2003 paper. He will be back next week.

The war in Iraq will be over soon, although maybe not seem soon enough for a generation that has been brought up on microwaved TV dinners and 30-second news bites that pass for in-depth reports.

In a way, I hate to see it — the end of the war, I mean, because that means we will be deluged with war books — good books, bad books, little books, big books, books that are soon to be major motion pictures, most of them starring Tom Cruise.

Already "Bush at War," by Bob Woodward (Simon & Schuster, $28) is 119th on the USA Today list of best-seller; and "Dreaming War," by Gore Vidal (Thunder's Mouth Press, $11.95), subtitled "Blood for Oil and the Cheney-Bush Junta," is 146th.

"The Threatening Storm," by Kenneth M. Pollock (Random House, $25.95), the story of confronting Saddam, is 173rd, and "The War Over Iraq: Saddam's Tyranny and America's Mission," by Lawrence F. Kaplan & William Kristol (Encounter, $25.95), is 178th.

Do you suppose "What Went Wrong?" by Bernard Lewis, is jumping the gun?

Pity poor Sherron Watkins, the former Enron executive who blew the whistle on her boss and told all about it in "Power Failure: The Inside Story of the Collapse of Enron," which was the hot story of the year in . . . geez, was it only a couple of years ago?

She was all lined up for promotional appearances on the major television networks, including Larry King Live on CNN, only to be preempted by a retired general who explained why Baghdad would fall in three days, four at the most.

And to top it off, Doubleday cancelled Sharron's advertising budget, probably anticipating the high cost of flogging the sale of war books in the near future. And not necessarily books about the war in Iraq either.

Since August, 2001, literary agent Amy Williams had been trying to hustle Anthony Swofford's memoir of the Gulf War --- "One of the most powerful pieces of writing I'd ever seen," she said — but publishers would have none of it.

Then came 9/11 and the war in Afghanistan and the threat of war in Iraq and . . . last week Swofford's "Jarhead" (Scribner, $24), released early in March, was 45th and climbing on USA Today's best seller list and already in its seventh printing.

Wait until the books on the Iraq war hit the stands, especially since there are more then 500 reporters, many of whom were shut out of the Gulf War, "imbedded" among the fighting men themselves. I'll bet at least 499 of them already have taken notes for the book they are going to write.

Think of how many trees must die so that Ted Koppel can explain what it was like to sit in a tent in the desert and wonder if the Iraqi bringing him breakfast and a copy of the New York Times is really a suicide bomber.

CEF, Fusco featured on Our Town

This week on Our Town, Cohasset's very own cable TV show, co-hosts by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiac-omo meet with members of the newly reconstituted CEF(Cohasset Education Foundation) to discuss their goals and plans for upcoming projects.

School Committee member Stephen Fusco joins the hosts on the second half of the show to detail the technology needs of Cohasset schools.

In a very entertaining roll-in segment, viewers can find out about the collaboration between the Cohasset Historical Society and the Cohasset Drama Club to present the 1936 Broadway hit "The Women" in November at Town Hall.

This show airs Monday at 9pm on channel 10 and Tuesdays and Thursdays as well.

Watch every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 9p.m. on Comcast Channel 10.

1.7 percent. SSHL was founded in 2003 to help meet the needs of the trend.

"We were a group of concerned parents who saw a need and said, 'We can fill that.' It has grown into a great group with great diversity," said Young. Young has six children and has been homeschooling for the past 15 years.

While the families who participate in the program believe in home-based learning, as a group they do not endorse any one resource, method or philosophy of home-based learning over another. "We don't all homeschool the same way," said Conlon, a mother of two homeschooled children, but at the root of everyone's belief sits the ideal of attachment parenting, which creates strong, healthy bonds between children and their parents.

"We don't do a drop off program," said Conlon, adding there are parents present throughout all the day's classes to enable them to continue their active role in their children's education.

"Our goal is to have happy healthy kids and families and it's working," said Young.

With homeschooling, children of various ages and abilities learn together, and the classes in which children participate through the SSHL are the same way. "This is the natural way to be with other kids," said Conlon, adding, for example, during chess class, often the younger students will learn how to play the game from older students who already know how.

"It's a great mentoring opportunity," said Young. "This is such a peaceful environment. The kids are truly happy to be here. They are very loving and kind with one another — it's a very unique experience."

There are many different classes offered during Monday Funday, which runs for four sessions per year, and often children offer suggestions for classes they would like to see taught. "Because they get to pick, they're excited and we want to encourage that," said Young, adding if one child is interested in a class, chances are there will be many others who are just as excited in learning about the same topic. However, if a class begins and the children and parents find it is not fitting their needs, they will listen to feedback and find another class that works for the following session. Many of the classes are taught by parents who have or are homeschooling their children.

"We're so grateful for people giving us the opportunity. They've been so accepting and welcoming,"

— Krishyon Young, South Shore Home Learners

Young said the feeling in the homeschool environment is different from the school classroom experience because it is much more laid back. "It's a nice learning environment," she said, adding with many children who have been taken out of public school to begin homeschooling she can literally see the decompression process unfold and watch the stress and worry fall away. However, she said while many parents are interested in homeschooling their children, many do not know where to begin, and SSHL can help.

Conlon said many of the myths surrounding homeschooling are untrue and it is much more easy than it was in the past. There are many resources available for parents, including a wide variety of curriculum. "It's also very affordable," she said, noting many homeschooling families rely on a single income as one parent stays home to teach the children.

But having the dual role of parent and teacher is not always easy, which is why SSHL also provides monthly support meetings coordinated by board members, which focus on a different homeschooling-related topic each month. All who attend the meetings are welcome and encouraged to participate.

While the SSHL hosts the Monday Funday program at the Paul Pratt library, it also partners with other local organizations including Plimoth Plantation and the Audubon Society to provide activities for homeschooled children. She said often the Audubon Society will coordinate nature hikes and everyone in the family is invited to go along. "It is so much fun for them to be together learning," she said, which is what homeschooling is all about.

sorting through items donated at the Legion post and boxing them up to be shipped overseas. "They're all local kids and we contacted their parents and got their addresses," she said. With the length of time it will take for the packages to arrive, they will be in Iraq in time for Christmas.

Goff works for the Marshfield School System and said she coordinated a similar project there, which sent boxes to 17 soldiers. One of those soldiers was from Cohasset, as his mother-in-law works in the Marshfield schools and had requested a package be sent over to him. After hearing of her efforts, the Cohasset Legion members contacted her and asked if she would be willing to help in their efforts, to which she said, "Absolutely!"

Goff said she has a list of items which soldiers are requesting that includes sports magazines, pens and notebooks, zip top bags, sunscreen, winter hats and socks, Tylenol, batteries, cameras and phone cards. Toiletries and snacks are also high on the list. Residents have been making donations at the American Legion Post on the corner of Summer Street and Border Street, and for this recent shipment, Goff said the Sons of the American Legion provided her with $200 to purchase any items remaining on the list which had not been donated.

In addition, each care package had a special personalized message from children in her neighborhood. Catie Pitts, Callie and Charlie Neaves and Kate, James and Michael McKelvey all made special cards for the soldiers.

Goff said she will continue collecting donations and boxing them up for soldiers as long as there is a need. She said she has another shipment date set for Feb. 1, which will deliver Valentine's goodies to those serving. She said she has contacted the Deer Hill School and some classes will be making cards for the soldiers, as will some local Girl Scout troops. For this next shipment, she said sometime in January she will go through what has already been donated and the American Legion will provide $200 to purchase any remaining items on the list of needs. Shipments will also be sent in the spring and summer.

From what Goff has been told, while the packages are sent to a specific soldier with Cohasset ties, when the boxes arrive, they are put in a central location and all the soldiers share the goodies inside. "As long as they're there, we're going to keep doing this," Goff said.

Donations for soldiers are being collected at the American Legion Post on the corner of Summer Street and Border Street. There is a box in the lobby and both items to be sent and checks made out to the Sons of the American Legion are needed. The next shipment to soldiers will be sent Feb. 1.

Lack of audio at Town Meeting

The Board of Selectmen have directed Town Manager Bill Griffin to write a letter to Comcast regarding the lack of audio at the Special Town Meeting Nov. 13. Griffin brought the topic up with selectmen, as he had received letters about the poor quality of the broadcast — there was no sound at all coming through on the town's cable channel while Town Meeting was being broadcast. "This doesn't reflect well on us, or on them (Comcast)," he said.

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said it was also very hard to hear in the Sullivan Gymnasium as well. He suggested for the Annual Town Meeting, the town rent a set of speakers for the day to be placed behind the tables where the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee sit in the front, to allow the sound to be projected to the back of the room. Currently speakers are hanging from the ceiling, which does not amplify the sound very well. Dormitzer also suggested perhaps renting lapel microphones for speakers, which might further amplify sound.

Selectman Ted Carr said he has experience with planning large events and has worked with sound systems before. He said renting a set of speakers would be very cost-effective and would greatly improve sound for those in the audience at Town Meeting. He said he would look into the town's alternatives for the Annual Town Meeting.

Town Meeting and election dates set

The Board of Selectmen set the date for the Annual Town Meeting and Town Election at its Nov. 20 meeting. Town Meeting will be held Saturday, March 31 and the Town Election will be held April 7. The Warrant will close for citizens' petitions Jan. 12. For more information, please contact Town Clerk Marion Douglas at (781) 383-4100.

Paul Carlson to speak at Rotary

The Rotary Club will meet Monday, Nov. 27 at the Lightkeepers' Residence on Government Island. Speaking at the meeting will be Cohasset resident Paul Carlson, who will share his experiences in Romania. He and his wife Tana lived in Romania for three years, and it was one of many post-communist countries he was assigned to, with the task of helping develop financial markets and savings alternatives under the auspices of the U.S. Agency for International Development and the Asian Development Bank.

Carlson will speak to the country's transition from communist dictatorship to democratic market, as well as his introduction to the country and the impact of the lack of trust on development of the country's economy.

The Rotary Club meets every Monday night at the Lightkeepers' Residence on Government Island. Meetings are open to the public and anyone may attend. Please call Jean Roche at (781) 589-0461 if you plan on attending.

'Felt the need to tell the whole story'

Book goes beyond the 'sound bite'

By Amy van Aarem

Michael Weisskopf, author of "Blood Brothers," lost his right hand while embedded with the troops in Iraq. He will sign his book at 7 p.m., Tuesday (Nov. 28) at Barnes and Nobles in Derby Street Shoppes.

When Michael Weisskopf received the assignment to go to Iraq to cover the "Person of the Year" story for Time magazine, he never thought he would one day become the story. On his third week as an embedded reporter, Weisskopf found himself squarely in the wrong place at the wrong time. Riding in an open-air Humvee with a Time photographer and two young soldiers, a grenade landed at his side. Instinct took over and he reached for the grenade, lobbing it over the side of the Humvee, disintegrating his right hand in the process.

At that moment, Weisskopf's life changed forever. His book, "Blood Brothers: Among the Soldiers of Ward 57" tells the story of his journey through recovery inside Ward 57 at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, DC and the friends he meets along the way as they struggle to come to terms with their loss of limbs.

The story is a profile of four critically wounded men, the challenges they endured, and their personal struggles with the idea of what a hero really is. It is an often-overlooked window into the seedier side of war — that of amputation, rehabilitation and reentry into society with all the murkiness it entails.

Recently I had the opportunity to interview Mr. Weisskopf from his home in Washington, DC…

• In your book there is a descriptive passage comparing your need to go to Iraq to cover the story as that of a Junkie. Excerpt from Blood Brothers: "My rationale for going to Iraq as a career milestone no longer struck me as truthful. I already had scrapbooks full of big stories and enough money in the bank. …. Journalism had provided a regular opportunity to reinvent myself. I had to go to Iraq for another fix" Do you think, knowing what you know now and what you've been through, you would have made the same decision to go over?

"I guess if I knew it was going to end this way I wouldn't have gone over…no story is worth losing a limb for. The insurgency was just getting its legs; I didn't realize I was walking into the middle of such a danger zone."

• When journalists are sent abroad to cover these war stories are they given any training or preparations before they leave either by the military or other groups?

"Although the news organizations were conducting trainings for imbedded reporters outside of London, I received none, which compounded the problem. Soldiers and cops are all trained for dangerous moments — the loose weapon amid a group of people is not something I was prepared for… I was a journalist caught in a military moment, nothing to inform me other than instinct."

• What do you remember of the accident? "I remember picking up the grenade, the intense heat — craning my arm to throw — then everything went dark. I don't remember the sound of the explosion, when I woke up I could see the smoke behind me.

It was a risky proposition — riding in the cargo area of an open-air Humvee — we were one of three out on patrols that night… it was still early in the insurgencies (2003) they (the US military) were not braced for the danger that they are today. At that time there was one attack a day vs. today where there are 4 or 5 a day.

I had completed three weeks there and only had a couple days left in Iraq,… my writing partner hung back to write the outline — I had just transferred 10 notebooks to him… we would trade back and forth … with one of us going out on patrol while the other worked on the story." (The story they were working on was Time's "Person of the Year – The American Soldier" Time, December 21, 2003)

• When you are living through this incredible experience – specifically the moment of injury and the sequence of events after, are you automatically "the injured journalist" making mental notes of each excruciating detail in the face of this horrific tragedy, is there some part of you that's thinking … "this is excellent material for a story or book or are you just trying to survive?"

"On the contrary – that was the last thing on my mind – I was in amazing pain … like a fire I couldn't put out. It is a real loss to lose a part of your body, particularly in that stunning and violent fashion.

For once in my life I decided I'm not going to be a reporter I'm just going to try and heal. It was only after I had healed enough to return to work part time that I realized that there was nothing as dramatic and compelling out there as the story I had just lived through."

• In your book you make reference to the cardinal rule of reporters "… never to become the story". Having essentially become the story, how have your feelings about this evolved or changed?

"I decided that by being the center of the story I could be a voice for people who can't use words well and as bright and articulate as the guys on Ward 57 are, they don't make a living with words and I do. I could express what they had gone through… I thought it was important to be the story, yet I'm only 40 percent of the story, I am the narrative driver, the other 60 percent is devoted to the stories of Pete Damon, Luis Rodriguez and Bobby Issacs."

• Were they open to sharing their stories? "It's one thing when you're a reporter coming in to someone else's world — a day visitor — it is another thing to be living in their world… there is a lot of shorthand that you develop-sort of like your roommates in college — you develop a familiarity with one another — they didn't have to provide the context… I was seeing them on eye level."

In the book you share the spotlight with three other fellow residents in Ward 57, Pete Damon, Luis Rodriguez and Bobby Issacs, a mechanic, a medic, and a sergeant. Out of these three men, did you find a closeness or common ground with one in particular?

"I developed great friendships with each of the men in Blood Brothers. Pete was very similar in personality and background to my own. The South Side of Chicago, where I grew up, was not unlike Brockton, where Pete grew up: they had shoe factories, we had steel mills, they had the Lithuanian village we had Greek Town and 83rd… The way he learned about manhood, through his fists, was very common to my experience. Even though I'm 23 years older, there is something that transcends our ages … we entered life a different way, Pete dropped out of school and became an electrician, I continued with school, but we had a lot in common in our recovery … we were both puzzled and conflicted about our injuries – we both felt a lot of guilt – his for something he didn't do and mine for getting credit for something I didn't do… we were able to talk easily ….and share fears/anger/confusion/anxiety .. also we had similar injuries of the arm."

How has your injury changed the way you do your job?

"I tape everything now. I don't scribble anymore although I can sign checks with my left hand. I mostly use voice-activated software in order to compose. I talk into a microphone, and the words are transcribed to the screen… "

You are back with Time magazine as a Senior Correspondent, what are you working on now?

Currently I'm in the midst of the book tour, traveling around the country and to various military bases. I returned to Time in February, 2006. I have done some stuff on terrorism, pieces about Iran and Iraq.

Initially when the war began so many of these stories of Ward 57, the tragedy and gruesome carnage of war (Amputee Alley) were under-reported. It seems that recently we are hearing more, with the media uncovering and exposing the true face of war. Do you think the public is hearing enough?

"No and I don't think the public can get enough. When a reporter shows up at Ward 57 to do an interview, they only get a snapshot of reality. The soldiers, like professional athletes, have become adept at dealing with the public, they have perfected the 'sound-bite' and have a certain way of dealing with the public – they show a stiff upper lip – talk of going back to Iraq to be with their guys, etc… then the reporter goes home and files a story that appears to be a reflection of the situation but it is only a partial reflection. I felt the need to tell the real story."

On Tuesday, Nov. 28th at 7 p.m. Michael Weisskopf will be conducting a book signing and talk at the Barnes & Noble in Hingham (the Derby Street Shoppes). Pete Damon, one of the soldiers profiled in Weisskopf's book will also be attending. The public is welcome and encouraged to attend.

Amy van Aarem is freelance writer living in Hingham.

to work in a prudently fiscal manner while prioritizing the needs of the town.

These ideas currently discussed are not new to the town. In 1996 a diverse group of citizens, recognizing the financial circumstances, came together and established the Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers to support:

- The prudent use of tax dollars.
- Excellence in education.
- Prudent government management and spending.
- The eliminating of government waste in any form.
- Frugal spending with proper planning and proper execution.

The CCT believes that it is possible through prudent and frugal management to provide our citizens with superior services at a tax rate that is affordable to taxpayers of all ages.

Since its inception, the CCT has worked on behalf of local spending and management issues through public meetings with state and local officials, letters to newspapers explaining and supporting taxpayer issues, initiating interesting debates and introducing citizens' petition bylaw changes to improve town government.

Regrettably, a decade ago some residents were not receptive to the ideas of prudent fiscal management and disparaged those who were. Hopefully today, now that it is apparent that most have the same common goal, we can put away the campaigns of fear and work together. There is a great deal to accomplish to have us arrive at a state where we are affordably meeting all of our needs and education goals.

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own community.

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 15 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Abington Mariner, Rockland Mariner, Braintree Forum, Cohasset Mariner, Hanover Mariner, Hingham Journal, Marshfield Mariner, Norwell Mariner, Pembroke Mariner & Reporter, Scituate Mariner, Wareham Courier, and Weymouth News in giving the greatest gift of all – a gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way in helping those in need.

This year these local newspapers have identified several local charities to be the recipients of the gifts of hope donations.

A little bit of everything

CHS field hockey captain Laura Campedelli has all it takes to be a successful player and leader

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

If you were to guess the individual ingredients found in a highly successful varsity sports team, what would you say?

Maybe some players with excellent athletic skills? Others with good leadership? Still other players who could make things click on the field? How about sociability?

The Cohasset High varsity field hockey team of 2006 contained several players who specialized in one of these traits. No wonder the Skippers ended up with a stellar 12-4-2 record.

But one player embodied all of these characteristics. Meet Laura Campedelli.

From day one of the preseason to the final tournament game, Campedelli, one of the team's captains, filled her leadership role with poise and humility. Neither bossy nor conceited, Campedelli calmly guided her team with a consistent and approachable style.

> "She's always dependable, level-headed, and a great person to be around."
> Skippers coach Deb Bostwick on Laura Campedelli

Head coach Deb Bostwick praised Campedelli for her leadership ability, saying, "She's always dependable, level-headed, and a great person to be around."

Teammate Virginia Spofford added, "Laura leads quietly. When she has something to say, you can count on her comment as really important and constructive. For this reason, people listen closely to her."

One might find it interesting to take a peak into Campedelli's past. How did she develop into such a bright, accomplished player? If you drove by her home in her younger years, you would find her playing street hockey in the driveway with her father and little sister.

Campedelli's father played ice hockey both at the collegiate and pro levels. More than likely he shared a few words of advice with his girls. Maybe this piece of information explains Campedelli's speedy wrist shot on the field.

In seventh grade, Campedelli put down her hockey skates and rollerblades and switched into field hockey mode. She found her match.

Back to the present, Campedelli has always led her teammates by example. You will find few players who work harder in practice than she does. There's nothing artificial about the cliché "practice makes perfect" when speaking about Campedelli.

"Coach Bostwick's drills played a major part in our success this year," she said. "Our stick skills improved with every practice. We also maintained a high level of fitness throughout the year."

Campedelli started as the center midfielder for the entire season. Between her pinpoint wrist shot and her uncanny ability to find the open teammate, she made things happen on the field in a big way. To no one's surprise Campedelli's exceptional skills and field vision earned her a spot on the 2006 South Shore League All-Star team.

"Laura dictated the flow of every offensive surge," explained Bostwick. "Fearless and powerful, she became the 'go to' person on the field."

Her teammates agreed with Bostwick on Campedelli's important role on the field.

"She's quick on her feet. Laura can play offense and defense equally well," said Spofford. "She's also very selfless and has a knack for dishing the ball to the open player."

Campedelli said, "I love the quickness of the sport. I always feel mentally and physically involved in the action. It's just an intense sport which I really enjoy."

If you are one of the few players who can keep pace with Campedelli on the field, try keeping up with her off the field.

Laura's academic talent and community spirit have earned her a position in the National Honor Society. Academically speaking, she particularly likes French. Having completed AP French in her junior year, Campedelli plans to complete an independent study project

JV gridders finish strong in Hull

On a blustery night at Hull High School, the Cohasset High JV football team took on Hull in a season ending contest.

The Hull JV team entered the game at 6-3 and was looking to add another notch in the win column. However, they underestimated their neighbors from the south.

Brendan Doonan kicked off deep into Hull territory, against the prevailing northeasterly wind, pinning them inside their own 10-yard line. Tremendous tackles by Dana Valentine and Alec Livingstone pushed Hull back even deeper.

On the third play from scrimmage, the Skipper line, led by Will Lynner, forced Hull back into their end zone for the safety. Cohasset then received the ball back and on the first play from scrimmage, Derek Schwantner went off tackle left and sprinted 50 yards for another Cohasset score.

Cohasset's defense on Hull's next drive, and every Hull drive thereafter, was strong and punishing. The D-line shut down the run game up the middle, and the secondary shut down the wings and the passing game. Lynner, Cameron Washak, Nick Savage, Mike Dorian, Dave Hurlbut and Nick Lieberman were ferocious on the line.

Valentine, Livingstone, Mike Froio, Jake Wheelright, Vin Curran, Dave Toomey, Andy McKenna, Sean MacCarthy and Jeff Charles kept Hull from making plays. Valentine and Froio each recorded a sack. Doonan had two interceptions on the night, the last one to end the game with a 40-yard return.

Toomey broke up a critical pass play that would have put Hull within striking distance of the end zone. Defensive back Charlie Mushin blanketed the Hull receivers.

Offensively, the Skippers punished the Hull D-line by running the ball up the middle, off tackle left and off tackle right. The offensive line of Dan Sullivan, Lieberman, Lynner, Thomas Barrett and Matt Wasel allowed the Skipper backfield to do their thing, which is run. There was no need to take chances throwing the ball in the gusty wind.

Cohasset's second touchdown of the night came after a Froio first down, a Johnny Maher quarterback sneak on fourth-and-inches and a Valentine five-yard run. It was second-and-5 when Maher took the snap, rolled left and with a key block from Dean Driscoll, kept the ball, going the distance for the score. The conversion from Maher to Schwantner was good. Cohasset was on top 16-6.

Cohasset's next score was set up by Maher to tight end Nick Savage with a sweet pass over the top to put Cohasset on the Hull 10-yard line.

Youth lacrosse registration begins Dec. 2

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will open its sign-up for the 2007 spring season on Saturday, Dec. 2 from 9 to 11 a.m. at the gymnasium at Cohasset High School.

Families who sign up on the first day of registration have an opportunity to save money, paying the registration price from 2006 of $150 for one player and $275 for two and $375 for three children. Registrants after the first sign-up day – and sign-ups will remain open by mail through a second in-person sign-up day on Jan. 6 – will pay the new, higher, 2007 prices.

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls at the 15 & Under level (7th and 8th graders) and 13 & Under level (5th and 6th grades) and 11 & Under level (grades 3-4). No previous lacrosse experience is necessary, and the program welcomes and encourages new players at all levels.

The youth lacrosse program is dedicated to introducing children to the sport. All players receive roughly equal playing time regardless of ability. Cohasset's boys teams participate in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League, while its girls play in the South Shore Lacrosse League; neither league keeps standings or has playoffs, encouraging fair and equal playing time and a commitment to educating all participants in how to play the game.

Every Cohasset team makes several road trips per year, which can be as close as games in Scituate or as far away as Nantucket.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse expects to field 12 or more teams this spring, depending on demand and available coaching. The program is committed to accepting every player who signs up during its registration period, but roster spots will be limited; if the program has reached or surpassed its ideal roster size when registration closes on Jan. 6, it is possible that some late registrants will be turned away.

Following the initial sign-up day, families interested in participating in the program can register by mail, at the 2007 price of $160 for one player, $300 for two, and $400 for three. That price will hold through the Jan. 6 sign-up day – also held at Cohasset High School from 9 to 11 a.m.

At that point, if the program has reached its ideal roster sizes, registration will be closed. A waiting list will be established and any available spaces will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis, and charged a late registration fee of $25.

Parents who can not attend the Dec. 2 can wait until Jan. 6 to register in person, or can contact Chuck Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com to request registration forms. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

The registration fee covers all Cohasset Youth Lacrosse events, a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to Lacrosse Magazine for Kids.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents.

In general, games for boys and girls are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set, although the older teams for both boys and girls typically have two practices and one game each week. At the youngest level, there typically is one practice per week. The teams will begin practicing indoors in early March and begin playing games in April. Cohasset's season concludes with the annual Family Day celebration – featuring intra-town games — in June.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse works with other town sports organizations to minimize conflicts and to allow players to participate in as many activities as possible.

In addition to players, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for additional coaches at all levels.

There will be more information on the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program available at the Dec, 2 sign-up. If you need more information in the interim, or are interested in volunteering to coach, contact Jaffe at (781)383-6688 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

Send us your sports news

Sports teams and leagues are encouraged to send their results and news to the Mariner. Information can be faxed to 781-837-4543 or emailed to sports editor Mark Goodman at mgoodman@cnc.com or mailed to Community Newspapers/South, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, 02050. CHS championship banners

The Cohasset High School Athletic Department is in the process of creating new championship banners for the high school gymnasium. CHS wants these banners to as accurate as possible.

After researching the CHS Athletic Department trophy case and old banners, the department has compiled the list below of Cohasset High School league, sectional, and state championships.

Any CHS grads or community members who can help the school with any dates that may have been missed should contact Athletic Director Ron Ford at: Cohasset Middle - High School, 143 Pond Street, Cohasset, MA 02025; Phone: (781) 383-6103; E-mail: rford@cohassetk12.org

Cohasset High School thanks you for your help.

"Legs" Valentine took four Hull defenders with him to the 5-yard line, and Froio went in trademark fashion "up the middle" for the score. Doonan contributed with a solid point after attempt.

The next score was set up when Cohasset took over on downs. Maher optioned right with Valentine, kept the ball and turned up field, faked to the middle, and sprinted 35 yards down the sideline to score. Doonan's PAT was good, and Cohasset was on top 30-6.

Cohasset finished 4-4-2 for the season, winning its last two games. The Skippers scored in all but one game. Maher led his offensive unit with five rushing touchdowns and seven passing. Five other Skippers got in on the scoring this year; Savage, Valentine, Froio, Schwantner and Doonan, showing the versatility and depth on the squad.

However, none of the scoring would be possible without the tremendous hard work and effort of the offensive line. Sullivan, Lynner, Lieberman, Savage, Barrett and Kevin O'Connell made up the formidable front line that allowed the Skippers to establish the run game throughout the season.

Defensively, Livingstone was a standout linebacker, always in on the action, leading the Cohasset secondary. Doonan came on strong in the second half of the season using his natural athletic ability to defend against the pass.

Coach Brian Pattison commented, "I couldn't have been prouder of these boys. We have gone from a bunch of kids playing with a football to a football family playing as a team. The last two games of the season showed how much the kids have grown to trust each other and how to play as a team.

"Cam Washak, Sean MacCarthy, and Dave Hurlbutt didn't see much action in the beginning of the season, but in the last few games stepped up on defense and special teams when we needed it. Jeff Charles has also shown that he is going to be a force next year in football no matter where we play him on the field. Brendan Doonan has established himself as a Mr. Everything player for us.

"We started practice on August 21 and just ended the season on November 17. It's going to be hard for me not to see the boys every day. I am just so proud of the dedication and hard work they put into the season."

Coach Craig Davis agreed, saying, "Each game got better and better. Our record doesn't reflect the talent the team has. We tied a couple of games and lost some close ones. Give us a few more points and we'd be looking at a seven- or eight-win season. The Hull game was the best game we played all year. The defense was outstanding and we scored 30 points for the first time this year so that pretty much sums up how the offense did.

"Every player on the team played a key role during the game and that's an exciting way to end the season."

involving the language this spring. She has also actively participated in the Social Awareness Organization.

In her free time, which is slim to none, Campedelli has found a passion for the arts. She loves to paint, and her works often appear in the high school art magazine. To extend her creativity, she has taken piano lessons for the past four years and performs regularly.

So what's next for this talented young lady? Campedelli has applied early decision to Boston College, where both of her parents attended. No doubt she will certainly succeed in her post-high school years. But Cohasset's athletic and academic communities will grit their teeth over her departure.

"Part of our success this year came from the incredible chemistry we possessed as a team," explained Campedelli. "Next year I think the field hockey team will show a similarly close relationship."

What happened at the closing banquet supports Campedelli's point. Instead of choosing an MVP, Bostwick honored every player as an important aspect of the team with engraved medals.

Fencing challenges the mind and body

Local classes offered for adults and children

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

What strategy will lead the way out of a labyrinth? Why do reflections in the mirror appear opposite to that which is real?

These questions posed by Harry Shamir of the South Shore SaEF Fencing Clubs are examples of "intellectual teasers" and a method he uses to teach students about fencing. "It's really like a game of physical chess," he said.

Shamir and his assistant, Ari Levitt direct the SaEF Fencing Club classes Wednesday evenings at the Old Ship Parish House on Main Street. Younger members of the club ranging in age from 8 to 12 years old attend sessions on Wednesday evenings and practice predominantly with Levitt. Shamir also conducts sessions on Thursday evenings for adults at the Hingham Community Center.

As youngsters arrived for class with their parents they quickly prepared for the session and greeted fellow students, clearly following guidelines for appropriate behavior. "Safety is the most fundamental thing," said Shamir. "Their jackets are made of protective material, they wear headgear with face masks and most importantly, they are taught how to handle the 'weapons' in the safest way possible."

This thought was echoed by Mark De Nicola of Middleboro, whose son Kevin, 9 recited one of the safety rules as he donned his gear for the class. "We have our mask on whenever our weapon goes into our hand," said Kevin. His Dad added, "There is great focus on safety and proper handling of the equipment. That's one of the things we really like about Harry; he runs a tight ship. That's important for kids at this age."

Fencing has a background rich in history and lore. Studying this sport provides participants with a social outlet and scholarly interest as well as a new physical skill. The origins of fencing can be traced back many centuries throughout Europe with many countries contributing to the evolution of the art. Having been affiliated throughout the ages as a method of settling disputes with "honor," it evolved into an activity of etiquette and style, a gentleman's sport or dueling with manners. Shamir summarized modern day fencing as a healthy way to "…. Deflect anger and increase activity all while having fun and not getting hurt."

In addition to learning about the background of the sport and its rules and regulations, participants discover the distinctions among various types of swords used in fencing. Shamir uses samples of a "foil," "epee," and a "sabre" to teach the variations in blades, grips and techniques in each piece and the game in which it is used. Points to win are earned by a simple "touch" to the opponent in the designated perimeter. Levitt, a member of fencing teams when attending McGill University explained that at competitive levels, fencing jackets are electronically monitored, thus there are few questions about who wins a point anymore.

Shamir described the fencing program for the 8-12 year old students. "We teach fundamentals," he said. "They will learn safety, stance, walk and technique. They learn with one hand then with the other hand. Then they must choose a hand. Following that they have more practice sessions. The classes are an hour long.

"I like parents to stay but I require them to be here the last 20 minutes of the class," he said. "It is important that they understand what the children are learning so that as they practice during the week someone else knows what is correct. It is different from baseball or other sports where older kids in the neighborhood might be able to teach them."

Shamir has developed a version of a foil for beginners that can be used to practice grip and stance but is made of plastic thus is not as heavy as a standard implement would be. In addition to being lighter weight, the piece is shorter in length at 20 inches long. "When the students are 8-10 they are too young to manage anything but the plastic. It depends on the individual child when we make the transition and the decision involves the parent the child and me."

Shamir mentioned he has had positive results from children with learning disabilities who have participated in his courses. "There have been students with ADHD (attention deficit) who have joined in nicely," he said. "I would encourage parents to call and speak to me about the class."

Many benefits can be gained from a study of fencing including coordination, balance and flexibility. Though these can be honed easily while young, Shamir believes this is an ideal sport for people of all ages. A beginner in his 40s, he attended his first fencing class because it was a "free seminar" and "something to do." Now some 20-plus years later he is sharing his passion with many newcomers and others who follow him as he presents his teachings to the South Shore.

John Rusinak watched as his son, Dimitri, 10 jousted with pals under Levitt's supervision on the floorboards of the Parish House. Each week he comes to Hingham from Duxbury for Wednesday night fencing. "We started last year after school with Harry," he said. "I'm a novice but I've learned just from going to the sessions with Dimitri. I think getting the foundation of any sport is critical. This is so different and it's important for me to learn it. Body positions and techniques are things that they learn and need to practice.

"We also wanted him to be involved in an individual sport if he wanted to," Rusinak said. "There are so many team sports and he has had all of that, but this is a different experience. He chose this. It is less aggressive, there is thought involved, lots of strategy and lots of interaction. It fits his personality. And it's a different group of kids. He loves to come here. The other thing that's great about fencing is that kids learn to 'win' and 'lose' many time during the hour. A point is over within seconds and there is a winner and a loser and you deal with it and get right back in there. That gives them a lot more experience than waiting all night for one winner and then waiting all week until there is another game. I like that they move on in this sport. It's a totally different way for kids to learn. And we take our manners very seriously!"

De Nicola said the kids who are here really want to be there.

"This is one of the highlights of my son's week," he said. "It's hard to find people who teach fencing, especially as well as Harry. The kids learn respect, manners and discipline as well as the skills all while they have fun. It's a great experience for them. When you find a group like this, you want to keep it together."

Annual meeting of CYBSA Members

To all CYBSA parents, volunteers and other interested parties:

First, on behalf of the CYBSA, a thank you to all those who volunteered and otherwise supported the CYBSA this past year. Despite the rain, we enjoyed a fun and exciting spring season in both softball and baseball.

Those who played summer ball acquitted themselves well in the competitive summer leagues. Our boys 11A team won the District Championship. One of our Junior League teams (13- and 14-year old boys) won the championship in our Norwell/Cohasset Junior Baseball League.

We started a fall baseball program this year, and it was met with great enthusiasm by the players, and great weather! The League held its first annual awards night on Oct. 24, and our division winners were presented with their awards.

Preparations for next year are well under way.

As per our previous communications, the CYBSA ratified a new Constitution last year. The Constitution is available for your review on the League's website - CYBSA.net. Among other things, the Constitution provides for an annual meeting of the members of the CYBSA. That meeting will take place on Wednesday, Dec. 6, at 7:30 p.m., at the Cohasset Middle-High School Cafeteria.

All Members of the CYBSA are invited to attend (membership applications are available on the website - any adult who is interested in furthering the objectives of the CYBSA may become a regular member).

The Constitution further provides for a Board of Directors that is elected by the CYBSA's Regular Members. We are in the process of effectuating the transition to a fully elected Board. This year, with service to start on Jan. 1, 2007, there will be four elected positions that will open on the Board. Each position has a three-year term. We encourage all interested members to run for the board!

There is a short Statement of Interest form posted on the website - if you are interested in running for the Board, please complete the form, and return to the CYBSA via email. We will be accepting applications for the Board through 5 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 1.

On Monday, Dec. 4, we will post the slate of candidates for the elected positions on the Board. All regular members of the CYBSA will be eligible to vote for the Board candidates; the election will be held at the Annual Meeting on Dec. 6.

Regular members who cannot attend the annual meeting, but wish to vote, will be able to do so by absentee ballot. The absentee ballots will be available on the CYBSA web site.

Many thanks for your continued support - please do not hesitate to contact us with any questions. Again - those interested in the League - please run for a seat on the Board!

Save the Date – Dec. 14

The Harlem Rockets are coming to Cohasset on Thursday, Dec. 14 at the CMHS gym at 6:30 p.m. for a night of comedy basketball entertainment.

Come early to get a good seat. Look for more details coming soon.

South Shore Outlaws

Plymouth's semi-professional football team, the South Shore Outlaws, is looking for players. Anyone interested in trying out for next season should contact general manager, Ron Rezendes, at (508) 747-6083.

The Outlaws would like anyone interested in cheerleading to contact Michelle Griffin t (508) 317-3113.

Extra Innings upcoming clinics

Extra Innings at 319 Manley St. in West Bridgewater is accepting registrations for their upcoming clinics. To register for any of these clinics or for information call 508-580-3113 or go to extrainningswbridgewater.com.

Baseball Pitching and Catching Clinic – This four-week clinic will be held Mondays from Nov. 20 to Dec. 11, and will focus on mechanics, release, balance, follow-through and much more. Lead by Josh White, a 2006 graduate of Bridgewater State College and a starting pitcher his whole career.

Josh has been with Extra Innings from the beginning and has been involved in all their pitching clinics, as well as numerous camps and private instruction. This clinic has limited openings. Ages 7 through 12 will meet from 6:15 to 7:30 p.m., and ages 13 and over will meet from 7:45 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Baseball Holiday Vacation Clinic – This four-day event, for ages 6 to 12, will take place the week of Tuesday, Dec. 26 to Friday, Dec. 29, from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. All aspects of the game will be covered with special emphasis directed to a particular skill each day. Because Christmas falls on a Monday, each registrant will receive one free private lesson.

Softball Holiday Vacation Clinic – This four-day event, for ages 10 to 16, will run the week of Tuesday, Dec. 26 to Friday, Dec. 29, from 10:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. This clinic will include all aspects of the game of softball and is conducted by the Extra Innings staff from Bridgewater State College. All those signed up for this clinic will receive one free private lesson.

Registration for 2007 Bay State Winter Games

Registration for the 22nd annual Bay State Winter Games opened Nov. 1. This year's games begin on Feb. 2, 2007, and are open to athletes ranging in age from 9 to 60. Athletes participating in the games represent more than 200 Massachusetts communities. For more information about the Bay State Winter Games, including a schedule of events and registration forms, visit www.baystategames.org/winter or call the Bay State Games' office at (781) 932-6555.

Alumni soccer games

The third annual Cohasset Alumni Women's Soccer Game is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 25 at 1 p.m. at Milliken Field.

All female alumnae and current soccer players at Cohasset High School are welcome to play. The game will be played between odd year graduates vs. even year graduates, and will consist of two 40-minute halves.

Anyone interested should contact Alyssa McNamara at pumkinpumper@gmail.com or (781)962-6049.

There is also a men's game being organized by Jeff Donze (jeff.donze@comcast.net). That game will also be on Nov. 25, 1 p.m. on Milliken Field.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Reports card day of reckoning arrives

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

A,B,C,D, and the dreaded F. That's what it comes down to, more or less. Report cards were issued yesterday; any teens reading this, I hope you've taken care of business. We do not roam the halls of the high school with Scarlet Letters, but we may as well. GPA and class rank fill the minds of more competitive students, turning peers into rivals. Has the prospect of higher learning prompted students to burn their bridges? I thought senior year was supposed to be easy. Students who will start working full-time next year don't have the college process to worry about; they can smile when their friends are complaining. They'll be supporting themselves while the rest of us will be about 20 grand in debt. Circumventing the whole college process by getting a full time job is admirable.

Personally, I plan on attending graduate school just so I can avoid becoming a member of the regular workforce. I'm not going to lie; the prospect of a nine-to-five job makes school appealing. Well, enough about grades and the future, let's get back in the now with this week's news.

• Monday night the CHS Athletics Department retired the number 22 from the Hockey Team, in honor of Kurt Gritzan. A commemorative plaque with a jersey will be hung on display in the school. The Hockey Team will also have Kurt's jersey with them at games this season.

• Wednesday the Senior girls of '007, helmed by threw down the gauntlet against the Juniors in this year's Powder Puff Game. The Seniors were (surprise, surprise) expected to obliterate the Juniors. The Seniors were coached by Derry Schwantner and the Juniors were led by Coach Willis.

• Last Tuesday Pat Doonan, Meg Anderson, Sally Meehan, and Charlie Czerkawski attended the MIAA Sportsmanship Summit at Gilette Stadium.

GPA and class rank fill the minds of more competitive students, turning peers into rivals.

• Recently, Mr. Buckley's Law class went down to the Cohasset Police Department and learned about the booking process and the different weapons the police have in their arsenal. Sgt. Quigley and Officer Kenney generously treated the class to pizza. The class has been meeting with the CPD as part of a continued effort to improve relations between teens and the local police. Although these meetings have made some steps in the right direction, Cohasset's teenagers are always going to get in trouble, no matter how much pizza's involved.

• Last Monday the Social Awareness Organization held a food drive.

• Last Thursday CHS held a Hunger Banquet during lunch. Students filed into the cafeteria and were issued red and white tickets, to determine whether they would be treated with a free meal of wraps, pizza and cookies, or a meager serving of rice, vegetables and water. Callie Barrett, Lacey Richardson, and Mary Previte organized the Hunger Banquet. Students are also encouraged to bring in canned goods for the Food Pantry.

Today is Black Friday. Dozens of stores have some wicked sweet deals. Just search "Black Friday" online to see the ads for the different stores. Today is perfect for gift shopping, or just for spoiling yourself. You don't want to miss some of these bargains. Stay out of trouble, and enjoy Thanksgiving weekend!

'Demystifying Dyslexia' presentation is Dec. 5

Parent Advisory Council of Cohasset welcomes back Dr. Isabel Phillips from Massachusetts General Hospital. All are invited to a presentation titled "Demystifying Dyslexia," which will take place Tuesday, Dec. 5, at 7:30 p.m., at Osgood School Library, behind Deer Hill School, 210 Sohier St., Cohasset.

What exactly is dyslexia? This session will focus on the primary diagnostic red flags of dyslexia. Phillips will draw upon a century of research in the fields of neuropsychology, ophthalmology, linguistics and education to address case studies that distinguish classic dyslexia from other types of reading and language disabilities. A question and answer period will follow the presentation.

All workshops and presentations are free, and sponsored by the PSO/PAC Parent Advisory Council South Shore PAC Network, which has joined with local PAC members in the South Shore area to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. South Shore PAC Network hopes to meet informally throughout the year.

To be added to the email network for updates forward your contact information to: southshorepac@comcast.net.

Rusty Skippers to perform

The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's own community concert band, will be performing their annual Holiday Pops Concert at First Parish Church on Saturday, Dec. 2, at noon. The Skippers have been preparing a variety of new holiday pieces including "Sleigh Ride," made famous by the Boston Pops, "Carol of the Bells," "What Child is This" and many other familiar tunes and carols in all styles. With several new members, as well as band veterans, the Rusty Skippers have never sounded better. The concert is free and appropriate for all ages. A free-will cash offering for the Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken.

The band will offer a preview of this concert Sunday, Nov. 26, at Harbor House in Hingham at 2:30 p.m. The Skippers will also be playing other selections at the lighting of the town tree Friday, Nov. 24. The Rusty Skipper performances are funded in part by Cohasset Cultural Council.

The Rusty Skippers were formed in 1995 as part of the Cohasset Harborfest at the suggestion of the late Rev. Ed Atkinson of First Parish in Cohasset. The Rusty Skippers play under the direction of Steve Biagini, the instrumental music director at Deer Hill School.

After the December concert schedule is completed, the band will reconvene in the early spring to prepare selections for the concerts at the South Shore Festival of the Arts and American Cancer Society Relay for Life and at various nursing homes.

The Rusty Skippers Band welcomes new members at the beginning of each season. Anyone who is interested in joining the band can contact Steve Biagini, c/o Deer Hill School, at sbiagini@cohassetk12.org.

Alumni soccer games scheduled

The third annual Cohasset Women's Soccer Game is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 25, at 1 p.m., on Miliken Field. All women alumni and current soccer players at CHS are welcome to play. Two 40-minute sessions will be played.

Any players who are interested should visit pumkinpumper@gmail.com_or 781-962-6049. Odd-year graduates will play even-year graduates.

There is also a men's game being organized by Jeff Donze Saturday, Nov. 25, at 1 p.m., on Miliken Field. For information, contact Donze at jeff.donze@comcast.net.

Storytelling program

Grub Street South at Buttonwood is a collaborative program between Boston's only independent writing center, Grub Street, and Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset. On Wednesday, Nov. 29, at 7 p.m., at Buttonwood, Stace Budzko will teach a class titled "Characters in Conflict – The Art of Storytelling."

The essence of storytelling is action. Something has to happen. In this workshop, class members will learn to create original, well-rounded characters and place them in a variety of conflicts – some big, some small. Through in-class writing exercises and readings, the class will learn how to create stories that will capture readers.

Budzko holds a master's degree in fine arts in creative writing from Emerson College, where he currently teaches composition and creative writing. In addition, he is the writer-in-residence at the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston. Among other accomplishments, he was a finalist for the Raymond Carver Short Story Award. At present, he is working on his first novel.

Reservations are requested and can be made by calling Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

Adult flu clinic offered

An adult flu clinic, sponsored by Cohasset Board of Health, will take place Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to noon, at Cohasset Town Hall auditorium, 41 Highland Ave.

This flu clinic is open to all adult citizens of Cohasset. Parents of young children should check with their pediatrician to see if the shot is available at the physician's office.

Participants are reminded to wear short-sleeve shirts. Seniors must bring Medicare part B and/or senior health insurance cards.

For more information please call Judy Fitzsimmons, registered nurse, at 383-2210.

Food for Friends at Stop & Shop

The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company today kicked-off its 17th annual Food for Friends program to raise over $1 million for more than 300 local hunger relief organizations throughout the Northeast. Stop & Shop's charitable program will run through Thursday, Nov. 30th.

As part of Stop & Shop's Food for Friends campaign, all Stop & Shop stores, including Cohasset, will sell paper turkeys at checkout for $1 each. The turkeys can be personalized by each customer and will be displayed throughout the store. One hundred percent of the funds raised in Stop & Shop stores will be donated to local hunger relief organizations.

Hull Holidays

The Hull Holiday Showcase will be held Saturday, Nov. 25, in the Clarion Hotel-Conference Center at 45 Hull Shore Drive in Hull, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is free.

Purchase gifts and decorations for the holiday season from retailers, artisans, crafters and more. The Snowflake Café will feature muffins, soups, sandwiches, hot chocolate, coffee and much more. Pick up gift certificates at great prices from local restaurants while at the Café. Before having a bite to eat, drop your purchases off at the gift-wrapping center and they'll be beautifully wrapped for you.

Bring the children along. There will be a room just for kids to do their holiday shopping for family, friends, teachers and everyone on their shopping list. All items will be priced under $10. Kids can also decorate their own gingerbread man or woman for free. Santa will be at the Showcase from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1:30 to 3 p.m.

A professional photographer will be available to take pictures with Santa or have a family portrait taken for this year's holiday card with Santa or among the festive holiday decor.

Sponsored by the Hull Nantasket Chamber of Commerce.

Winter art classes

South Shore Art Center announces its winter schedule of courses and workshops, including "Not Everyone Does Email" – a calligraphy course taught by Cynthia Henrich, and two classes with new instructor Sharon Perlmutter: "Nuts and Bolts of Watercolor" and "Trompe L'O'eil." Registration beganNov.17 and courses start the week of Jan. 16.

Eileen Rotty will lead a workshop on the essentials of drawing the figure on Jan. 27 and 28. Other workshops include tile making, "Akua Kolor" printmaking, digital photography, portrait photography and a master book arts workshop with book artist Peter Madden.

Children's classes include "Learning from the Masters", papermaking, printmaking and "Elements of Design". Courses are available for students age 4 1/2 and older, including specialized courses for teens. Most materials are supplied for children's classes and prices range from $55 to $175. Financial assistance is available through the Lois Weltman Memorial Fund for Children, requiring a student be recommended by an art teacher. All classes begin mid-January.

Gift certificates are available in any denomination and make great holiday gifts. For more information, call 781-383-2787 or visit ssac.org.

Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sunday, from noon to 4 p.m. South Shore Art Center is at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

American Girl events at Buttonwood Books

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, is celebrating the release of the new American Girl movie, "Molly: An American Girl on the Home Front," with two events, an American Girl party and a drawing for two dolls.

"Molly Movie Event" will take place Saturday, Nov. 25, at 1 p.m., at Buttonwood, and feature activities, a craft and a tea party. It is suitable for girls ages 8 through 12, and they are invited to bring their doll and join in the fun.

The event is free, however, reservations are required. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 for reservations.

The doll drawing will take place Sunday, Nov. 26. Entry forms are available now at Buttonwood, where the dolls are currently on display. The lucky winner will receive the two American Girl dolls, Molly and Emily. No purchase is necessary, and the winner need not be present to win. Complete rules are posted at the store.

Mags Harries to speak at Patrons Dinner

Artist Mags Harries will be the guest speaker at the annual Patrons Dinner at South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Thursday, Nov. 30.

Harries' public art projects have received national recognition and have won many awards. They are also popular and accessible. She observes the small things that, like DNA, reveal all that is important to know about a place. She looks for the charged image, the jolt of electricity that often lies dormant, but can be released to energize a public place and community. Some of her older projects, such as "Asaroton ;76" at the cross walk at Boston's Haymarket and "Glove Cycle" at Porter Square, Cambridge subway station have become landmarks for communities.

For information about attending the Patron Dinner, contact Candace Cramer at ccramer@ssac.org

South Shore Art Center hours are: Monday through Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday, from noon to 4 p.m. The gallery is accessible to all, and there is no admission charge.

Christmas Fair at Greek Church

The Panagia Greek Orthodox Church at 811 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset will hold a Christmas Fair, Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Greek baked goods and hot apple cider, as well as handcrafted goods such as decorated wreaths and boxwood trees, felt designer handbags, crocheted and knitted goods and a Grandma's attic table will be featured.

Christmas concerts to benefit Wellspring

The Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale have joined with Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull to present two Christmas concerts to benefit the Wellspring Diane Edson Fund, which provides direct financial aid to people in crisis. This cause is meaningful to the singers since Diane Edson was a member of Unicorn Singers for 15 years until her death. Concerts will take place at House of Prayer Lutheran Church in Hingham Saturday, Dec. 9, at 8 p.m., and First Parish in Cohasset Sunday, Dec. 10, at 4 p.m.

The concert is called "Dancing Day," and features various settings of the old Cornish carol "tomorrow shall be my dancing day…this have I done for my true love." The principal works are a suite of Christmas carol dances called Ringeltänze, which will be accompanied by piano and hand bell choir, and John Rutter's cantata, "Dancing Day." A number of familiar carols, some with hand bells and instruments to brighten the sound, will be rendered by the assembled audience and choirs.

Tickets at $15 each can be purchased at First Parish in Cohasset by calling 781-383-1100; by phone or mail from Wellspring, 814 Nantasket Ave., Hull, MA 02045/781-925-3211; from Kathy Reardon at 781-749-0162; and at Noble's in Hingham Square. Ask to be a concert sponsor at $25 to help support Wellspring. Tickets are good for either performance and will be sold at the door as available.

Wassail Party

The Cohasset Historical Society will usher in the Holiday Season with its annual Wassail Party Sunday, Dec. 3, from 2 to 4 p.m., and invites the community, members and guests to enjoy light refreshments, holiday music with harpist, Rachel Eisenhaure and convivial conversation in the Pratt Building at 106 South Main Street.

During the Wassail Party, the Historical Society's new exhibit of 1930's style clothing and memorabilia will be available for viewing. This exhibit highlights a portion of the Society's extensive clothing collection and is set up in vignettes appropriate to the type of clothing on display. Plan to join the Historical Society for a cordial afternoon respite from the bustle of the season.

NE Artisans Showcase returns to Hingham

After a year's hiatus, the New England Artisans Showcase will return to Hingham on Saturday, Dec. 2. Eighteen exhibitors will be offering folk art and traditional crafts ranging from the familiar — including tin ware, rag rugs and yellow-ware pottery — to the unusual, such as sailor's valentines, trapunto painting and scherenschnitte. This year's show will be held at the Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center, 16 Hull St. (Route 228) in Hingham, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This is an exceptional gathering of talented artisans from six New England states whose work will be familiar to folk art collectors and fans of the former Winterfest Folk Art Show. Many of these gifted craftsmen have had their work featured in national magazines such as Early American Life, Country Living and Country Home. Three Hingham residents are among those exhibiting — woodcarver Tim Jumper, folk artist Maura Campbell, and decoy carver Bill Sarni. This once-a-year show is an opportunity to meet some of the country's best known artisans, and to purchase their museum-quality, handcrafted work.

Admission is $3, and all ticket proceeds benefit the Hingham High School Robert Weiser Memorial Scholarship fund.

"Santa with Dog," by Tim Jumper of Hingham, is just one of many folk art items at the Dec. 2 showcase at Glastonbury Abbey.

Heritage Museums & Gardens Spectacle of Lights

A holiday festival of collaboration and partnership

Sandwich, Cape Cod – 2006 – Feel that breathtaking joy you felt as a child when the holiday lights at Heritage Museums & Gardens light up the cold winter sky. This year the museum is partnering with cultural, social, education and business institutions to bring to the forefront the diverse and multi-faceted side of the Cape Cod community. Heritage offers a completely new and expanded Spectacle of Lights complete with musical events provided by area school children, 100 acres of spectacular lighted garden landscapes installed in part by the Upper Cape Cod Regional Technical School electricians class, two museum buildings with elegant indoor Victorian holiday decorations, a charming boutique, and light bites and little sweets by The Casual Gourmet of Centerville, served indoors to warm and satisfy holiday visitors.

The museum will light the way during the holiday season with special programs for cultural, education and social service organizations. Collaborating with Heritage this year for Spectacle of Lights are the Diabetes Education center of Cape Cod (DECCC) through the generous funding of the Francis X and Mary E. Weny Charitable Foundation and the Massachusetts Cultural Council. Other cultural partners include the Sandwich Glass Museum, Thornton Burgess Museum, The Cape Cod Museum of Art and Plimoth Plantation. Members in good stand with those institutions will receive 50% off the admission to Spectacle of Lights by showing their current membership card.

DECCC is a not-for-profit organization whose mission is to function as a professional and dedicated hub that delivers a range of resources to people with diabetes and their caregivers, including education support and prevention guidance. The menu of services available at the center is specifically aimed at assisting those struggling with diabetes to more effectively cope with the disease and its life altering consequences. The vision of the Center's Board of Directors and professional staff is to ensure that all people on Cape Cod, regardless of economic background, have a place that will assist them to truly focus on their disease in a professional, supportive environment. DECCC is located at 109 Main Street (Route 25), Windmill Plaza, West Dennis (508)394-8818.

Heritage Museums & Gardens is pleased to also be collaborating with Edaville USA in Carver, MA. Each attraction will offer discounted tickets to the other property during the holiday season. Although both are uniquely different, each offers family's an opportunity to experience millions of twinkling lights, holiday decorations and activities, entertainment, visits with Santa Claus and seasonal taste treats, Edaville USA's Christmas Festival of Lights begins on November 10 and runs through January 1, 2007;

Heritage's Spectacle of Lights begins November 24 and runs through December 31. Along with Edaville the museum is working in the spirit of the season again this year with Dan'l Webster Inn in Sandwich Center. Other business partners include Bartlett Tree Expert Company, Inc. giving lectures through-out the grounds to garden clubs and visitors regarding the horticultural heritage of the Cape. Plus visitors will be treated to a holiday light display designed by Steve Stimpson and Associates in the Hart Family Maze Garden.

Three renowned artists on Cape Cod are providing the museum with pieces of installation and lighting art displays. They are Alfred Glover, Michael Magyar and John Cira. The focus on the art of the holiday lights at Heritage will be a reoccurring theme in the years to come.

Spectacle of Lights, which began in 2003, has attracted over 33,000 visitors many of which come back every year to see the newest light displays and to ride on the antique carousel. The event begins the day after Thanksgiving, Friday, and ends on Sunday, December 31, Friday through Sunday, weekends only. Friday and Sunday, from 5 – 9 pm, will be reserved for shuttle bus rides while visitors are encouraged to stroll the grounds on Saturday, from 5 – 10 pm. Heritage Museums & Gardens will be closed Christmas Eve and Day, and will open Tuesday – Friday during Christmas week, from 5 – 9 pm. Ticket prices are $8 Adults, $4 Youths 6 – 16 years old, five and under and members are free. Groups Rates are available. Discount tickets sold at the Spectacle of Lights to visit Edaville USA Christmas Festival of Lights are $11 per adult a discount of $5 per person.

Heritage Museums & Gardens is located in Sandwich. Take Route 3 to the Mid-Cape Highway then take Exit 2 North to Route 130 to Grove Street. For more information, please call 508.888.3300 ext. 142 or visit www.heritagemuseumsandgardens.org

Special event for kids at Spectacle of Lights

On Thursday, December 14, Heritage is pleased to provide an evening of special programming for some very special children. Thanks to generous grant support from TD Banknorth, approximately 200 children between the ages of 6 and 13 who participate in after school enrichment programs at the Boys and Girls Club of Cape Cod, Cape Cod Child Development and the YMCA of Cape Cod will have the opportunity to take part in a unique educational experience. As small groups stroll through the grounds, they will experience the wonder of Spectacle of Lights with a guide, who will share information about many of the important roles plants play in our lives. From tall ship masts to small pencils, life-saving medicines to color for our clothes, participants will discover fun facts about some of Heritage's most magnificent trees, and how we depend on them for so many things. They will also learn about legends and traditions associated with "holiday plants" such as the Christmas tree, mistletoe and poinsettias, and will create a craft to take home that is inspired by the holly featured in our spectacularly lit Holly Dell. We are grateful to TD Banknorth for this special holiday gift!

The Diabetes Education Center of Cape Cod partners with Heritage Museums & Gardens to light the way

When the Diabetes Education Center of Cape Cod first opened its doors in October 2003, it became the first health-care resource dedicated exclusively to providing Cape Codders, their families, and caregivers with a multi-faceted program consisting of diabetes information access, education programs, prevention guidance classes and seminars, and research support. DECCC was specifically formed to work with existing health care providers to assist people with diabetes and their families all across the Cape.

Meeting The Need

As envisioned by the founding Board of Directors, DECCC was established in direct response to the growing epidemic of the disease in the United States. Numbers recently released by the American Diabetes Association revealed that overt diabetes affects 20.8 million Americans, an increase of two million cases over numbers released in 2003. Equally, if not more alarming, diabetes is the sixth leading cause of death in the U.S. and the leading cause of blindness among adults between 20 and 74, as well as kidney failure, and non-traumatic amputations. Such elevated numbers are more cause for concern for Cape Codders because of the disproportionate number of citizens of retirement age.

Putting DECCC Together

Armed with those staggering statistics, local community activists formed the Center and populated the Board with a cross-section of philanthropists, eminent medical scholars, healthcare professionals, and citizens living with diabetes.

Initial funding to establish the Center was obtained via a generous grant from the Francis X. and Mary E. Weny Charitable Trust. The Center opened in West Dennis and features a library of books, pamphlets, videos, CDs and DVDs, as well as computer workstations. It has featured stress management courses as well as healthy living and food preparation classes.

Since its inception, the Weny Charitable Trust has perpetuated its interest in the Diabetes Education Center of Cape Cod by becoming its primary and on-going benefactor. Once the Center had been opened, the Weny Charitable Trust became the collaborating organization that partnered with the Heritage Museums & Gardens to inaugurate the original holiday festival, called "A Spectacle of Lights: A Million Sparkles of Hope." The intention was to shed light on the disease and spread word of the Center's mission to as many people as possible. This year, the Weny Foundation has renewed its partnership with Heritage Museums to make possible an expanded festival of lights whose message is one of hope.

The Future

The hope for the future of diabetes is a cure. In the meantime, The Diabetes Education Center of Cape Cod is poised to expand its services and outreach to the community to assist anyone in need. As for the disease, Dr. Kenneth E. Quickel, Jr., DECCC Board Member and former President of the famed Joslin Diabetes Center, Boston, notes "This is the golden age of diabetes research , with the basic science discoveries of the recent past being translated into treatments to help people today. New treatments continue to be developed and made available locally, and we expect to assist in educating persons with the disease about what is available and to motivate them to care for themselves."

Heritage lights season with Edaville partnership

Catch the spirit at Edaville USA! See millions of twinkling lights at this New England holiday tradition, featuring a two-mile ride on a heated narrow-gauge train. There's a lot to see and do during the Christmas Festival of Lights™, including kids rides, Ellis' Playhouse, animated holiday display's, Cranberry World Museum and daily visits from jolly old St. Nick through Christmas Eve! Celebrate the season at Edaville.

Edaville USA was founded by Ellis D. Atwood in the 1940s. He bought a defunct narrow-gauge railway in Maine to help with the harvesting of his cranberry bogs. At Christmas, he would decorate his huge cranberry plantation and take friends for rides. Later, he turned Edaville into a popular New England attraction.

Edaville USA is open Fridays through Sundays for the first two weeks, and then begins daily operations on November 24. There will be fireworks every Friday night in December. The family fun park is closed Thanksgiving and Christmas days.

Tickets to Edaville USA are $16 for anyone ages 2 and older. Children under 2 are admitted free. The all-inclusive price covers everything except food and beverages. Group rates are available. Discounted tickets sold at Edaville USA to visit Heritage Museums & Gardens Spectacle of Lights are $7 adults and $3.50 for youths 6 – 16 years old, five and under are free. Call for details.

Edaville USA is located on Route 58, less than 4 from I-495, in Carver, Mass. For more information, call 877-EDAVILLE or visit the website at www.edaville.com

First Parish 'estate-ish' sale worth visit

This is the second in a three-part series on the Cohasset Holiday Village Fair taking place Saturday, Dec. 2nd from 10 a.m. – 3 p.m. on Cohasset Common. The fair is coordinated by three town churches. These articles will highlight not only what each congregation does for the fair, but will also look out how the parishes use proceeds generated by the event. The Second Congregational Church, the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church and St. Stephen's Episcopal Church will be featured in these articles

"At this time of Thanksgiving, on the threshold of holidays of giving and receiving, we think a lot about what it is to give and receive."
— Reverend Jan Carlsson-Bull, First Parish minister

The best part about finding a good buy at the "estate-ish" sale during the upcoming Village Fair, isn't getting a good deal on a new chair or a watch; the best part is that the money raised by the First Parish Unitarian Universalist will be used to support a congregation that in turn provides housing for homeless families, support for a child in Latin America, cancer research, and voices for justice through the spiritual grounding provided by worship and religious education for all ages.

"At this time of Thanksgiving, on the threshold of holidays of giving and receiving, we think a lot about what it is to give and receive," said First Parish's minister, the Reverend Jan Carlsson-Bull. "We worship, we sing, we celebrate, and we ponder. In this faith community that we cherish, we also know that it takes time and money to sustain the infrastructure that we know as First Parish." All of the parish's fair activities will be held at their Meeting House at 23 North Main St. on the Cohasset Common.

Among the programs that benefit from First Parish fundraisers is the Unitarian Universalist Urban Ministry, one of the oldest social service agencies in the country. Throughout the year, the church also houses a "HomeShare" apartment, where a family in transition is welcomed for as long as it takes to find permanent housing. First Parish supports Project Hope throughout the year by sponsoring a child from Guatemala. In the spring, Rev. Carlsson-Bull says that the parish rallies "en masse" for the regional Relay for Life, which supports cancer research.

During the Village Fair, First Parish will host its traditional "Estate-ish Sale," selling jewelry, small furniture items, toys and other "treasures" and will offer their annual Swedish Bake Shop with coffee, cinnamon buns and other Swedish holiday treats.

First Parish will also host the Rusty Skippers Holiday Pops Concert at noon in their Meeting House. Although the concert is free, donations will be invited to benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry.

Volunteers from the Appalachia Service Project (ASP) will be selling handmade crafts from Appalachia at the Parish House during the fair. ASP also sponsors Santa's visit that day on the town common. The local ASP youth group will travel this spring on their 19th service project to Appalachia during which they will work on 28.

The Village Fair runs from 10 am until 3 p.m.

(For more information on First Parish, visit their website at www.firparishcohasset.org.)

St. Stephen's book donations are being accepted

Donations will be accepted through Saturday, Nov. 25. They regret that they cannot accept old textbooks, romance novels, damaged or moldy books or books with notes and/or highlighting.

Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church at16 Highland Ave., will accept donations of slightly worn hardcover and paperback books, DVDs, and CDs for its annual book sale, part of the ecumenical Village Fair that is scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 2, on Cohasset's scenic common.

If your shelves are spilling onto the floor, they have the solution for you. Donations can be brought to the church in bags or boxes and placed inside the parish hall door marked "Church Offices." Use the "Reserved Parking" spot to unload your books during church office hours, which are Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Alternatively, they would be happy to make arrangements to pick up of donations. For donation pick-up or information, call D'Anne Avotins at 781-923-1104.

Books are sorted at St. Stephen's Church in Walton Rodgers Hall every Tuesday from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Donations will be accepted through Saturday, Nov. 25. They regret that they cannot accept old textbooks, romance novels, damaged or moldy books or books with notes and/or highlighting.

The monies raised from the book sale will be used to send underprivileged children and their families to the Barbara C. Harris Camp in Greenfield, N.H. Your donation of books, DVDs and CDs will help change lives and strengthen the community.

Obituary

Sheila C. Wallingford

Retired legal secretary

Sheila C. (Campbell) Wallingford, 65, of Cohasset, died Nov. 17, 2006, at her home.

Born in Quincy, Mrs. Wallingford was raised in the Hough's Neck section and attended Quincy schools, and graduated from Fisher Junior College.

Mrs. Wallingford had been employed as a legal secretary for John Hancock Insurance in Boston for 31 years. For 10 of those years, from 1974 to 1984, she worked in the Albany office.

She was active in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset, and for many years taught Sunday School. Mrs. Wallingford was also a member of the Vestry Committee and tri-chaired the Cohasset Village Fair.

She leaves her husband, Francis B. Wallingford Jr.; her son, Gregory F. Wallingford and his wife, Stacey, of Hingham; her sister, Sheena Turple of Hull; and her grandchild, Lillyan Wallingford of Hingham.

A funeral service was held at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Interment in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset. Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Memorial contributions may be made to St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Advent Festival

As part of its concert series, St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset is presenting an Advent Festival of Lessons and Carols Sunday, Dec. 3, the first Sunday of Advent, at 3 p.m. The service will consist of carols, hymns, anthems and readings of the season. Readings will tell of the coming of Christ, and there will be anthems rendered by the choir as well as hymns and carols of the season for all to sing. Come by and take a break during the pre-Christmas rush and reflect on the meaning of the season.

The church is at 16 Highland Ave., and parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted.

For information, call 781-383-1083.

Because You Have A Trust... You Must Attend This FREE Workshop!!!

Dennis B. Sullivan
Attorney At Law, CPA

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this…

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you…you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn the details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 19-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

Call NOW 800-964-4295 (24 Hours)

RECEIVE $1,000

The first attendee who submits a disposable, non-returnable, copy of their estate planning documents that do not have any of the problems addressed in this article will receive $1,000! Bring your documents to the workshop for a complimentary 12-15 point written analysis.

YOU CANNOT STOP THE WORLD FROM CHANGING...BUT YOU CAN USE NEW TECHNIQUES TO PROTECT YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES.

Don't wait until you actually have a problem before you deal with it. By waiting until the problem happens you typically can only minimize the damage, rather than prevent it. Let's prevent it! By attending this FREE workshop you will receive a 19-point review of your existing trust, or a review of your estate planning goals and help creating a personalized plan. We will tell you the areas of vulnerability your estate has and how to protect your assets.

- Clients of Dennis Sullivan & Associates do not qualify, as many of their trusts address each of these issues.
- Any Attorneys and/or Financial Advisors in attendance will be charged a fee of $1,000.

STATUS REPORTS

Fire department has busy month

The summary of fire department responses during the month of October is as follows: building fires, three; motor vehicle fires, one; outside fires, one; brush fires, two; motor vehicle crashes, 18; medical emergencies, 68; inspections 33; investigations, 18; assistance calls, four; automatic fire alarm activations, 22; and miscellaneous responses, eight. Forty-six emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 36 medical emergencies; four motor vehicle crashes; three investigations; two building fires; and one lock out, Robert Silvia, acting fire chief said.

The fire department ambulance transported 43 patients to South Shore Hospital and three patients to Quincy Medical enter. Mutual aid ambulances transported five patients to South Shore Hospital. There were 31 advanced life support transports and 20 basic life support transports. There were five motor vehicle crashes that required patients to be transported to the hospital, Silvia said.

Automatic fire alarm activation responses totaled 22 for the month. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for 12 responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of 10 responses. There were three responses classed as building fires for the month, two were for malfunctioning heating equipment and one was for a stove fire, Silvia said.

Police arrested six last month

October was a quiet month for the Cohasset Police Department. There were six arrests: three for assault and battery; one for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle; and two for outstanding warrants, Police Chief James Hussey said.

During the month of October the police department investigated 16 motor vehicle accidents, five of which resulted in personal injury. There were 136 motor vehicle citations issued, totaling $2,355 in fines. Additionally, there were 34 parking tickets issued, totaling $850 in fines.

Also in the month of October the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 940 calls for police services, and of those 113 were Emergency 911 calls, Hussey said.

In the month of October there were no reports of breaking and entering. Also in October, there were six criminal complaints issued for the month, he said.

South Shore children light up the holidays in Boston Ballet's 'The Nutcracker'

Stoughton 11-year-old to dance the role of Clara

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The Boston Ballet's renowned production of "The Nutcracker" will once again light up the holiday season at Boston's Opera House beginning this Friday. The 2006 "Nutcracker," specially designed for the Opera House stage, features the entire 50-member Boston Ballet and some 200 children from Boston Ballet School.

Now in its 39th year, the Boston Ballet's "Nutcracker" has in the past two decades given thousands of local children the opportunity to appear in the production alongside a world-class professional company. This year, more than 60 of those young ballet students come from the South Shore - including Jessica Conroy of Stoughton, who will dance the role of Clara. In the E.T.A. Hoffmann story on which the classical ballet is based, it is young Clara who receives a nutcracker as a gift at a Christmas Eve party. Her nutcracker is ultimately transformed into a handsome young prince, who leads her through an enchanted forest and on to the Palace of Sweets, where she meets the Sugar Plum Fairy. Among the ballet's most famous and memorable moments are a battle between toy soldiers and overgrown mice, a Christmas tree that grows to great heights, the pas de deux for the Sugar Plum Fairy and her Cavalier, and a shimmering snow scene.

It is the fourth year in "The Nutcracker" for Jessica, a sixth-grader at Weymouth's South Shore Christian Academy who has been studying at the Boston Ballet South Shore Studio in Norwell since she was in kindergarten. The move to a leading role has been an interesting one for the young dancer.

"Sometimes it's fun to have a big part, other times I just want to go in the back. When I feel that way, I just remember how much fun it is to play a lead," explained Jessica by telephone last week. "I'll never forget my first role in the 'Nutcracker.' I loved playing a doll and I remember how special it made me feel when that year's Clara reached out to me. Now that I'm playing Clara, I'm going to try and do the same for the little girls in this year's show."

Jessica Conroy of Stoughton, who will dance the role of Clara.

Jessica was a very little girl herself when her parents first noticed her abilities.

"I think she was two years old when I realized she had talent," recalled Jessica's mother, Rose Conroy, by telephone from her Stoughton home last week. "It wasn't too long after that when she began taking ballet lessons at a small studio in Easton. Now, she has ballet class five days a week."

Jessica - one of three Boston Ballet School students who will share the role of Clara with two professional dancers - was chosen in early fall and will dance in about 10 of this season's 40 performances.

"She has been in rehearsals since early October, because she is on stage the whole time," explains her mother. "There are some days she doesn't want to rehearse, but she does anyway. Jess always honors her commitments."

That dedication has paid off for the 11-year-old.

Jess is one of the youngest Claras in this year's cast. Everybody who auditions wants to be Clara. Jess is the right height and at the right skill level, though, so she was cast," explains Rose Conroy. "My husband, Michael, and I are thrilled for Jess. And her little brother, Michael, 7, is one of her biggest fans. He talks about her all the time with his friends."

Jessica recently gave her little brother a big new story to tell when she played a ballet dancer in "The Game Plan," an upcoming Disney feature film starring former pro-wrestler The Rock and shot on location in Massachusetts.

While the film won't hit movie screens until 2007, Jessica remains busy, as do many of her friends from ballet school.

Other children from the South Shore appearing in this year's Boston Ballet production of "The Nutcracker" include Nora Fitzwilliam, Braintree; Kendra Cameron and Alexa DeBuccia, Hanover; Cassandra Cardelle, Brianne Crough, Sofia Deligiannidis, Sarah Gruber, and Katharine Sease, Cohasset; Grace Barrett, Chloe Blair, Emily Carrick, Christine Connolly, Katy Connolly, Elizabeth Hennessey, Brooke Joyce, Caroline Kelleher, Paige King, Courtney Lane, Meaghan Menesale, Jacqueline Messina, Rebecca Mullaley, Caliann Murray, Erin Murray, Amelia Pedone, Hannah Pedone, and Emma Reilly, Hingham; Charlotte Hovey, Caroline Manning, and Andria Ronne, Duxbury; Maria D'Ambrosia, Fiona Martin, Isabel Martin, Molly Trust, Hannah Nelson, Scituate; Gina Benedetto, Haleigh Kelleher, and Gillian Pentheny, Marshfield; Kara Burns, Teresa Burns, Angelica Chan, Jasmine Chan, Alexis Henriquez, Abigail Howland, Margaret McCarthy, and Kaela Nelson, Norwell; Kristen Page, Holbrook; Samantha Caputo, Kendall Kolb, Miranda Moore, Hannah Robinson, Kirsten Schranze, and Rachel Smith, Plymouth; Tatiana Brittian and Devin Woolf, Randolph; Siena Dacey, Bridgewater; Lena Gee, West Bridgewater; Michaela Martini, Stoughton; and Laura Boradic, Canton.

The full Tchaikovsky score will be performed by the Boston Ballet Orchestra led by Music Director and Principal Conductor Jonathan McPhee and Associate Conductor Mark Churchill. "The Nutcracker" features choreography by Artistic Director Mikko Nissinen, sets by Helen Pond and Herbert Senn, costumes by David Walker, and lighting by Alexander Nichols. This season will welcome some new magic - literally. Cesareo Pelaez, who performs as Marco the Magi, is teaching some of his magic tricks to the dancers portraying Drosselmeier. Pelaez, a native of Cuba, has been headlining in Marco the Magi's production of "Le Grand David and His Own Spectacular Magic Company" in Beverly since 1977.

With a lead role in this year's "Nutcracker" on her resume, and plans to audition for future Boston Ballet productions, Jessica's mother wouldn't be surprised to see her daughter continue with ballet.

"Jess is only 11. As she matures, she will decide what she wants to do with her life. I could see her pursuing ballet as a profession, however, because she really comes alive on stage. Jess dances for the audience and not just for herself."

The Boston Ballet's production of "The Nutcracker" will be presented at the Opera House, 529 Washington Street, Boston, through Dec. 30. For tickets, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.bostonballet.org. Discounted group tickets (20 or more) are available by calling Boston Ballet's Group Sales Office at 617-456-6343. Boston Ballet members and subscribers should call the Boston Ballet Box Office at 617-695-6955 for tickets.

007 gets 'Royale' treatment

"Casino Royale" (A-)

By James Vernlere
FILM CRITIC

Those of us who have been thinking Jason Bourne is the new James Bond will have to rethink. That's because James Bond has been gloriously "re-Bourne" in "Casino Royale."

A James Bond for our ruthless, torture-plagued, extreme-sports times, Daniel Craig, who bears a striking resemblance to the late Steve McQueen, is not better than Pierce Brosnan.

He's different, craggier, more athletic, sadistic and maladjusted, with calloused hands and gleaming, ice-blue eyes. Craig's Bond shares more genes with Robert Shaw's insane killer in "From Russia with Love" (1963) than Sean Connery's Bond. When Craig is swinging from the rooftops and construction cranes, which is half the time, he's more Spider-Man than Bond.

Based on Ian Fleming's first Bond novel and bearing no resemblance to the 1967 spoof of the same name, "Casino Royale" combines characters from Fleming's book, including the villainous Le Chiffre (Danish actor Mads Mikkelsen), with the love angle from "On Her Majesty's Secret Service," a 1969 film notable, not for George Lazenby's pod-person Bond, but for Diana Rigg's sexy Tracy Di Vicenzo. As accountant Vesper Lynd, Eva Green ("The Dreamers," "Kingdom of Heaven"), this film's other trump card, is the best "Bond girl" in ages.

In spite of a listless theme song by Chris Cornell, formerly of Soundgarden, and an even more listless credit sequence, the film gets off to a whopping good start with a chase sequence in Madagascar and some tartly written scenes in London, featuring Craig and Judi Dench, the series' M (Q is absent this time out).

Daniel Craig as the new James Bond in "Casino Royale."

The plot involves Bond's attempts to thwart a plan to sabotage a new jumbojet and to bankrupt the terrorist-funding Le Chiffre at a poker game (the redneck's baccarat presumably) in Montenegro. Along the way, Bond drives a vintage and brand-new Aston Martin, makes stops in such Bond-certified hotspots as Nassau and Venice, orders Beluga caviar and Bollinger champagne from room service and creates a new cocktail, the Vesper.

The high-powered action sequences, which reach a crescendo with a toppling Venetian villa, beg the question: Why are director Martin Campbell's Zorro films so boring and his Bond films, including "GoldenEye," arguably the best Brosnan Bond film, so terrific? Presumably, it's the screenplays.

Cowritten by Neal Purvis and Robert Wade ("Die Another Day") with a polish by the omnipresent Paul Haggis ("Flags of Our Fathers"), the film sags a bit during the romantic sequences. But the dialogue is sharp. Craig, whose face scrunches up almost cartoonishly when he smiles, is extremely responsive to his fellow actors, and Green is no mere accessory.

She and Craig have enough chemistry to leave you shaken and stirred. It's also good to see Giancarlo Giannini even if he's only explaining how much money is in the pot half the time, and Mikkelsen gives the villain a hint of parodic self-awareness. Jeffrey Wright is also fun as a brand-new Felix Leiter.

But Craig is the real story. His Bond is a cold-hearted killer and screaming madman who likes his sexual partners to be married, but not to him. This Bond wears his lacerations like a Marquis de Sade-approved badge of honor. See "Casino Royale" and see the Bond franchise jump-started in more ways than one.

Rated PG-13. "Casino Royale" contains violence, profanity and sexual situations.

Demolition opens door

TOD project gets under way

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

About two weeks ago the old strip mall along Route 3A next to the future Cohasset MBTA station bit the dust. Along with that went the building that formerly housed Mary Lou's News and the one that housed Exotic Flowers. A boatyard was also formerly located at the site.

The demolition is making way for a Transit Oriented District, dubbed TOD, which will include a mix of retail including the possibility of a restaurant, and housing on five acres next to the train station.

Voters at last spring's annual Town Meeting set the stage for the project by approving a zoning article establishing a transit-oriented development overlay district at the former Davenport parcel at 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A). The overlay district permits "mixed use" development that was not allowed under existing zoning.

The A, B, Cs of 'free cash'

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Towns all along the South Shore are facing tough financial times and spending on many levels has been pulled back. To that end many residents who attended the Special Town Meeting Nov. 13, questioned why the town was asked to spend $300,000 of its roughly $1 million in free cash for capital expenses, rather than save it for future use.

To understand the recommendations made by Town Manager Bill Griffin (which were approved by Town Meeting) Griffin said it is important to understand what free cash is and where it came from.

Free cash is strictly a Massachusetts term used to help describe a certain type of surplus funds. Free cash is somewhat of a misnomer as it is neither "free" nor "cash" and is essentially an accounting calculation, rather than an actual account with money. At the end of every fiscal year, Director of Finance Michael Buckley prepares the balance sheet as of June 30, the last day of the fiscal year, essentially taking a snapshot of the town's finances at that date. After the Department of Revenue reviews the balance sheet, it certifies the amount of free

Worley's world

Rec Director celebrates 30 years

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

From soccer to drama to dances on a Friday night, Cohasset's young residents are never at a loss for activities — and haven't been for the last three decades. For that, the town has Recreation Department Director Jack Worley to thank, who celebrated his 30th anniversary on the job, Nov. 7.

Worley is the only recreation director the town has ever known. In October 1976 when he was hired, Worley recalled the town was anxious to launch the department, and hired him without having any money in the budget to cover his salary. He had to wait for one month before officially starting his new job while the town figured out how it was going to pay for his position.

Building the Recreation Department from the ground up was slow going at first. Worley barely had an office; as his allocated space was located in the ticket booth off the auditorium in the old part of Town Hall. "We got our furniture at the dump and we had no air conditioning," he recalled, adding in the winter, if he left a water bottle on his desk overnight, it would be frozen solid the next morning. "The working conditions were a little rough, but we managed and we got through it."

Today, Worley's office overlooks Cohasset Common and the programs offered by the Recreation Department are so popular, for the first time ever this year, the amount of children registering for basketball had to be limited. "When we hit 350 we had to cut registrations," he said, adding last year for the first time ever, the town hit 300 basketball participants. "The programs are getting bigger in a lot of ways," he said.

However, with so many programs offered and a staff of one, it's not always easy. Worley said the success

Hunger pains

Demand for food assistance increases

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of articles as part of our annual Gifts of Hope campaign, focusing on assistance needed at local food pantries.

By KATHLEEN ZIGMONT
CORRESPONDENT

More families on the South Shore are going hungry this holiday season as the cost of living and poverty levels skyrocket, according to area social service agencies.

Project Bread released a survey earlier this month stating that hunger has more than doubled in low-income communities in Massachusetts and that about seven percent of all households in the state are unable to afford adequate food to meet nutritional needs.

"The significance of the fact that the rate of hunger has doubled goes beyond the apparent," said Ellen Parker, executive director of Project Bread. "It's just a sin, it's terrible to have people in such a wealthy state who don't have enough to eat."

According to the Project Bread survey, the prevalence of hunger in low-income areas of 216 communities in the state increased from 7.8 percent in 2002 to 18.3 percent in 2005.

POLICE BEAT

Family captures alleged car thief, waits for police

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 21-year-old Brockton man picked the wrong Cohasset house. Police say Karim Terry Baroudi of 144 Crescent St., Brockton was caught red-handed trying to steal a 1997 Dodge Neon from a home on Jerusalem Road in the wee hours of Thanksgiving.

The family at the home was watching TV at just past 12 a.m., Nov. 23 (Thursday) when they saw a car belonging to one of the sons coming toward the patio and almost hitting the house, Chief James Hussey said. So family members ran outside and tried to open the door to the car, which had struck a tree. Baroudi allegedly was yelling, punching and kicking. A scuffle ensued. When police arrived family members had him pinned to the ground, Hussey said.

"They did not want to see him get away and therefore they captured him," he said.

Hussey said normally police do not suggest people take this type of action because the perpetrator could be armed.

Police charged Baroudi with larceny of a motor vehicle and assault and battery.

Altercation

At about 10:30 p.m., Wednesday (Nov. 22) on Elm Street near its intersection with Margin Street a large group of males, some of whom appeared to be under the influence of alcohol, had gathered and were being loud and boisterous, police said.

When an officer pulled up, one of the individuals said something to the effect of "get out of here!" and warned the officer not to bother them. The officer could smell alcohol on his breath and called for back-up.

The subject refused to be taken into protective custody and started fighting with the officer, Chief James Hussey said.

Police charged a 22-year-old Scituate man with disorderly conduct.

Arson possible

Police Chief James Hussey said Cohasset detectives are assisting the state Fire Marshal's office in its investigation of a suspicious fire that occurred Nov. 19 off Meadow Lane. The blaze that was reported at about 11 p.m. engulfed a large excavation vehicle.

"The State Fire Marshal's office has not reached a conclusion and the investigation is ongoing," Hussey said, explaining the investigation involves looking into the incident as a potential crime and not an accident.

There were no workers in the vicinity at the time of the fire. The excavator was at the site due to land clearing that was being conducted there.

Slew of MVAs

The police log was peppered with motor vehicle accidents over the past 10 days – all of which were minor.

• At 2:10 p.m., Monday (Nov. 20), police said the operator of 1998 Volvo did not leave enough distance between him and the car ahead and rear-ended a 2003 Honda. The cars were traveling on Norfolk Road toward Spring Street. There was minor damage but both vehicles were driven away. Chief Hussey said the driver of the Volvo was cited for following too closely.

• At 3:19 p.m., Tuesday (Nov. 21) on 3A near its intersection with Beechwood Street, a 2002 Jeep and a 1995 Buick were both traveling northbound and had passed through the light where the road narrows from four lanes to two. Chief Hussey said the vehicles did not merge or yield as the lanes reduced and ended up coming in contact, scraping door-to-door. There was minor damage to both vehicles. Hussey said the investigating officer could not determine which operator was at fault, so no citations were issued.

"They did not want to see him get away and therefore they captured him."
— Police Chief James Hussey

• At 1:25 a.m., Thursday (Nov. 23), an officer responded to a call about a motor vehicle accident with property damage on Bancroft Road. When the officer arrived a man was standing outside a 1995 Volvo that had the keys on the roof. He claimed not to be the operator and refused to answer further questions, police said. He stated the vehicle belonged to his girlfriend but further investigation revealed it belonged to his sister. It appears from the skid marks that the Volvo was traveling too fast for the area when it struck a 1995 Saab that was parked. The Saab was moved by the impact, and the Volvo veered off the road onto a lawn, causing damage. The owner of the Saab was contacted. Both vehicles had to be towed. Chief Hussey said no citations have been issued yet but the incident is still under investigation.

• At 5:12 p.m., Friday (Nov. 24), dispatch received a call about a hit-and-run accident outside Good Fellas Pizza. As it turned out, the operator who drove off had returned to the scene by the time police arrived. Both parties exchanged papers. Hussey said it was not clear why the driver of the red 2006 Nissan Pathfinder that hit the parked, gray 2004 Chevy Trailblazer, initially drove off. "Maybe the operator had second thoughts," he said.

• Police said a 2005 Hyundai blew a tire along Jerusalem Road at about 2:49 p.m. on Sunday, (Nov. 26); the incident caused the operator to lose control of the car that hit some ledge along the side of the road damaging the right, front rim and front passenger door. There was also potential damage to the underside of the car. No citations were issued. The Hyundai had to be towed from the scene.

Wild teen

Reports of a teenage male running around waving his arms as if he needed help along Pleasant Street did not result in any findings, police said. Chief Hussey said an officer spoke with the caller and got a description, which included that the teen was wearing jeans and a black fleece jacket and possibly had a beard – but no person could be found.

Flashers on

Police arrested a Randolph man for unlicensed operation following a traffic stop on Route 3A (near the former site of Mary Lou's News). Chief Hussey said the man was driving with the emergency flashers flashing which is a violation. He explained that flashers are used when a vehicle is in trouble, i.e.,, has a flat tire. "It is unlawful to drive with the lights flashing," he said. Further investigation revealed that the operator had a Brazilian license. Hussey said once someone takes up residency in Massachusetts, they must obtain a Massachusetts license. The man was also cited for operating with the emergency flashers one.

Illegal dumping

An incident of illegal dumping where a Scituate resident disposed of some trash in a dumpster in Cohasset has been resolved, Chief Hussey said.

The victim contacted Cohasset police and had determined the identity of the person who disposed of the trash by finding his name in the rubbish. Cohasset police contacted Scituate police who contacted the perpetrator who was willing to remove his trash.

Hussey said illegal dumping can be a criminal offense under the section of state law that governs unlawful disposal of trash.

Deer still 'in season"

Amorous deer could still be crossing Cohasset roadways. Police urge residents not to exceed the speed limit because they will have a much better chance of stopping if a deer should dart into the road.

Last week a motorist struck a deer on Hillside Drive. Chief Hussey also noted that deer are looking for food now that winter is almost here.

Suspended license

Police stopped a motor vehicle last week near Leo's Exxon. The operator, a Scituate resident, was arrested for driving on a suspended license.

Police said the vehicle he was driving had no inspection sticker and that prompted the traffic stop.

Speeding

Police issued several speeding tickets last week on Sohier Street by the railroad tracks. Chief Hussey said police routinely conduct speed traps in the area, which is near two elementary schools, a children's museum and the library.

tribute food to the needy in 10 South Shore towns, said she has seen a huge spike in need this year.

The number of turkey dinners given at Thanksgiving went from about 160 last year to about 240 this year, according to Lang.

"We've seen a lot more families in need than we have in the past. We've seen more middle-income families who need help," she said.

Lang said many area families are struggling with utility bills.

"It's the bills that are putting them over the edge. The utility bills have gone way up and their wages haven't," she said.

"These are people who are working hard to support their children and just make ends meet. They have no cushion for rising utility costs," said Lang.

The Pantry Shelf provides free food for individuals and families in need and serves over 4,000 South Shore households and over 10,000 people a year from the towns of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

The Pantry Shelf tries to provide three to five days worth of food to their customers one time a month.

Lang said the holidays are particularly difficult for families in financial crisis.

"They want to be able to give their kids everything they want and have a turkey on the table for the holiday meal, but they can't do it all," she said.

Lang said the Pantry Shelf is in need of everyday staples, such as cereals, canned vegetables and fruits, pasta and canned meats. Special holiday items and gift certificates to area groceries are also very welcome.

Most of the food at The Pantry Shelf is provided through the donations of various faith communities, businesses, schools, civic and fraternal organizations and The Pantry Shelf is staffed by volunteers.

Town's buildout potential eyed as committee looks at 'big' picture

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"Because of our location, we're not going to be putting in a factory."
— Rick Swanborg

The Long Term Budget Committee is tackling the town piece by piece. Charged with developing a spreadsheet-based model of the town's financial operations, at its Nov. 28 meeting, buildout of the town's empty parcels and its financial implications was on the docket.

Rick Swanborg, who worked on the town's Master Plan and is a member of the committee, presented information from the Master Plan to Chairman Jack Keniley. He explained taxes provide the major source of revenue for the town, and while some say increasing commercial development will greatly help the town, only 3 percent of the total land in Cohasset is commercial and in his opinion, tax revenue that could be generated through developing those areas will not make a major impact.

"Because of our location, we're not going to be putting in a factory" or a shopping plaza like the Derby Street Shoppes, he said, which would generate a good amount of tax dollars. "The biggest we could go would be like Hingham Lumber," he said.

To that end, Swanborg said the town will need to rely on residential taxes and there are only so many areas in town that can accommodate new homes. Based purely on what is currently zoned residential and is considered "buildable" there could be as many as 1,300 homes built. However, he said that figure may not be exact as building a home requires adequate wastewater disposal and many of those lots are neither serviced by the sewer nor could provide a septic system should perc tests ever be conducted. "There's not a lot of percable land," he said. Swanborg estimated based on wastewater disposal issues, the town would more likely see around 300 homes built, but technology is always getting better and additional solutions for disposal could be found in the future.

On the other end of the spectrum is the Avalon development, which plans to build 200 apartment units on Route 3A. However, local boards have stonewalled the project and developers are currently suing the town. Swanborg said developers could at any time decide to skirt local zoning laws by building a state-controlled 40B project, which allows greater density. "There is nothing to prevent developers from doing high-density," he said.

While at this point it is only speculation, Swanborg said if more units were added to the development it would be assumed more residences would increase tax revenue to the town, but in his opinion, it would actually be a wash. He said the project would bring more children to the town and the cost of educating them would negate any tax revenue that would be added to the town's coffers. He also noted rental units bring in less tax revenue than houses.

Keniley asked if Swanborg could give an estimate as to how long it will take before the town reaches full buildout. Swanborg said with the market the way it is, currently there are very few homes being built, and even if 30 homes were built per year over the next 10 years that would only be 300 homes when the potential exists for 1,300. He said there are also very few areas in town where cluster zoning can be done, so the time may soon pass when housing developments like Cedarmere could be built.

Taking into account the town will likely always have a limited tax base, Swanborg said it will have to come up with other ways to save money. He said the Master Plan committee looked at regionalization of the police and fire departments, but based on the area it has to cover, partnering with another community will greatly add to response time and it would not be worth it. He said the idea of regionalizing the high school has also been floated, as currently the school is graduating senior classes of roughly 80 to 90 students.

The Long Term Budget Committee is charged with developing a spreadsheet-based model of the town's financial operations. The model will include income statement, balance sheet and cash flow modules. The income statement will include the town's payroll list and the different components of fringe benefits, all suitably classified by department, job level, etc., so the Town Manager can test potential wage, salary and benefit scenarios. It shall also include line items of revenue and expense corresponding to the Town Manager's annual budget breakdown, at the level of detail needed to test different scenarios such as the effect of a rise in fuel prices. The goal is to have the model tested and ready for use by Sept. 1, 2007, so it may be applied for the 2009 budget and upcoming union negotiations.

The Long Term Budget Committee meets weekly at Town Hall. For more information on meeting dates, please contact the Town Clerk's office at (781) 383-4100.

100 percent of the event's net proceeds will go directly to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.

Race day is still roughly seven months away, but the anticipation for the Cohasset Triathlon at Sandy Beach is already building. The date has been set for Saturday, July 8 and athletes have begun signing up for the event.

Race Director Bill Burnett of Linden Drive is coordinating the event, and said the Web site is now up and running at www.cohassettri.com. The event, which will features a swim, bike and run through portions of Cohasset and North Scituate will help raise funds for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, and those who would like to participate may register online. Each participant will receive a baseball hat made by the same company that makes the Red Sox hats, with a "Cohasset Tri" logo.

"The support I have received from the town has been incredible," said Burnett, who unveiled the idea before the Board of Selectmen in September. Already, he said he has an amazing team of people helping him coordinate the event, including Swim Coordinator Deb Thomas, Bike Coordinator Scott Bates, Run Coordinator Joe Carrabes, Finish Line Coordinator Bill Good and Registration Coordinator Bill Burnett Sr.

However, Burnett said there are many more opportunities to lend a hand as he is building a team of dedicated people who will support the athletes and assist in ensuring the "Cohasset Tri" is a first class event. Volunteers are needed for support at registration, in the transition area, on the course, and at the finish line.

There will be entertainment during the event, as 93.7 Mike FM will bring in a music van and speakers to help provide a fun and festive atmosphere. Burnett said Cohasset resident Donald St. Sauvier works for the radio station and helped make the arrangements.

The course begins with a 1/4-mile ocean swim at Sandy Beach. The race is specifically being held in July when the water temperature will average between 62 and 65 degrees. A 12-1/2-mile bike will follow the swim. The course winds through Cohasset and North Scituate and will begin at Sandy Beach, then head down Atlantic Avenue to Jerusalem Road. Riders will continue down Jerusalem Road to Route 228 and turn left (south). The course heads east down Main Street toward the Common and heads straight into North Scituate. In North Scituate, the course makes a left on Gannett Road and then a left onto Border Street. The final leg will take riders back onto Atlantic Avenue and finally to the transition area at Sandy Beach.

Once back at the beach, athletes will begin the 3.2-mile run that will loop around Little Harbor. Runners will follow Nichols Road to Jerusalem Road and turn left. The course will take the runners around the Common to Beach Street. Runners will follow Beach Street to Atlantic Avenue with a photo finish just a short distance from the transition area.

Burnett said while the event will be a fun time for everyone involved, it is very important to remember why it is being held. He said 100 percent of the event's net proceeds will go directly to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, which will hopefully help bring it one step closer to its goal — finding a cure. Type 1 diabetes strikes children suddenly and makes them insulin dependent for life, and carries the constant threat of devastating complications.

Children with Type 1 diabetes no longer produce insulin, but without it, they cannot survive, which means they must take it either through several shots each day or through an insulin pump which is worn 24 hours a day. Blood sugar must also be monitored throughout the day by pricking the finger. The short-term effects of severe low blood sugar can be dangerous, and the long-term complications from high blood sugar can include heart disease, kidney failure, blindness and amputations.

For more information on the event, please visit its Web site at www.cohassettri.com. For more information on volunteering or to find out how you can help, please send an email to Bill Burnett at billburnett@cohassettri.com. For more information on the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, please visit www.jdrf.org.

Ryan White is co-captain of Northeastern's sailing squad

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Hello Cohasset and Season's Greetings to all! Many holiday fairs and events are happening this month and if you would like to have them mentioned, make sure to send me your information no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm. Try to make some time for the seniors in our town or those who are less fortunate in some way, and make sure that yards and homes are ready for the winter that we might have. Not sure about the weather but if it gets cold and snowy, it is a great thing to be "ahead of the storm" so to speak.

NU SAILOR

Ryan White, a senior sailing instructor at the Cohasset Sailing Club, has been elected co-captain of the Northeastern University Sailing Squad. Ryan and the team had a very successful season competing against several other sailing programs such as Tufts, Harvard, MIT, the University of Vermont and Brown. Ryan is still in his freshman year and is majoring in engineering. He looks forward to returning in Summer 2007 to the Cohasset program. Many in Cohasset cannot wait either.

NEW STUDIO

A wonderful studio has opened in North Scituate and is owned by a Cohasset resident, Margie Koenig. The Sandbar, Artisan Co-Op & Boutique, across from Mary Lou's in North Scituate Center is holding and Open House on Friday and Saturdays, Dec. 1,2,8 and 9 from 10 a.m.-5 p.m.. Free coffee for all in the am and wine time after 3 p.m. along with jewelry, woodwork and art, custom towels and linens, children's books, driftwood art and hats/belts will be available along with many other ideas and holiday gifts. Make sure to stop in and say hello and also purchase some of those last minute gifts for the holidays.

ANIMALS BLESSED

The Blessing of the Animals, an annual tradition at First Parish Unitarian Universalist is Sunday, Dec. 3 at 3 p.m. in the Meetinghouse. Be it a four-legged friend, a feathered friend, or even those in aquariums. Dogs, cats, hamsters, birds, lizards, snakes — all are welcome. Yes, two years ago a pony looked through the window for his blessing. The event is open to the community. The service will feature animal-friendly music, readings, prayers, and a short homily by Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull. Everyone will be invited to come to the chancel for individual blessings of your companion animals (live, stuffed, or a photo!). Please bring your pets into the Meeting House on a leash or in a carrier. To prevent "accidents," please make sure that your pets are house-trained and under your control at all times. For more information, phone Rev. Carlsson-Bull at 781-383-1100.

GREENERY DISPLAYS

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will participate in the third annual Greening of the Models and Holiday Market Festival at The Pinehills, Plymouth, on Dec. 2 & 3. Members have been very busy making holiday decorations and greenery displays in preparation for the event. Decorations and gifts by local garden clubs and craftspeople will be on sale from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. both days in the Winslowe's View Meetinghouse at Pinehills. In addition to the Festival, eight model townhomes will be decorated for the season and on display. To get to Pinehills, take Route 3 to Exit 3 in Plymouth. At the end of the ramp, follow the sign to Pinehills. Please come and get in the holiday spirit! For additional information go to www.greencos.com or call 508-209-5000 for directions.

COHASSET ENTERTAINS

For this holiday season, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset has reprinted a limited number of the original "Cohasset Entertains" cookbook. This book is a collection of tried and true recipes from the cooks among us and each one is a keeper. The book also contains sample menus and arrangement ideas for your holiday table. Just a few of the delicious holiday recipes included are crab delight, Christmas mapley appetizers, onions celeste, winter squash casserole, pumpkin chiffon pie, and praline ice cream pie with rum sauce. There is also an entire chapter on gifts we bake including cookies, candies and coffee cakes. This would make a great gift for your favorite cook.. Each cookbook costs $15 and is available at Flemings and The Windsor Tea House in Cohasset. All purchases help fund club programs, services and a scholarship fund.

AP SCHOLAR

Congratulations to Cohasset's Zachary Etkind who was recognized as a 2005 AP Scholar 2006 AP Scholar with Distinction. Zachary now attends Tufts University and is doing well. Super work Zachary.

YOUTH LAX

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will open its sign-up for the spring season on Saturday, Dec. 2 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the gymnasium at Cohasset High School. Families who sign up on the first day of registration have an opportunity to save money, paying the registration price from 2006 of $150 for one player and $275 for two and $375 for three children. Registrants after the first sign-up day and sign-ups will remain open by mail through a second in-person sign-up day on Jan. 6 will pay the new, higher, 2007 prices. Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls at the 15 & Under level (7th and 8th graders) and 13 & Under level (5th and 6th grades) and 11 & Under level (grades 3-4). No previous lacrosse experience is necessary.

The program is committed to accepting every player who signs up during its registration period, but roster spots will be limited; if the program has reached or surpassed its ideal roster size when registration closes on Jan. 6, it is possible that some late registrants will be turned away. Following the initial sign-up day, families interested in participating in the program can register by mail, at the 2007 price of $160 for one player, $300 for two, and $400 for three. That price will hold through the Jan. 6 sign-up day also held at Cohasset High School from 9 a.m.- 11 a.m. At that point, if the program has reached its ideal roster sizes, registration will be closed. A waiting list will be established and any available spaces will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis, and charged a late registration fee of $25. Parents who can not attend the Dec. 2 can wait until Jan. 6 to register in person, or can contact Chuck Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com to request registration forms. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered. The registration fee covers all Cohasset Youth Lacrosse events, a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes insurance coverage and a subscription to Lacrosse Magazine for Kids.

If you need more information, or are interested coaching, contact Jaffe at 781-383-6688 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

MOTHERHOOD

Buttonwood Books & Toys welcomes Cohasset resident, Elizabeth Soutter Schwarzer, discussing her book "Motherhood Is NOT for WIMPS: No Answers. Just Stories." on Sun., Dec. 10 at 2 PM. Elizabeth's book is a collection of selected articles from her online journal or blog, about life with her young children. Her stories are delightful descriptions of what happens when normal goes awry and the unexpected happens with regularity. Following the discussion there will be a brief reading, and a question and answer period. This is a free event. If you are unable to attend and would like to order a personalized and/or signed copy, please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or order online at www.buttonwoodbooks.com.

VILLAGE FAIR

Don't forget to stop by the three churches on and around Cohasset Common tomorrow, Saturday, Dec. 2nd! From 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. the Second Congregational Church, the First Parish Unitarian Church and St. Stephen's Episcopal Church will be hosting the annual Village Fair. Stop by early for your best selection of gifts and decorations, gently used books and CDs, and pre-owned treasures of all kinds. All proceeds raised support the churches and charities including the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project Group. And bring your appetite! Don't miss First Parish's famous Swedish Bake Shop while you shop their Estate-ish sale at their Parish House on North Main Street . Then head across the Common to The Second Congregational Church's holiday boutique and Chowder Bar for lunch. And don't miss St. Stephen's popular Book Sale and Country Kitchen for all sorts of delicious treats and hostess gifts. See you there!

ASP VOLUNTEERS

Volunteers from Cohasset Appalachia Service Project Group (ASP) are busy preparing for their part in the Village Fair on the Common, Saturday, Dec. 2nd, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. This group of 208 teenage and adult volunteers is hoping to raise money to support their 19th annual work camp trip to Appalachia. Leaving the end of June, the group plans to work on 28 homes on their week-long home repair ministry, pledged to making the homes of impoverished families in the area "drier, warmer and safer." ASP volunteers will be selling hand-made crafts from Appalachia at First Parish Hall on North Main Street.

ASP also hosts Santa's visit on Cohasset Common. Children of all ages are encouraged to stop by for a candy cane and to share their wish list with Santa. There is a nominal charge for photos with Santa to benefit ASP. ASP also organizes the popular Children's Secret Room at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church where young children can select and wrap a special gift "in secret" for their family members. Also in the Unitarian Church, handmade gifts from Appalachia will be available for purchase and are wonderful.

SNOWFLAKE FAIR

Stop by the Beechwood Church's annual Snowflake Fair on Saturday, December 9, to shop for the holidays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.. Children will enjoy the game table and interesting White Elephant items. For crafty types, check out our homemade items as well as baked goods. Luncheon will be served at 11:30. The church is located on Church St. in Cohasset.

HANDBELL CHOIR

The Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale present John Rutter's Dancing Ball, a handbell choir, and familiar carols for audience participation at two Christmas concerts to benefit Wellspring Multi-Services in Hull. Concerts are at the House of Prayer Lutheran Church in Hingham on Saturday, Dec. 9th at 8 p.m. and at First Parish in Cohasset on Sunday, Dec. 10th at 4 p.m. Tickets are $15 at the door and available at Noble's in Hingham Square, or call Kathy Reardon at 781-749-0162,.

That is it for now. Make sure to get me all of your news and information no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm;

Cohasset Village shop is full of coastal charm

Celebrates the one-year mark

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A lifejacket, a canvas tote bag, and a scallop shell doorknocker. These items have one thing in common aside from their relation to the ocean. They can all be found in downtown Cohasset at Parrot Bay Unlimited, among myriad other nautical gifts and treasures.

Coming up on its one-year anniversary, this Village shop, owned by Donna Linskey and her husband Stephen may have been operating just under the radar screen. During its grand opening, the Village was under major construction with the Downtown Revitalization Project and Greenbush line construction in full swing. Now that the dust has settled, residents should have no trouble finding the shop, located conveniently across the street from the post office.

While these days Donna Linskey spends her workweek tending the shop, the couple's summer days off have always included spending time on their 30-foot Black Watch "Love and Luck," named after the Jimmy Buffett song of the same name. It was their love for boating that inspired them to open Parrot Bay Unlimited, and fulfill a need they felt existed on the South Shore.

"People on the South Shore love all things marine," she said, adding her shop not only has items for boats and boaters, but nautical themed gifts for anyone. "Newport, Marblehead, the islands, they all have shops like this, and geographically, we're the same."

Linskey said she likes to call her shop a "coastal lifestyle" store.

"People on the South Shore love all things marine."
Donna Linskey. Parrot Bay Unlimited

While some items are geared toward boaters, she said many products are versatile and can be used for a variety of outdoor activities or for the home. Parrot Bay Unlimited has a line of Henri Lloyd life jackets for everyone in the family. In addition, Henri Lloyd makes outerwear for boaters which Linskey said can easily double for runners, walkers and hikers who want to stay warm and dry in the face of New England's weather. "It's nice outerwear for whatever activity you're doing," she said, adding she sold many spray jackets to residents during last year's "Mother's Day" rainstorm.

Linskey also sells American and novelty flags, which are appropriate any time of year. "You don't need to be a boat owner to hang a flag," she said. The shop also carries dry storage bags that can be used for putting items away in the attic, basement or garage. There are also small boat grilles with a detachable stand that can be used for tailgating or a small barbecue on the beach. "The products are only as limited as you want them to be," she said.

Maps are useful for anyone traveling by land or sea and Parrot Bay sells not only the handheld fold-up versions, but electronic GPS systems for boats, cars and motorcycles as well.

Donna Linskey, owner of Parrot Bay Unlimited in Cohasset, offers a wide range of merchandise for coastal living, including everything from life jackets to navigation systems to nautical themed doorknockers.

Patrons also have the option to purchase Sea Tow, which is basically AAA for boaters.

Many items in the shop can be used to decorate a home. Linskey contracts with a vendor in California who makes handmade door knockers. The examples in her shop are made of brass, but she said per request, knockers can be made in different metals, such as nickel, and also in other shapes. Parrot Bay features scallop shells, pineapples, flip flops, crabs and other nautical themed door knockers, but Linskey said recently, her vendor worked with a local resident to create a lobster door knocker that fit the dimensions of her door perfectly.

While lifesavers are a good thing to have on a boat, they are also great for decorating. Linskey said she recently sold one to be hung on a local fence to add to the nautical feel of the backyard. In addition, the store carries canvas tote bags made out of actual boat sails, which are very practical. "They are waterproof and they have a lifetime guarantee," she said, and are easy to take care of as they can be thrown in the washing machine. She said they are perfect for toting items to the beach and can easily handle many towels and toys.

But beyond the items she offers, Linskey said she has a special product she offers to everyone and that is good customer service. "We offer customer-based service, we follow up with people, and I think they appreciate that," she said. Linskey said being a small store, she can work with clients to place special orders, and if she doesn't have a product, she is happy to help find it.

In addition, just like Parrot Bay on St. John in the Virgin Islands, Linskey said she tries her best to create the kind of shop that can transport customers to a place that is a laid-back temporary boaters' haven during those cold winter months in New England. "We try to make the store a fun destination and we hope people feel good when they come in."

For more information on Parrot Bay Unlimited, located at 103 Ripley Road, please visit www.parrotbayunlimited.com. Store hours are Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

History just in time for the holidays

New Cohasset book published

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Looking for the perfect gift for the holidays? The Committee on Town History may have the solution with its latest literary release, "Savor of Salt."

"Savor of Salt" is a collection of 56 articles written about the town dating far back into its history. It is the companion volume to "Treasury of Cohasset History," published in February 2005. While the book is currently at the printer, it should be available for purchase at the Cohasset Holiday Village Fair, Dec. 2.

This is a close up of the photograph from the cover of "Savor of Salt," a collection of 56 articles written about the town dating far back into its history.

The name of the book derives from the title of one of several articles by Lucy Treat.

With more than 250 pages, the book promises to entertain with its tales of Cohasset's quirky past including articles explaining: that an Indian village once stood on the site of the town's police and fire stations; that the Patriot who hung the warning lanterns for Paul Revere hid from the British in Cohasset; that the son of the richest man in New England moved to Cohasset in 1786; and that Henry David Thoreau was in love with the girl who married Cohasset's Reverend Joseph Osgood.

The articles featured both in "Savor of Salt" and "Treasury of Cohasset History" were found by Jackie Dormitzer, author of "A Narrative History of Cohasset Volume III," while compiling research for her first book. The town's third volume of history covers the time period from 1950 to 2000. Due to the fact that some of the information Dormitzer uncovered either pre-dated the time period she was covering in the book or didn't quite fit the subject matter within the chapters, she reserved many interesting and somewhat quirky town facts and stories for later compilations.

Dormitzer had no trouble filling one book with the information she had, and in February 2005 "A Treasury of Cohasset History," was published. "Savor of Salt" will include even more of Cohasset's little known historical facts.

While the books are similar, their intentions are different. "Treasury" serves as a concise history of the town, where the articles are divided into historical periods, each introduced by a historical narrative. In contrast, the articles in "Savor of Salt" are more loosely organized, in roughly chronological order, and are meant to stand alone, similar to a magazine. The title of the book derives from the title of one of several articles by Lucy Treat. With much of Cohasset's history linked to the sea, Dormitzer says in her forward, "the choice seemed appropriate."

A brief introduction precedes each article and gives information about the author or the topic. Two or three articles may cover the same topic, such as Minot Light, Little Harbor, or the Common, but each provides additional detail or new information. Photographs accompany nearly all the articles.

Committee member Hal Coughlin, who designed the cover for both the third volume of the town's history and "A Treasury of Cohasset History," has once again put his design skills to work for the cover of "Savor of Salt." Altogether, the Committee on Town History has published four histories under the imprint of the Town of Cohasset, which includes the reprinting of the two previous out-of-print histories, "Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume I," by E. Victor Bigelow, and "Narrative History of Cohasset, Volume II," by Burt Pratt.

In addition to the publication of histories, the committee was responsible for Nancy Garrison's illustrated timeline of Cohasset history — produced for the Cohasset school curriculum — an enlarged map of Cohasset, and the distribution of a rare keepsake wood engraving of Minot Light by Rudolph Ruzicka.

"Savor of Salt" can be purchased for $28 at the Village Fair and will be available at Town Hall in the Town Clerk's Office as well as at Buttonwood Books and at the Historical Society's headquarters in the Pratt Building. Checks can be made out to the Town of Cohasset.

'Life of a Sailor Boy.'

Excerpt from "Life of a Sailor Boy: Earliest Memories" by Captain Frencis Pratt, one of the articles included in the town's latest history book, "Savor of Salt."

"We were poor and the house was in a very dilapidated state. Panes of glass, many of them broken, and old hats, shawls, and sometimes seaweed took their place. I recollect at times there would be a foot of snow on the bed in which three of us were sleeping. My mother worked hard to keep us from freezing and starving. Spun and wove the cloth that covered us.

I shall never forget what pride she took in painting the dairy and other parts of the house. The paint consisted of red ochre and skimmed milk with a rag for a brush.

We lived upon hasty puddings, milk porridge, sweetened water with brown bread crumbed in. I remember one time of falling backwards into a kettle of milk porridge. It was not lost, they said. I recovered and did nicely."

Irene Vafides, Linda Indek and Linda Campbell are just a few of the many volunteers making handmade gifts, decorations and more for the Second Congregational Church's Holiday Boutique at Cohasset's annual Village Fair on the Common this Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Village Fair reflects season of giving

This is the last of a three part series featuring the three churches sponsoring Cohasset's annual Village Fair on the Common tomorrow, Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"The time we spend working for and supporting the Village Fair is yet another 'good work' that we can do to further the advance of the 'Peaceable Kingdom'."

— Rev. Gary Ritts, Minister, Second Congregational Church

While Cohasset Common may appear as serene as ever, hundreds of volunteers from three local churches and the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project Group (ASP) are busy preparing for tomorrow's annual Village Fair on the Common.

Tomorrow (Saturday), Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m., the churches surrounding the Common will transform their parish halls into a holiday marketplace full of fabulous foods and holiday gifts and decorations. Best of all, 100 percent of the proceeds raised will support the good works of the Second Congregational Church, the First Parish Unitarian Church and St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, as well as the non-profit ASP and METCO Programs.

"The Village Fair has been a Cohasset tradition for well over 60 years, and it truly reflects what's best about this season of giving," said Gary Ritts, minister of Cohasset's Second

Congregational Church. "The funds raised inside our parish hall support the various ministries of our church from buying curriculum for our popular church school program to sending contributions to local charities and relief organizations throughout the world."

The Second Congregational Church supports many local and regional charities including South Shore Habitat for Humanity, The Mary Martha Learning Center, Father Bill's Place and Wellspring, as well as relief efforts and children's funds throughout the world.

The church is also an active supporter of the Louis D. Brown Peace Institute in Dorchester, an organization committed to violence prevention and peacemaking throughout greater Boston. In addition to teaching children non-violent strategies to resolve disagreements, the organization also assists families of homicide victims and helps them find appropriate resources in the areas of mental health and criminal justice.

The Village Fair brings together volunteers of all ages at the Second Congregational Church, who contribute the handmade gifts and bake goods for their Holiday Boutique. The church will also again host their popular chowder bar and bake table where fair-goers can sit and enjoy a cup of hot cider or cocoa along with clam chowder and a holiday treat.

"So many people contribute the success of this fair," added Rev. Ritts. "The time we spend working for and supporting this event becomes yet another 'good work' that we can do to further the advance of the 'Peaceable Kingdom."

The Second Congregational Church will also be hosting volunteers from Cohasset's METCO Program who will be selling fresh balsam wreaths and holiday greens from Maine. Proceeds from these sales will support this non-profit program developed to expand educational opportunities for all students.

Wassail Party Sunday at the historical society

The Cohasset Historical Society will usher in the Holiday Season with its annual Wassail Party Sunday, Dec. 3, from 2 to 4 p.m., and invites the community, members and guests to enjoy light refreshments, holiday music with harpist, Rachel Eisenhaure and convivial conversation in the Pratt Building at 106 South Main Street.

During the Wassail Party, the Historical Society's new exhibit of 1930's style clothing and memorabilia will be available for viewing. This exhibit highlights a portion of the Society's extensive clothing collection and is set up in vignettes appropriate to the type of clothing on display. Plan to join the Historical Society for a cordial afternoon respite from the bustle of the season.

Demolition opens door to 'TOD' near train station

Co., is proceeding with plans to redevelop the site that would include 34,000 square feet of new retail space and a small number of one- and two-bedroom apartments.

"We are moving forward and hope to present something formally shortly after the New Year," Geoffrey Wolf, Chief Investment Officer with Connell, said this week. He explained Connell continues to evaluate exactly what will go in there in terms of retail. He explained due to the size of the development if a restaurant were part of the mix, it would not be a large one.

In a Mariner op-ed piece last spring, Wolf stated the project would be called "Old Colony Square." The Greenbush line is the third leg of the restored Old Colony Railroad. The other two are the Plymouth and Middleboro lines that started train service in 1997.

The company has also been in discussions with the MBTA to coordinate linkages between the station and the new development. Wolf described the negotiations this week as "progressing" with the intent of interconnecting the traffic flow from the MBTA parking lot into the shopping center. In other words there would likely be one curb cut specific to the project and in addition, access to the site through the MBTA parking lot.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said the planning board is expecting the application for a special permit soon. "It is a fairly major filing as filings go," he said.

Moore said the process would be "fairly rigorous" but he did not anticipate many problems. He noted there were no immediate abutters and contrasted the project to the complex Shaw's Plaza development of about 15 years ago that involved a number of residential abutters. He also said he expected the redeveloped site to be a visual improvement over what was there before.

However, while noting it was not the developer's fault, Moore

The former site of Mary Lou's. Exotic Flowers and Aveni Cleaners has been demolished to make way for Old Colony Square, a transit-oriented district or TOD next to the Cohasset train station on Route 3A.

bemoaned the fact that Greenbush is going to travel through Cohasset and not stop in the village.

"In many ways I'm embarrassed to be a member of this town," Moore said. He pointed out the train is the biggest change to come to Cohasset in memory and it will pass right through the village without stopping. He blamed the then Board of Selectmen in the early 90s for caving into pressure from train critics.

To Moore, the TOD represents a new town center. He said it is not unlike the way North Scituate developed around the Old Colony Railroad many years ago.

Moore found village zoning discussions at last month's special Town Meeting to be ironic.

"At the special Town Meeting, we were debating changes to the downtown business district — when the single biggest change that would decide the course of the village was decided years ago," he said about putting the train station on 3A.

Moore said he worries about an exodus of village retailers to places like the TOD.

"If you were running a business in the village — would you relocate?" he asked.

He also expressed concern about increasing traffic along 3A, which will only intensify with the station and the TOD, he said.

Moore's office is in the Brass Kettle Brook office building across from lower King Street where he says he has a "front-row seat."

"Accidents are a daily event," he said. "For every accident there are five or six near misses."

But Wolf said the magnitude of Old Colony Square would not be sufficient to have any effect on the village. "We would be very surprised to see any drastic change as a result of our project," he said.

Wolf said if all goes as planned, the project would be completed by mid-to-early 2008. "It is later than we planned," he said.

The Economic Development Committee, whose charge is in part to explore strategies to reduce the town's reliance on residential taxes, proposed the TOD article to Town Meeting. Time was of the essence, so the project could be coordinated with construction of the train station, the EDC said.

The EDC estimated when the TOD is fully developed it could bring in an additional $80,000 in annual tax revenue.

TODs are in line with the state "Smart Growth" initiatives that discourage sprawl and include mixed-use developments near public transit.

"The EDC is excited that demolition has not only commenced but is nearly complete," said EDC Chairman . Peter Brown. "We eagerly awaited this evidence to demonstrate that the project was under way throughout the summer.

"But I believe that the residents of Cohasset are realistic and understand that a complicated project like this has a plethora of moving parts that need to be orchestrated, so it takes time to get it sorted out and it makes sense not to rush the process — especially when a government entity [MBTA] is the neighbor and involved in its own development.

"We understand from the developer that the private TOD development is working out details with the MBTA on cross easements and traffic issues," Brown said. "We look forward to a successful project in coordination with the new train station bringing the smart growth development we all envisioned."

At least one tenant was sad to see the old center go. Mary Lou's closed its store at the site May 31.

"We were heartbroken, it was a great little store," said Mary Lou Sandry, owner of the chain. "We've been trying to relocate but have not had any luck finding what we need." She said she is looking for a drive-through.

"It would be great to be near the old location," she said.

According to Town Clerk Marion Douglas, the Attorney General approved the Transit Oriented Overlay District zoning bylaw on July 24.

"MGL c. 40, Section 32 requires submission of all new bylaws and amendments voted by Town Meeting to the attorney general for his approval within 30 days after the final adjournment of Town Meeting," she said. "The attorney general must approve the bylaw amendments within 90 days of the receipt of them, unless he has requested additional material."

Free cash is neither 'free' nor 'cash'

cash, or surplus, the town has, and notifies the town. This year, the town's free cash was $1,007,737.

"Incidentally, over the last 20 years, the town has averaged $725,000 a year in free cash, with a low of $254,000 in fiscal 1989 and a high of $1,575,000 in fiscal 2002," Griffin said.

There are three areas that affect the town's level of free cash. The first are the funds left over from line items. "We have almost 100 line items and we never spend it all," said Griffin. The Department of Revenue (DOR) does not allow towns to spend more than they budget, and this year the town turned back $350,000. Out of a budget of roughly $32 million, "That's 1.1 percent," said Griffin.

The town also projects how much revenue it will bring in from things such as local receipts, motor vehicle excise taxes, interest earned on investments, building permits, etc. The DOR does not allow towns to project more revenue than was actually brought in the previous year. "Good financial planning is to be conservative with your projections," Griffin said.

This year, the town was fortunate and received $400,000 more in local receipts than projected, which was mostly due to motor vehicle excise taxes, which are impossible to predict and are given to the town from the state. Interest rates also went up on some investments from 2 percent to 4 and 5 percent. The town also implemented fees at the Recycle Transfer Facility through permit stickers and pay-as-you-throw bags, which came in during May and June, prior to the close of the fiscal year.

The third area that affects the level of free cash is property taxes. Every year, there are always some residents who do not pay their property taxes, but there are also others who pay unpaid bills from previous years. "In a town like this, usually the collection rate is very good," said Griffin, as a high percentage of residents pay their taxes, but there are those that fall behind. This year, some residents paid back taxes from prior years, which left the town with $160,000 more in tax revenue than it had anticipated.

To calculate the town's free cash at the close of fiscal 2006, the $350,000 that was turned back from the operating budget was added to the $400,000 in revenue from receipts and the $160,000 from tax revenue as well as $90,000 in free cash, which was left over from fiscal 2005, for a total of roughly $1 million.

Once a town's figure is certified by the state, every town has the right to decide how to use it. Griffin said when state aid was cut, many communities began using free cash to close that budget gap. "We're trying to wean ourselves of that. We don't want to be dependant on it," he said.

Buckley said the town has been using roughly $325,000 every year in free cash to fill in the gaps in the operating budget. That is a practice, which began years ago and essentially, the town has built using free cash into its budget. Unless those items funded via free cash are taken out of the budget or other funds are found to pay for them, the town will continue the cycle. Griffin said his plan is to decrease the use of free cash in the budget over the next few years by decreasing it by roughly $100,000 per year until it is no longer necessary for the operating budget.

In terms of using free cash for capital items, "It is a very appropriate use," Griffin said, as the amount of free cash the town receives varies from year to year and it makes sense to therefore spend it on one-time expenditures.

In addition to free cash, the town has two other areas of "surplus" funds in the budget: the reserve fund and the stabilization fund.

The reserve fund is a recurring budgetary item. Each year, Town Meeting votes to appropriate a sum of money into the reserve fund, which is under the control of the Advisory Committee. Reserve funds are to be used for unexpected and unforeseen expenses during the course of the fiscal year, without having to call a special town meeting. That means if a department needs funding in the summer for something it did not expect, it can ask for a reserve fund transfer and get the money in June, rather than having to wait until the fall for Special Town Meeting approval. The money in the reserve fund gets closed out at the end of the year and turned over to surplus, and a new reserve fund amount is budgeted the following year.

The stabilization fund is an actual trust fund that has money in it and earns its own interest, rather than just a budgeted item. This means funds in the stabilization fund are available from year to year. Town Meeting authorization is required to transfer money from the stabilization fund for any lawful purpose. Usually funds spent from the reserve fund are for one-time expenses. Other than interest being earned, the only way the stabilization fund increases is if Town Meeting votes to put money into it.

Schools and free cash

While members of the School Committee said at its Nov. 15 meeting the school department was glad it could help contribute to the amount of free cash the town received this year, Director of Finance Michael Buckley said the schools had no effect on the town's surplus funds.

The school construction projects were reimbursed by the state at an earlier date than anticipated. It has been suggested that because the town budgeted for payments on the principle and interest for the projects — the earlier reimbursement freed up that money and it was turned over to free cash.

Buckley said that is not the case. He explained the town passed a debt exclusion to pay for the projects. It took a vote at Town Meeting followed by a vote at the ballot box to authorize the borrowing which would be a tax excluded from the confines of Prop. 2-1/2. That means taxes are raised to pay for the project, and once the project is paid off, the taxes go away.

Buckley said the town is only able to budget for principle and interest payments for one year at a time, and if for some reason the town does not have to spend as much as it anticipated (e.g. early reimbursement) the tax rate is adjusted accordingly, and in this case, was lowered due to the additional funds available. Buckley said money set aside for debt exclusion projects could not be used for any other purpose than to pay for the project.

OPINION

Food for thought

While many of us will be spending the next four weeks deciding what gifts to purchase for family members and friends as the holidays approach, some of our neighbors will be worrying about how they're going to pay their bills and feed their families.

While our shopping worries could be considered a seasonal dilemma, hunger is a year-round struggle.

There is heightened awareness of the plight of the hungry during this season of giving, as many look to help others less fortunate. But it's really an issue that never goes away and is in fact growing.

Project Bread released a survey earlier this month stating that hunger has more than doubled in low-income communities in Massachusetts and that about 7 percent of all households in the state are unable to afford adequate food to meet nutritional needs.

"The significance of the fact that the rate of hunger has doubled goes beyond the apparent," said Ellen Parker, executive director of Project Bread. "It's just a sin, it's terrible to have people in such a wealthy state who don't have enough to eat."

According to the Project Bread survey, the prevalence of hunger in low-income areas of 216 communities in the state increased from 7.8 percent in 2002 to 18.3 percent in 2005.

While there's a lot being done to address the growing numbers, there's still much to do. The Greater Boston Food Bank works with more than 600 food pantries, soup kitchens and other agencies in our area. The organization can tell you first hand how difficult it has been for many people.

In its first year of operation, the food bank provided 100,000 pounds of food — 25 years later that figure has risen to 25 million pounds of food per year. The organization estimates that 1 in 10 Americans uses a food pantry. That's a lot of hungry customers.

Those are just the numbers, staggering as they are. You can see the hard truth if you visit any of the local food pantries or speak with volunteers at the pantries. If the recent Thanksgiving rush at the local food pantries is any indication of what to expect for Christmas and Hanukah, those struggling to make ends meet are in for a long holiday season.

Paul Fournier, director of the St. Vincent de Paul Society Food Pantry, said more than 160 turkeys were given out over the Thanksgiving holiday, a noticeable increase over the 130 given out last Thanksgiving. This month alone 135 different families have picked up food at St. Bridget's Church, which the pantry operates out of in Abington.

The Rockland Emergency Food Bank has been just as busy. At the First Congregational Church, co-director Stella Rogers reported that 40 families have been picking up food each week and more than 180 turkeys were given out during the week leading up to Thanksgiving.

Thanks to countless local food drives, including those organized by Boy Scout and Girl Scout organizations and the United States Postal Service letter carriers, who coordinate a food drive in May when hunger issues fall way off the radar screen, our local food pantries are able to keep their shelves stocked for most of the year. Yet it becomes more of a challenge this time of year.

Here at Community Newspaper Company we're looking to do our part. This is the second year we've focused on the hunger issue and the local food pantries for our sixth annual Gifts of Hope campaign. Last year our readers responded by donating more than $8,000, which found its way directly into the hands of those operating our local food pantries.

As part of our annual holiday campaign, we will focus attention on the demands of the food pantries, those who benefit and how we can all offer some assistance. We'll provide readers with addresses and information about each food pantry serving our South Shore communities.

As readers will discover over the course of our Gifts of Hope campaign, there are numerous food pantries filling an important void in our towns. Demand is high and supplies are short. Your contribution will help.

To donate to the Gifts of Hope, simply make your check payable to one of the food pantries listed in this week's newspaper and forward it to Anne Rodwell, CNC/South, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050. All donations will be published in the paper, unless the donor requests otherwise.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Romney's hateful tactics

TO THE EDITOR:

I am so disgusted to hear the news that Mitt Romney is going against the courageous legislators who voted to derail the discriminatory amendment on gay marriage.

How can Mr. Romney continue to shamelessly use same-sex couples and their families for political gain. As a citizen of Massachusetts, I appreciate the 109 legislators who voted for equality.

My community says it is a "No Place for Hate Community". There are signs around Cohasset. Hate is not the path to the White House and he shouldn't use this hateful tactic to get there.

Mitt Romney, it is time to move on and stop with your hateful agenda!

HEALTH NOTES

Mock emergency addressed tabletop forum

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In the past, we've talked about tabletop exercises in preparation for an emergency. Well, last Tuesday, the Cohasset, Scituate and Hull boards of health sponsored a tabletop exercise simulating a food poisoning incident at a local restaurant. Seventy-two health, police, fire and support people from Cohasset, Scituate, Hull, Hingham, Hanover and Norwell gathered at St. Anthony's Parish Hall to participate.

Randori Solutions, a firm recognized by the State's emergency management agencies, to carry out such exercises, put on the exercise. These exercises are funded by state and federal grant funding in order to prepare towns to meet exigencies, which may occur in their communities. The scenarios practiced in these drills resemble actual events that happened in other Massachusetts towns. Towns along the South Shore have long recognized the need to plan for emergencies, but simply developing strategies is not enough. Emergency plans must be exercised regularly and progressively. Some time ago, we reported on an exercise in Cambridge simulating a dirty bomb in a shopping center, but such an exercise is very expensive, generally beyond the ability of many towns to accomplish. Hence tabletop exercises promote emergency preparedness by testing policies and plans, training personnel and developing actual relationships between those responsible for first response in adjacent nearby towns, and trading information on local and other available resources to cope with different types of emergencies.

Tuesday's Tabletop Exercise was designed to simulate a short-term treatable, food-borne Public Health emergency. The main goals of the event were to test existing mutual aid agreements and the sharing of information about resources in and between the six participating communities during a public health crisis. The assembled group was separated into four roughly equally sized discrete groups: participants from Cohasset, Hull, Scituate, and one other group with members from Norwell, Hingham, Hanover, and other region 4B Medical Mutual Aid members. After a recitation of the following hypothetical scenario, the drill consisted of an interactive discussion and consultation of three separate periods covering: Preparation, Response and Recovery.

The scenario posited a fictitious restaurant on Route 3A favored by locals and tourists. It has a raw bar and a relatively transient staff. Cited twice in two years or food code violations of State regulations banning barehand contact with ready-to-eat foods, the manager claimed difficulty in finding reliable help during the summer season(a part of the Scenario). A 23-year-old immigrant new hire has been sick for three days, but has continued to come to work because of fears of being fired. He has been experiencing low-grade fever, nausea, and diarrhea. Finally sent to the hospital by his roommate after collapsing after leaving work one night, he was evaluated and treated for Hepatitis A. While waiting for laboratory confirmation, the hospital initiated contact with local officials in the Town. It was estimated that the restaurant had served 3,500 people during the 10 days the patient worked in the kitchen. The scenario selects a time period beginning Thursday on the 4th of July 2007 weekend as the period of occurrence.

The facilitators posed a number of questions to draw out responses about the activities during every part of the incident. For example: What preparations are in place, and what preparations need to be made before each town responds. Who would respond and how can they be reached. – after hours? Who would replace the first responders, and who should be notified and how? Dozens of questions; many for each of the participants in the exercise, different people with different duties in each of the three parts of the drill. Many participants became personally involved and recalled incidents of their own experience and how they played out. At times, it was quite dramatic. Eventually, the participants all had a pretty good idea what most of the people in the room would do, how they would respond, and what information they needed or were missing.

At the end, everybody's name was on a list with their affiliation, and hopefully, those attending would go back to their respective work places with names of emergency personnel in nearby towns and what their responsibilities and duties are in the event their town encountered a similar medical emergency. But perhaps as important, many of us learned of possible efficiencies in planning and accounting that would save our towns money and create ways to avert the donnybrooks that some accidents and emergencies become.

Bewicks led fight for 'green' transit

COMMENTARY

MICHAEL WEYMOUTH

The number of hours they spent keeping this pipeline filled would have challenged anyone, let alone two people who had their own businesses to run as well as other aspects of AfTA to focus on.

In the wake of the last lawsuit by Advocates for Transportation Alternatives (AfTA), I would like to acknowledge the tremendous personal commitment made by John and Martha Bewick in their advocacy for what they believed to be a better, more environmentally friendly transit system for the South Shore. They were the double-barreled guiding force behind AfTA, and theirs was a Sisyphusian task of enormous magnitude from the very beginning. In the end, they lost the battle, but won the admiration of all of us who supported AfTA's goals.

I first met John Bewick when he worked for Cabot Corporation in the early 80s. He was involved with the Distrigas LNG terminals in Everett as well as Staten Island and I helped him create the presentations he made to local groups concerned about the terminals' environmental impacts.

Soon thereafter John, who had an impressive list of credentials, including a degree in Nuclear Physics and a PhD in Managerial Economics, was appointed Secretary of Environmental Affairs by then Governor King. Among John's accomplishments, while Secretary, was the leadership role he played in the creation of the state's first Bottle Bill.

Over the years, John and his family remained friends and we were especially close when his wife died of cancer at an early age.

So it was with no small degree of pleasure that I sat next to Martha Reardon at a Greenbush hearing at the Hingham Town Hall in 1997 and listened to her describe a walk she had recently had with a friend of mine around Castle Island.

In short order, John and Martha were married and it was only a matter of time before John, with his penchant for environmental causes and a deep desire to see government serve the people, coupled with Martha's determination to enhance the commuter boat service, led to the creation of AfTA. Martha had been an Associate Commissioner in the Department of Highways in both the King and Dukakis administrations and brought her own set of credentials to the discussion.

Thus began a long process of evaluating the MBTA's Greenbush data. From John's perspective, as a former Environmental Secretary, the data was slanted toward the train and away from the alternatives and, after several months of mind-bending number crunching, he developed what he believed was a compelling case for alternatives that were far less environmentally invasive, as well as a fraction of the cost of Greenbush.

With the help of Senator Bob Hedlund and Representative Garrett Bradley, both of whom opposed Greenbush, AfTA started up the political ladder, a journey that would eventually end in the Governor's office.

One early meeting took place at a Plymouth Selectman's meeting where John and Martha explained how Greenbush would restrict the number of trains the MBTA could run on the Plymouth line, which served one of the state's highest growth areas. At the time, Senator Patricia Murray, who represented Plymouth, was Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee.

Another was with Michael Widmer of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Association to make the case that Greenbush was fiscally irresponsible.

Yet another was with members of the Boston City Council where John illustrated how Boston transit projects would benefit if the Greenbush money were more wisely spent with them, thus serving many more riders. In the meantime, Martha attended virtually every type of meeting held by the MBTA in Boston.

In part, because the AfTA presentation made so much sense and because of John's credentials as a former Secretary, Senator Hedlund and Representative Bradley were able to get him on the calendars of others higher up the ladder of influence: from the newly appointed Secretary of Transportation and Construction, Daniel Grabauskas, to Speaker of the House, Thomas Finneran.

I was present at most of these meetings and was always impressed with John's forceful presentation of the case for the alternatives as well as his acute understanding of how government works. I recall Speaker Finneran pointing out that most opposition groups come to him with complaints, but no solutions, and how impressed he was that AfTA had a very compelling case that actually offered credible solutions.

Early on, John lobbied the Romney electoral staff to be sure the Governor-to-be was aware of the controversy surrounding Greenbush and that there were alternatives waiting in the wings.

But it's an uphill battle to get a politician to take a stand against a public transit project and even though Romney's staff seemed to have its eye on fiscal responsibility, the Governor's appointment of Doug Foy as his environment/transportation czar made the mountain too steep to climb. Foy, who had previously headed the Conservation Law Foundation, was the architect of the plan to restore the Old Colony line and a strong advocate of Greenbush. When the much-awaited meeting with Governor Romney took place, it was greatly influenced by Foy and, in the end, the Governor deferred to him and Greenbush was given the green light.

The aforementioned are only the highlight meetings. There were many more along the way, and all the while they were taking place, AfTA's law firm was preparing for litigation and was much in need of data that only John and Martha could provide. The number of hours they spent keeping this pipeline filled would have challenged anyone, let alone two people who had their own businesses to run as well as other aspects of AfTA to focus on.

And then there were the meetings to continually work with a dedicated group of residents who were conducting the fund raising to pay for the litigation. Through it all, John and Martha remained upbeat and positive. John's Churchillian quotes to stay the course and Martha's tirades against the politics behind Greenbush kept everyone energized.

In the end, however, after a monumental effort, AfTA's case for alternatives fell on deaf ears.

There are those who would say that all of John and Martha's efforts aside, they were standing in the way of progress, and that AfTA was just a fancy word for a NIMBY organization. As is the case with all great controversies, where the sides are deeply polarized, this divide will never be bridged and, over time, people will move on and will cease to care what was, or what might have been.

But for John and Martha it was not a Quixotic journey. Their attempt to preserve the quality of life many residents will lose as a result of diesel rail running through their neighborhoods can never be equated with charging windmills. As for the archives, John and Martha Bewick's tremendous personal commitment to a cause they deeply believed in is a wonderful example of what it means to be a good citizen.

Michael Weymouth is a resident of Hingham and a founding member of Advocates for Transportation Alternatives.

Nosey women!

OLD TIMER

GEORGE CURRY

And there's another thing I can't stand about women — they are always sniffing around. Then they spray that artificial fragrance all over the house — makes me sneeze. The smells don't fool the bees, so why try it on me?

Now, every real man likes to keep a complete wardrobe in the back of his closet of worn out clothes just in case the cellar floods or the septic tank overflows. Women can sniff that out from Chicago.

They say marriage is built on understanding, but I don't understand women and their trained noses.

So I ran it though the wash twice and hung it inside of my marriage/funeral set of clothes, put on the plastic sleeve and filled the closet with mothballs. Do you think that worked? Yup, but only for two days.

"How did you find my favorite and comfortable relaxing clothes?"

"Clorox, and why are you saving that grungy pair of sneakers hiding in the back corner?"

"Just in case I lose this pair."

"I wish you would."

And that's another thing — women have no respect for men's comforts. I found my favorite fedora hidden in a trash bag that happened to tip over. It took years to shape it with the high-pointed front and a smooth taper to the back. "Why don't you ask me?"

"I didn't want to start an argument."

Here she is – destroying my history and trying to be niece about it. "I didn't want to start an argument." That's probably what Al Capone said when he machine-gunned all those guys in the garage — nice of him — real nice.

They say marriage is built on understanding, but I don't understand women and their trained noses. Bloodhounds – that's what they are – blood hounds.

So, men, the next time you see a pretty woman heading down aisle #5 (the one with the food in it) at the Stop & Shop, don't say – "Honey, I forgot the beans" and head for aisle #5 – she will smell that one out too.

And that's another thing that I can't stand about women.

Courage men, assert yourselves – stay the course and hope that the guestroom bed is made.

George Curry lives in Hingham; he often shares his humorous perspective on life with Mariner readers.

Grammar and being a sixth-grader

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Another thing I always enjoyed as a sixth grader was being told to look up a misspelled word in the dictionary.

Does this ever happen to you? You're in London on business, giving a speech about your company's new CAD software to a packed hall of British engineers, when suddenly you realize you've forgotten all your sixth-grade training on the parts of speech. You freeze up, unable to remember what a linking verb is, or whether your planned use of the word "paradigmish" would be considered a predicate nominative or a predicate adjective. You sweat profusely. A nerd coughs. You stumble through the rest of your talk, secretly vowing to brush up on your grammatical terms the minute you have a free moment.

Yeah, that never happens to me either. First of all my job isn't important enough to send me winging around the globe, or busing around the state for that matter. And second, could there be an activity more simultaneously dull and useless than the suffocation, dissection and endless anatomical classification of English sentences? This is a job for only the most masochistic men and women, yet we give it to anyone unlucky enough to turn 12. Why? For the next nine years you kill yourself trying to keep the definition of "future perfect progressive tense" lodged in your brain, and then half a glass of wine is all it takes to permanently wipe it from your mind.

Is it any wonder all the sixth-graders you know are a little nuts? First we wake them up at 6am. Then again at 6:10. Finally at 6:20 we shove them off the mattress and onto the floor, where their younger siblings taunt and step on them. Eventually their fury clears their heads and they stomp downstairs to breakfast. Their braces make it impossible to eat anything solid, so we serve them gruel. With their mouths full of wires, their facial acne, and their natural state of constant mortification, the absolute last place they want to be is in public, so we kick them out the door wearing a 40-pound backpack and an outfit we happen to know went out in the 70's. Fortunately though, after all this pain and humiliation they can hike into school excited by the prospect of another lesson on dangling modifiers.

The other fun thing we like to do with sixth graders is discuss every aspect of one particular novel for eight solid months. Walk into any sixth-grade English class and you can actually hear the love of reading dying. The Cay seems to be this generation's choice for over-analysis, while the title whose mere mention can cause my nervous tic to resurface is The Pig Man. It must be awfully depressing for an author to have his or her novel chosen for the sixth-grade treatment, knowing that for thousands of people it will be forever associated with the year all pleasure was forcibly extracted from the act of reading. I know a girl who slogged through The Cay in sixth grade here last year, then moved to Lexington where apparently they teach The Cay in seventh grade. She is now on a 24-hour suicide watch.

Another thing I always enjoyed as a sixth grader was being told to look up a misspelled word in the dictionary. Using a dictionary to search for a word you can't spell may actually rival the study of English grammar for sheer futility. "Dad, how do you spell chrysanthemum?" "Here, son. Take this large book and whap yourself in the forehead until the correct spelling comes to you, or you pass out. Either way you've learned the meaning of the terms 'self-flagellation' and 'hemorrhage', which are both GRE words."

I have to admit, though, that we have it easy compared to the Chinese. Imagine being a Chinese kid with an unfamiliar Kangxi symbol in front of you. How the heck do you look it up? Have you ever heard a Chinese father say to a child, "Go look that up in the Chinese dictionary." No, you haven't, because he'd be strangled. This is the main reason behind the one-child policy over there. The Chinese dictionary sends so many kids over the edge that it's unsafe to have more than one in the house.

I just wish we could do something to make sixth grade a little more fun. Replacing all English classes with Movie Period would be a start. I mean, look at me. When it comes to grammatical rules I have no idea what I'm doing, yet I'm able to write trenchant, highly entertaining articles for a large newspaper. Well, a newspaper. Anyway it's printed on paper, which ought to count for something.

'Black Friday' lives up to its name

COMMENTARY

MARY JANE HANRON

People could sleep late, have a leisurely breakfast, be relaxed and lazy, watch or play football and be together. Have a turkey sandwich and go to the movies.

The frenzy of the day after Thanksgiving or "Black Friday" shopping is now but a memory. This is most certainly something for which we should give thanks. Though this day has been a treacherous time to venture near a shopping mall for any but the most bold and brazen, in recent years it has become a day that is ugly if not bordering on the obscene. It is difficult to use the term it has been given. "Black Friday" is intended to mean the day that retailers go into "the black," but given the antics of shoppers lately, it has assumed much more ominous connotations. It seems dark, frightening and dangerous. In many ways, it is.

What has provoked this insanity? Is it greed? Is it a game? Is it a complete loss of civility? Is it a combination of all of these? A bit of clear thinking is in order as we reflect on the day that follows (or the night of) Thanksgiving, which to many is one of the most beautiful, spiritual, and heartwarming holidays we celebrate in this country. It is a day when families gather around a table adorned with a bounty of delectable edible delights. Most join in prayer and put aside differences, problems and worldly worries and are thankful for the blessings bestowed upon them no matter how simple. Some who are often self absorbed, too busy for anything but work and working out, sending emails and overnight FedEx packages find themselves with nothing to do because everything is closed. Once the shock dissipates, this can result in discovering long-lost family members or acquaintances that are also warm and affectionate friends willing to share a holiday dinner. Some may visit a homeless shelter in need of volunteers to serve the downtrodden of our world. There can be nothing more gratifying than contributing to the needs of someone less fortunate.

Once the meals are consumed, the kids are at play and the football fans are snoozing in front of the TV at half time, the day should be one of relaxing, eating leftovers, catching up on stories and delighting in doing absolutely nothing. Then why are people surfing the internet, sitting at the kitchen table making lists of electrical gadgets, cutting coupons from the newspaper and looking for the umbrellas? Of course! They are frantically preparing for a 9 pm sprint to the stores that are opening to get a head start on the other merchants patiently waiting until midnight to open their doors. These businesses put the stores "to shame" that are planning to begin their sales at 5 am. They might as well be in a different in a different time zone, maybe even on another planet!

Why is all this necessary? There are sales all throughout December. Is that extra 10 percent really worth being awake all night running around in the frigid pouring rain and pushing, shoving and grabbing with the other "early bird" (or "round the clock" bird) shoppers? There is something about this scene that is beyond unsettling. It is truly uncivilized.

Of course, as long as shoppers go to purchase at these outrageous hours, stores will continue to promote them. Soon there will be no one at Thanksgiving dinner…everyone will be camping out at the mall before the parades are even over to be in line to buy their super dual screen video console portable hardware tv or high torque super turbo groomer at 10 percent off. Unfortunately, one group of people that really suffers from this foolishness is the sales staff at these stores. The people behind the counters, at the registers, at the doors and stocking the shelves, the ones who are at the receiving end of profanity, rudeness, complaints and unkindness are there because

Cohasset Education Foundation featured on Our Town

This week on Our Town, Cohasset's very own cable TV show, co-hosts by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo meet with members of the newly reconstituted CEF(Cohasset Education Foundation) to discuss their goals and plans for upcoming projects.

School Committee member Stephen Fusco joins the hosts on the second half of the show to detail the technology needs of Cohasset schools.

In a very entertaining roll-in segment, viewers can find out about the collaboration between the Cohasset Historical Society and the Cohasset Drama Club to present the 1936 Broadway hit "The Women" in November at Town Hall.

This show airs Monday at 9pm on channel 10 and Tuesdays and Thursdays as well.

Watch every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 9p.m. on Comcast Channel 10.

Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed.

Worley celebrates 30 years at helm of Rec. Department of the department is the direct result of the town, which helps out wherever it can. "We've always had a good response from the community and an interest in supporting and helping out with our programs. A lot of people volunteer to serve as coaches, referees or administrators," he said. "Every year they step up by the hundreds."

Due to the small size of the department, Worley said many activities are contracted out to other groups or camps, which set the fees for their program and in turn give the Recreation Department 15 percent of the proceeds. He said many of the after-school programs are run through One Creative Place, located on King Street in Jonathan Livingston Square. The Recreation Department also partners with local boosters clubs to offer sports like its very popular basketball program.

One activity that has been going on for the past roughly eight years are the dances at the Teen Center, also known as the "Teen Garage." The building, which formerly served as the highway department garage has been transformed into a place to have fun and hang out for mostly middle-school aged children in town, thanks to the Recreation Department. "We raised $40,000 to redo the building, which was about 65 years old," said Worley, which included putting in bathrooms and bringing the plumbing and electricity up to code as well as aesthetic treatments like painting.

Worley said the Garage, "Kind of runs on its own," as children who attend functions in the building pay $5 per person at the door and that pays the bills. "Our dances are very well attended," he said, adding they attract mostly students in grades six, seven and eight.

While the most popular Recreation Department offerings are geared toward the town's children there are also activities offered for adults and Worley said typically those classes are based on the latest trends in fitness. He said at one point in time aerobics was the most popular activity for adults, and that switched to step aerobics, then to Pilates and "boot camp."

Last year, the boot camp class was offered on the Town Common from 6 to 7 a.m. two mornings per week, but with the threat of Eastern Equine Encephalitis, the class was postponed. "We had about 25 people participating, and we'll bring it back in the spring," Worley said. The department offers three 10-week sessions and Worley said the class "offers a pretty tough regimen."

There are also activities for the whole family to enjoy together, such as concerts on the Common. Worley said a number of years ago, Cohasset used to bring a 30-piece band to town which played concerts roughly eight times per summer. "It was a nice family event. You'd see three generations of family members together and they'd bring a picnic," he said. However, the concerts were paid for in large part due to grant funding and today, that funding no longer exists. The town is able to hold one concert every summer through a donation from the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., which owns the South Shore Music Circus.

But to run the department and have it be so successful takes much time, and Worley said he finds himself in Cohasset almost seven days per week, working long hours. Mondays he usually arrives at the office around 5 a.m., but arrives closer to 6 a.m. the rest of the week. "It's a way of life," he said.

When not in the office, Worley spends time with his wife Mary, whom he lives with in Marshfield, as well as their sons Gary, of Duxbury, Jeffrey of Falmouth, and Eric who recently graduated from Northwestern and is living in Chicago. So far, Worley is the proud grandfather of four grandchildren and jokes, "I think I'm going to start a day camp of my own when I retire."

Recreation Department Director Jack Worley sits behind his desk at Town Hall. Worley recently celebrated his 30th anniversary working for the town.

"We've always had a good response from the community and an interest in supporting and helping out with our programs. "

'Demystifying Dyslexia' presentation is Dec. 5

Parent Advisory Council of Cohasset welcomes back Dr. Isabel Phillips from Massachusetts General Hospital. All are invited to a free presentation "Demystifying Dyslexia," Tuesday, Dec. 5, at 7:30 p.m., at Osgood School Library, behind Deer Hill School, 210 Sohier St.

What exactly is dyslexia? This session will focus on the primary diagnostic red flags of dyslexia. Phillips will draw upon a century of research in the fields of neuropsychology, ophthalmology, linguistics and education to address case studies that distinguish classic dyslexia from other types of reading and language disabilities. A question and answer period will follow.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators and representatives' votes on two roll calls from recent sessions. All roll calls are on matters brought up at the Constitutional Convention that considered proposed amendments to the state constitution.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT (S 16)

Constitutional Convention 0-196, rejected a proposed constitutional amendment establishing county government in Massachusetts including the establishment of ten counties with equal populations. County government currently is not mentioned in the constitution and was established by legislative action that created 14 counties. According to the Massachusetts government's website, eight of those counties' governments have since been abolished but still exist as "geographical entities." The sponsor of the amendment, private citizen Ross Rajotte of Northbridge, passed away in March 2005. Opponents of the amendment said that county government is often viewed as wasteful and inefficient. They noted that the trend is toward abolishing county government and argued that it is counterproductive to establish counties in the constitution. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment establishing county government in the constitution. A "No" vote is against the amendment).

BIPARTISAN REDISTRICTING COMMISSION (S 40)

Constitutional Convention 37-160, rejected a proposed constitutional amendment (S 40) requiring that the Legislature establish a bipartisan redistricting commission to draw Massachusetts legislative and Congressional districts every ten years. Currently, the constitution simply gives the Legislature itself the power to draw the districts. Amendment supporters said that the Legislature has abused its redistricting power and often gerrymanders districts to protect incumbents. They said that this antiquated, partisan system allows the majority party to control the process and permits "legislators to choose their voters." Amendment opponents said that the proposal's reference to "bipartisan" is vague and does not specify the composition of the committee or establish any guidelines that it must follow. They noted that there is a better proposed constitutional amendment (S 12) pending that would establish a non-member Independent Redistricting Commission and provide that the commission members be appointed by nine specific independent entities including the governor, chief justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, secretary of state and League of Women Voters. They argued that the independent commission would also have to follow specific guidelines to attempt to ensure that districts are compact and contiguous, a city or town is not divided into more than one district and that districts are not drawn for the purpose of diluting the voting strength of a racial minority, political party or any individual candidate. Amendment supporters countered that the nine-member independent commission proposal is at the end of the constitutional convention calendar and is unlikely to be brought to the convention for a vote. They said that many opponents of the simple bipartisan commission are being disingenuous because when they mention the independent commission because they also are against that commission and prefer that the Legislature retain the unbridled power to redistrict. The convention recessed until January 2007 without taking up the amendment that would establish a nine-member Independent Redistricting Commission. (A "Yes" vote is for the requiring that the Legislature establish a bipartisan redistricting commission. A "No" vote is against the amendment).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL:

CHILD LABOR LAWS (H 5231): The House and Senate approved and sent to Governor Romney a bill making major changes in the state's child labor laws. Current law allows 16 and 17-year-olds to work only until 10 p.m. on non-school nights. The measure would allow these minors to work until 11:30 p.m. and also keeps intact a current law permitting them to work until midnight at racetracks or restaurants. Other key provisions require minors working after 8 p.m. to be supervised by an adult over 18 and prohibit minors from working in a job that requires a firearm. The measure gives the attorney general the power to issue civil citations to businesses that violate the child labor laws including up to a $250 fine for a first offense, $500 for a second offense and $2500 for subsequent offenses. Current law only allows the attorney general to initiate criminal proceedings. Supporters said that many child labor laws have not changed since the 1930s and argued that the proposal balances the importance of allowing minors to work and learn responsibility with the state's obligation to ensure that they work in a safe environment. They noted that allowing civil fines would result in more prosecutions because the attorney general rarely initiates criminal proceedings against employers who violate these laws.

REGULATE TEEN DRIVERS (H 5064, S 2688): Supporters of a bill increasing the requirements that teens under 18 must fulfill in order to obtain a driver's license are hopeful that the measure will soon reach the governor's desk. The measure also increases the penalties for those teens' driving violations. The measure has been stalled in the Legislature since the summer when each branch approved a different version. The Senate last week appointed three members to a conference committee to draft a compromise version. The House two weeks ago appointed its members to the committee. Provisions that are only in the Senate version include prohibiting the use of cell phones by those minor drivers and requiring a special placard be attached to vehicles driven by minors. The House version proposes a commission to study the feasibility of implementing a placard program.

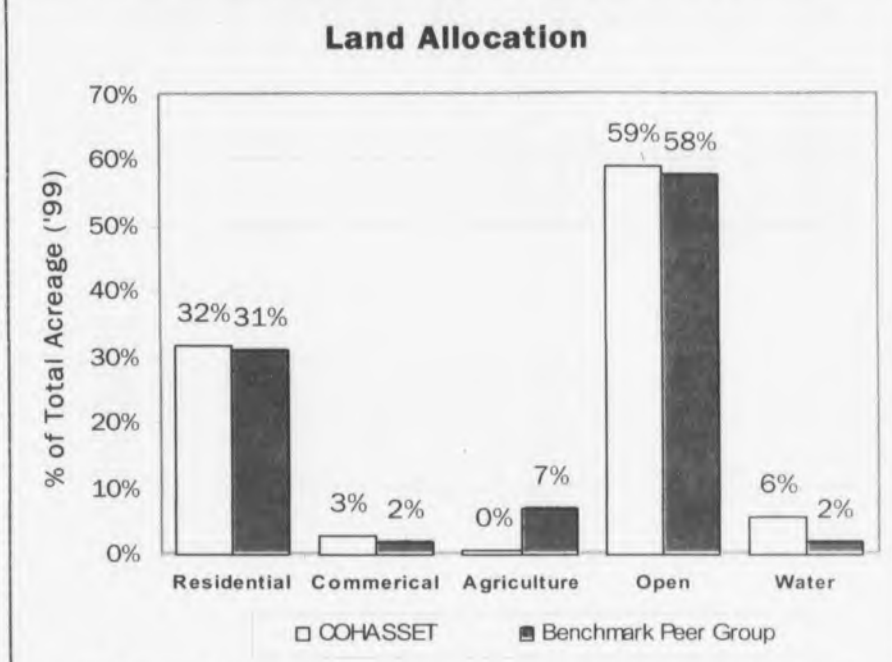
MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). 1999 is the most recent year for which data is available. Residential includes high, medium and low density residential. Commercial includes land used for commercial, industrial, transportation and mining purpsoes. Open includes open undeveloped land, urban open, institutional and recreation land, and natural land and undisturbed vegetation.

This chart shows a breakdown of Cohasset's land by use in 1999 between residential, commercial, agriculture, open space and water. The chart shows the same breakdown for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. By comparing Cohasset, one can get a sense for how its land layout differs from other similar communities. These differences could be the result of active decisions by Cohasset, or the byproduct of location and historic circumstances.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

'Black Friday' lives up to its name

they have to be. They are not making millions, but are scheduled to work these hours. They are people with feelings and have families at home, too.

May this be as far as the pendulum will swing. It would be wonderful to think things will begin to head back in the other direction when families were valued, time together and thoughts of gratitude took precedence and shopping took place during business hours on business days. This practice is so far out of hand that the insanity has to stop. Wouldn't it be great if we could return to a time when the day after Thanksgiving was an extension of the holiday? People could sleep late, have a leisurely breakfast, be relaxed and lazy, watch or play football and be together. Have a turkey sandwich and go to the movies. Sit around the fireplace for a while or take the dog for a walk. Children would learn what being with family was truly about and that it can actually be enjoyable!

Of course, there's nothing wrong with going shopping but it's really a lot more fun and refined if it's done after sunrise. Better still, there are so many quaint and elegant shops right in our own town. Stroll to the square and meander in and out of the lovely boutiques and galleries. Not only will you find splendid surprises but the atmosphere is friendly, the service is kind and plentiful and you may find Christmas presents that are perfect for people on your list. Most folks love to receive something different, luxurious or with special meaning. In many cases wrapping is free or presentation bags are beautiful enough to be given as is. If you aren't ready to buy, window-shopping costs nothing and is always a joy.

Our local towns can be a forgotten source of stylish, unique, whimsical and festive holiday shopping. They certainly provide a pleasant and pretty experience for shoppers and a chance to get into the Christmas spirit with a leisurely walk in the brisk breeze. More importantly, local businesses have supported philanthropic causes all year long as residents have solicited them for various events, raffles, shows and sponsorships. Their loyalty to charities championed by patrons is admirable and should be rewarded by shopping locally when gift giving time arrives.

So next year when ads scream, "Black Friday…open at Midnight"….at least give some thought to this barbaric practice. Turn the page to the football schedule, savor the aroma of the turkey in the oven, have some fun with the kids and schedule your nap after the third piece of pie. In your sweet dreams have a good laugh at the folks who are missing this day to count their blessings as they cut out their coupons for the mad dash into the store for their super-duper car plug automatic ionizer and Tickle-me-Elmo-Extraordinaire. Remember that Friday afternoon the Town Square beckons, the elegantly decorated windows are a visual delight and inside can be found a myriad of unique treasures ideal for Christmas giving. Top off your shopping stroll with a tasty hot chocolate at one of the coffee shops. You may run into your neighbors and be able to wish them blessings of the day. This experience extends the "thanks" in Thanksgiving, eliminates the mall insanity… and there is nothing ominous about it.

Cohasset's Schyuler Wakefield is left to wonder what went wrong during the Skippers' Thanksgiving Day game against Hull. In wet and muddy conditions, the Pirates came away with a 20-7 victory.

By Evan Deutsch

Cohasset High football head coach Pete Afanasiw recently mentioned how "records go out the window on Thanksgiving Day games."

Little did he know how this prediction would come back to haunt him and his team as the Skippers lost to Hull, 20-7, on Alumni Field.

Going into last Thursday's game, Hull had only one victory for the season, the week before against Carver. The Skippers, on the other hand, had a more respectable 3-4-2 record.

If odds tilted in the favor of Cohasset, the sideways rain, howling winds, and swampy field conditions leveled the playing field. Forget trying to make a passing game work.

The only things going into the air were a flock of seagulls blown inland and several inverted umbrellas.

"The Thanksgiving game is always a huge game, even bigger than some playoff games," said Afanasiw. "The kids know many of the Hull players, so it's very personal.

14-4-2.

That was the final record for the Cohasset High girls soccer team this season, by far the best mark the program has earned in head coach Deb Beal's nine years at the helm.

Throughout the season, Beal marveled at her team's chemistry, and that opinion did not change once the season was over.

"I am so proud of these girls. Over the course of the season they became such a tight and supportive group," said the coach. "When you have 20 athletes participating in one activity, there is bound to be some tension somewhere, but we did such an outstanding job keeping everything in check. I was so impressed."

A significant reason for that togetherness was the contributions, on and off the field, of the team's 10 seniors: Emily Coggins, Lara Novak, Caren Garber, Kara Wilcox, Colleen Richardson, Haley Haracz, Jamie Genovese, Alyssa Hinman, Shalea Daly and Karoline Holl.

"I have a team of girls who have the potential to be the best in the area and I am really looking forward to the seasons to come."

What this group was able to do was not lost on their coach.

Coastal Stars squirt B-1s take South Coast Thanksgiving Tourney title

Over the Thanksgiving weekend, the Coastal Stars squirt B-1's participated in the South Coast Thanksgiving Shootout Tournament hosted by the Hetland Panthers at the Hetland Arena in New Bedford. The B-1 squad had a lot to be thankful for. THANKS to Bryan Bowman (1 goal), Matt Scullion (2 goals) and Tucker Ambrose (1 assist) in the 3-1 win over Franklin.

THANKS to Matt Doyle (1 goal, 1 assist), Tucker Ambrose (1 goal, 1 assist), Matt Scullion (1 goal, 1 assist), Joey Redfearn (1 goal), Bryan Bowman (2 goals) and Mats Nelson (1 assist) in the 6-1 win over Pawtucket, RI in game two. THANKS to Bryan Bowman (2 goals), Matt Doyle (1 goal) and Jack Evitts (1 assist) in the 5-3 loss to Hetland in game 3. But, the Stars were especially thankful for the chance to avenge their loss to Hetland in the championship round.

Hetland had the home ice advantage and thought they had the win in the bag. Well let me tell you folks, they thought wrong. They didn't count on the amazing heart and soul of the Squirt B-1 Bombers.

Both teams had outstanding goaltenders. Coastal Stars net minder Hugh Healy maintained his cool demeanor and saved a total of 15 shots in the final game. He was especially rock solid during the OT shootout. The Stars' defense combination of Paul Parker, Robert Reidy, Joey Redfearn and Jack Evitts kept continual pressure on the Hetland offense with poke checks, forechecks, great body positioning and lots of hustle. The CS offense was faced with a likewise talented Hetland defense, and had to fight hard to find scoring opportunities.

That hard work and determination led to the Stars lighting up the lamp late in the first period. Mats Nelson dug the puck out from behind the Hetland net and passed it to Jo Jo Carbone. Jo Jo wasted not a second and slid the puck under the goalie's outstretched leg pad. Hetland was now fully aware that this was no cupcake baby! The next two goals were on Hetland's side of the scoreboard, one at the end of the first period and the other early in the second. The Stars had nine shots on goal in the second period including several attempts by the line of Will Cole, Nevin Connor and Kal Maier. But the one that counted was a short-handed goal by Bryan Bowman off a rebound shot made by Tucker Ambrose.

No fingernails were left unscathed in the third period as it was a true "nail biter". The score was tied at two apiece for most of the period. With 4:33 left the Stars had a two-man advantage for a full minute and thirty seconds, but came away empty handed. Several shots on the Hetland goal were all saved. Then, to add insult to injury, Hetland scored with 2:13 left to go ahead 3-2.

As the clock ticked down and the Hetland coaches were giving each other high fives, the Stars refused to accept defeat. They pulled Healy out of the net and with 3.8 seconds left Tucker Ambrose scored from a pass behind the net made by Joey Redfearn. The Coastal Stars fans erupted with cheers of joy and Hetlands' jaws hit the floor.

The five minute OT period came and went with no goals although Matt Doyle almost put it to bed with a cannon shot that bounced off the cross bar. The game was to be decided in a shoot out. Each team had five members go one on one against the goalie. The Stars began with a thwarted attempt by Matt Doyle. Hugh Healy, now thoroughly pumped, easily stopped Hetland's first attempt.

Next up for the Stars was Bryan Bowman. He deked the goalie, Patrice Bergeron-style. Stars went up 4-3. The next Hetland shooter was also stopped by Healy as he charged out of the net to swat the player away. Tucker Ambrose then outsmarted the Hetland goalie as did Joey Redfearn. Hetland only managed to score once.

The final score was Coastal Stars 6, Hetland Panthers 4. Saaahweeet victory! This was youth hockey at its best. Thanks so much to coaches Joe Redfearn, Rob Reidy, Paul Maier and Bill Cole. Their outstanding talent for teaching the love of the game is so evident. Also, Chris Bertone was a major contributor to the first three games but was unable to make it to the championship game.

The seniors especially understand the importance and finality of the game."

There were a few spooky things about this game. First, the weather proved nasty, if not worse than the matchup next to Hull Gut last year. Second, the Pirates had a score to settle after last year's fiasco for Hull.

In the waning seconds of the 2005 game Cohasset came through with the only three points of the day, a 25-yard field goal by Rob Murley against the strong winds. Just before that score, Hull thought it had an interception, a call the referees reversed. So Hull could not wait to make 2006 the year the Skippers would wallow in their own mud.

The Skippers prepared well for the showdown. Afanasiw, his assistant coaches, and even some of the players scouted at least four of Hull's games. They knew what to expect.

"We felt confident going in. Everyone was healthy and well-prepared after our bye week," commented Afanasiw.

Now for the gritty details. The opening kickoff to Hull set the stage for the scrappy and heated rivalry. Skipper junior Pat Doonan's opening kick bounced off a Hull player and ended up in the hands of Cohasset senior Nick Cambi.

After a scoreless first quarter filled with foiled drives and lockdown defense, the Skippers finally broke the ice with a short touchdown run late in the second quarter by senior tailback Anthony DiPaolo. Doonan nailed the extra point to put Cohasset up 7-0.

With Cohasset's confidence flying high, the Pirates decided it was time to take action. And that's just what they did. Whatever momentum Cohasset had built up in the game slipped away faster than a python on a town library floor.

With just over a minute left in the half, Hull's senior running back Ricky Stoltz picked up serious yardage on a drive and charged up the middle into the end zone to put the Pirates on the board.

Cohasset junior defensive back Mark Flibotte knocked down the Pirates' two-point conversion attempt, but Hull still maintained their fiery drive for the remainder of the first half.

With only 40 seconds left in the half, Hull forced Cohasset to punt. Hull blocked the punt deep in Cohasset territory. After one of the few passing plays of the game, Stoltz muscled his way into the end zone for his second touchdown.

This time, the Pirates put the extra two points on the board. The Skippers looked with despair as the scoreboard flashed a 14-7 lead for the visitors.

"Our halftime pep talk was pretty mellow," said Afanasiw. "I just explained to them how they needed to stop shooting themselves in the foot. We played hard, but simple mistakes killed us."

The third quarter brought more consistent but ineffective drives from both teams. It's hard to believe, but the rain picked up even more. Still, warm turkey dinners were the last things on the players' minds.

At the 3:45 mark in the fourth quarter a costly Cohasset turnover set up junior Mike Bilodeau for Hull's final touchdown to end the game at a 20-7 Pirates victory.

"We just couldn't move the ball on offense," said Doonan. "We struggled to make any breaks in our running game. We couldn't pass because of the weather. All of us, especially the seniors, felt pretty disappointed to end the season on this note."

Said Afanasiw, "We definitely had the preparation and the drive to win. We just couldn't execute on both ends of the field. The players lost confidence in the second half."

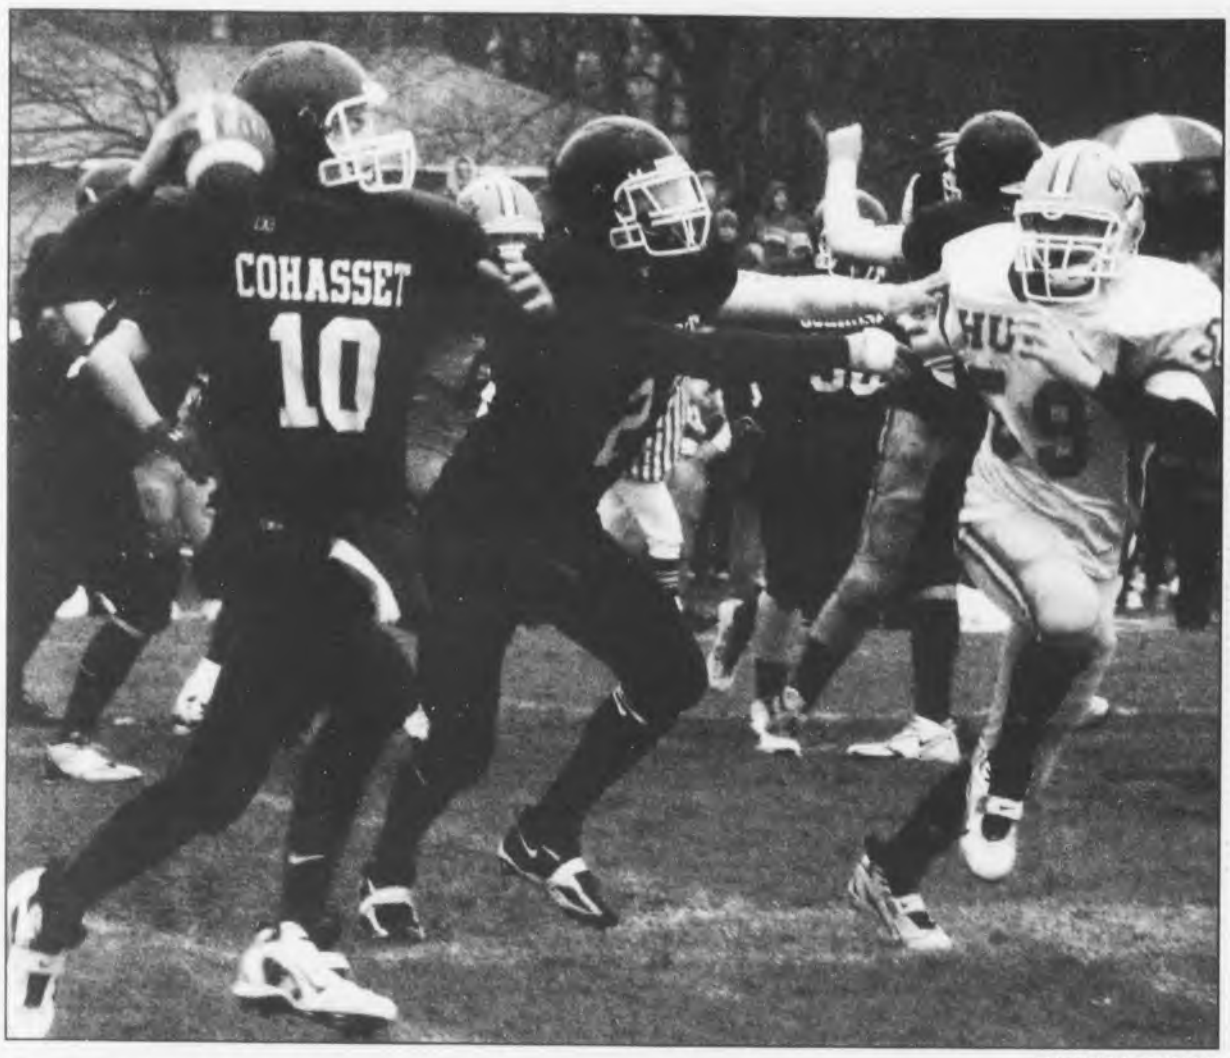
Even so, Afanasiw praised quarterback Dave Snowdale and offensive linemen Cambi, Paul St. Pierre and Jake Cuneo for their solid performances.

Defensively speaking, Afanasiw mentioned how Flibotte played his "best game of the year," while Cambi and Sam DeGiacomo "both made substantial contributions."

In a postgame Mariner interview Afanasiw was asked what went wrong to cost Cohasset the game.

"If anything, our defense ended up trying to do too much," explained the coach. "They played almost too aggressively, and often found themselves unable to finish their tackles."

What's done is done, though, and a good team must cut its losses and move on. Next season will present another opportunity for the Skippers to dethrone Hull or even make a run at a South Shore League championship.



PHOTOS/CRAIG GOEDECKE

Skippers quarterback David Snowdale (10) attempts one of his few passes on the day, as teammate PJ McCaw provides protection. The conditions forced both teams to primarily rely on the run.

Captains Justin Alexander (80) and Colin Conway (56) lead their teammates onto the field before the start of the game.

"I would definitely like to see a slight improvement in the off-season training," said Afanasiw. "A better weight training program would really give us an edge next year."

Afanasiw brings to the football table an interesting perspective. When asked how the Cohasset athletes compared to those of Duxbury – for whom Afanasiw was an assistant coach prior to this season – he mentioned how the two teams displayed similar abilities. The smaller size of Cohasset meant the pool of players was naturally smaller.

Afanasiw kept coming back to the importance of more weight training for the Skippers, saying, "Our athletes need to perform more off season training. I will be visiting the weight room almost every day and hope to see the team there."

With yet another season under their belts, the Skippers will certainly take to heart the old saying, "There is no off season."

become and they deserve so much thanks," Beal said. "I would also like to thank their parents for always being there to help out and their undying support of our program."

Those 10 athletes saw their high school soccer careers end on Nov. 6 with a 2-1 loss to West Bridgewater in the second round of the Div. 3 South sectional. Beal said a number of factors contributed to the defeat, but the biggest was WB's physical play, which led to that team winning most of the 50-50 balls.

"In my opinion we were the more skilled and the faster team that afternoon, but we were not the tougher team," said Beal. "West Bridgewater was a physical team and they won themselves some balls by just sheer determination to not get pushed off the ball. We struggled a little with the contact and I think it knocked us off balance."

The Skippers weren't helped by a smaller-than-usual playing field that hampered the team's trademark passing and possession style of play. One of Cohasset's biggest strengths this year, something that had been missing in seasons past, was its ability to use the entire width of the field. Needless to say, the small pitch limited that capability.

Still, Beal felt it ultimately came down to the physical nature of the game, and she will use that as motivation in the future.

"Was I disappointed in the outcome? Of course I was, but the steps we have made to become a tougher and more powerful team cannot be measured," Beal said. "We now know what it feels like to be pushed around and I will adapt my coaching to not let that happen to us again. I have a team of girls who have the potential to be the best in the area and I am really looking forward to the seasons to come."

The future appears bright for the program, as it will return all five of its South Shore League All-Stars for two more seasons: forward Torey Hart, midfield Maggie McGoldrick, defenders Sarah Coggins and Sammi Lehr, and keeper Johanna Brophy. By comparison, the Skippers tied Div. 3 state finalist Norwell with five girls on the All-Star team, while sectional semifinalist Abington had three.

The future appears bright for the program, as it will return all five of its South Shore League All-Stars.

Junior forward Meg Anderson and junior defender Anna Haggerty can also be counted among the top players in the league returning next season, while sophomore Kristin Monaco and freshman Mackenzie Hart both showed promise up front during the season.

Beal said she will also be looking to a successful JV program to help fill the holes left by this year's graduating class.

"We are losing some key seniors in some important spots, but when you stop and look at the depth we have I cannot help but smile," said the coach. "We have sophomores who honed their skills on the junior varsity this season and are ready to contribute to the varsity team. JV ended their season at 13-2-1 with losses to only Abington and Norwell, and their tie was with East Bridgewater.

"The team scoring total on that team was just as high as the varsity, which shows me an attitude to score. Finishing is so important and the more comfortable we become – really, just being selfish and taking the open shots - the better we will become."

Youth lacrosse registration begins Dec. 2

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will open its sign-up for the 2007 spring season on Saturday, Dec. 2 from 9 to 11 a.m. at the gymnasium at Cohasset High School.

Families who sign up on the first day of registration have an opportunity to save money, paying the registration price from 2006 of $150 for one player and $275 for two and $375 for three children. Registrants after the first sign-up day – and sign-ups will remain open by mail through a second in-person sign-up day on Jan. 6 – will pay the new, higher, 2007 prices.

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls at the 15 & Under level (7th and 8th graders) and 13 & Under level (5th and 6th grades) and 11 & Under level (grades 3-4). No previous lacrosse experience is necessary, and the program welcomes and encourages new players at all levels.

The youth lacrosse program is dedicated to introducing children to the sport. All players receive roughly equal playing time regardless of ability. Cohasset's boys teams participate in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League, while its girls play in the South Shore Lacrosse League; neither league keeps standings or has playoffs, encouraging fair and equal playing time and a commitment to educating all participants in how to play the game.

Every Cohasset team makes several road trips per year, which can be as close as games in Scituate or as far away as Nantucket.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse expects to field 12 or more teams this spring, depending on demand and available coaching. The program is committed to accepting every player who signs up during its registration period, but roster spots will be limited; if the program has reached or surpassed its ideal roster size when registration closes on Jan. 6, it is possible that some late registrants will be turned away.

Following the initial sign-up day, families interested in participating in the program can register by mail, at the 2007 price of $160 for one player, $300 for two, and $400 for three. That price will hold through the Jan. 6 sign-up day – also held at Cohasset High School from 9 to 11 a.m.

At that point, if the program has reached its ideal roster sizes, registration will be closed. A waiting list will be established and any available spaces will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis, and charged a late registration fee of $25.

Parents who can not attend the Dec. 2 can wait until Jan. 6 to register in person, or can contact Chuck Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com to request registration forms. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

The registration fee covers all Cohasset Youth Lacrosse events, a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to Lacrosse Magazine for Kids.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents.

In general, games for boys and girls are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set, although the older teams for both boys and girls typically have two practices and one game each week. At the youngest level, there typically is one practice per week. The teams will begin practicing indoors in early March and begin playing games in April. Cohasset's season concludes with the annual Family Day celebration – featuring intra-town games — in June.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse works with other town sports organizations to minimize conflicts and to allow players to participate in as many activities as possible.

In addition to players, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for additional coaches at all levels.

There will be more information on the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program available at the Dec. 2 sign-up. If you need more information in the interim, or are interested in volunteering to coach, contact Jaffe at (781)383-6688 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST...
YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this...

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you...you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn the details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 19-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

The first attendee who submits a disposable, non-returnable, copy of their estate planning documents that do not have any of the problems addressed in this article will receive $1,000! Bring your documents to the workshop for a complimentary 12-15 point written analysis.

YOU CANNOT STOP THE WORLD FROM CHANGING...BUT YOU CAN USE NEW TECHNIQUES TO PROTECT YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES.

Don't wait until you actually have a problem before you deal with it. By waiting until the problem happens you typically can only minimize the damage, rather than prevent it. Let's prevent it! By attending this FREE workshop you will receive a 19-point review of your existing trust, or a review of your estate planning goals and help creating a personalized plan. We will tell you the areas of vulnerability your estate has and how to protect your assets.

CHS championship banners

The Cohasset High School Athletic Department is in the process of creating new championship banners for the high school gymnasium. CHS wants these banners to be as accurate as possible.

After researching the CHS Athletic Department trophy case and old banners, the department has compiled the list below of Cohasset High School league, sectional, and state championships.

Any CHS grads or community members who can help the group with any dates that may have been missed should contact Athletic Director Roy Ford at Cohasset Middle - High School, 43 Pond Street, Cohasset, MA 02025. Phone: (781) 383-6103; e-mail: rford@cohassetk12.org.

Cohasset High School thanks you for your help.

Annual meeting of CYBSA Members

To all CYBSA parents, volunteers and other interested parties:

First, on behalf of the CYBSA, a thank you to all those who volunteered and otherwise supported the CYBSA this past year. Despite the rain, we enjoyed a fun and exciting spring season in both softball and baseball.

Those who played summer ball acquitted themselves well in the competitive summer leagues. Our boys 11A team won the District Championship. One of our Junior League teams (13- and 14-year old boys) won the championship in our Norwell/Cohasset Junior Baseball League.

We started a fall baseball program this year, and it was met with great enthusiasm by the players, and great weather! The League held its first annual awards night on Oct. 24, and our division winners were presented with their awards.

Preparations for next year are well under way.

As per our previous communications, the CYBSA ratified a new Constitution last year. The Constitution is available for your review on the League's website - CYBSA.net. Among other things, the Constitution provides for an annual meeting of the members of the CYBSA. That meeting will take place on Wednesday, Dec. 6, at 7:30 p.m., at the Cohasset Middle-High School Cafeteria.

All Members of the CYBSA are invited to attend (membership applications are available on the website - any adult who is interested in furthering the objectives of the CYBSA may become a regular member).

The Constitution further provides for a Board of Directors that is elected by the CYBSA's Regular Members. We are in the process of effectuating the transition to a fully elected Board. This year, with service to start on Jan. 1, 2007, there will be four elected positions that will open on the Board. Each position has a three-year term. We encourage all interested members to run for the board!

There is a short Statement of Interest form posted on the website - if you are interested in running for the Board, please complete the form, and return to the CYBSA via email. We will be accepting applications for the Board through 5 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 1.

On Monday, Dec. 4, we will post the slate of candidates for the elected positions on the Board. All regular members of the CYBSA will be eligible to vote for the Board candidates; the election will be held at the Annual Meeting on Dec. 6.

Regular members who cannot attend the annual meeting, but wish to vote, will be able to do so by absentee ballot. The absentee ballots will be available on the CYBSA web site.

Many thanks for your continued support - please do not hesitate to contact us with any questions. Again - those interested in the League - please run for a seat on the Board!

SCHOOLS

Six months to graduation day!

LIFE AT CHS

THOMPSON, TEHRANIAN & INGRAM

Amanda Thompson, Roxanne Tehranian and Ryan Ingram wrote this week's column for Mike Corry, who has been under the weather.

Six is the magic number for seniors here at CHS. Of course, it's the number of months that stands between seniors and graduation day. It's also the average number of colleges applied to by the ambitious student. And best of all, it's the margin by which the senior girls defeated the juniors in the 2006 Powderpuff Game, which proved to be a shootout by two high-powered offenses.

Students across the board are looking forward to the upcoming 10-day holiday respite from the rush of the school day. However, much is to done in the three school weeks left before the New Year. Here's a hint of what's to come:

• Winter sports teams met for their first practices this past Monday.

• Juniors and sophomores will have access to PSAT scores beginning the week of Dec. 11. The guidance department is hosting a breakfast for parents of juniors, during which parents will be introduced to the college search process.

• Sweatshirts and pajama pants are on sale in the middle school to support the yearbook. Show your school spirit with comfortable and fashionable clothes bearing the Cohasset insignia!

• Dates for middle school students and parents: There will be a student council meeting after school on Dec. 4 and a train safety workshop during school on the sixth. Parents and administrators met on Thursday morning to discuss middle school students' social lives over coffee.

• Next weekend (Dec. 8-10), Cohasset's dramatic talent will stage their production of "Guys and Dolls!" Be sure to attend one of the three showings and support the cast!

• "The Spinnsheet," supplement to the award-winning Spinnaker, will be available to students on Dec. 22.

• A special series of speakers has been invited to CHS to address the senior class during the second semester. In addition, there will be a three-screen multi-media presentation titled "Commitment to Excellence" for both the middle and high schools.

• The annual Project Safeguard Christmas Tree Drive will take place in early January. Students interested in participating please see Dr. Gill.

Good luck to everyone: winter sports teams, the cast of "Guys and Dolls," seniors waiting for those early acceptance letters…and anyone else just trying to hang in there until the next vacation. We're rooting for you.

Despite some light rainfall, the sixth annual Turkey Trot got off to a spirited start Thanksgiving morning at Cohasset Common Ready, set, go!

Turkey Day Trot draws a crowd

Brendan Carr of Brewster, Maine comes in first in the sixth annual Turkey Trot. The 3.1-mile race started and ended at Cohasset Common. Funds raised will be donated to the Jett Foundation of Pembroke, which is dedicated to spreading the word about Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy and raising funds to find a cure.

Tracey Merrill's son Joseph Wellman, age 6, made this big "Go Mama" sign for his mom, who participated in the sixth annual Turkey Trot Thanksgiving morning.

Scituate resident Tracey Timmins is the first woman to tear through the yellow finish line at the sixth annual Turkey Trot.

Kristin Rosano pins her 8-year-old daughter Megan's Turkey Trot race number on her jacket. Both ran in the race to help raise funds for the Jett Foundation.

Rob Lawrence registers for the Thanksgiving morning Turkey Trot with his two race partners, golden retrievers Sony and Nellie.

The sixth annual Turkey Trot saw runners from all over New England compete to raise money for the Jett Foundation, which fights to raise awareness and find a cure for Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy.

Library Corner

Rousseau's landscapes on display

Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For information on programs and events, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Art Exhibit – South Shore Art Center is sponsoring an exhibit of Diana Rousseau's landscape paintings through Dec. 31 at Paul Pratt Library. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesdays and Fridays, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturdays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sundays, from 2 to 5 p.m.

Page Position – The library is looking for an organized, detail-oriented Cohasset resident to fill a part-time page position. Applicant must be 16 years or older. Responsibilities include shelving library materials, shelf reading and light cleaning. Hours would be Saturday afternoons and/or Sunday afternoons. Call Gayle Walsh at 383-1348, ext. 120 if interested.

Independent Film Night – Take a break from holiday shopping and come to a free movie at the library. The independent film "Be With Me" will be presented Thursday, Dec. 21, at 6 p.m., in the Meeting Room. Free admission and refreshments will be provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

FOR CHILDREN

Spanish Music for Children – On Mondays, Dec, 4,11,18, and Jan. 8, 22 and 29, at 10:30, in the Meeting Room, Jodi Craft will teach and sing familiar songs in Spanish. This interactive Spanish enrichment program is for all ages and communities. No registration required. Funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Spanish Story Time – On Friday, Dec. 15, from 1 to 2 p.m., in the Meeting Room, Su Escuela, The Language Center, will present Spanish Story Time. This interactive program will be facilitated by native Spanish-speaking teachers who will translate, adapt and present well-known books. Call 781-383-1348 to register for this program.

Our World

All ages welcome for 'messy art!

The following fall programs will be offered at Our World Museum at 100 Sohier St., Cohasset. For information call 781-383-3198.

Mid-Week Camp – Elementary School students can spend the afternoon at Our World on early release days. Sessions include craft, snack, lesson and play time. Held from 1:15 to 3:30 pm. Registration in advance. Schedule currently accommodates students from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Norwell, Hanover and Braintree. The cost is $30 per class for non-members and $25 for members. Themes include growing, eating, playing and communicating.

Spanish for Kids – Join Emilia Buckley for a fun beginning Spanish language and culture class. Using music, visuals and lots of imagination, children will be introduced to and enjoy the benefits of early language learning. Classes for 3 to 5 year olds will be held Fridays from 10 to 11 a.m. Classes for 4 to 5 year olds will be held Thursdays from 1 to 2 p.m. Classes begin after the new year. There is a maximum of five children so that special attention can be given.

Messy Art – Join Julie for three sessions Thursday afternoons to do the projects you hesitate to do at home such as painting, glue, beads, clay, sand art, tie-dye and much more. Classes run from 1 to 1:45 p.m., or 4 to 5 p.m. All ages welcome, but drop-off is available for ages 5 and up. The cost is $5 per child.

It's "Music Time" – Join Jim Armstrong, on an international musical adventure. An Our World exclusive. Parents and their children, ages 18 months to 4 years, are invited to join Jim for six weeks of musical and educational fun. Every class begins with a classic campfire sing-along around a realistic looking (but pretend) campfire. With Jim leading the sing-alongs and playing guitar, mandolin and ukulele, children will learn how to sing and perform simple and fun hand/body movements to favorite songs sung by children around the world. Highlights of the six week session include a participating in a dress up parades while marching and dancing to music from many cultures, a Mexican Hat Dance party and a Hawaiian Luau. Classes begin in January and will be held Tuesdays at 9:30 a.m.

French for Kids – Invite your child to join Liliane Miller, a native French speaker and learn a little French through the use of songs, nursery rhymes, poetry and simple conservation. Your child will be exposed to a new language in a fun and vibrant way. Classes for 3 to 5 years olds will be held Wednesday from 10:30 to 11:15 and 1 to 1:45 p.m. The cost is $60 for members and $70 for non-members. Classes for 5 to 8 year olds will be held Tuesdays from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. The cost is $70 for members and $85 for non-members.

Play and Learn Chinese – Join Ling Tang, of the CBK Culture Center for a fun elementary Chinese class. Children will learn to speak simple Chinese (Mandarin), sing songs, play traditional games, and do monthly crafts. Ages 3 to 6. Classes will begin in January.

Help us fill in the Blanks – A creative and unique gift for the holiday season. A great present to honor families, children, grandparents, teachers or members in the community. Your donation of $100 will reserve your brick to add to the Our World sidewalk. The funds will support the maintenance of Our World outdoor playground and our indoor play area, plus the aquition of additional play structures and museum exhibits. If you prefer, you can purchase a granite paver for $500.

Family Friday Nights – Starting in December, dinner and a movie will be held at the museum the third Friday of each month. The cost is $10 per adult and $5 per child with a maximum of $25. Call 781-383-3198 by the Wednesday before to reserve your spot.

Kids Night Out – Starting in December and running the first Friday of each month; drop kids off in their pajamas at 5:30 p.m. Our World will feed them dinner, play games, and show them a movie. Pick up is by 8:30 p.m. For ages 3 and up. $10 per child. Call 781-383-3198 by the Wednesday before to reserve your spot.

It's Happening

Holiday fun at One Creative Place

Holiday Happenings are filling the month of December at One Creative Place here in Cohasset. From Shop till you Drop nites to Gingerbread House Workshops and gift making programs and more for all ages, you can bring the kids over to have a fantastic time. For more information, go to www.onecreativeplace.net or call 781-383-2211.

GOP party

The annual Cohasset Republican Town Committee Christmas Party will take place Sunday, Dec. 3, from 5 to 7:30 p.m., at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. The proceeds from this annual event help fund the committee's scholarships for college-bound high school seniors. This year, the committee is requesting that attendees bring canned goods for the Cohasset Food Pantry.

All are invited to this holiday celebration. Tickets, which includes beverages, are $15 per person and $25 per couple.

For reservations, call Julie Guild, 365 Jerusalem Road, at 781-383-6443 or Kevin O'Donnell, 248 King St., at 781-383-6113.

'Guys & Dolls' is next weekend!

Cohasset Music Department will present the musical "Guys & Dolls" Friday, Dec. 8, and Saturday, Dec. 9, at 7:30 p.m., and Sunday, Dec. 10, at 2:30 p.m., in the Cohasset Middle-High School auditorium.

This musical about dice-rolling gamblers and the "dolls" they love features the songs "Luck be a Lady," "A Bushel and a Peck," "I've Never been in Love Before" and "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat." Miss Adelaide will be played by Sinclair Dean; while her gambling beau, Nathan Detroit, is played by Tim Toomey. The Mission Doll, Sarah Brown, is played by Sally Meehan; while she is wooed by the high-roller, Sky Masterson, played by Charles Miller. In addition, a strong supporting cast and crew makes this a highly recommended show.

Stephanie Hoskin is director/choreographer and Bryan Marks is producer/music director. Marks said, "This show should stand favorably in the long tradition of quality musicals here at Cohasset Middle-High School."

Great songs and dances and unforgettable characters all perform with a pit orchestra.

Tickets are $10, and may be purchased at the door or in advance at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset. For more information, call 781-383-2069.

GEMs to host fundraiser

GEMS of Hope will host a Magical Movable Feast Sunday, Dec. 10, to celebrate the holidays and support three remarkable programs: the computer education for women program run by Wellspring in Hull; the career education for low income women offered by the Odwin Learning Center in Boston and primary education for children offered by Maria Alvarides School in Pici, Brazil.

This beautiful evening, hosted by Peter and Leah Taylor Roy and Mary and Don Larson will consist of cocktails and caroling at the Roy's followed by dinner, dessert and a silent auction at the home of Mary and Don Larson.

Tickets cost $75 per person and can be reserved by contacting Cindy Kuppens at 781-383-6670, or by leaving a message in her voice mail and she will return your call.

The highlight of the evening will be the fabulous jewelry featured in the Gems for GEMs Holiday Auction. Some of the items in the auction include both new and estate pieces. In addition, men's enameled coin cufflinks, a gold watch, bracelets and more will be featured. Cohasset Jewelers, as well as women involved in GEMs, have donated lovely pieces of jewelry to help ensure the evening's success.

GEMS of Hope, USA is a local not-for-profit organization of women who are committed to helping women become self-sufficient and able to support themselves and their families. All food, beverages and auction items have been donated for this event and GEMs estimates that over 95 percent of all ticket sales and auction proceeds will be donated to the three projects benefited by this event.

Christmas Fair at Greek Church

The Panagia Greek Orthodox Church at 811 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset will hold a Christmas Fair, Saturday, Dec. 2, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Greek baked goods and hot apple cider, as well as handcrafted goods such as decorated wreaths and boxwood trees, felt designer handbags, crocheted and knitted goods and a Grandma's attic table will be featured.

Giving extra credit to Cohasset teachers

DebbieLooking for the perfect gift to thank that special teacher or the helpful school secretary who anwers questions or the art teacher who stayed after school every week to encourage children to knit hats for the homeless? Cohasset Education Foundation offers the solution to gift-giving needs. With a tax-deductible donation to the CEF's Teacher Appreciation Program, parents can send any Cohasset teacher, administrator or school staff member Extra Credit.

Each recipient of an Extra Credit gift will receive a card acknowledging that a donation has been made in his or her honor with a personalized message. The amount of the gift is not disclosed. Donors are able to thank those people who work so hard for the children in the schools, as well as help fund CEF grant programs that foster innovation and excellence in teaching throughout the entire Cohasset Public School System.

With each Extra Credit donation, the CEF will mail an acknowledgement card to the teacher or other special recipient in the Cohasset schools. Cards are available with a suggested minimum donation of $15 each ($50 for five cards), larger donations are always appreciated. All of the proceeds of the Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit go toward funding professional development in the Cohasset schools. The CEF accepts donations for the Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit throughout the entire school year. Not only is this an ideal holiday gift, but a way to thank the teachers and staff in the schools all year long.

Take time this holiday season to honor local educators by participating in the CEF Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit. Donations may also be made in honor of relatives, friends, coaches, grandparents and any other special people or as a memorial remembrance. Checks should be made payable to: The Cohasset Education Foundation and mailed to: The Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O Box 309, Cohasset, MA 02025. The Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale are joining forces this holiday season to support Wellspring's Diane Edson Fund.

'Dancing Day' is Dec. 10 at First Parish

Members of Broad Cove Chorale will perform in next weekend's "Dancing Day" concert to benefit Wellspring. Performances will take place Saturday, Dec. 9, at 8 p.m., at House of Prayer, 916 Main St., Hingham, and Sunday, Dec. 10, at 4 p.m., at First Parish Church, 23 North Main St., on the Green, in Cohasset.

The Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale are joining forces this holiday season to support Wellspring's Diane Edson Fund, which provides direct financial aid to people in crisis. This cause is meaningful to the singers, since Edson was a member of Unicorn Singers for 15 years until her death.

The concert is titled "Dancing Day," and features various settings of the old Cornish carol "tomorrow shall be my dancing day…this have I done for my true love." The principal works are a suite of Christmas carol dances called Ringeltänze, which will be accompanied by piano and hand bell choir, and John Rutter's cantata, "Dancing Day." The assembled audience and choirs will render a number of familiar carols, some with hand bells and instruments to brighten the sound.

Tickets are $15 or $25 for a sponsor ticket to help support Wellspring, and are good for either performance. They are available at Noble's in Hingham Square or by calling Kathy Reardon at 781-749-0162. Tickets will be sold at the door as available.

Rusty Skippers perform at noon Saturday

The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset's own community concert band, will be performing their annual Holiday Pops Concert at First Parish Church on Saturday, Dec. 2, at noon. The Skippers have been preparing a variety of new holiday pieces including "Sleigh Ride," made famous by the Boston Pops, "Carol of the Bells," "What Child is This" and many other familiar tunes and carols in all styles. With several new members, as well as band veterans, the Rusty Skippers have never sounded better. The concert is free and appropriate for all ages. A free-will cash offering for the Cohasset Food Pantry will be taken.

The band will offer a preview of this concert Sunday, Nov. 26, at Harbor House in Hingham at 2:30 p.m. The Skippers will also be playing other selections at the lighting of the town tree Friday, Nov. 24. The Rusty Skipper performances are funded in part by Cohasset Cultural Council.

The Rusty Skippers were formed in 1995 as part of the Cohasset Harborfest at the suggestion of the late Rev. Ed Atkinson of First Parish in Cohasset. The Rusty Skippers play under the direction of Steve Biagini, the instrumental music director at Deer Hill School.

After the December concert schedule is completed, the band will reconvene in the early spring to prepare selections for the concerts at the South Shore Festival of the Arts and American Cancer Society Relay for Life and at various nursing homes.

The Rusty Skippers Band welcomes new members at the beginning of each season. Anyone who is interested in joining the band can contact Steve Biagini, c/o Deer Hill School, at sbiagini@cohassetk12.org.

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own community.

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 15 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Abington Mariner, Rockland Mariner, Braintree Forum, Cohasset Mariner, Hanover Mariner, Hingham Journal, Marshfield Mariner, Norwell Mariner, Pembroke Mariner & Reporter, Scituate Mariner, Wareham Courier, and Weymouth News in giving the greatest gift of all – a gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way in helping those in need.

This year these local newspapers have identified several local charities to be the recipients of the gifts of hope donations.
Please make your tax deductible check or money order payable to (Choose from one of these local charities):

St. Vincent de Paul Society Food Pantry (Abington)
Rockland Emergency Food Pantry

Blessing of the Animals to be held

The Blessing of the Animals, an annual tradition will be held in the Meeting House at the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church on Cohasset Common and will take place Sunday, Dec. 3, at 3 p.m.

Be it a four-legged friend, a feathered friend, or even those in aquariums; dogs, cats, hamsters, birds, lizards, snakes - all are welcome. Yes, two years ago a pony looked through the window for his blessing. The service will feature animal-friendly music, readings, prayers and a short homily by their minister, Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull.

Everyone will be invited to come to the chancel for individual blessings of their companion animals - live, stuffed, or even a photo.

Bring pets into the Meeting House on a leash or in a carrier. To prevent "accidents," make sure that pets are housetrained and under control at all times.

Come and share the blessing. For information, phone Rev. Carlsson-Bull at 781-383-1100.

Obituaries

Bruce A. Edmonds

Former welder at Proctor and Gamble

Bruce A. Edmonds, 92, of Cohasset, died Nov. 20, 2006, at his home.

Born in Ontario, Canada, Mr. Edmonds was raised in Quincy and graduated from Quincy High School and New York Diesel Engineering School. He had been a Cohasset resident for 55 years.

Mr. Edmonds worked for more than 34 years at Proctor and Gamble as a welder. He served in the U.S. Navy Reserves during World War II and the Korean War.

He was a life member of the Scituate Rod and Gun Club, and served as a member on several town committees.

He leaves his wife of 66 years, Mary (Broderick) Edmonds; his children, Bonnie Ritter of Texas, Sheila Long of Nevada and Joan Lawrence of Colorado; his grandchildren, Richard Ritter, Mark Ritter and Eric Ritter, all of Texas, David Lawrence of Michigan, Peter Lawrence of Colorado and Erin Maher of Nevada; and five great-grandchildren. He was the brother of the late Eileen Sunnerberg.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Interment in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy. Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Memorial donations may be made to Cohasset Food Pantry c/o St. Anthony Church, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

William E. Fox

Businessman; World War II Veteran

William E. Fox Jr., 84, fortified with the Sacraments of the Holy Catholic Church, passed away Nov. 22, 2006, in Roanoke, Va.

Born in Stoughton, he was the son of the late William and Marian Fox, Sr.

He was a decorated World War II veteran, serving in the First Squad, Second Platoon Company, Second Battalion, 318 Infantry Regiment of the 80th Infantry Division in the European Theatre of Operations.

Mr. Fox was a graduate of St. Louis University and a successful businessman. He was a member of Our Lady of Nazareth Catholic Church.

He treasured the time he lived in Cohasset on Old Coach Road with his large family. Cohasset always held a special place in his heart, as it was where he spent happy times with his extended family, summering while home from boarding school.

Mr. Fox was quite proud that eight of his ten children, as well as his nephew, all graduated from Cohasset High School.

He leaves his wife of 54 years, Gertrude R. (Bosch) Fox; ten children, Teresa Stoller and her husband Jamie, of Shaker Heights, Ohio; James Fox and his wife Matoula, of Montclair, N.J.; Kathy Fox and her husband Vern, of Port Townsend, Wash.; Kevin Fox and his wife Julie, of New York, N.Y.; Susan Thompson and her husband David, of Roanoke, Va.; Andrea Kluender and her husband Keith, of Madison, Wis.; Peggy Good and her husband, David of Denver, Pa.; Vicki Venes and Jack Winters of Tacoma, Wash., Jennifer Markulec and her husband Michael, of Titusville, N.J. and Lisa Crutchfield and her husband Eric, of Roanoke, Va., as well as 21 grandchildren and many relatives and friends. He was the uncle of the late Stephen Fox.

Interment at Arlington National Cemetery will be held in spring 2007.

Contributions in his memory may be made to a charity of one's choice or to his favorite charity, Food for the Poor, 550 SW 12th Ave., Deerfield Beach, FL. 33442.

Elizabeth Vining

Retired secretary

Elizabeth "Betty" (Fleming) Vining, 75, of Marshfield, died Nov. 20, 2006, at Cardigan Nursing Home in Scituate.

Born in Scituate, Mrs. Vining graduated from Scituate High School. Prior to her retirement, she had been employed as a secretary at Governor Winslow School in Marshfield. She retired in 1998 after 25 years of service.

Mrs. Vining and her late husband, Joseph P. Vining, were loyal Marshfield High School football fans. She had been a Marshfield resident for 50 years.

Wife of the late Joseph P. FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

LIVE AND LET LEARN

By Danielle Ameden
DAILY NEWS CORRESPONDENT

Robynn Eisley and the classroom come together like an orchestra.

They play in harmony.

Inspired by a passion for lifelong learning, Eisley has returned to school over and over again to teach and be taught. Now a student at UMass Medical Center in Worcester studying to become a registered family nurse practitioner, the 54-year-old said the motivation to further her education has been simple.

"It wards off Alzheimer's," said Eisley, a registered nurse, who is a little more than a semester away from finishing her three-year Graduate Entry Pathways (GEP) master's program at the school's Graduate School of Nursing in Worcester.

Eisley, who as a 10-year-old dreamed of becoming a pediatrician, has threaded together a colorful life story centered around her endless quest for knowledge. The Norristown, Pa., native has taken breaks from school to bear and raise two children, and dabble in different professions, but nothing can keep her out of the classroom.

After graduating from Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley in 1974, where she studied music history and biology on the pre-med track, Eisley earned her master's degree in music history from Smith College. While her interest in music took her to UCLA on an esteemed Regents scholarship – where she worked toward a doctorate degree – she stopped short of writing her dissertation.

With the realization of there being few jobs in the field, the newly married Eisley decided to return to Massachusetts, wanting to have children and stay in the classroom. She returned to Mount Holyoke where she taught music appreciation for four years while working as an admissions counselor at the school.

Then she started fiddling in toy sales, a move the working mother of two said was smart.

"The path that I went really merged well with having children," Eisley said of her job as senior manager with Discovery Toys, which had her peddling popular children's learning and development toys like Marbleworks puzzles, Measure Up! Cups and Boomerings Classic Links to parents and teachers at toy demos throughout New England, while managing 165 sales consultants.

The job, she said, was fun and kept her in touch with the education sector.

"I absolutely, positively loved it," Eisley said. "Sales are just like raising children – 'Do you want this one or that one?' " she added with a laugh.

After a 17-year interlude, Eisley returned to teaching at Mount Holyoke in 1999, this time instructing biology lab courses and singing in the school's Glee Club. All the while, Eisley had kept herself in touch with education, enrolling in courses like Italian, sociology, microbiology, evolution and ecology at the college to challenge herself.

"I thought it was important to keep myself honest as an instructor," she said. "I knew what it was like to be graded and study for tests."

With her bachelor's and master's degrees long-since completed, and with doctorate work and pre-med courses under her belt, Eisley kept drumming away in biology, beginning work as a research assistant in the molecular genetics lab at UMass-Amherst in 2004.

Going back to school to study nursing was a spontaneous move, Eisley said, made after two friends clipped an ad for the UMass graduate program out of the newspaper. "They both said 'this sounds like you,' " said Eisley, who formerly lived in South Hadley.

"I was very much at an 'I don't know what I'm doing right now' moment," said Eisley, who had recently divorced her husband. "The registration fee was only $25, so I said, 'OK, I'll do this.' ... I thought I wouldn't get in because I was older. The next thing I knew I had moved to Worcester and started the program."

A "very intense" first year in 2004, capped by a 250-hour internship at UMass Memorial Medical Center's university campus working on a medical-surgical floor, didn't deter Eisley from forging ahead. Next came a 1,000-hour residency on the same floor, spanning from last November to this September, at which point Eisley passed the National Certification Licensing Examination for Registered Nurses (NCLEX-RN).

It's been quite the ride, Eisley said.

While her schedule has her sacrificing sleep and "a life" while balancing a busy schedule of nurse practitioner classes, nursing clinical training, a part-time job on the medical-surgical floor, and lots of studying, Eisley said being in school again is worth it.

"One should never stop learning," she said. "You have to get back on the bicycle and have to start pedaling uphill. It's easy for people to say it's too much trouble. If you keep doing it, it comes more easily."

Her current inspiration is the patients, said Eisley, who ultimately hopes to practice in a women's health or college health services office, where she aspires to be a confidante and mentor, as well as a health care provider, for her patients.

The work is rewarding, Eisley said, because nursing is a "caring sort of profession."

Realizing the important role she will play in Massachusetts' health care system has been one of the driving forces for Eisley as she works toward completion of the GEP program, which was created to address the burgeoning statewide need for qualified nurses.

"I definitely think nurse practitioners have a really good role to fill. They're better at education, they're better at health promotion. They prevent things from happening rather than just fixing things when they do happen," said Eisley, who has learned techniques for coaching patients to lower hypertension and high cholesterol levels, quit smoking and adopt healthy lifestyles.

"If you can catch that hypertension when they're 30, you might save them from having that first heart attack at 45," she said.

This semester, she works two or three days a week doing nursing clinicals in Amherst, another day in Barre, with a full day of classes on Tuesdays, and another full-day shift at the university's hospital. The only free time in her schedule is absorbed by paper writing and studying.

Despite being incessantly busy, Eisley said she fudged her schedule to make room for music, something that's "in (her) soul."

On Sunday nights, Eisley plays the flute with her school's Seven Hill Symphony orchestra, keeping with an interest in music that began as a youngster, when she played the oboe, piano and flute, and started singing with choral groups as a 4-year-old.

As a kid, Eisley and her brother – the offspring of a biochemist mother and funeral director father – entertained themselves by performing science experiments and won many blue ribbons in science fairs. "My brother made rocket engines in the basement, and I had 32 white rats on the third floor," said Eisley.

Today, the melody of science and music still chimes for Eisley and her family.

Eisley's brother is a computer projects engineer, her 26-year-old son Noel is working on his Ph.D. in electrical engineering at Princeton, and her 24-year-old daughter Devin is a dance teacher.

She said her family, including her parents and new husband Paul Benoit – with whom Eisley will celebrate their one-year wedding anniversary in January – have been very supportive of her educational endeavors, although they frame their support with the demand to "call us when you can," she said.

While she's charging ahead at full-steam, Eisley said she stays fueled by the prospect of making a difference as a nurse. After her slated May graduation, the next big hurdle for Eisley becomes passing the nurse practitioner certification board exam.

And the lifelong learner is already exploring her options for even more enriching classes.

"I try not to make my list too long," she said with a laugh, ticking off art history, chair caning, weaving and quilting as subjects she's interested in studying. "It's that creative sort of side of me."

On a mission for families

DYS caseworker, Guardsman sharpening his skills at FSC

By Danielle Ameden
DAILY NEWS CORRESPONDENT

For Sgt. Paul Prentiss, homework these days is a breeze compared to his past assignments – standing guard over al Qaeda and Taliban terrorists at a Guantanamo Bay detention center, and rescuing pets in flooded New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina.

Taking advantage of the national Montgomery G.I. bill – which, for many, covers the entire expense of earning a higher-education degree – the 34-year-old Army National Guard squad leader is now on an operation of a different sort, working toward his master of arts in counseling psychology at Framingham State College.

His mission is to "sharpen his skills" for his job as a caseworker with the state Department of Youth Services, where he coaches juveniles with troubled pasts and works with families.

"I was doing a lot of counseling, but I hadn't received a lot of formal training," he said. With role-plays and material learned from courses like Multicultural Counseling and Advanced Principles of Learning and Development, "I've got the formal training I needed to be more effective," he said. "I'm trying to become a better individual counselor."

Prentiss said he's already applying new techniques learned at FSC for "person-centered counseling" to his work, after developing skills for building open, trusting mentoring relationships with the people he works with.

"That relationship does all the work for you: the fact your clients care about you, and they know you care about them," he said.

While taking night classes for the three-year graduate-level program, the Leominster resident also works full-time with DYS in Worcester and trains one weekend a month with his Guard compatriots at Massachusetts military bases Fort Devens or Camp Edwards, and a two-week span once a year.

"It's absolutely difficult," he said of balancing everything. "There's no easy way to go about it. You just gotta make the time."

Another ball for Prentiss to juggle is preparing to ship off overseas at some point, where he expects to provide security or patrol the streets with his Bravo Company, 181st Infantry unit out of Gardner. While he doesn't know when, where or if he will be deployed, an overseas rotation will likely interrupt his education at FSC.

But Prentiss said the school has been accommodating when it comes to his Guard responsibilities. "They've been absolutely supportive, no issue," he said.

For the time being, Prentiss said he's focused on coursework and his job at DYS, where he works with a caseload of 25 juveniles and their families. The position is gratifying, he said, because he gets to inspire the young adults to turn their lives around.

"It's kind of my whole job in a nutshell – trying to motivate people to make better choices," he said. "Basically people go through tough times. They just need someone to help them through that point. ... People need to feel connected."

Prentiss said he realized shortly after graduating from Westfield State College in 1994 that his true calling was social work, through which he could be part of a support system for people who need a helping hand. He started interning after college with DYS, which led to his job as a caseworker.

Even with more than a decade of experience at DYS, he knew he had more to learn.

Enrolled in FSC's 15-course master of arts program since 2004, Prentiss is preparing to become a mental health counselor (LMHC), licensed by the state. His long-term goal, he said, is to become a high school adjustment counselor.

Reaching for a master's is just another part of Prentiss' day-to-day adventures that have included his 10-month rotation through the Army National Guard, standing guard outside Cuba's top-secret detention facility.

Prentiss joined the Guard in October 2001 with his brother, Joshua L'Homme, who served in Iraq. "We had to serve," Prentiss said. "What it really comes down to is your country needs you at some point. ..."

He said serving his country is his unrequited responsibility, but some aspects of the job tested him. "There's a lot of bad feelings about the fact you were holding people without trials, without legal representation," said Prentiss, who majored in criminal justice at Westfield State.

After completing his high-priority assignment doing security operations at Camp Delta, Prentiss returned to the States before traveling to Louisiana to help clean up the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina.

He was one of hundreds of the state's guardsmen and women who worked with animal rights teams to rescue pets trapped in homes and wandering around the streets, made human search and rescue efforts, and patrolled the area to help control looting.

The pet rescue was the most rewarding aspect for Prentiss, a self-dubbed "animal guy."

Digging deep

'Rabbit Hole' delves into the sorrow of loss

In "Rabbit Hole," currently being presented by the Huntington Theatre Com-pany, playwright David Lindsay-Abaire has created a compelling drama in which the central character is one we never actually see — a little boy lost to his family in a tragic car accident. As the play opens, it is eight months after the death of their 4-year-old son, Danny, and Becca and Howie's marriage is beginning to come apart at the seams. While she struggles to move forward from the loss, he clings fiercely to memories of better times. With Becca's mother and sister stepping not always gingerly around the frayed edges of the family, the parents stumble toward a reconfiguration of their life without Danny.

When it opened in New York in February of this year, "Rabbit Hole" marked South Boston native Lindsay-Abaire's Broadway debut and boasted a cast that included Cynthia Nixon and Tyne Daly. For its first-rate Boston mounting, director John Tillinger has assembled a skilled quintet of actors who, in very different ways, bring exquisite naturalism to their portrayals.

While she struggles to move forward from the loss, he clings fiercely to memories of better times.

As the grief-stricken couple, Donna Bullock and Jordan Lage perfectly convey the mix of emotions that flood through almost anyone who has experienced deep loss. Bullock's tightly wound Becca is in constant motion, whether folding and boxing her son's clothes and toys or fending off her husband's attempts to close the widening physical and emotional gap between them. Bullock's words may speak of the future, but her face is etched with her character's deep, lasting pain. Lage's Howie isn't ready or able to move on. Instead, he finds time alone to watch videos of himself and his son together and lashes out at his wife for trying to wipe reminders of the boy from their home.

At first, Maureen Anderman's slender sophistication as Becca's mother, Nat, begs the question of just how different the extraordinary Tyne Daly must have been in the part. Before too long, however, Anderman has made the role her own. If Nat's first-act Kennedy family diatribe seems to come out of nowhere, then her later explanation of what it was like to lose her own son seems to come directly from the deep recesses of a broken heart. As the pregnant, unmarried Izzy, Becca's free-spirited younger sister, Geneva Carr infuses her scenes with humor and appealing warmth. When Jason, the high school boy who killed Danny in the car accident, visits in an awkward act of atonement, the family is quite literally stunned to see him in their home. It is only Becca who can later summon the courage to meet with him. Troy Deutsch's gangly nervousness hits just the right tone for, Jason, a character whose science-fiction writing strangely may provide the family with a chance at accepting what has happened.

Set designer James Noone has given Becca and Howie a richly detailed, fully realized house, complete with living room, kitchen, and the bedroom once occupied by Danny.

"Rabbit Hole" will be at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston, through Dec. 3. For tickets and information, call 617-266-0800 or visit www.huntingtontheatre.org.

Movie review

Fictional characters (including those played by Martin Sheen and Helen Hunt, left) gather to cheer on the appearance of Bobby Kennedy at the Ambassador Hotel.

'Bobby' wins this vote

"Bobby" (A-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

A "Grand Hotel" for these troubled times, "Bobby" catapults writer-director Emilio Estevez into the front ranks.

Set in Los Angeles' Ambassador Hotel on that fateful day in 1968, the film tells interweaving stories involving non-historical figures leading up to the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy, who would have almost surely been elected president and changed the course of our history. The film incorporates well-chosen period music and seamless archival footage.

Estevez ("Men at Work"), not exactly known for his directing artistry, does an amazing job of moving the action along using compelling, individual narratives, deftly showcasing his semi-all-star, predominantly fine cast to its best advantage. Like "Grand Hotel," which was named the Best Picture of 1932, Estevez takes the upstairs/downstairs view of hotel life.

General manager Paul Ebbers (William H. Macy) is frazzled. Not only is Sen. Kennedy arriving at his campaign headquarters in the evening to await primary results, Ebbers just had to fire Darrell Timmons (Christian Slater), his head of food and beverage, because Timmons refused his Latino and African-American employees time off to exercise their right to vote.

At the same time, Ebbers is having an affair with a pretty switchboard operator (Heather Graham) in spite of his love for his longtime wife (Sharon Stone), a smart, funny, fading beauty who operates the hotel's busy beauty salon.

Elsewhere, boozy lounge singer Virginia Fallon (Demi Moore) is putting her long-suffering husband (Estevez) through hell with her diva antics. Retired Ambassador doorman Casey (Anthony Hopkins) meets fellow retiree Nelson (Sen. Kennedy's real-life friend and supporter Harry Belafonte) for a game of chess, and a young woman (Lindsay Lohan) is about to marry a friend and classmate (Elijah Wood) to keep him from being shipped to Vietnam.

Meanwhile, in the kitchen, Miguel (Jacob Vargas) and Don Drysdale-worshipping buddy Jose (Freddy Rodriguez) are matching wits with sous chef Edward Robinson (a terrific Laurence Fishburne). In scenes that do not live up to the film's standards, two campaign workers (Shia LaBeouf and Brian Geraghty) buy LSD from a hippie-dippy dealer (Ashton Kutcher) and go on a sugar-cube-dropping escapade.

But the film rebounds. Following hard upon the assassinations of John F. Kennedy, Malcolm X and Martin Luther King, the killing in "Bobby" is a sad reminder of all that was lost. Actor Nick Cannon brings genuine anguish to the shooting's aftermath, and climactic sequences blending archival and fictional footage and words of Bobby Kennedy about the "the sickness in our souls" are a masterful directorial flourish.

Like much of "Bobby," they will take your breath away.

"Bobby" contains violence and profanity.

The cast of Masquerade

Sharing a stage with Santa

The cast of the traveling performance troupe Masquerade is used to appearing with some pretty big names including Stevie Wonder, Herb Reed & The Platters, and former Chicago lead singer Peter Cetera. At this time of year, however, when Masquerade tours with its "Forever Christmas" production, they often share a stage with one of the biggest stars in the holiday business - Santa Claus. This year will be no exception as "Forever Christmas" will join the jolly fellow and Boston Mayor Thomas M. Menino for the City of Boston's Official Holiday Tree Lighting on Boston Common this Thursday.

If you can't make it in town, however, then just wait until next Thursday and Friday, when JM Productions will present Masquerade's "Forever Christmas" for two shows only at Raffael's at Nantasket Beach in Hull. The troupe of singers and dancers will perform familiar holiday favorites as well as contemporary music, and lead a sing-along that is sure to put everyone in the holiday spirit.

No word yet as to whether Santa plans to make the Hull dates, but you can rest assured that he has been invited!

JM Productions will present Masquerade's "Forever Christmas" at Raffael's, 45 Hull Shore Drive, Hull, on Dec. 7 and 8. Dinner and show, and show only packages are available for both performances. For more information, call JM Productions at 617-786-7469 or visit www.jmproductionspresents.com or call Raffael's at 781-925-4515.

Company Theatre stages 'Wonderful' holiday tradition

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

At just about this time every year, Hollywood releases a new slate of holiday films. Most are forgotten while that year's wreath is still hanging on the door. Some endure, however, and perhaps none more than Frank Capra's "It's a Wonderful Life," first released 60 years ago.

Although it received five Academy Award nominations including Best Picture, Best Actor and Best Director, the story of small-town banker George Bailey, whose many disappointments lead him to the brink of suicide before his life is saved by an angel, was not a huge hit with critics or the public when it was first released. Indeed, it finished 26th on the list of films released in 1946, just behind "Miracle on 34th Street." In 1974, the film's copyright lapsed and it entered the public domain resulting in repeated showings on TV stations nationwide. The copyright was finally renewed in 1993 and the multiple broadcasts waned. By then, however, the American public had fallen in love with the film that now ranks number one on the American Film Institute's list of most inspirational films of all time and number 11 on the AFI's list of greatest movies ever made.

In 1999, the movie's enduring popularity prompted Norwell's Company Theatre to present a stage version of the Christmas classic which it is reprising this year. Directors Zoe Bradford and Jordie Saucerman once again shepherd a cast of some 60 local actors through fast-moving scene changes to tell Phillip Van Doren Stern's story of George Bailey. When circumstances dash George's dream of adventure and travel beyond small town Bedford Falls, he grows increasingly frustrated by the constraints of his life. When he is ensnared in a financial scandal, George contemplates suicide on Christmas Eve. A heavenly messenger, Clarence the Angel, arrives to show George what the world would have been like if he had never been born.

Before Clarence comes to George's aid, however, he hears about his life from a more senior angel, Joseph. Clarence learns that as a boy, George lost hearing in one ear when he fell through the ice while saving his younger brother, Harry, from drowning. Later, while employed as a soda jerk at a Bedford Falls pharmacy, George saves a sick child from being poisoned by an incorrectly filled prescription. It is also while working at the pharmacy that George first meets a young and very much smitten Mary Hatch, whom he later marries. When his father, Peter Bailey, succumbs to a stroke, responsibility for the Bailey Building and Loan falls to George, who had wanted to travel Europe before becoming an architect.

The young George and Mary are ably played by Paul Vaillancourt and Allison Fitzpatrick, with solid support from Liam Sullivan as the young Harry and Ginny Gordon and William Christensen as Ma and Pop Bailey.

As he did first in 1999, Michael Warner again assumes the role of the adult George, made famous on film by Jimmy Stewart. Lanky and lean like the legendary actor, Warner uses his resemblance to Stewart to his obvious advantage. Once the initial audience gasps subside, however, Warner deftly makes the role his own with a believability and genuine acting talent that transcends any hint of impersonation. Warner's George Bailey is the emotional center of this warm-hearted production. As his counterpoint, Mr. Potter, Neil Jones makes clear from the start that the wheelchair-bound businessman isn't just the most powerful man in town. He is also the meanest and most miserly, willing to use the disadvantage of others to his own advantage.

While problems swirl around her ever-growing family, Kelly Browne's adult Mary remains a convincing pillar of strength for her husband and children. Steve Dooner is also good as the increasingly addled Uncle Billy.

The scene changes are many and Bradford's well-appointed sets are reminiscent of the heyday of the Enchanted Village at Jordan Marsh. Bradford also manages one or two of her own Capraesque moments, including the scenes on the snow-covered, windswept winter bridge. Musical Director Michael V. Joseph and a tight pit band help set the various moods while costumer designer Shirley Carney does her part with perfect, plentiful period clothing.

True to the film that inspired it, the Company Theatre's production of "It's a Wonderful Life" acknowledges the difficulties and challenges of everyday life while solidly reaffirming the importance of friends and family — a perfect coda for this time of year.

"It's a Wonderful Life" will be at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, through Dec. 17. For tickets and information, call 781-871-2787 or visit www.companytheatre.com.

Affordable housing eyed for Ripley Road house

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"Is it practical to continue to pursue this?"
— Clark Brewer, Cohasset Housing Partnership

Several generations of Cohasset natives were born at 25 Ripley Road, which was once the Cohasset Private Hospital and is now a private home.

The Cohasset Housing Partnership Committee hopes the 1889 structure could give birth to a town-sponsored affordable housing project.

On Monday partnership members explained their proposal to selectmen, who told them to continue to move forward but to include neighbors in the process.

The partnership envisions a total of seven units including three, one-bedroom units on the first floor and four, two-bedroom units on the second and third floors.

Parking for 11 cars could be accommodated on the existing blacktopped areas, they said.

There are still myriad of outstanding questions ranging from on-site septic capacity to what the mix of affordable and possibly market-rate units would be.

"Is it practical to continue to pursue this?" partnership member Clark Brewer asked Selectmen.

The issue is significant for Cohasset, which has only about 2 percent of its housing stock, deemed affordable by state standards.

Of even greater concern is the fact that many senior citizens, young families, and children of residents cannot afford Cohasset housing prices and have to live elsewhere.

Many of those might not qualify for low-income housing by state standards but still cannot afford to live in town. The assessors' office said this week the average value of a single family home in Cohasset is $825,000.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said Cohasset does not need a "40-B" project but moderately affordable housing for residents. He said those qualified for "40-B" housing can have basically no assets. He stressed the project should meet Cohasset's needs.

Chapter 40-B is the state affordable housing law and allows developers to skirt town zoning regulations to put in higher density housing if it includes an affordable component. (For example, the Avalon apartment project planned for 3A was filed under 40-B).

Under 40-B the partnership project would have to set aside two units (or 25 percent) as affordable. The partnership hopes more units could be affordable and hope to pursue how to make the project financially feasible with non-profit developers.

Roger Hill of Highland Avenue, who was in the audience, noted that the project might have to be filed under 40-B to go forward; otherwise it might not get the necessary relief from the Zoning

VILLAGE ENTREPRENEUR

Darilynn Evans of Darilynn's (formerly Rooms in Bloom) says her shop has overcome a series of setbacks including a car driving through the window, village revitalization work, and a water leak.

Shop has new name, fresh start

Darilynn's opens in the Village

By Nancy White
CORRESPONDENT

In mid-November a new name for a familiar face appeared downtown: Darilynn's, formerly Rooms in Bloom, opened on South Main Street. Darilynn Evans, the owner and namesake for Darilynn's, opened the popular gift store over two years ago in September of 2004.

Rooms in Bloom's name change to Darilynn's was a combination of a practical solution to business problems and a chance for a fresh start. First, the store was already being called Darilynn's in Cohasset vernacular.

"I grew up in Cohasset so I've lived here about 36 years. So actually a lot of people know me as Darilynn anyway. [As a result] instead of calling it the store name, [customers] might say I'm going to go down to Darilynn's store," she says.

Second, a similar store in California bore the identical moniker "Rooms in Bloom" and when they ordered from the same national vendors sometimes the orders crossed.

The third reason is visitors from out of town often mistook the store for a florist and come in to be a little surprised at a gift shop.

Staffing is beefed up

Schools to hire six new personnel

By Nancy White
CORRESPONDENT

The School Committee is not wasting any time finding a use for $200,000 in Chapter 70 funds. Town Meeting voted Nov. 13 to turn over the state funds to the schools, and at its Wednesday meeting, the School Committee voted to hire six new personnel for the spring semester Wednesday.

In recent years due to the lack of available funds, scheduling holes have been filled with directed study halls and peer tutoring opportunities.

At the meeting, Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini presented the School Committee with a request to hire three additional part-time teachers for the second half of the year. Without the hiring of additional teachers, he said there would be significant gaps in students' schedules, particularly juniors and seniors. In recent years due to the lack of available funds, scheduling holes have been filled with directed study halls and peer tutoring opportunities. Those methods have been "less than successful," Antolini said.

The current teacher schedule structure requires department heads to lighten their course load during the spring so they can focus on their other responsibilities of staff reviews and curriculum evaluations.

"As a result we end up with six less sections taught by department heads," Antolini said. In addition, one high school teacher is typically moved to the middle school during the spring semester. "In essence, we are short three teachers during the second half of the school year," he said.

An English teaching position will be filled in order to round out senior English elective opportunities as well as enable a currently combined AP English and English Honors course to be separated appropriately. "We've

Town to stick with single tax rate

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A drop in the tax rate does not mean tax bills are going down. That is because property values are going up.

A Cohasset property valued at $700,000 last year is now valued at $750,000, according to the Assessors' Office.

So while the tax rate is decreasing from $10.84 per $1,000 of assessed valuation to $10.44 — tax bills are going up about 3.8 percent.

The new tax rate will be reflected in the third quarter tax bills.

The tax rate could change slightly after the Department of Revenue reviews the town's financial reports.

In other words a $700,000 property paid $7588 in property taxes for fiscal 2006. That same property is now valued at $750,000 and will pay $7875 in fiscal 2007, which started July 1.

The $750,000 represents an average value of the entire town including residential and commercial properties. The average valued single family home is assessed at $825,000 in Cohasset.

Under a 26-year-old state law, dubbed Proposition 2-1/2, the annual increase in the local tax levy is limited to 2-1/2 percent with an allowance for new construction. So when property values

POLICE/FIRE BEAT

Police to talk with Elder Affairs about village pedestrian safety

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A car hit an elderly woman while she was crossing Deport Court last Monday (Nov. 27) and two days later, another woman reported almost being hit in a crosswalk in the village.

The crosswalk victim had some fractures and was transported to the hospital, Police Chief James Hussey said.

Hussey explained a motorist was taking a left onto Depot Court from S. Main Street at about 1 p.m. when the accident occurred. The driver, who was also elderly, was cited for failure to yield to a pedestrian in a crosswalk.

In an unrelated incident, a walk-in to the police station at 8:15 a.m., Wed. (Nov. 29), reported almost being struck in a crosswalk. She provided the license plate of the offending vehicle and police spoke to that driver about being more careful.

State law requires motorists to stop and yield to someone, who is in a crosswalk or about to enter a crosswalk, Hussey said.

Hussey said police were going to talk with the Council on Elder Affairs about any concerns seniors have about crosswalk safety. The Senior Center at 3 N. Main St. abuts the crosswalk where the accident occurred.

Police have also increased enforcement in the village area.

"We want motorists to be more on the courteous side and a little enforcement is good for people – it helps keep their minds on the fact they should yield to pedestrians," Hussey said.

Building evacuated

Gasoline-powered saws being used to renovate the exterior of an office building at 760 CJC Highway (on 3A next to Starbucks and across from the entrance to Shaw's Plaza) caused some carbon monoxide to get inside the structure, Acting Fire Chief Robert Silvia said.

State law requires motorists to stop and yield to someone in a crosswalk or about to enter a crosswalk.

— Police Chief James Hussey

At 11:14 a.m. last Wednesday (Nov. 29), a caller reported an inside odor of gas and people complaining of headaches on the third floor.

Silvia said firefighters, whose monitors detected some carbon monoxide inside, evacuated and ventilated the building.

"Everyone was evaluated but no one was transported," he said.

He explained there were a couple of openings in the building allowing the exhaust from the saws inside.

The fire department used fans to completely ventilate the building and people were allowed back inside at around 12:05 p.m.

Fisher road kill

Sometime overnight Dec. 1, a car hit a "fisher" which is a member of the weasel family. Callers reported the "road kill" at about 9:30 a.m., Friday (Dec. 1). Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy saw the deceased animal on his way to the police station but when he returned to collect it, it was gone.

Murphy speculated someone might have picked it up for its luxurious pelt.

Fishers are becoming more common in the area, Murphy said. They are nocturnal and rarely come out in the daytime. They can weigh up to 25 pounds; they have a long snout and tail, rounded ears and are low to the ground and mahogany in color.

Fishers are sometimes referred to as "fisher cats" but they are not a member of the cat family, Murphy said.

They are one of the few animals that eat porcupines in the wild. However, porcupines are not common to this area. Fishers have been known to eat house cats, Murphy said.

According to MassWildlife, fishers, which disappeared from Massachusetts in the late 1890s due to decreasing woodland habitat and over hunting, are becoming abundant in the state again and are very common in the counties along the New Hampshire border and in the western part of the state near New York.

Protective dogs

Two Labradors that were protecting their yard apparently fought with other dogs in two separate incidents this week. The dogs involved in the attacks had wandered onto private property near the Wheelwright Park parking area, Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said.

He said the intruding dogs must have been unleashed in the parking lot. The Labradors stayed in their yard where there is an electric fence.

"The homeowner's dogs were protecting their property and went after the intruders," Murphy said.

The owners of the dogs that were attacked were not from Cohasset. "Both parties did admit that the incidents took place on this person's property," he said. Murphy said while it is an unfortunate situation it is hard to come down on the owner of the Labradors because his dogs were licensed and restrained on his property by the electric fence.

Both incidents were reported Sunday afternoon (Dec. 3).

Structure fire

A resident returning home and calling the fire department right away about smoke in the basement likely prevented a major structure fire, Acting Fire Chief Robert Silvia said.

The house at 478 Jerusalem Road is called "Stoneleigh" and is one of the town's most historic structures.

Silvia said the call came in at 12:45 p.m., Saturday (Dec. 2). "The owner was out and when she returned she found an odor and smoke in the basement area."

Firefighters from the first units on the scene put on self-contained breathing apparatus, dubbed SCBAs, and found the seat of the fire: some faulty electrical equipment.

"There was very minimal damage due to good, aggressive fire attack," Silvia said. He explained there was also little water damage because that section of the basement has a dirt floor.

Most of the house has smoke detectors, but that section did not. "It was lucky the homeowner came home when she did," Silvia said.

Assisting at the scene were units from Hingham and Hull. Hingham provided the ladder truck because Cohasset's is out for repairs. Scituate covered the Cohasset station. Hull automatically responded because the fire was close to the border. Cohasset has similar agreements with Scituate and Hingham that departments automatically respond to structure fires within a certain distance of each other's borders, Silvia said.

Stoneleigh, a Victorian stone mansion whose grounds once amassed 100 acres, was built for Grenville Temple Winthrop Braman in1886. William Davidson, president of the A&P stores in the 1930s, and Judge Pappas, owner of Suffolk Downs racetrack have also owned house.

Minor arrested

A 17-year-old Cohasset youth was charged with minor transporting alcohol after police found two open 30-packs of beer and a 1.75 liter bottle of vodka in the car he was driving.

The incident occurred at about 11 p.m., Saturday (Dec. 2).

Police said the teen's car was stopped in the middle of Elm Street (near Brook Street); the driver's door was open and he was talking to another white male who took off and ran behind Donna Green's Studio when the cruiser drove up.

The driver was known to the police officer, who knew he was underage.

"Police had knowledge of this individual (driver) from a prior incident," Hussey said. He added that teens, alcohol and cars do not mix so the officer really had no choice but to make the arrest.

Cohasset police can use their discretion following some underage alcohol possession incidents and contact the parents rather than making arrests. But when cars are involved, it is a different story, Hussey said.

iPod stolen

At about noon, Monday (Nov. 27), a walk-in to the police station reported the iPod at the Red Lion Inn had been stolen

Romney signs bill establishing Cohasset Library Trust, Inc.

Jane O. Goedecke is president of the new organization and Linda Litchfield, Cohasset Town Treasurer, will be the Library Trust's treasurer.

Gov. Mitt Romney signed the bill establishing the Cohasset Library Trust Inc. on Tuesday, Nov. 28. Almost a year before, Town Meeting had voted to ask the Legislature by Home Rule Petition to establish this nonprofit organization that the Library Trustees had requested. State Rep. Garrett Bradley and state Sen. Robert Hedlund co-sponsored the bill and shepherded it through the legislative process.

The Library Trust will manage the library's endowment and building fund, and, after receiving approval from the Internal Revenue Service as a 501(c)(3) corporation, will accept additional gifts to the library's endowment. Currently, the Library Trustees manage the endowment with the advice of an Investment Advisory Committee. A minority of the Library Trust's directors will be Library Trustees.

Jane O. Goedecke is president of the new organization and Linda Litchfield, Cohasset Town Treasurer, will be the Library Trust's treasurer. Its directors are Sheila S. Evans, Rodney M. Hobson, Sarah R. Pease and Patience G. Towle, all current Library Trustees, and Bernadette Faulkner, James T. McKenna, Sarah E. Morton, Brian M. Murphy, Christopher Oddleifson, John P. Reardon Jr., Robert E. Riley, Deborah A. Shadd and Gordon M. Stevenson Jr.

The directors of the Library Trust will meet in January.

B&E reported

At about 11 a.m. Monday (Nov. 27), an employee at Seavey Engineering discovered an antenna shack on the property off King Street (3A) had been broken into over the Thanksgiving weekend, police said.

The door to the shack had been pried open. Missing were an 180-in., flat-screen Dell computer; portable CD player; and a cordless drill.

"Evidence uncovered by detectives revealed the perpetrator left something behind at the scene," Police Chief James Hussey said. "It is being analyzed in the crime lab."

Cohasset police detectives are reviewing the videotape to see if it yields ay clues about who might be responsible, Chief Hussey said.

Spring St. closure

Spring Street between S. Main Street and Cushing Road will be closed during the daytime Saturday (Dec. 9) for water main work. Please ask residents to please take notice and plan their routes accordingly.

Teen Center to host dance Dec. 15

There will be a dance at the Teen Center Friday, Dec. 15, from 7 to 10 p.m. Everyone in grades six through eight is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold.

This is not a school function.

Two residents named to Stormwater Committee

Selectmen have appointed two at-large members to the Stormwater Management Committee. Martin Need, 109 Atlantic Ave., and Jim Drysdale, 4 Cedar Acres Lane, both applied to the spot and attended Monday's Selectmen's meeting.

After interviewing both applicants, Selectmen voted to expand the number of at-large members to two bringing the committee to a total of eight members. The committee also has one associate member from Hull (Lawry Reid, head of the Straits Pond Watershed Assoc.)

The committee's work is seen as critical in light of flooding problems in Cohasset during major rain events.

Nee, who is a 12-year resident of Cohasset and director of corporate communications at Cushman & Wakefield in Boston, said he was extremely interested in becoming more involved in the development of the town's storm-water policies and recommendations. Nee served as a delegate on the Special Legislative Committee for the Development of Boston Harbor in the mid-1980s that examined the scope of issues affecting the harbor including public and private investment and the industrial encroachment on communities. He was also a sub-consultant on the "Big Dig' in the mid-1990s, supervising a team of community liaisons responsible for resolving public disputes associated with design and construction.

Drysdale, who is professor emeritus at Tufts School of Medicine and a 34-year Cohasset resident, serves as the Cohasset and Scituate representative on the South Coastal Watershed Alliance and is a board member of the Gulf Association. He is particularly concerned with health consequences from pollution and its effect in the harbor area. Drysdale served briefly as the chairman of the Harbor Health Committee last year but resigned due to difficulties in obtaining pertinent information on the sewer system, he said.

The temporary Stormwater Management Committee is also composed of representatives from the following: Selectmen, Water Commission, Conservation Commission, Board of Health, Harbor Health Committee, Water Resources Protection Committee, DPW, and Planning Board.

The charge of the committee is to survey the situation and make recommendations to the Selectmen and Town Meeting on:

- measures such as installing raingardens or other Low Impact Development (LID) applications to alleviate existing stormwater problems;
- drafting and the adoption of bylaws or other regulatory controls to prevent additional stormwater issues, such as a Model Stormwater Bylaw (used in some other towns), to propose to Town Meeting;
- creation of a permanent Stormwater Management Committee or Commission to have jurisdiction over stormwater issues.

Searching for Cohasset's top citizen

The deadline for nominations for the 2006 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 5.

In keeping with a 14-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Marjorie "Margie" Steele — "the heart and soul of the Cohasset Food Pantry" — as Citizen of the Year, for being a great role model through her long-time commitment to the important service, which has helped countless families over the years. The deadline for nominations for the 2006 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 5. Please see the nomination form on page 5. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@cnc.com are also welcome.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2006 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2007.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the14th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

1993: Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset": for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

1994: Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

1997: Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

1998: Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

1999: Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

2000: former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

2001: Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

2002: Arthur Lehr for more than 50 years of volunteer service on worthwhile projects including the Boy Scouts; serving on the Zoning Board of Appeals and as a Registrar of Voters; Clerk of the Works for the DPW garage, Little League Complex, and Mariners Park; serving on the Recycling Committee, as town Civil Defense Director, on Gravel Pit Reuse Committee and more.

2003: Marjorie Murphy for touching countless lives through her roughly 25 years as school librarian at Deer Hill. With eyes that twinkle and an infectious smile, Mrs. Murphy devoted her life to helping children discover the wonders of reading and the value of a good book.

2004: John Coe, a WWII veteran, for all his volunteer service at the Senior Center where he helps make the center a warm place where people come and meet friends; for his work quietly behind the scenes helping fellow citizens and his service as the "beloved Town Crier" every year at the Village Fair.

2005: Marjorie "Margie" Steele, who is the "heart and soul of the Cohasset Food Pantry," for her energy and long-time commitment to the important service, which has helped countless people in need over the years.

Cohasset's Colby Callahan chosen as Student Ambassador

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

STAY COOL!

Hello Cohasset. Brrr...winter has arrived at least a little bit. It was great to see the snow on Monday although I know not everyone agrees. December is loaded with holidays, celebrations and fun, make sure to send me in all of your photos, news and event information. As the shopping craziness begins or continues for those who are ahead of the game(not me, that is absolutely for sure), we should all try to slow down the fun and excitement about this time of year and also remember to acknowledge those who are working hard to make it a great season at the stores, etc. I know that I get so stressed about everything that sometimes I forget to say thanks without meaning to and am hoping to work on it this season. Maybe internet shopping is not so bad after all...

SNOWFLAKE FAIR

Stop by the Beechwood Church's annual Snowflake Fair on Saturday, December 9, to shop for the holidays from10 a.m. to 2 p.m.. Children will enjoy the game table and interesting White Elephant items. For crafty types, check out our homemade items as well as baked goods.

Luncheon will be served at 11:30. The church is located on Church Street.

GENEROUS SCOUTS

Great work to 4th Grade Girl Scout troop #4775 at its December-Holiday meeting.....The scouts had a cooking/baking meeting hosted at Girl Scout Madison Hagearty's house where each girl made a quick-loaf bread which were donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry. Also, the girls made a generous donation of toys, which are going to be donated to Toys-for-tots from our troop. The Scouts, under the leadership of Leesa Bleicken are Elizabeth Baker, Alexa Bleicken, Caty Gilman, Valerie Farren, Madison Hagearty, Carly Gundersen, Carly Norton, Lily McCarthy, Cassandra Leiberman, Dagmar Seppala and Clara Baumgarten.

JUNIOR GARDENERS

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset's Junior Gardeners will meet again in the Deer Hill cafeteria on Thursday, Dec. 14 from 2:45-3:45 p.m.. The program this month is called "Bringing Greens Into Your Home". Under the direction of Lee Jenkins, the gardeners will create a holiday centerpiece. This should prove to be an afternoon of great fun for all.

STUDENT AMBASSADOR

Wow, proud parent moment for this family that is for sure. Charlie and Kim Callahan are proud to announce that their daughter Colby, a 6th grade student here in Cohasset has been chosen as a Student Ambassador with People to People. She will be traveling this summer with a delegation to Australia. The delegation includes 39 other students who have been chosen from Massachusetts.

People to People was founded by President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1956 with the intent that its members would work to promote peace through understanding. To read more about this program, go to www.studentambassadors.org.

Colby, you should be so proud of yourself as we know that your family and now, the town of Cohasset is as well! We will follow up with this as the time gets closer and report all the news both before you go and while you are there. Congratulations on a job well done.

CASINO NIGHT

Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters annual casino night fundraiser will be Saturday night, Jan. 20 at Atlantica. The boosters will "raise the stakes" from 8 p.m. until midnight! Tickets are $25 each and available from Lynn Previte (9723). There will be blackjack, roulette, poker and other games of chance. Atlantica will serve hors d'oeuvres and there will be a cash bar. It will be a great fun night out, even if you are not a gambler. Space is limited at the event and tickets are sure to run out before the 20th, so try to purchase ahead before the upcoming holidays! This will be the booster's only 2007 fundraiser and the organization needs the support of the entire community!

The money raised from this event will go directly to funding the JV lacrosse program at the high school for both boys and girls. This event is critical to provide playing opportunities to our younger players and the continued success and growth of the entire lacrosse program. Cohasset Lacrosse has numerous players at the collegiate level-probably more so than any other varsity sport. The recent success (Cohasset boys were 2006 state champions and looking to repeat) has much to do with the continuing support from local feeder programs and the financial support from the entire Cohasset community. Any lacrosse parent looking to help out with this event, please call Lynn Previte!

Joanna M. Hamilton has graduated from basic military training.

BASIC TRAINING

Air Force Airman Joanna M. Hamilton has graduated from basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas. During the six weeks of training, the Joanna studied the Air Force mission, organization, and military customs and courtesies; performed drill and ceremony marches, and received physical training, rifle marksmanship, field training exercises, and special training in human relations. In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Joanna is the daughter of Frank and Jane Hamilton ofCohasset, Mass. Joanna is a 2006 graduate of Cohasset High School. Keep up the great work and training Joanna.

TREE PICKUP

Calling all Cohasset Middle School students to volunteer. The Annual Christmas Tree Pick Up is scheduled for Saturday, Jan. 6th from 10-2 p.m. Please take some time to come help a fundraiser that is sponsored by the Cohasset Middle School Student Council and Project Safeguard and funds programs at the school throughout the year as well as providing a wonderful community service. To volunteer your time, your truck and/or your teen, call Wendy Erler at 781-383-0142.

FABULOUS DRESSES

The Cohasset Consignment Shop will be collecting fabulous dresses during January and February to be sold at the Pre Prom event being held in Early March. If you have a dress or two that will fill this need, call 781-383-0687 to make an appointment to donate or consign your gently worn prom or prom-like dress.

HARLEM ROCKETS

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club is sponsoring a night of comedy basketball entertainment with the Harlem Rockets on Thursday Dec. 16 at 6:30 at the Cohasset Middle High School gym. The game will start at 6:30, so come early for a good seat. Tickets will be on sale this Saturday at Recreation Basketball at the Osgood and High school lobbies. Tickets are $8 in advance and $10 at the door. Checks can be made payable to CBBC. All proceeds benefit Cohasset Basketball.

DONATIONS SOUGHT!

Tiger Den of Pack 38 Cub Scouts is partnering with Cradles to Crayons to provide new and gently used items to poor and homeless kids in Massachusetts. You can help by donating: children's clothing, winter coats, new socks and underwear, educational toys, puzzles & games, children's books, arts & crafts kits, baby safety supplies and new baby essentials. Bring donations to the Osgood School or St. Stephen's. There is a drop box near the front entrance of each location.

By the way, this Sunday at One Creative Place, come on by with the family to take part in a Holiday Happenings Open House from 1-5 pm. Holiday singing, cookie decorating, a holiday art project and more are on tap as a thank you to the community for joining in the Cohasset Recreation programs and One Creative Place workshops and classes held in the first year of business. A special holiday guest (not necessarily the guy in the big red suit but a good friend of his) will be here during the afternoon to play some fun games and enjoy some yummy snacks as well. Cameras are welcome. For more information go to www.onecreativeplace.net

That is all for this week. Make sure to get me all your news no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

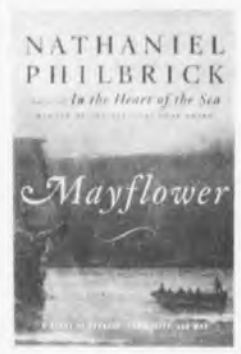
Ten Really Good Reasons to shop at Buttonwood Books & Toys



1. We have plenty of safe parking close at hand. There's no need to circle a mall lot and park a mile away. If the gift is large, you can pull up in front of the store, and we'll happily carry it out for you.

2. We have booksellers and toy sellers who are happy to see you, to answer your questions and to work with you to find whatever you may need.

3. We've already chosen the best in books for adults and children and the best in quality toys. You won't be overwhelmed by mountains of "stuff" you don't need.

4. We have booksellers who are avid readers in all genres and for all ages. They love to share their ideas for a good read.

5. Our toy sellers know which games are fun to play and which toys are age appropriate. They enjoy the challenge of finding toys and games for a whole family.

Junior Arcade Basketball from Franklin

6. Buttonwood gift cards make much-appreciated gifts for all ages. Children love to come in after Christmas and pick their own books and toys. Our Book-Sense cards never expire or lose value and are welcome at 300 independent bookstores nationwide.

7. There are no long lines at our registers. We make sure that there are always enough staff members on hand to move the lines quickly.

8. Our gift wrapping is complimentary. Our wraps are colorful and festive. Save time and money by letting the Buttonwood wrappers take this chore off your hands.

9. The ambience at Buttonwood is warm and welcoming. Shopping can be a pleasure when the merchandise is wonderful, the staff is knowledgeable and the help is plentiful.

10. Last----and hardly least----- when you shop locally, you are supporting the community in which you live. Local independent businesses put their money back into the community. These are the businesses that support the local schools, churches and organizations with their donations, their gift certificates and their program ads. These are the businesses that sell tickets to local concerts, plays, and house and garden tours. These are the businesses that support the high school newspapers and drama clubs and sports boosters. We are glad to do these things because we are a part of our community.

We appreciate it when you acknowledge this by shopping with us.

COURTESY PHOTO

This is a close up of the photograph from the cover of "Savor of Salt," a collection of 56 articles written about the town dating far back into its history.

'Savor of Salt' out in time for holidays

Just in time for the holidays, the Committee on Town History is publishing the second anthology of historic articles collected and edited by Jacqueline M. Dormitzer. It is titled "Savor of Salt" and is a companion piece to "Treasury of Cohasset History" published in 2005. "Savor of Salt" differs slightly from "Treasury" in that it is organized more like a magazine while "Treasury" was organized into historical periods. There are more period photographs in the new publication with each of the 56 articles starting with a brief description about the author or contents. The reader may leaf through the book or look up a topic in the contents or index to choose an article. Some articles, such as "Little Harbor," may have different authors bringing a different perspective to their subject.

The book's title, "Savor of Salt," is derived from the title of one of the several articles by Lucy Treat. Dormitzer selected the title since most of Cohasset's history is linked to the sea. Treat joins town historians David Wadsworth and Robert Fraser and others whose writings might otherwise be lost if Treat hadn't discovered their work while doing her research for the town's third history of Cohasset.

"Savor of Salt" will be available at Town Hall, the Town Clerk's office, Buttonwood Books and the Historical Society's Pratt Building. The price is $28 and checks can be made out to the Town of Cohasset. The hardbound laminated book cover depicts a section of the MacIvor Reddie mural at the Historical Society's Pratt Building and the end leaves are from a photograph of Minot Light taken by Margot Cheel from a helicopter. She captured the lighthouse from a unique angle looking toward the Cohasset coastline.

Excerpt from "Merchants of Old Cohasset," by Lucy E. Treat.

Out in the channel Captain George Hall's packet, the Stranger, is loaded and waiting for the tide to make an early trip to Boston. The pinkey Clio is at anchor and the Essex is lying alongside the wharf. Captain Henry Collier's smartly sailing vessel, the Sappho, is going out from the harbor in a stiff breeze, bound for Maine for a load of lumber. Along each side of the narrow channel, tall saplings have been driven down into the mud to mark the course for the incoming and outgoing vessels. Only yesterday an irate skipper remarked, "It's a devil of a harbor where one had to navigate between a sand bar and a huckleberry bush."

Sustainable Cohasset meets Dec. 14

By Marie Caristi-MacDonald
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The next meeting for Sustainable Cohasset will be on Thursday, Dec. 14, at Cohasset High School. The room number will be posted on the front door. Five members attended the recent MCAN, Massachusetts Climate Action Network at MIT and shared their information at the Nov. 28 meeting. Climate stabilization being a goal for sustainable groups the Climate Change in New England workshop was a high priority for Cohasset's delegates.

The Climate Change in New England workshop was conducted by Peter Frumhoff, director Global Environment Program for the Union of Concerned Scientists or UCS. He focused on several factors including increases in average annual temperature in the last three decades; New England is experiencing winters more like those experienced in Pennsylvania. Given present emissions patterns or pathways, New England could experience winters more like those of South Carolina. Gina McCarthy, commissioner of Connecticut's EPA quickly pointed out the severe economic impact that N.E. would suffer with the loss of foliage tourism and skiing weather. She also quipped that people used to watch the news and weather but now the news is the weather.

Another factor is SLR, or Sea Level Rise. Over the next 100 years seas are expected to rise 8 to 33 inches on "the higher emissions pathway" and 4 to 21 inches on the lower emissions pathways or projections, worsening coastal flooding. Another factor is ocean temperatures, which have already risen 10 degrees Fahrenheit since 1900 and are expected to rise another 5 to 8 degrees in the next few decades. It was stated that cod and several other fish species in our region require much lower water temperatures for their young to grow.

Another factor is ocean temperatures, which have already risen 10 degrees Fahrenheit since 1900...

Also it was noted that a much feared acceleration of polar ice cap break-up would dramatically increase SLR, by as much as 20 feet. The thawing and deterioration of arctic tundra and the subsequent release of methane gases with substantially greater heat trapping potential than CO2 is another significant and very dangerous variable in the climate change equation.

In general, a sense of urgency was conveyed by all speakers. All experts agree that 75 percent reduction by mid-century is critical. John Rankin, HM Consul General for the British Consulate in Boston, stated that Britain, a Kyoto Protocol signer, has agreed to a 60 percent reduction by 2050. Britain gives tax incentives directly to businesses. IBM in Britain achieved an impressive 30 percent reduction in its CO2 emissions as an example of this strategy.

Professor William Moomaw from Tufts University stressed "The 3 percent solution" to achieve the necessary reductions. Some examples of a 3 percent annual reduction would be driving 30 miles less per month, replacing a 60-watt light bulb with a compact fluorescent or eliminating dormitory refrigerators.

After discussing the MCAN conference, attendees watched the film "The End of Suburbia, Oil Depletion and the Collapse of the American Dream," which cleverly illustrates how Americans have been seduced and subsequently booby-trapped into an oil-dependent suburban lifestyle since the '50s. It simultaneously documents that oil production has peaked worldwide. Given this scenario, the film then addresses the new community models that need to be developed to deliver basic services and necessities in the not so far future. One member in attendance with professional planning expertise explained the "New Urbanism" after the film. Another new member contributed his knowledge of the economic impact of global warming to the discussion.

After the Dec. 14 meeting, Sustainable Cohasset will adjourn until January 2007. Sustainable Cohasset heartily welcomes new members.

Local students get hands-on experience at Art Center

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

COURTESY PHOTO
Fourth grade students work on their photographic self-portraits during the Artist in Residence program at the South Shore Art Center.

Students around the South Shore are getting out of the classroom and getting into art. Thanks to the South Shore Art Center's "Artist in Residence" program, budding artists in grades three, four and five can take a field trip with their classmates to the Center, to gain some hands-on experience working with a professional artist.

On Wednesday, Nov. 29, two classes of Deer Hill fourth graders made the trip down the street to the Center, located at 119 Ripley Road, and learned about photography from prizewinner Cindy Vallino. They left with the best kind of souvenir — the kind they made themselves.

The students began their visit with an introduction to the Bancroft Gallery exhibition and the Art Center and then divided into two groups for the remainder of the program. One group met with the Artist in Residence, while the others participated in a self-portrait photography workshop.

"This is a great introduction for kids to get excited about art," said Community Programs Manager Heather Collins.

Currently, the Artist in Residence is photographer Cindy Vallino, an Art Center faculty member and Gallery Artist. Her first-prize photograph is included in the Center's current "Photography Now" exhibition. Vallino brought the children into the Dillon Gallery, where they viewed a Power Point presentation she created about her life as a photographer, as well as some of the elements of taking pictures and the many uses of pictures in our society.

Collins said during Vallino's presentation, she begins by showing "pictures" of wacky animals, such as a half zebra half fish she created on her computer. "The kids love to see what she can do. They're very engaged by her," she said. Many children have access to both computers and digital cameras, and Vallino's enthusiasm helps spark their creativity in a medium virtually all students can connect with, Collins said, which isn't always the case when it comes to art.

The other students work in an upstairs studio, where Cohasset volunteers Libby Allard and Sharon Daly lead them. "They are both fabulous. Without them, the program wouldn't happen," said Collins. Students choose a costume or prop, then pose for a silly portrait and have their photo taken by Allard. They then complete a border to accompany their photograph. Thanks to two new Hewlett Packard printers the Center has obtained through a grant from the South Shore Playhouse Associates, within minutes the class has a black and white portrait to embellish à la Andy Warhol. "Even the teachers and chaperones get into it!" said Collins.

The program has been running every Wednesday morning for the past 2-1/2 years, during 10-week sessions in the spring and fall, to coordinate with the school calendar. Collins explained the program started when the Art Center was celebrating its 50th anniversary in 2002. "We wanted to do something really great to expand services to all the towns South of Boston," she said. By offering programs for school children from all over the South Shore, not only are they exposed to art, they are informed about a great resource right in their own backyard."

Today, the program enjoys continued success and Collins said she is always amazed at how far word-of-mouth has spread its news. She said the Center has hosted classes from as far away as West Bridgewater and Abington. There have also been classes visiting from Weymouth, Scituate and Derby Academy this session.

"It's a dream come true for me," said Collins, who has been working at the Center for past nine years. When she began, many visitors were just from the immediate vicinity. For her, the proof of the Center's rising popularity has been shown through the many children visiting from all over. "This is open to any school, and the only cost for the school is a bus to get here, so it's not cost prohibitive," she said.

Collins said the hope of the Center is that children who visit will begin a lifelong love of art. She said at the beginning of the program, the children are always asked whether they have visited the Center before, and often, not a hand goes up. "Between sports and the family schedule, there is so little time left after school," she said, that being able to come during the school day is a great way for children to be exposed to all the Center has to offer. By the end of the day, she said the children have made such a connection with art and the Center, that she has had requests to have birthday parties there right on the spot. For Collins and everyone at the Center, being able to foster that kind of an interest at such a young age is priceless.

For more information on the South Shore Art Center, please visit its Web site at www.ssac.org. For more information on Artist in Residence Cindy Vallino, please visit her Web site at www.vallinophoto.com. Vallino will be opening her own shop on Ripley Road adjacent to the Art Center this week.

Shop has new name, fresh start

And lastly, Darilynn was looking for a fresh start after two years in business — and a series of setbacks. "In August of '05 a car crashed into the two front windows of the store and caused a considerable amount of damage. This closed my brand new business for an entire month and then I only could operate in half the space until the serious repairs were done. We [fully] opened a year ago November in time for the Christmas season."

Then there were more disruptions — the downtown revitalization endured by all downtown merchants began with pipe work and then street repairs lasted through the summer. Minor incidents also required Darilynn to do some hurdle jumping — there was the water leak in the back storage room putting it out of use for eight weeks. And there was more bad news, shelving collapsed on Darilynn and a sharp box collided with Darilynn's head, which necessitated a trip to the emergency room.

"There was a lot of adversity in my first year," she admits. Despite obstacles, Darilynn has remained positive and sees the name change as a new beginning, "I needed a fresh start. And I think the name will take me further into the future for other things I want to do."

Besides the name change and the physical appearance alterations, Darilynn's still carries the same unique, handpicked merchandise shoppers have become accustomed to seeing. "You can come in here and get something special for a wedding gift, a quick hostess gift or a quick baby gift. It's convenient. You don't have to drive to Derby Street or go to three or four different towns because you can get something of good quality here — and we have complimentary wrapping."

Darilynn strives to offer her clientele a friendly and social place to get what they need. She is always on the lookout for new items and lines that she feels her customers would like. Being a long-time Cohasset resident having grown-up and raised a family in town allows her to have a broad knowledge of the community and needs of her customers.

"I get to see the parents of my friends growing up, reconnect with the parents of children I sat with on the side of the soccer field, we catch up on everything. It's a very social place. We're friendly, we're outgoing and we're happy to suggest things," Darilynn says.

Twice a year she visits gift shows in New York to seek out the latest trends and products. She carries distinctive lines like Simon Pierce, hand-blown glass pieces from Vermont, Michael Aram, a trendier product line, and Vietri, Italian pottery, just to name a few. "You can find it right here, you don't have to go Boston or to a specialized store."

"The problem with the streets and the accidents and all those other things is that it has put the business plan behind schedule, but things are looking good." Darilynn's now has a storefront on the web — www.darilynns.com — and there are plans to have a complete web store up and running by early 2007.

"There's been a lot of adversity but it's actually been great. I think people have really received it well, which is nice. I'm thinking a new name and a fresh start maybe will bring some good karma in 2007 – that would be really nice."

Local eye doctor spreads goodwill in Guatemala

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Dr. Gerri Goodman, an ophthalmologist and Jerusalem Road resident, recently returned from a medical mission to Nuevo Progreso, Guatemala. There, she performed many life-changing surgeries for patients who literally walked for hours to come to the area where she and others were providing medical care. While the help she gave was invaluable, Goodman said the experience altered her life as well, as she has a newfound appreciation for everything she has, living in this great country.

"It was so amazing. I was so touched by it. The people are absolutely beautiful and while they have so little, they want so little," Goodman said. "There's so much we take for granted here, and you do feel so grateful when you come back."

Goodman is a doctor for the Nielsen Eye Center, which has offices in Quincy as well as Derby Street in Hingham. She was one of the first ophthalmologists to perform refractive eye surgery (LASIK) surgery in the United States. While she has always wanted to travel to areas in need to use her skills to benefit those who would otherwise not receive care, the timing had never been right until now.

From Aug. 24 through Sept. 3, Goodman worked with a team of roughly 60 doctors, which included dentists, plastic surgeons, general surgeons, ear, nose and throat specialists and other ophthalmologists, at the Hospital de la Familia in Nuevo Progreso. Every day, she would wake up early and begin seeing patients around 6 a.m., working into the night to ensure as many patients were seen as possible.

"We didn't want to turn anyone away," she said, adding people would walk for sometimes up to four hours to see the doctors and would then be waiting in line for treatment even before the sun came up. While she said the group tried to see as many people per day as they could, at some point they would have to take a break and many of the people waiting would stay over to be seen the next morning. "The stream was endless. You could just keep going," she said, adding it was very hard to tell people when the day's treatments were over.

"There's so much we take for granted here, and you do feel so grateful when you come back."
— Dr. Gerri Goodman, ophthalmologist

Goodman said it was also very hard to have to give patients news they didn't want to hear. She said one man brought his 40-year-old son to see her because he had gone blind as a result of diabetes. "There was nothing we could do and they didn't understand why we couldn't fix it," she said, adding a lack of preventive medicine had resulted in a condition that could not be reversed. She said often when people hear doctors are coming from America, they expect any problem can be remedied, and it was very tough to have to explain he would never regain his eyesight.

But there were many success stories during the trip from many of the doctors. She said she performed surgery on cataracts and glaucoma and her patients were extremely appreciative. She added many of the plastic surgeons did incredible work, adding with the culture in Nuevo Progreso, anyone who looks different, especially girls, will not get married, and having simple procedures done such as fixing a cleft lip or palate can make a world of difference in many areas of a person's life.

Goodman said the hospitality she and the other doctors were shown during their stay was overwhelming. Upon their arrival, more than 100 people literally greeted them with open arms and the children put on a show. She said the women cooked for them and gave them homemade tortillas and black beans for breakfast. "We basically worked, ate, then went to sleep, but you did a lot of reflecting during the day," she said, adding the way they were treated really inspired her to want to do whatever she could to help them.

A long line forms outside the Hospital de la Familia in Nuevo Progreso, Guatemala as residents wait to see American doctors who had donated their time and medical expertise.

"I didn't come home with anything," she said, as she gave away some of her clothes, some shoes, sunglasses, and other items she had carried with her. She noted back home, she could go to the store down the street and pick up a new pair of glasses, but in Guatemala, the people have neither the resources nor the conveniences that most Americans have.

Goodman said she has been invited to take another trip to Guatemala in the future and she hopes she will be able to go again. She said the hardest part about being away was leaving her husband Dan Counihan and their son Brian, 9, at home. She said it took some juggling, but her husband was able to take over for both of them while she was away, and if they can coordinate it again, she would love the opportunity.

"I hope I get the privilege to go back. I think about these people all the time. They are a beautiful people and they're so happy and simply grateful. You don't see that too much in America," she said. Goodman added when doctors travel to help countries in need, it spreads goodwill from the entire country and the residents of Guatemala think of America as a great place and were happy to see them arrive. "I'm definitely hooked. I feel like it's changed my life for the better."

Local mother of two is no wimp

Book, blog strike chord with other moms

By Amy van Aarem
CORRESPONDENT

When Elizabeth Soutter Schwarzer started her blog (www.damomma.com) in 2004 it was as an outlet to "express the life changes" that she was going through as a new mom. Her daily entries were a means of reclaiming an identity that is often lost to motherhood.

Sleepless nights, bleary-eyed days, spit-up stained shirts and caffeine addictions found their way to her journal entries. The transition from working woman, to working mother, to stay-at-home-mom can sometimes go smoothly, but for most it can be a bumpy ride.

The stories that she shared online resonated with a lot of people who were navigating the same parenting roads.

For Schwarzer, the challenges turned into witty nonfiction that an online community of wives, mothers, grandmothers and even some fathers quickly embraced.

The stories that she shared online resonated with a lot of people who were navigating the same parenting roads. Her new book: "Motherhood is NOT for WIMPS: No Answers, Just Stories" is an engaging compilation of entries from her blog spanning March, 2004-May, 2005 when Schwarzer was a parent of Mary, two-years-old at the time, and pregnant with her second daughter, Karenna. "Together they tell a story of days that crawl and years that fly," Schwarzer says.

Schwarzer's résumé pre-babies included: congressional press secretary, author of a weekly op-ed column, and radio host. After her husband finished his military career as an intelligence officer with the US Marine Corps in North Carolina, they relocated to Cohasset. Sitting idly at home was not her nature. While her husband started law school at Boston College, Schwarzer went to work writing. Her blog quickly gained popularity with people around the world tuning in to read her latest entries.

The description on her homepage gives a synopsis of the content: "In Sept. 2002 I became a mother. It must have been the drugs, because I forgot myself and three years later did it all again. Follow along as I illustrate time and again that motherhood is not for wimps"

As any aspiring author would do, Schwarzer got an agent, who immediately shopped her story around to the big publishing houses in New York: "We absolutely love it and we really need you to change it. Nonfiction does not sell as well as fiction," was one publisher's response. They encouraged Schwarzer to rework it, to 'fictionalize' it. After a couple months of unsuccessful edits, it proved difficult to fictionalize these stories that were so personal to her; changing it just felt wrong.

The numbers on her website were testimony to Schwarzer's popularity and online readership. When Schwarzer received a call on her cell phone one day, telling her that damomma.com was MSN-Canada "Site of the day" — she had to pull over to the side of road to avoid crashing. With an average of 35,000-50,000 "hits" a day, Schwarzer could not deny the fact that there was a market for her story. She began to research alternative methods to publishing. One person who encouraged Schwarzer was a reader in Japan: Carolie Bartol. Bartol, who is a book designer, agreed to work with her on launching her book.

The two women had a lot in common. Both were military spouses and had entrepreneurial blood running through their veins.

After researching a number of Print on Demand (POD) companies, Schwarzer decided to go with AuthorHouse. AuthorHouse provides POD services via internet sales. Traditional publishing is routed through the seven major publishing houses out of New York. The POD market is different. Schwarzer was able to retain complete artistic control of her work, from the design of the book jacket, to the editing. In return, she is responsible for the marketing and promotion. AuthorHouse partners with the big booksellers like Amazon and Barnes and Noble to assist with the sales.

"Two years ago, no one knew what a blog is. Today, it is part of our lexicon," says Schwarzer. POD companies did not exist 10 years ago. Today, these companies are becoming a more attractive option to writers who have been unsuccessful with traditional publishing methods.

Schwarzer explains that it is a natural combination of media — the web log (blog) and the online POD: "You have a platform, a new form of literary art. All these people who are reading your blogs, there is an established market. It is a niche market, but it is established." Before the book is on the shelf, the market is already there.

"I'm really proud of what I wrote. What I really loved is that I had total control and kept my integrity through the whole process.... Which is something great to achieve while raising two kids.," she says.

Schwarzer will be giving a reading and book signing at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset at Shaw's Plaza on Sunday, Dec. 10 at 2 pm.

To read Schwarzer's work visit: www.damomma.com_____or www.parenting.com, where she is a frequent contributor.

Cohasset well represented at NPFH dinner

About 1100 people attended last Thursday night's (Nov. 30) No Place for Hate dinner at the Westin Hotel in Boston, including several Cohasset officials. One of the ADL programs is No Place for Hate (NHFH), of which Cohasset is a member.

Local attendees included Town Manager Bill Griffin, Selectman Ted Carr, Police Chief James Hussey, Cohasset Middle School Principal Beth Sternala McCoy, and Cohasset Diversity Committee co-chairs Chartis Tebbetts and Susan Etkind.

There were people from all walks of life at the dinner, including municipal officials, ADL members themselves, and youths who have attended ADL summer camps.

Cohasset is a No Place for Hate community, and is recertified annually by the ADL/BlueCrossBlueShield program.

Cohasset is a No Place for Hate community, and is recertified annually by the ADL/BlueCrossBlueShield program. The Diversity Committee (which is a district program of the PSO) serves as Cohasset's NPFH committee, and applies every year for certification and also a grant (it has been $1000) that the ADL/BCBS makes available. To be certified, a community must be actively pursuing goals compatible with the mission of NPFH.

Honored at the dinner was Dennis Kanin, philanthropist, attorney, former chief of staff to Paul Tsongas, and ADL official. In addition to the scheduled speakers, there were special unscheduled speeches honoring Kanin and the ADL by US Senator John Kerry and Governor-Elect Deval Patrick.

As a side note, Selectman Carr is a friend of Kanin's. Carr worked for the Tsongas presidential campaign in 1991. Kanin was Tsongas' campaign manager.

Pedestrian safety

Thanks to village revitalization and resilient businesses and shops downtown, Cohasset Village looks as good now as it did during the filming of "Witches of Eastwick" 20 years ago this past summer.

But when Eastwick hit the movie theaters in 1987, "SUV" was not part of our lexicon. Cell phones were almost non-existent. Car phones, which did exist, were pretty rare.

While the population of Cohasset and area towns has not changed that much – the demographics have. In other words, the number of families has gone up. "Back in the day" big families with four or more children were more common. Also, today many teenagers have their own cars.

This all translates into bigger motor vehicles and a lot more of them.

What that means for the village is a lot of traffic and congestion. Traffic can be a good thing. It can mean that many of those cars, trucks, and SUVs are stopping at the hardware store, French Memories, Darilynn's or other businesses, shops or restaurants. We all want to encourage foot traffic downtown so those businesses will continue to thrive.

However, this past week, there was a motor vehicle accident involving a pedestrian in the Village and another near miss.

The accident involved an elderly woman who was crossing Depot Court on her way to the Senior Center at 3 N. Main St.

Both incidents occurred in crosswalks, police say.

Police Chief James Hussey says police are stepping up enforcement in the Village and will meet with the Council of Elder Affairs soon in an effort to talk with seniors and see what their concerns are regarding pedestrian safety.

However, there are a couple of things Cohasset residents could do right away.

The first is to pay close attention when traveling through the Village. That means no cell phones while driving. Motorists must also be on the lookout for pedestrians. State law requires motorists to yield to pedestrians, who are in crosswalks or about to enter a crosswalk. However, if a motorist is distracted, it can be difficult for him or her to see someone about to cross the street.

Secondly, when on foot we should all endeavor to use the beautiful new crosswalks! That might mean walking a few feet out of our way. Too many pedestrians downtown are crossing wherever and ignoring the crosswalks.

(It should be noted that in both recent incidents the pedestrians were in the crosswalk.)

In the early 1990s, crosswalk safety downtown reached the boiling point. The subject was discussed at a Special Town Meeting and some attractive, portable crosswalk signs were purchased. At the time, residents balked at the thought of having bright, green painted crosswalks and unattractive bright, orange traffic barrels like the ones that downtown Hingham uses in its crosswalks.

The new crosswalk signs did not last long. Cars hit them and they fell apart.

We think our little village should have aesthetically pleasing crosswalks that also need to be safe.

But the only way they can be safe is if all of us accept the responsibility to make them so.

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper. Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Delaying train cost us millions

TO THE EDITOR:

Michael Weymouth's commentary in last week's Journal made me gag; it was a big pat on the back for the Bewicks, Bob Hedlund, Garrett Bradley and all the opponents of the Greenbush Line restoration. For what? For pushing the cost of the project from $120 million, when it was first proposed in the mid-80's, to half a billion dollars today? For delaying the project for at least a decade, since the other two Old Colony lines opened?

For a tunnel under Hingham Square and a cut through Weymouth Landing for the sake of 12 round-trips a day? What a waste of taxpayer's money for the tunnel and cut and study after study and lawsuits from AFTA. The powers-that-be could see right through AFTA's stupid alternatives that were much less convenient to many more people and more polluting than a railroad train — the most efficient means of transportation. So, we commuters, who voted with at least a 2:1 majority for the train in six of the 7-town referendums in 1991 have been forced to put up with the S.E. "distressway" for 10 years more than was needed. Instead of a pat on the back, I would give these selfish NIMBYs a more meaningful "reward"— ban them from ever riding the train!

Making a difference!

TO THE EDITOR:

We would like to thank the more than 180 volunteers who participated in the fall cleanup project for Make A Difference Day on Nov.18 and 19. Because of their efforts, 33 seniors received fall cleanup assistance. Leaves were blown, raked, bagged and carted off; storm windows and doors were put in place; lawn furniture removed and air-conditioners removed or covered. We are grateful for the participation of over 100 students from the Cohasset Public Schools. We would like to give special thanks to the volunteer efforts of the students from Mr. Scott Newkirk's social awareness group from Cohasset High School. Without the help of these students, the program would not have been the success that it was.

The best thing we could say was better said by R. Murray Campbell in his Letter to the Editor in the Mariner on Nov. 4. "Some seniors were hesitant to sign on for fear of some catch, but there isn't any. It's simply another greathearted example of the community spirit in Cohasset. Of course, some of us hesitated to benefit, from false pride at accepting a freebie on the grounds that we were seen as having become old enough to warrant a little help. The counter to that feeling is that accepting the work is recognition that we have helped others in the past, and still have the potential to do so in the future." Thank you to all of the seniors who participated in the program.

HEALTH NOTES

Putting the LID on stormwater problems

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

I have long been an advocate of self-help when it comes to the town's environmental contamination problems. There's a good reason: It takes a local to know where all the skeletons lie, and volunteers interested in their own neighborhoods to take up the cudgel and get something done. The school environmental volunteers are an example. And when the town was in the throes of the sewer's long standing State requirements to do something the CEES group and their environmental arm, the Little Harbor Irregulars pushed the Town kicking and screaming into a sewer expansion. Generally, if you pay an outside "expert" to plan something you ought to plan yourself, it'll come out wrong. I don't have to point out any examples.

But there are exceptions. And stormwater is one. It doesn't take a genius to know that the Town has problems when a citizen complains to the Stormwater Committee that at Cushing Road they "have had the opportunity to experience many a 'waterfront property view' during storms. The canoe rides down Cushing Road and Smith Place are somewhat of an added bonus." There are many such complaints and the number is increasing. Fortunately, something is being done.

As a part of its program to improve our drinking water, the Water Department fostered the Water Resource Protection Committee. Among its functions are to investigate and assess alternative approaches to improving the Towns fresh water resources. They have adopted some very innovative approaches that we'll discuss later.

Then we have the Harbor Health Committee (HHC). Now that the Harbor has lost its ability to support many formerly abundant species and its beaches are closed a good bit of the time, there is a budding recognition that if you drain all your polluted fresh water into the harbor, you may get a polluted harbor. Gee! The HHC has been instrumental in finding the location of many of the most egregious sources of contaminated water entering the harbor, both current and potential. For example they are sponsoring a regulation that the town adopt a zero discharge policy for all boats in the harbor similar to those in many other towns on the South Shore.

And then, there's the Stormwater Committee to which we welcome two new members, Marty Nee, and Jim Drysdale appointed at the Dec 3 Selectmen's meeting. Still in its early stages, the committee is being put together in a way that can get some real improvements in Stormwater assessment, planning and remediation. Sensibly formed,

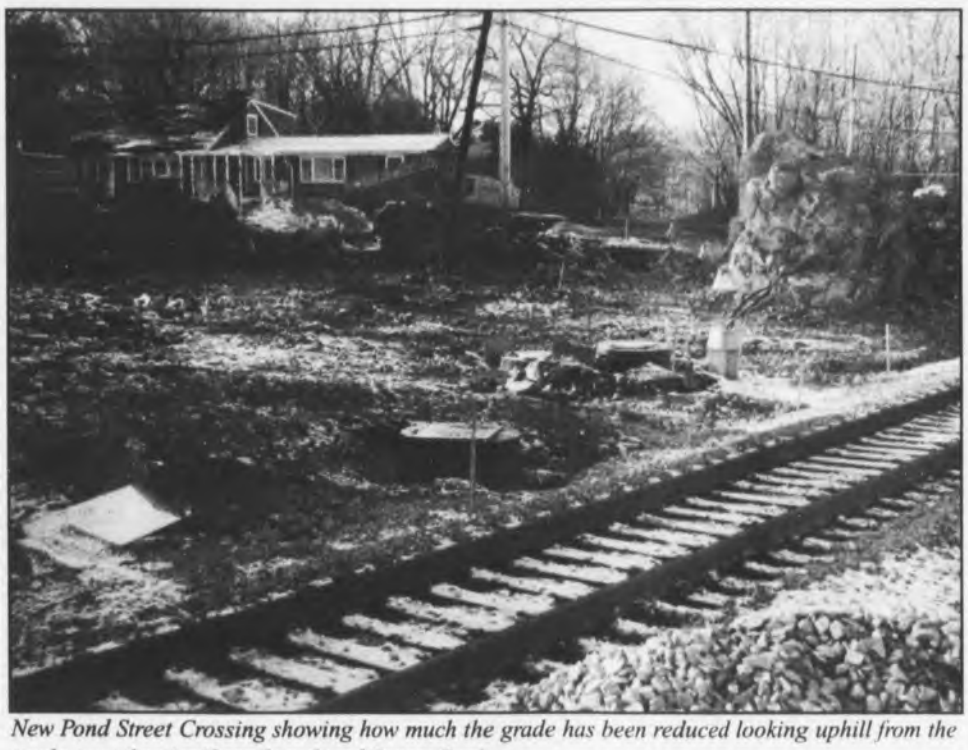
'Railroad construction everywhere'

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN



New Pond Street Crossing showing how much the grade has been reduced looking uphill from the tracks past the significantly reduced Sunset Rock.

Well here we are. It's December already. This past year has just flown by. The Greenbush project has gone from cleared land to tracks from the Scituate border to Hingham. It seems like railroad construction is everywhere. Our residents have proven very resilient in adapting to the street changes that have followed us all year long. The road we used just yesterday is closed today. But now, construction is starting to wind down from its previous feverish pace. But, a lot of details are still to be completed. We are following all of the items that need completion and are not letting them out of the MBTA's and Cashman's sights. If you think we may have missed one or two, just give us a call or drop us an email at the contacts listed at the end of this column. Or, stop by our office at Town Hall (It's best to call ahead, since we are often out of the office.)

We recently received an update from Cashman that Pond Street may be partially reopened this month which would be ahead of schedule. That would be a relief; but it means that the leg of Spring Street near the Historical Society will be finally closed to through traffic. We will keep you posted on that development. Either way we just received notice from the Cohasset Water Department that they will need to close this same leg of Spring Street this Saturday (Dec. 9) to connect a new water main under the crossing. Fortunately, they have chosen a Saturday so that the schools are not affected. We have asked CBB to make sure that whenever Spring Street is closed that Pleasant Street is kept open since it will be the only access to the hillside area. We are pretty sure it won't be this Saturday. The Water Department also mentioned that there is an outside chance that the work may not be completed in one day. If this proves to be the case, Spring Street will again be closed the following Saturday, Dec. 16.

The picture we've included this week shows how much the grade has been reduced looking uphill from the tracks past the significantly reduced Sunset Rock.

The Town Parking Lot has been paved, just in time for the holiday season. Thanks, Cashman. They will be back next year to complete the job, but for now we have a newly paved lot that will drain well and can easily be plowed. That's much better than the patchwork quilt of asphalt we've had in recent years.

Village safety — Now for some more serious stuff... We have spoken about safety and the railroad. We constantly encourage parents to take the time to educate your children about the hazards of crossing the rail tracks, whether on a street or sidewalk. And, heaven forbid, at an area where there is no pedestrian access. Short cuts are a very bad thing.

But now, we continue in another safety vein. Last week a senior citizen was seriously injured as she crossed the street in the downtown area in a crosswalk. Another driver failed to yield to the senior pedestrian. This is a very serious matter for each of us, the Greenbush Guys, included. This incident made us think about the crazy and inconsiderate actions of Cohasset drivers we have witnessed this past year.

For example, last week a young driver was exiting the newly paved Town Parking Lot through the entrance. Yes, the lot is still one way in and one way out. We know the one-way signs are not up yet, but anyone who lives in Town knows that it has always been that way. The young driver said he was sorry, and continued to exit through the entrance.

We have seen drivers drive over the curb beside the kitchen shop to get into the Town Parking Lot. What are they thinking? We routinely see people exit Pleasant Street at Depot Court without stopping and looking before proceeding. Last summer during the Revitalization construction we saw a resident drive over newly laid granite curbing in front of the dry cleaners. Two wheels actually went into the ditch into which the curbing had just been laid and then the driver blithely drove off without even slowing down. Didn't they even notice the bump? And, the crowning blow was a person, who, against a police officer's waving hands, drove under an operating backhoe and sped off into the sunset. We could go on and on, but you get the picture.

Each of us needs to slow down in the Village. We need to be more aware of our surroundings. Individual responsibility and courtesy are key if we are to have a safe Village.

Living a religiously challenged life

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

We lived in the city at the time, so I figured the theft of a nativity figure was completely plausible.

With the holidays upon us, it has once again become apparent that I'm a tad bit religiously challenged. I generally only notice my deficiencies during holidays like last Easter, when my son asked me about the connection between decorating eggs; freakishly large, home-invading, candy-hiding bunnies; and the death of Jesus. It only got worse when he wanted to know why we refer to the day someone died as "Good Friday." I managed to flub my way through that one, but only because he believes that any day they close school is a "good" day. But, then he stumped me when he asked, "What ever happened to 'Baby Jake?'"

After my initial confusion over how he managed to watch a Bette Davis movie, it finally dawned on me that he meant "Baby Jesus;" and was referring to last year's pre-Christmas fiasco when he asked me why there was no baby in the nativity scene in front of the local church. I told him that perhaps Baby Jesus was stolen. Why else wouldn't he be there with Joseph and Mary?

We lived in the city at the time, so I figured the theft of a nativity figure was completely plausible. We eventually got the real story, but only after my son asked the local priest if the police had caught the baby-snatcher yet. That's when we learned that Baby Jesus (a/k/a "Jake") doesn't traditionally show up in nativity scenes until midnight on the 25th. (Doh! And Mommy hasn't traditionally shown up in a church since ....?)

My latest display of ecclesiastical ineptitude came to bear this fall at my grandmother's funeral, where my son was in complete awe of the minister. I greatly appreciated his reverence until he asked how the Prime Minister could possibly have known his great grandmother when she didn't live in London, but at a "grandma hotel" in upstate New York. He then pointed to the black book carried by the minister (who had now clarified that he did not actually run the country of England), and inquired "what's that book?"

I tried to recover by telling my son, and the now "less than prime" minister, that we did have a copy of "that book" (a/k/a the "Bible"), only it was on a CD. This caused my entire family to look at me with raised eyebrows, as they knew the closest thing we had to a religion in our family was sports. I reminded them that the Bible is literature, and that the only bad grades I ever received as an English major were due to my inability to recognize a religious symbol, metaphor, allegory or allusion whenever I stumbled over combustible shrubbery, diabolical fruit or murderously competitive siblings.

This is all a bit worrisome for my son's own religious and literary future, and in fact, caused me to go online to see if they have an unabridged CD Bible series. Clearly, our single-CD version was not having much of an impact. Yet, in retrospect, one huge advantage of living a religiously challenged life is that it allows you the freedom to be tolerant of everyone else's beliefs; because you're not out there promoting your own version, and therefore, able to participate open-mindedly in celebrations by others. So whatever religious path my son may choose to take in the future, if any at all, I will support him.

In the short term, however, I hope to put off the bigger questions and stand behind my son's right to believe unequivocally in Santa Claus and the Easter Bunny. Although, I'm not too keen on the whole Tooth Fairy thing. Do you know how much kids get per tooth these days? They might as well start their own college fund. But a friend of mine once tried to deflect the whole tooth-for-money blackmail scheme by explaining to her daughter that she was actually the Tooth Fairy who left the money. Of course, in that wonderful innocence only a child can muster, her daughter looked her straight in the eye and said, "No wonder you're tired all the time. It must be tough going to all the other kid's houses every night."

COMMENTARY

JOHN WANDS

Making fun of those who subscribe to the notion that serious ideas expressed eloquently should matter does not strike me as a worthwhile pastime.

The frustrations of raising and living with sixth graders can be immense, but that does not give parents carte blanche to excoriate their teachers in the press. John Lengyel's article on "Grammar and being a sixth-grader" may entertain, but it does not edify its intended readers, who may fanaticize that sixth-grade English consists primarily of grinding through one novel a year, punctuated (or perhaps "punctured") occasionally by a discussion of the future perfect progressive tense.

While this apocalyptic nightmare may have been marginally accurate for a classroom in England straight out of Dickens' "Hard Times," America, at least, has graduated from such Gradgrindian horrors. In Massachusetts, parents are much more likely to encounter classrooms where students are enlightened by such grammatical exercises as learning to recognize the difference between a subject and a predicate — a useful distinction, I think — than by studying exotic verb tenses. In fact, in Cohasset, sixth-grade students will read in the course of a year between 20 and 40 novels, including many which they choose for themselves, and will write some 25 to 30 compositions, including self-generated poetry, short fiction, and literary analyses. While much of our curriculum is determined by state frameworks, by the time they graduate from the high school, students will have savored such literary masterpieces as "The Crucible," "Hamlet," Metaphysical poetry, and Elie Wiesel's "Night," to name just a few.

While it is easy to ridicule such things as dangling modifiers, we have all seen the unintended-but-hilarious results that occur when writers are ignorant of the need to place words near the words they modify. The alternative is to generate sentences of the variety: "Abraham Lincoln wrote the Gettysburg Address while riding to the battlefield on the back of an envelope." English teachers, in particular, lug home kilos of essays every night to correct — in the hope that students will not only learn to express themselves, but will also come to communicate in ways that can convey their ideas clearly, elegantly, and persuasively to others.

Sadly, Mr. Lengyel's suggestion of replacing English classes with movie classes may not be too far distant if one of the sessions I attended at the National Council of Teachers of English annual convention last month provides any indication. Participants noted how outside, leisure reading for middle-school students changes radically from sixth to seventh grade — from novels and biographies to articles from such magazines as People and Seventeen. Making fun of those who subscribe to the notion that serious ideas expressed eloquently should matter does not strike me as a worthwhile pastime. This seems especially so when the person attacking middle-school English obviously still remembers what he read as a 12-year-old — and presumably has some dedicated English teachers to thank for his verbal dexterity and his grammatical skills. Perhaps if the writer had communicated his concerns to the administration and the English Department directly, a substantive dialogue could have occurred, rather than a diatribe in the newspaper.

Dr. John Wands, Head of the English Department, lives in Duxbury. His love of teaching English has survived, even thrived, through stints at Yale University, UCLA, Marlborough School for Girls, and now Cohasset Middle-High School.

LIBRARY CORNER

Unique gift for a reader

Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For information on programs and events, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Library Book Bags – Looking for a unique gift for a reader? Paul Pratt Memorial Library book bags are available for purchase at the library for $15. These sturdy, heavy canvas bags are ideal for carrying home library materials. Each bag has an interior pocket large enough to hold a library card. Book bags come in dark green with a white logo and lettering. Checks should be made payable to Friends of the Library.

Art Exhibit – South Shore Art Center is sponsoring an exhibit of Diana Rousseau's landscape paintings through Dec. 31 at Paul Pratt Library. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesdays and Fridays, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturdays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sundays, from 2 to 5 p.m.

Independent Film Night – Take a break from holiday shopping and come to a free movie at the library. The independent film "Be With Me" will be presented Thursday, Dec. 21, at 6 p.m., in the Meeting Room. Free admission and refreshments will be provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Library Book Group – With the holiday rush upon us, this month the group is trying something different. Rather than assign one book to read and discuss, bring in a book that is currently being read. It could be fiction or nonfiction, biography or graphic novel. Be prepared to share a comment or two about the book. This will be a fun, relaxing way to share one's enthusiasm for reading. All are welcome. Coffee and refreshments will be provided by the Friends of the Library. The group will meet Wednesday, Dec. 20, at 10 a.m.

Spanish Music for Children – On Mondays, Dec.11,18, and Jan. 8, 22 and 29, at 10:30, in the Meeting Room, Jodi Craft will teach and sing familiar songs in Spanish. This interactive Spanish enrichment program is for all ages and communities. No registration required. Funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Spanish Story Time – On Friday, Dec. 15, from 1 to 2 p.m., in the Meeting Room, Su Escuela, The Language Center, will present Spanish Story Time. This interactive program will be facilitated by native Spanish-speaking teachers who will translate, adapt and present well-known books. Call 781-383-1348 to register for this program.

CEF featured on Our Town

This week on Our Town, Cohasset's very own cable TV show, co-hosts by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo meet with members of the newly reconstituted CEF(Cohasset Education Foundation) to discuss their goals and plans for upcoming projects.

School Committee member Stephen Fusco joins the hosts on the second half of the show to detail the technology needs of Cohasset schools.

In a very entertaining roll-in segment, viewers can find out about the collaboration between the Cohasset Historical Society and the Cohasset Drama Club to present the 1936 Broadway hit "The Women" in November at Town Hall.

This show airs Monday at 9pm on channel 10 and Tuesdays and Thursdays as well.

Watch every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 9p.m. on Comcast Channel 10.

Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed.

Putting the LID on stormwater problems

with realistic goals led by informed people from almost every part of Town and every necessary discipline. But more important, communication is good between the various committees, Town government and Town officials. After years of neglect on stormwater issues, we're off to a good start.

But about outside experts: there's a concept around called Low Impact Development (LID). I like the term 'low impact growth' but lig isn't a word. Whatever; it's the idea that if a community is going to avoid stormwater problems it has to have a good plan to replace its natural stormwater recharge areas with man made ones. not just build a drain to who knows where. Zealots expand the concept to "zero impact development" and of course, Zero Impact Growth: 'ZIG' is a word, so lets use it.

What LID means is that a system of rules be put in place whereby anyone in a town (including the Town itself), increasing the footprint of an impervious area on their property would be required to implement a plan to restore in some way the pervious surface they eliminated. Much brainpower has been put into the LID concept, and since all pervious soils are not alike, it's not a simple problem. There are experts, handbooks, videos, lecturers, etc. all extolling the glory of LID. And it's probably the best solution to stormwater problems that anyone's yet found. And it's a key component of the Stormwater Committee's thinking. We are looking for an expert who will lead us wading and sloshing out of the problems of Stormwater.

By way of help, of course, since there will be lots of suggestions, it's probably appropriate for the Board of Health to propose one. Here it is: That qualified areas of a person's property be assessed in terms of its ability to accept and recharge stormwater. We regularly make such an assessment about areas on a property, which have the ability to accept effluent discharge. It's a regular part of the permitting process for a septic system. We'll call the new area (since everyone loves acronyms) an RRA for Remedial Recharge Area. If you take your driveway out of asphalt and put in a qualified pervious driveway, you'll get sufficient RRA credit to add a porch. If you remove a tree, but discharge your roof drains into a dry well, you come out even. And so on.

Well, there you are – food for thought.

'Not lost in court of public opinion'

COMMENTARY

JOHN AND MARTHA BEWICK

Mike Weymouth was generous in his appreciation for our efforts to stop the destructive and fiscally irresponsible project, which is Greenbush, for which we're so grateful (Mariner, Dec. 1). Advocates for Transportation Alternatives (AfTA) may have lost in the four court decisions, and innumerable state agency hearings, but we will not have lost in the court of public opinion in the end. It is the thousands of Greenbush corridor residents who have been warriors in the effort who deserve the credit for carrying the battle as far as we could even though the "deal was done" from the beginning.

What was projected to be a $20 million project in 1984, is now a $520 million project in 2006. Dividing 17 miles of neighborhoods in Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate by walls and barriers, damaging 43 vernal pools, creating noise and vibration and affecting the character of several thousand homes in our 34 historic districts, damaging wetlands, scenic rivers, and even Scituate's water supply, clear-cutting thousands of trees that acted as our lungs, adding air pollution and daily plumes of carcinogenic particulates to our corridor, choking the easy network of cross-roadways that carry our working population to the many towns in our region, not just Boston, destroying our private bus system, and threatening our ferry system that has worked so well — these are among the concerns we raised, perhaps too politely, to the decision makers. We had put our final hope in Governor Romney when he said he would evaluate all construction projects using objective criteria. Greenbush meets none of the criteria, but Romney let it slide through without the promised scrutiny — an embarrassing decision that is now bankrupting the MBTA, not to mention the character of his waning and failed administration.

Led courageously by Senator Robert Hedlund and Rep. Garrett Bradley, Scituate's Dottie Leach, Lance van Lenten and Cathy Donohue, Cohasset's Amanda Burgoon, and Peter Robb, Peter Pratt, and many friends, Hingham's Marian Sherman, Phyllis Koch, Marilyn Yorke, and Nancy Buckley and Randy Young of the Coastal Coalition, and Annie Post of the Hingham Village Association, the leadership of the merchants of Hingham Square, Coleen O'Hanley, Valerie O'Hanley, and Lucia Qualey of Weymouth, and Bill Reid of Braintree, so many many others put in thousands of hours in petitions, town meetings, lobbying decision makers, rallies, writing letters, and pointing out that there were cheaper and less damaging transit alternatives.

Mike Weymouth himself invested hundreds of pro bono hours producing educational information for our communities and for the legislature. He wrote, designed, and did the art work for the full page ads we used and created several state-of-the-art video presentations that were very effective communication tools at no charge to AfTA using his design firm skills. His passion for the cause was inspiring. We are also grateful for the hundreds of corridor friends and residents who contributed to the legal fees, and technical experts.

Even in the last court case, Federal Judge William Young pointed out that it was undisputed that there were less environmentally damaging transit alternatives than the Greenbush rail project, safer alternatives than Greenbush, and alternatives that would have significantly less impact on our communities than Greenbush. That's on the record. Now we have to wait and see what happens.

Advocates for Transportation Alternatives is still advocating for transportation alternatives, and will continue to monitor corridor impacts of the train construction and operation. The next step is also to rally support to save the ferry services which are being squeezed by the lack of planning for the Hingham Shipyard terminal and facilities, and a flawed bidding procedure for the ferry services which is shortening the contract period. Let us know if you have problems with Greenbush as it proceeds, and if you would like to be involved with the ferry community of interest at marbewick@comcast.net.

By Bob Katzen

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives and senators' votes on two roll calls from prior legislative sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$1 MILLION FOR WAGES FOR HOMEMAKERS TO HELP ELDERLY (H 5000)

House 149-0, Senate 37-0, overrode Gov. Mitt Romney's veto of the entire $1 million in funding to increase the wages of homemakers and personal care homemakers who provide services to senior citizens at home. Supporters of the $1 million said that this small increase of an estimated 18 cents per hour would raise the average hourly pay of homemakers to $10.99 per hour. In his veto message, Romney said that he vetoed the $1 million because it was not consistent with his original budget proposal. (A "Yes" vote is for the $1 million).

$2 MILLION FOR "TURNING 22" PROGRAM (H 5000)

House 156-0, Senate 37-0, overrode Gov. Romney's $2 million veto reduction (from $8.5 million to $6.5 million) in funding for the Turning 22 Program. The program provides two years of transitional services to people with severe mental disabilities who lose their entitlement to special education services upon graduation or reaching age 22. Supporters of the $2 million said that it is desperately needed by this program that is designed as a bridge for these people from educational services into the adult human services system. They noted that an Individual Transition Plan into the adult system is developed for each individual in the program. They argued that there are many people on the waiting list for the program who have to fend for themselves until and unless they are accepted. In his veto message, Romney said that he reduced the funding to the amount projected to be necessary. The governor in November eliminated the $2 million again when he used his budget cutting powers to unilaterally cut $425 million from the state's $25.7 billion fiscal 2007 state budget. Romney last week changed course again and restored the $2 million in funding for the Turning 22 Program as part of $41.4 million that he restored to various programs. He noted that higher than expected November tax revenues made the funding possible. (A "Yes" vote is for the $2 million).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL:

COURT TO HEAR SAME-SEX MARRIAGE LAWSUIT - The Supreme Judicial Court that legalized same-sex marriages has agreed to hear Gov. Romney's lawsuit to require the Constitutional Convention to vote on the proposed amendment banning same-sex marriages. The suit also asks that the secretary of state be forced to place the marriage question on the 2008 ballot if the convention does not vote it up or down. The convention in November voted 109-87 voted to recess until 2 p.m. on January 2, 2007 - the final day of the 2006 legislative session. The recess would postpone until that date any further action on the proposed constitutional amendment to "define marriage only as the union of one man and one woman." The amendment does not include language nullifying any same-sex marriages that have already taken place. The measure needs the votes of 50 out of 200 legislators in both the 2006 and 2007-2008 legislative sessions in order to appear on the November 2008 ballot.

$15 MILLION FOR PANDEMIC FLU THREAT - The House approved and sent to the Senate a measure aimed at preparing for and responding to a pandemic flu outbreak. Provisions include $8 million for 92,000 "priority people" to receive antiviral medications; $6 million for hospital beds, ventilators and other supplies and $500,000 for the Department of Public Health to study emergency preparedness.

STOP PAYMENT ON CHECKS (H 3084) - The House approved and sent to the Senate a measure increasing from six months to one year the length of time during which a stop payment order on a check is effective. Supporters said that extending the period to one year would help consumers and noted that six months is insufficient.

RAISE CAP ON RETIREES' ALLOWABLE EARNINGS (H 263) - The House gave final approval to and sent to the Senate a bill allowing retired public state and local employees to continue working in a public job as long as the combination of their pension and new salary does not exceed by more than $15,000 the salary they earned when they retired. Current law prohibits the combination from exceeding the salary at retirement and does not allow the additional $15,000. Supporters said that many retirees cannot live on their pensions and should be allowed to earn more money than is permitted under current law. The Senate has already approved the bill and now a final Senate okay is needed prior to it going to Gov. Romney.

ANIMAL FIGHTS (H 1765) - The House approved and sent to the Senate a measure making it easier for law enforcement officials to seize animals being bred to fight and the fight-related paraphernalia. Supporters said that it is time to crack down on people who conduct these fights and to put a stop to this barbaric sport that involves birds, game hens, chicks, dogs and puppies. The bill also requires any defendant who is convicted of cruelty to an animal to automatically surrender the animal to the MSPCA or other humane society. This provision would replace a current law that requires a hearing to determine the defendant's fitness for continued custody of the abused animal.

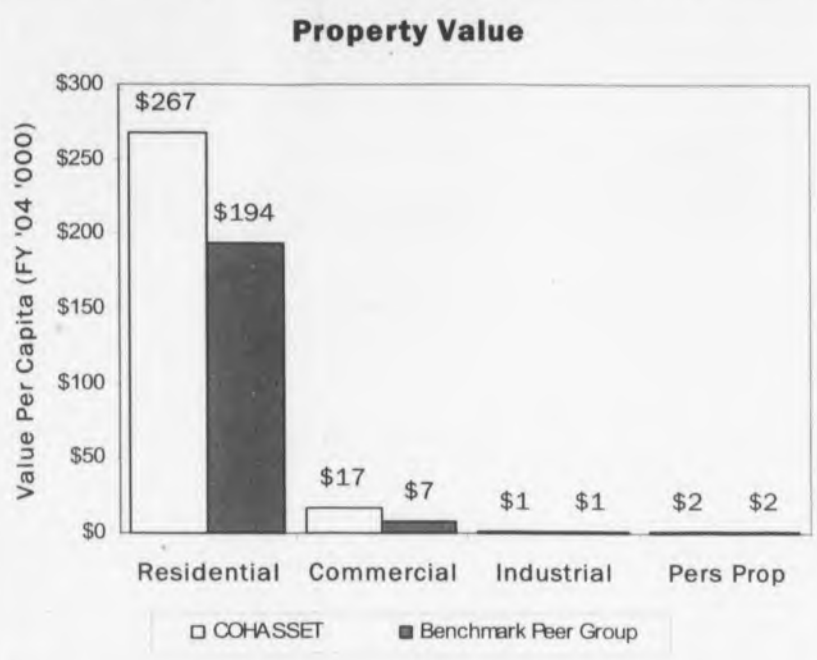
How does Cohasset measure up?

Municipal Benchmarking: Cohasset-at-a-Glance



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Value is the assessed value.

This chart shows the 2005 assessed value per capita of Cohasset's tax base, broken out by class of property. The chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. By comparing it with similar communities, one can get a sense for the composition of Cohasset's tax base.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

Town to stick with single tax rate

increase, the tax rate decreases.

Deputy Assessor Mary E. Quill said this year assessors adjusted the land value. The overall value in Cohasset went up $100 million.

The tax bills will reflect the Selectmen's decision this week to continue with a uniform tax rate for all property classes based on the Board of Assessors' recommendation.

Selectmen had the option to split the tax rate but since the town is 93 percent residential, the change would only decrease property tax bills a small amount for residential taxpayers and send commercial rates soaring.

For example, lowering the tax rate just a few cents to $10.13 for residential property owners — would result in a tax rate of $15.76 for commercial property, Quill said.

Tax bills vary depending on a property's assessed value. By taking the assessed value of the property and dividing it by $1,000 and then multiplying it by the tax rate, a homeowner can compute his property taxes.

Tax bills have more than doubled over the past 16 years along with values. In 1992, the average Cohasset home was assessed at $300,000 and the tax rate was $12, yielding an annual tax bill of $3,600.

Four years ago in fiscal 2003, the average home was assessed at $521,000 and with a tax rate was $11.99; the homeowner paid roughly $6,248 in property taxes.

This year the average valued home is $825,000, and with the tax rate of $10.44, that same homeowner will pay about $8662 in taxes.

Quill said the values were set as a result of sales activity in calendar year 2005. In a telephone interview Thursday, she said the Cohasset housing market is still strong.

Municipalities do not generally split their tax rate unless the combined valuation of commercial, industrial and personal property taxes equals about 25 percent or more of the total valuation of the town.

Town Manager Bill Griffin noted on Cape Cod, there is not a single community with a split tax rate.

The new tax rate will be reflected in the third quarter tax bills.

Elsa Miller of the Board of Assessors praised the Assessors Office for going after the town's new growth, which is estimated at $530,000. Under Prop. 2-1/2, "new growth" allows a community to increase its levy limit annually by an amount based on the increased value of new construction. New growth is calculated by multiplying the increase in the assessed valuation of qualifying property by the prior year's tax rate.

The house at 25 Ripley Road, which was built in 1889 and served for many years as the Cohasset Private Hospital, is being considered for an affordable housing complex that would not essentially expand the footprint of the building. It was also a nursing home housing 22 elderly residents in 1966. Since 1986, it has been a private home.

Board of Appeals, he said.

Partnership member Jim Hamilton described the proposal as "a work in progress" noting the partnership thought the time had come to bring it forward to the town and the press.

Selectman Fred Koed said neighbors would be an important part of the process and it would be important to "build a coalition in the neighborhood." He suggested public hearings to bring the neighbors in to allay their concerns.

Brewer noted the house is in an area of very well kept homes. He said at the turn of the century the house had a big front porch that faced Sohier Street. He said architectural details like a porch and screened parking should make the project more palatable.

Hamilton said right now the building, which is in foreclosure, is going down without "care, love and ownership."

Vanderweil said there was nothing negative about the project "on the surface" but added the board needed more information. "The board is always in favor of Cohasset affordable housing — but that is different than state affordable housing," he said.

The partnership said it did not envision the town as being a landlord or in the development business and hopes for a public-private partnership of some sort.

The current asking price for the building is $699,999. The partnership has estimated the conversion costs to be $125 per square foot, or about $850,000 — making the total buildout estimate cost of about $1.55 million.

"Developing the project as all affordable not likely at this price, certainly absent a subsidy," the partnership stated in its written report to Selectmen. "We would like to get as close to an all-affordable goal as possible, but that will be a function of the purchase price and subsidies available."

The end mix depends on purchase price, construction financing available and end sale prices, the partnership stated.

The partnership plans to approach the Community Preservation Committee for a possible subsidy, which would then have to pass muster at Town Meeting.

Based on the discussion the other night, the next step is for the Housing Partnership Committee to meet with non-profit developers to find out if this project is at all viable, and then to reach out to the neighborhood to hear their concerns and explain the potential project in more detail, Town Manager Bill Griffin said Wednesday.

Q&A on affordable housing

• What is Chapter 40B?

ANSWER: In simplest terms, Chapter 40B is a state statute that obligates every community in the Commonwealth to have at least 10 percent of its total housing stock affordable to households at certain income levels. The income levels are determined by the federal government, and they vary by region and number of persons living in the household. From these income levels, the state calculates the maximum rents that can be charged (all found on DHCD website) or, in a more complicated formula, what prices could be charged for "sale" units. The rule of thumb is that a unit is affordable if the rent paid by households with incomes at or below the federal income limits does not exceed 30 percent of their monthly gross income.

• What is the LIP program?

ANSWER: LIP stands for Local Initiative Program, meaning a 40B proposal that is either initiated by or sponsored by the local community, by its Board of Selectmen or Housing Partnership. It is sometimes called a "friendly 40B" since it does not involve official municipal opposition. Both Cedarmere and Cook proceeded, or would have proceeded, as LIP projects as the governing bylaw required it.

A LIP application also has the advantage of allowing the establishment of a local-community preference, where up to 70 percent of the units can be reserved for people associated with the town, such as that community's residents, its employees, or children of residents and parents of residents.

• What does 40B do relative to local zoning?

ANSWER: 40B allows for the overriding of most local zoning provisions, usually requiring only a single "comprehensive permit" from the local Zoning Board of Appeals. In addition to this permit, the project also goes through an initial screening/approval process with the state Dept. of Community Housing & Development (DHCD) to insure that it meets state regulations and guidelines.

• How does one qualify for an affordable unit and would Cohasset residents qualify?

ANSWER: Qualification depends on income and asset factors. In Cohasset, the likelihood is that even a resident on a fixed income, who meets the federal income limits, would not qualify for Chapter 40B housing if that person is selling a home with more than $150,000 in equity because that person would exceed the maximum asset limits. This was clear from discussions about the Cook property. However, under the Cohasset preference, others in Cohasset could qualify — anyone who meets the income limits but does not own real estate with a lot of equity, town employees and families, parents of residents from elsewhere who are not wealthy, and/or children of residents just starting out who have yet to accumulate assets. While the past focus in Cohasset has been on limited-income but house-rich seniors, these other groups have housing needs as well. Also note that DHCD is less favorably disposed to age-restricted projects.

• What is envisioned by the Housing Partnership at 25 Ripley Rd. and how would it impact town services?

ANSWER: IF that project could come together, and at this point it is still a big if, the Partnership envisions no more than 7 units, 3 one-bedrooms and 4 two-bedrooms. Under Chapter 40N, at least two of the units would have to be affordable as defined under 40B. Of the other 5, they could be any combination of affordable, market-rate, or a Cohasset-unique standard somewhere in between. That will depend on the economics of the project. The impact on town services, particularly schools, would be negligible in a project of this small size.

These questions and answers were provided by the Cohasset Housing Partnership.

What is a housing partnerhip?

A housing partnership encourages the creation and preservation of affordable housing. Its responsibilities include planning, serving as an information resource to other town officials, developers and the general public, identifying housing opportunities, assisting the Board of Appeals during the comprehensive permit process, and building support for a diverse and balanced community, with housing available to households of all income levels as a matter of basic fairness.

In addition, the partnership often helps developers with marketing and outreach to sell or rent new affordable units, and assists with outreach during the resale process. A housing partnership usually has members with experience in banking, housing development, architecture, engineering, law, social policy and human services, and residents generally interested in the well being of their community.

Tribute to Studds

Selectman Fred Koed attended a tribute to the late, former US Rep. Gary Studds of Cohasset at the John F. Kennedy Library last week.

Koed said US Sen. Ted Kennedy spoke as did Studds' nephew, a Cohasset resident. "It was quite a tribute to him (Studds)," Koed said this week.

Studds, 69, who represented the 10th Congressional District, including his hometown of Cohasset, for 24 years from 1972-1996, passed away Oct. 14.

Congress recognized Studds' accomplishments when it named the "Gerry E. Studds Stellwagon Bank National Marine Sanctuary" off the Massachusetts Coast.

Koed said seldom has he seen an individual in public life with the wit, intelligence and insight of Studds. "I distinctly remember introducing myself to him in 1974 downtown in front of the hardware store," he said. "He was always gracious and friendly in public."

Runway changes

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer, who also sits on the Logan Airport Community Advisory Committee for the Boston-Logan International Airport Overflight Noise Study, said changes in flight paths could have "huge benefits and be an enormous change" for Cohasset. Dormitzer explained most of the flights headed south or southwest to airports such as Kennedy and LaGuardia, go out over Boston Harbor and come back over Cohasset.

The recommendations are of two major types, Dormitzer said.

Departing flights would travel about eight miles father out over the Atlantic before returning to cross the shoreline. The extra distance would allow them to climb about 4,000 feet higher before reaching the shore and would distribute the flights farther north and south.

"Cohasset will get some relief because planes will be higher and because of the wider distribution of flights," Dormitzer explained. "Today the overwhelming majority of departures from runways 22R, 15 and 9 cross the shoreline between the Hull/Cohasset border on the north and the Scituate/Cohasset border on the south resulting in almost continuous noise over the Town."

The second type of recommendation is for arriving planes on runways 33L, 27 and 22L, he said.

"These arrivals would approach the airport using an over-the-water route east of the airport," Dormitzer said. "Cohasset is severely affected by 33L arrivals and the Town would get some relief from that alternative specifically. Unfortunately, the FAA has declared that the potential 33L arrival route would only be used in off-peak hours."

There are 29 communities on the Citizens Advisory Committee and each is affected by airplane overflights. Tuesday, the CAC began voting on recommending the alternatives to Massport. The meeting was continued until Jan. 17.

been managing to run them simultaneously in the same classroom, with the same teacher at the same time. The proposal would be to separate those two classes out, as they should be," Antolini said.

Another mathematics teacher will be hired to teach an algebra section and a computer language/programming course in Basic or Visual Basic. Antolini indicated there is significant student interest in higher-level computer courses. He hopes to find a candidate who could teach more advanced and current computer applications, such as Java. School Committee member Steven Fusco said he liked the idea. "If we can provide programming in a more current [computer] language it will act as a stepping stone for students who can take what they learned to college and the workplace," he said.

Lastly, the board approved the hiring of a middle school music teacher that would ideally teach both vocal and instrumental courses. This position will free up the high school music staff and, as a result, allow them to instruct music electives.

The three new positions will carry over to the fall semester, despite the department head's return to regular class loads, creating more elective offerings for the student body. The cost associated will be incorporated in the fiscal 2008 budget. "It will be a great win for the school," said Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz.

The School Committee also approved fund allocations for current staff members teaching sections beyond their contract requirements.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh requested three of her own budget adjustments for fiscal 2007. First, Deer Hill School has a need for a reading consultant to work with teachers and students for the remainder of the school year. Second, a physical education teacher at Deer Hill is required to fully schedule students for the second half of the year. Third, an assistant technology position is needed to lend support in maintaining the schools' growing inventory of computers and other technology. The School Committee voted unanimously to accept the Superintendent's recommendations.

The $200,000 appropriated for the school department's use under Chapter 70 was approved Nov. 13th at the Special Town Meeting. An estimated total of $105,560 will go toward the new hires as voted on by the Committee. An additional $54,000 of the Chapter 70 monies will be used to pay for teachers' salaries when retirees were hired earlier this year. The use for the remaining balance, approximately $40,000 will not be determined until the new hires are in place.

GIFTS of HOPE
Reaching out to help in your own community.

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 15 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Abington Mariner, Rockland Mariner, Braintree Forum, Cohasset Mariner, Hanover Mariner, Hingham Journal, Marshfield Mariner, Norwell Mariner, Pembroke Mariner & Reporter, Scituate Mariner, Wareham Courier, and Weymouth News in giving the greatest gift of all – a gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way in helping those in need.

This year these local newspapers have identified several local charities to be the recipients of the gifts of hope donations.

CHS gridders to focus on fundamentals for 2007 season

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

When it defeated Carver by a 13-12 score on Oct. 7, the Cohasset High football team was 3-1-1 and had won its all-important South Shore League opener.

For a variety of reasons, that would be the Skippers' last win of the season.

Cohasset lost four of its last five, with the only exception being a 0-0 draw on Oct. 20 against East Bridgewater. The boys finished the year with a 3-5-2 record.

For a team coming off several consecutive winning seasons, that record was certainly considered a disappointment by coaches and players. If there is a silver lining, it's the fact that few could argue the team really was better than its record indicated.

Having just completed his first season at the program's helm, head coach Pete Afanasiw said Wednesday that next year will see a renewed focus on basic fundamentals, a focus that he hopes will allow the Skippers to win the games they should be winning.

"We did a lot of things well, but things like turnovers and basic missed assignments that are very rudimentary to the game hurt us," Afanasiw said. "Things like tackling, blocking, ball protection…we had too many avoidable mistakes."

Looking back on the season, the coach said his players handled the tough times well, but their frustration became clear after a while.

Aidan Buick (12), a midfielder for Northfield Mt. Hermon, lines up a shot from 25 yards out in the New England prep school championship game against Loomis Chaffee. The shot would result in Buick's second goal of the game to help lead NHM to a 3-2 win.

CHS grad wins NE prep soccer championship with Northfield Mt. Hermon

Six months ago, Aidan Buick was leading the Cohasset High boys lacrosse team to a Div. 3 state championship.

On Nov. 19, Buick was hoisting another trophy, as his two goals helped the Northfield Mt. Hermon soccer team to a 3-2 win over Loomis Chaffee in the New England prep school championship game.

After playing striker at CHS, Buick played primarily a defensive midfielder position for NMH this year. But when the team's leading scorer was injured during the tournament, Buick moved forward and wound up scoring the game-winning goal in the first round against Worcester Academy.

"His willingness to put the team ahead of his own scoring aspirations served as a foundation of our run to a New England championship."

Northfield Mt. Hermon boys soccer coach Charlie Malcolm, on Aidan Buick

The three tournament goals gave him eight for the season, to go along with 10 assists. All told, his contributions earned him the team's Coaches Award.

"He won the Coaches Award because he anchored the center of the pitch for us and became an outstanding holding midfielder," said NMH head coach Charlie Malcolm. "His willingness to play a more defensive, playmaker roll on the team allowed other players to score goals."

In a regular season game against Loomis, Buick suffered an injury to his ankle, which was heavily wrapped in the middle of the season while he played through the injury. Malcolm said that when Buick started getting healthy again, the team took off and won 11 straight matches en route to the New England title.

The coach said Buick attracted a lot of attention from various colleges with his finals performance, including Boston College, Northeastern, Williams, Bowdoin and St. Francis.

"At the finals, Aidan's college stock soared. He was a great two-way player," said Malcolm. "He has been a great teammate and his willingness to put the team ahead of his own scoring aspirations served as a foundation of our run to a New England championship.

"Nothing pleased me more as a coach and educator to see Aidan finally get the recognition he deserved at the finals. He was the most underrated player in New England prep school soccer, until the tournament."

Malcolm said he first discovered Buick at last year's Div. 3

"Aidan's ballance and touch on the ball for his size immediately caught my attention, not to mention the fact that he can hit a bomb with either foot," Malcolm said. "This season provided Aidan with tremendous college exposure and he leaves NMH a far more complete player."

Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw called Justin Alexander (above) "the best tight end in the South Shore League this year."

Back to the basics

"They hung together nicely, but after a while, you could see it in their faces, just saying, 'What do we have to do to win a game?'" Afanasiw said. "The Norwell game was the epitome of that."

Ah, yes, the Norwell game. The Clippers scored 16 points in that game: two on a return of a blocked extra point, seven on an interception return for a touchdown, and another seven after a bad snap on a Cohasset punt gave Norwell the ball inside the Skippers' 20.

Cohasset, in turn, scored 15, a total that could have been doubled when you take into account the two touchdowns that were called back because of penalties.

It is mistakes like these that Afanasiw and his players will be hoping to avoid next season. He did say, though, that these mistakes were not due to a lack of effort.

"The team's work ethic was good. They came out to practice hard everyday," said the coach. "The team persevered through what could've been a difficult season."

Afanasiw added that, between now and the preseason in August, his focus will be on getting players in the weight room to improve overall team strength.

"I think the future looks bright; it's just a matter of how much work they're willing to do in the offseason," said Afanasiw.

Speaking of next year, Cohasset will find itself in the position of most other high school programs: a good returning base of talent, but with some holes to fill. Perhaps nowhere is that best exemplified than in the offensive line, a unit that has been the program's strength the last few seasons.

If one includes tight end Justin Alexander, all four of Cohasset's league All-Stars were starters on the o-line. The other three were Paul St. Pierre, Nick Cambi and Jake Cuneo. All but Cuneo, the right tackle, are graduating this June.

Next year, Cuneo will be joined by the likes of Anderson Lynner, Cliff Musto and Schyuler Wakefield, all of whom contributed a lot this year, as well.

"We ran for over 2,000 yards this season, and that was without our top fullbacks for part of the year," Afanasiw said. "It was nice to see they (the linemen) were every bit as good as I envisioned them being."

The fullbacks to whom Afanasiw references are PJ McCaw and Kyle Pinkus, both of whom return next season. They and Brian Hill figure to get most of the carries that had been going to Anthony DiPaolo the second half of this year; DiPaolo is also graduating.

Cohasset's other graduating starters are linebacker Colin Conway, receiver/safety Fletcher Smalzel, and defensive tackle Robert Silvia. Andrew Clark, Gannon Dorion, John Harrington and Nick Zappolo are also graduating from the program.

Afanasiw will be counting on his defensive backfield as another strength of his team in '07. Juniors Mark Flibotte and Sam DeGiacomo both played well there this year; Flibotte was named Cohasset's MVP in the Skippers' Thanksgiving Day game against Hull.

"Mark is a perfectly example of someone who just improved with every practice and every game," Afanasiw said. "There's a very good possibility of him being an all-league player next year."

Musto will return to anchor the front seven of the defense after finishing with a team-high nine sacks this fall. Musto was one of the pleasant surprises of this year's squad, as was junior quarterback David Snowdale after he stepped into the starting role six games into the season.

"When his number got called, considering the amount of reps he had, he made a lot of good decisions," said Afanasiw. "I was impressed with how he conducted himself and with his knowledge of the game."

This was, of course, Afanasiw's first season at Cohasset after most recently serving as an assistant coach for Duxbury, and it was a year that he says he will look back on fondly.

"It was definitely a rewarding experience," Afanasiw said. "I wish we could've had a couple more W's, but that's not always the measure of a successful season.

"It's just a matter of time before we start fine-tuning this in the right direction."

Sports Notes

The Harlem Rockets

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club is proud to sponsor an evening of comedy basketball entertainment with the Harlem Rockets.

The Rockets will take on Cohasset's very own Dream Team, comprised of your favorite faculty members and local officials. The event provides fun, family entertainment and kicks off the hoop season in Cohasset.

The game is Thursday, Dec. 14 at the CMHS gym. The game starts at 6:30 p.m.; come early for a good seat. The game will start on time.

Tickets are on sale at the Recreation office at the Town Hall, or from any Boosters Club member for $8 in advance and $10 at the door. All proceeds go to the basketball programs in Cohasset.

CHS championship banners

The Cohasset High School Athletic Department is in the process of creating new championship banners for the high school gymnasium. CHS wants these banners to as accurate as possible.

After researching the CHS Athletic Department trophy case and old banners, the department has compiled the list below of Cohasset High School league, sectional, and state championships.

Any CHS grads or community members who can help the school with any dates that may have been missed should contact Athletic Director Ron Ford at: Cohasset Middle - High School, 143 Pond Street, Cohasset, MA 02025; Phone: (781) 383-6103; E-mail: rford@cohassetk12.org

Cohasset High School thanks you for your help.

Cohasset Village Holiday Stroll set for Saturday, Dec. 16

On Saturday, Dec. 16th the Merchants of Cohasset Village will host the Annual Cohasset Village Holiday Stroll.

This year's event is a way for the merchants of the Village to say thank you to the many patrons who have supported us throughout a difficult summer. Between the Village Revitalization Project and the work laying track for the Greenbush Line, it has been a difficult time in Cohasset Village. According to David Bigley - owner of All The Best Natural Foods "We sincerely appreciate the patience and continued support of our patrons and this is a small way for us to show it."

The proceeds of the event will benefit two local causes. First of all, the wreaths displayed by the participating merchants were purchased from the METCO program who was selling them as a Holiday fundraiser. The proceeds will be used to enhance programs for METCO participants. Also, each participating merchant will be holding a raffle in their store. The items will vary from gift certificates to merchandise, and the proceeds will go to The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project. This group sends hundreds of volunteer Cohasset teens and adults to Appalachia to do home repairs every year.

Some of the events for the evening include:

- An opportunity to write a letter to Santa
- Open houses and free refreshments at participating merchants
- A performance by the Cohasset High School Jazz Combo at the South Shore Art Center
- A performance of Christmas music on the Carillon Bells of St. Stephens
- A bagpiper
- A hayride around Cohasset Common.....And more, including of course a visit from Santa himself

The event will take place regardless of the weather.

For information contact, David Bigley at All The Best Natural Foods, One Pleasant Street, 781 383 3005 / 3080 - Fax

'Guys & Dolls' premiers tonight

Cohasset Music Department will present the musical "Guys & Dolls" Friday, Dec. 8, and Saturday, Dec. 9, at 7:30 p.m., and Sunday, Dec. 10, at 2:30 p.m., in the Cohasset Middle-High School auditorium.

This musical about dice-rolling gamblers and the "dolls" they love features the songs "Luck be a Lady," "A Bushel and a Peck," "I've Never been in Love Before" and "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat." Miss Adelaide will be played by Sinclair Dean; while her gambling beau, Nathan Detroit, is played by Tim Toomey. The Mission Doll, Sarah Brown, is played by Sally Meehan; while she is wooed by the high-roller, Sky Masterson, played by Charles Miller. In addition, a strong supporting cast and crew makes this a highly recommended show.

Stephanie Hoskin is director/choreographer and Bryan Marks is producer/music director. Marks said, "This show should stand favorably in the long tradition of quality musicals here at Cohasset Middle-High School."

Great songs and dances and unforgettable characters all perform with a pit orchestra.

Tickets are $10, and may be purchased at the door or in advance at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset. For more information, call 781-383-2069.

'Dancing Day' at First Parish

Members of Broad Cove Chorale will perform in next weekend's "Dancing Day" concert to benefit Wellspring. Performances will take place Saturday, Dec. 9, at 8 p.m., at House of Prayer, 916 Main St., Hingham, and Sunday, Dec. 10, at 4 p.m., at First Parish Church, 23 North Main St., on the Green, in Cohasset.

The Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale are joining forces this holiday season to support Wellspring's Diane Edson Fund, which provides direct financial aid to people in crisis. This cause is meaningful to the singers, since Edson was a member of Unicorn Singers for 15 years until her death.

The concert is titled "Dancing Day," and features various settings of the old Cornish carol "tomorrow shall be my dancing day…this have I done for my true love." The principal works are a suite of Christmas carol dances called Ringeltänze, which will be accompanied by piano and hand bell choir, and John Rutter's cantata, "Dancing Day." The assembled audience and choirs will render a number of familiar carols, some with hand bells and instruments to brighten the sound.

Tickets are $15 or $25 for a sponsor ticket to help support Wellspring, and are good for either performance. They are available at Noble's in Hingham Square or by calling Kathy Reardon at 781-749-0162. Tickets will be sold at the door as available.

Here's to more flurries this season

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Cohasset is a pretty town, and a blanket of snow over the village only enhances its beauty.

First of all, I'd like to thank the girls who covered my column last week. I owe you guys. December is here; and traces of this year's first dusting of snow are teasing the students. Here's to more flurries this season; a snowfall gives a fresh feeling to the same things and places we see every day. Cohasset is a pretty town, and a blanket of snow over the village only enhances its beauty. The winter holidays are approaching fast, and The Village Butcher & Deli is offering savory Holiday Roasts. They're delicious.

This Friday is opening night for Guys and Dolls at CHS! The curtains open at 7:30 p.m., show up early to get good seats. The school musical is always a lot of fun, so be sure to get your tickets for the show tonight, Saturday (7:30 p.m.) or Sunday's matinee at 2:30 p.m.

Okay guys and dolls, let's get to this week's news.

• Congratulations to CHS' recently published authors: Trish Reel, Colleen Richardson, Kara Wilcox and Charles Miller. These students were recently published in Teen Ink magazine. Ms. Berman has her students submit writing for this national publication each month.

• The Ice Hockey team faces off against Westwood tomorrow night at 4 p.m. The hockey games are well attended by both CHS students and parents. Don't miss out on the opening game of the season.

• The Basketball Boosters met Monday night in the library.

• School committee met on Wednesday.

• School Council met Wednesday after school.

• Debate team had their first meet on Wednesday at New Bedford High School, and that fact is not open for argument.

• The PSO met Thursday.

• The Social Studies Department met Thursday after school.

• The Diversity Committee met after school Friday night in the Library.

Another vacation is in the foreseeable future. Hang on guys, the pressure will be off soon enough. Midterms are coming up, so get squared away with your classes to avoid progress reports. Enough chit-chat, I need to start chipping away the block of ice that is my make-up work. Enjoy the weekend Cohasset, even if you're scrambling to get back on the ball.

Giving extra credit to Cohasset teachers

Looking for the perfect gift to thank that special teacher or the helpful school secretary who anwers questions or the art teacher who stayed after school every week to encourage children to knit hats for the homeless? Cohasset Education Foundation offers the solution to gift-giving needs. With a tax-deductible donation to the CEF's Teacher Appreciation Program, parents can send any Cohasset teacher, administrator or school staff member Extra Credit.

Each recipient of an Extra Credit gift will receive a card acknowledging that a donation has been made in his or her honor with a personalized message. The amount of the gift is not disclosed. Donors are able to thank those people who work so hard for the children in the schools, as well as help fund CEF grant programs that foster innovation and excellence in teaching throughout the entire Cohasset Public School System.

With each Extra Credit donation, the CEF will mail an acknowledgement card to the teacher or other special recipient in the Cohasset schools. Cards are available with a suggested minimum donation of $15 each ($50 for five cards), larger donations are always appreciated. All of the proceeds of the Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit go toward funding professional development in the Cohasset schools. The CEF accepts donations for the Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit throughout the entire school year. Not only is this an ideal holiday gift, but a way to thank the teachers and staff in the schools all year long.

Take time this holiday season to honor local educators by participating in the CEF Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit. Donations may also be made in honor of relatives, friends, coaches, grandparents and any other special people or as a memorial remembrance. Checks should be made payable to: The Cohasset Education Foundation and mailed to: The Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O Box 309, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, contact sarah.murphy@comcast.net.

PAC to elect officers; submit biography

This year, the Parent Advisory Council for special education is hosting elections for all officers of the board for school years 2006-2008. Anyone who is interested in running for one of these positions can submit a brief biography by Dec. 15, at 2 p.m. This may be mailed to PSO/PAC, P.O. Box 30, emailed to southshorepac@comcast.net, or dropped off at any of the schools main offices. The biographies and ballots will be mailed out only to parents with students on IEPs.

Officers to be elected: Chairperson, vice-chairperson or co-chairpersons, secretary and treasurer.

If interested in becoming a liaison, a child must be on an IEP and attend the school the parent would be representing. Submit name, contact information and the school to be represented: out-of-district, preschool, Osgood, Deer Hill, Middle School, High School.

For more information, call Claudia, election coordinator, at 781-383-9795.

Informal screening for pre-schoolers

The Osgood Preschool staff in conjunction with the school nurse will hold informal screenings for children on the third Friday of every month from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. The remaining dates are Dec. 15, 2006; Jan. 19, Feb. 16, March 16, April 27, May 18, 2007.

These screenings will consist of a play group activity as well as opportunities for vision, hearing and posture screening. These screenings are to assist in identifying those students who should be referred for an evaluation to determine eligibility for special education.

If you are interested in having your child participate, contact one of the preschool staff at 781-383-6117 no later than the Wednesday prior to one of the scheduled screenings.

Vo-Tech open house is Monday, Dec. 18

John Kosko, Superintendent of the South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School, has announced that the annual open house of South Shore, located at 476 Webster St. (Route 123) in Hanover will take place Thursday, Dec. 14 from 6 p.m.- 8:30 p.m. Snow date Monday, Dec. 18.

Charles Homer, principal of the high school, reports that "all technical programs will be staffed to explain their programs to future students and their parents". The South Shore Regional district includes the towns of Abington, Cohasset, Hanover, Hanson, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman.

The four-year technical high school has offered quality vocational education for over four decades. South Shore's shops in programs such as auto body, automotive, carpentry, cosmetology, culinary arts, drafting, electrical, graphics, health careers, heating, ventilation and air conditioning, electronics, precision machine technology and welding metal fabrication.

South Shore's academic staff will also be available to explain to prospective students and their parents how they prepare students for MCAS. Information on South Shore's extensive high school will also be available.

The annual open house will also have technical and academics displays along with baking and pastry display. Refreshments will also be served. For more information on the open house, call (781) 871-4153.

'Snowy' Disney World gives visitors a December to remember

By LARRY KATZ

LAKE BUEUNA VISTA, Fla. -- I took my daughter to Walt Disney World in November and it snowed.

Twice.

Don't get the wrong idea. We were not victims of a meteorological vacation from hell. On the contrary. The fall Florida weather on our four-day, three-night jaunt was close to perfect: sunny and warm enough for swimming during the day, refreshingly cool at night. Not nearly cool enough for real snow, but just right for savoring fake snow, which is the only kind of frozen water you're likely to encounter in Orlando outside of a cold drink.

Cora, 10, and I flew south looking to experience something besides the usual Disney World attractions. We were looking for a taste of winter holiday magic Disney-style. And we found it. Starting in mid-November, Disney hauls in impressively gigantic Christmas trees, festoons the Magic Kingdom, Animal Kingdom, EPCOT and Disney-MGM Studios with holiday decorations, and unleashes a variety of seasonal spectacles.

There's another, perhaps even more exciting bonus to showing up in the weeks leading up to the Christmas vacation week crush: short lines in the theme parks and lower rates at Disney hotels. Except for Thanksgiving weekend, late fall ranks as one of the least crowded times of year at Disney World. That means you can do much more with much less stress -- and enjoy the pre-holiday festivities at the same time.

We did not have to wait more than 15 minutes for even the most popular rides; most of the time we were under way in less than five minutes. While Disney's FASTPASS (which allows you to get on an express line during a designated time period) can be a time and sanity saver, wait times were so reasonable we didn't need to use the system.

You just have to smile when you find yourself walking down on a mock street in a mock movie studio lot enjoying a mock blast of winter.

We spent most of our first full day in Disney World's biggest (in acreage) theme park, the Animal Kingdom, doing the excellent Kilimanjaro Safari ride, the "Festival of the Lion King" show and the cool "It's Tough to be a Bug" 3-D show. Disney World's newest attraction, "Finding Nemo -- the Musical," was still in its test phase and, alas, not available for viewing, but it's expected to be fully operational any day now, and the advance reviews are enthusiastic.

As daylight faded, we headed over to the Magic Kingdom for the year's first Mickey's Very Merry Christmas Party, an event that takes place every couple of days or so through Dec. 22.

Access to Mickey's Christmas bash comes at a price: $45.95 plus tax for ages 10 and over, $37.95 plus tax for ages 3-9 (with advance purchase, tickets are $6 less on select dates). Even if you've already purchased a ticket for the Magic Kingdom that day, you'll need to buy a separate ticket for the Very Merry Christmas Party.

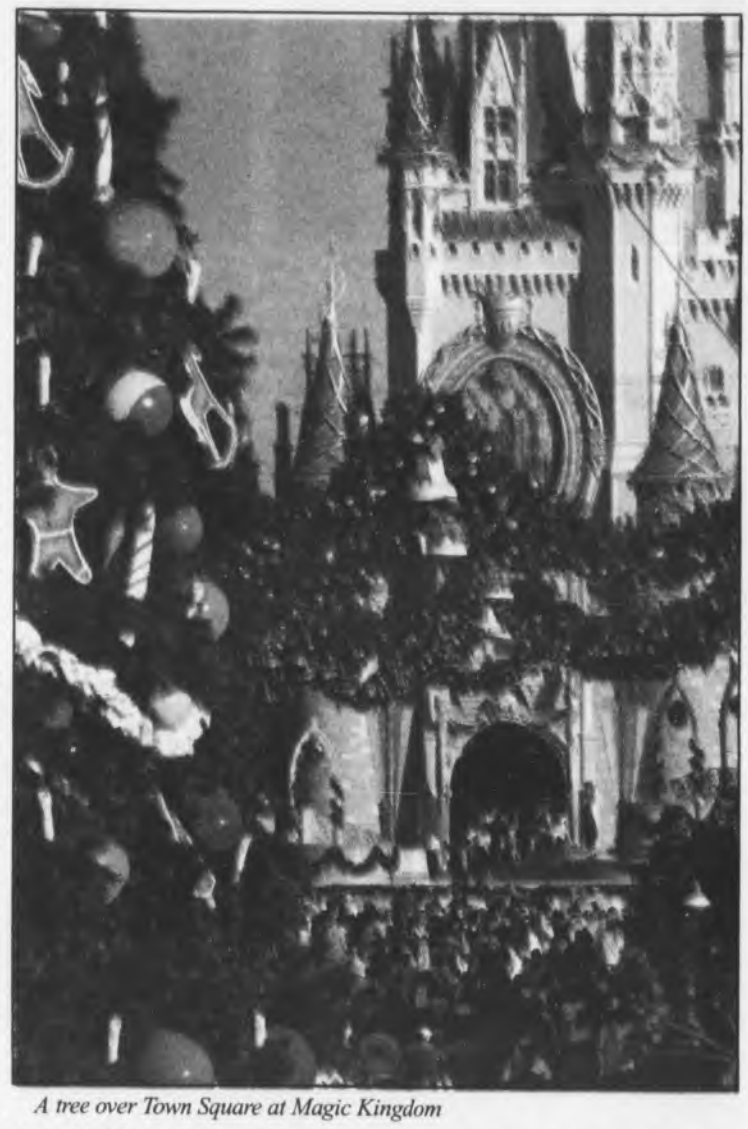
If you don't mind spending the extra bucks, it's worth it. Visitors without tickets are cleared from the park by 7 p.m. and the Magic Kingdom is yours until midnight. While lines are already short this time of year, they're much shorter during the Very Merry Christmas Party. If you want to ride a super-popular attraction such as Space Mountain 10 times in a row, you may never get a better chance.

Of course there are goings-on that take place only on Very Merry nights including two shows ("Mickey's 'Twas the Night Before Christmas" and "Celebrate the Season"), free cookies and cocoa, a chance to meet Santa Claus, and Disney character dance parties, which offer a chance to dance with some of your favorite characters and snag their autographs.

Cora told me days before we set off to Disney World that she thought collecting autographs of costume-wearing Disney employees was silly; her pronouncement was forgotten the instant she set eyes on Lilo and Stitch. I don't know why these autographs are irresistible to kids, but they are; resistance is futile.

The highlight of the evening was Mickey's Very Merry Christmas Parade. There we were amid the happy throng on old-timey Main Street watching brass bands and floats go by when snowflakes started swirling through the Florida air. Well, not snowflakes exactly. But white stuff (soapflakes perhaps?) that looked enough like the real thing to put wintry magic into the Magic Kingdom.

The following evening we headed to Disney-MGM Studios for another Christmas treat: the Osborne Family Spectacle of Dancing Lights. Have no fear, no heavy metal music is involved: This is not Ozzy Osbourne's family we're talking about. This twinkling extravaganza, including a giant Mickey Mouse light, comes courtesy of businessman Jennings Osborne, who ran up what was probably the biggest electric bill in Arkansas history in an effort to delight his daughter.



A tree over Town Square at Magic Kingdom

The Osborne Family Spectacle of Lights at Disney-MGM

Now Osborne's display is lighting up the early 20th century Streets of America backlot area of Disney-MGM. All the building facades, plus trees, wreaths and holiday figures, are covered with lights that dance, or at least seem to as they fluctuate in time to a medley of piped-in holiday tunes played loud enough to please Ozzy.

This over-the-top sensory experience reaches artificial perfection when the snowflakes fly and fill the air. You just have to smile when you find yourself walking down on a mock street in a mock movie studio lot enjoying a mock blast of winter.

No visitor to Disney World can see and do everything -- and that includes the many holiday events. We didn't have time, for example, to get to EPCOT to see "The Lights of Winter" synchronized light show or join Mickey and friends at the nightly tree-lighting ceremony or catch one of the big-name narrators telling the Christmas story at the Candlelight Processional (Neil Patrick Harris, Cuba Gooding Jr., Gary Sinise and Marlee Matlin are among those appearing in the coming weeks).

But we did see more than enough to know that Christmas spirit -- and a touch of Christmas weather -- thrives in central Florida.

Bud and Patricia Kenny and their mule, Della make their way up Hersey Street on Friday. The photo shows the couple in front of Brian and Margaret Curtis' home at 66 Hersey St. The Kenneys, who are touring the world on foot, have accepted Peter Hersey's invitation to stay on his 13-acre farm for the winter.

Walking the world

Couple and mule arrive in Hingham

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Bud and Patricia Kenny and their mule, Della, are touring the world — on foot.

The couple left their Hot Springs, Ark. home in June, 2001 to begin their amazing journey. At eight to 10 miles a day, this could take 20 or more years through all kinds of weather. Some of that time will be spent in Hingham.

The couple arrived in town last Friday, after stopping by Newburyport and other welcoming communities along the way. This was at the invitation of Peter Hersey, who read about their trip in the Globe online. The Kennys' adventure has captured widespread media attention.

After learning that the couple was looking for a place to stay for the winter, Hersey, who owns a currently unoccupied 13-acre farm on Hersey Street in Hingham, managed to connect with the couple and offered them the use of the farm. The Kennys took a tour of the property the day before Thanksgiving, liked what they saw, and accepted Hersey's invitation.

This beats sleeping in their eye-catching red wagon, which Della pulls, or a tent in cold weather.

"We're looking forward to spending the winter here," Bud said. "We've been walking around town a little bit. We visited the library on Monday and walked into town Saturday night and got good and lost. We ended up at the Snug, where we had a hamburger and a beer!"

The Kennys typically stay with people they meet in the places they visit who are generous in offering lodging to the threesome.

"Perhaps the most overwhelming and poignant thing about our travels besides the obvious – geography – is the people," Patricia said. "We are humbled daily by the kindness of total strangers. We have found people to be wonderful, kind, and generous everywhere we go."

Hingham is no exception. "We've found the folks here to be real friendly," Bud said. In fact, much to the surprise of many, the Kennys have found Massachusetts drivers to be the most courteous and the people of this state to be the most hospitable so far in their travels. "We came from the heart of Dixie and walked up to Maine, and we have felt safer in traffic in Massachusetts than we did in Maine, with some exceptions."

While the couple avoids the highway, they often make their way down well-traveled roadways such as Massachusetts Avenue into Harvard Square.

Because Hersey races antique cars cross-country, the Kennys' adventure hit a chord with him. "This is such an interesting story. They're doing something that probably a lot of us would like to do," he said.

While in Hingham, Bud — a former actor, disc jockey, newspaper reporter, night club musician, tour guide, cook, timeshare salesman, professional Santa Claus, and entrepreneur — will continue writing a book about their experiences on the road.

The couple will also fix the fence, restore some antique farm equipment, organize the tools, paint the house, perform other chores, take care of Della, and maybe even do some gardening in the Spring in exchange for Hersey's hospitality. The first order of business was preparing a stall.

"It's always about Della," Patricia said. "Everything depends on how we can accommodate her. She is the heart and motor of our journey."

The Kennys are eager to explore Hingham further. "It's a beautiful town, rich in history, and we are looking forward to being part of the community for the next five months," Bud said. "We'll walk a lot, and we have a couple of bicycles and a car in Maine that we'll bring down eventually."

The reason behind this adventure is simple — they want to do it! The Kennys look at their trip as a way to really see the world, meet the many different kinds of people who live in it, and then share what they've learned through Bud's writings. Their intention is to go slowly enough to become a part of the places through which they pass.

"I think our best days are the ones where we make a wrong turn and find that we're better off for it," Bud said.

The project is funded by contributions, sales of Bud's poetry books along the way, and donations they receive from passing a hat following poetry shows they perform on the back of the wagon, which folds down into a stage.

"Bud is looking forward to seeing what's going on in the poetry scene around here," Patricia said.

The Kennys also accept public speaking engagements. In fact, Della spent the night on the Milton town common while they were in town to give a talk.

Electricity generated from a solar panel and the wheels' rotation also powers stage lights and a sound system for these shows as well as a computer and printer.

One of the Kennys' destinations was Mermaid's Purse Farm at Prospect Harbor on the coast of Maine, where they arrived in October, 2003. They lived on that farm for three years. During that time, Bud wrote a book entitled "Footloose in America – Dixie to New England" — about the first leg of their journey and built a lighter, more efficient wagon, inscribed with the words "Footloose, touring the world on foot." Bud is currently looking for a publisher for this book.

Della looks right at home on Hersey Street. She and her owners Bud and Patricia Kenney are traveling the world on foot. Della was born in 1994 in Louisiana. She stands 16.2 hands and weighs 1800 pounds.

"This is such an interesting story. They're doing something that probably a lot of us would like to do."
— Peter Hersey

Along the way to Maine, the Kennys spent winters on farms in Indiana and New York.

After leaving Mermaid's Purse Farm, they headed for the Boston area. Their goal is to find a place to live in the winter months that will accommodate Della and provide them with employment. For instance, during their Indiana winter in 2001-2002, Bud and Della worked for a local carriage company and Patricia got a job as a waitress.

During the winter of 2002-2003, Bud picked apples at Watt's Fruit Farm near Albion, N.Y. He was the only American in the orchards. Patricia packed apples in the market. They also remodeled the inside of the 1832 Harding House farm and did the winter chores.

During the snowiest winter Albion, N.Y. had experienced, Bud restored a sleigh he found laying in a trash pile. Of course, Della pulled it through the snow.

Traveling on foot is nothing new to Bud, who left a career in broadcasting in the mid-1970s to take an 8,000-mile-long, 3-1/2-year-long tour of America with a pack pony and dog.

At one time, he ran a tour business out of Hot Springs that provided transportation to the National Park via mule-drawn trolley cars. He also opened the Poet's Loft coffeehouse and has worked with the late poet Allen Ginsberg and other well-known figures. Bud met Patricia, also a poet, at the coffeehouse, where they were married on New Year's Eve 2000.

Patricia was part of the Last Patrol in the mid-1980s. This group of veterans and supporters walked from Texas to Washington, DC to raise public awareness of the Vietnam-era POW/MIA issue. She is a former police officer, legal secretary, and executive for a Dallas trust company.

Della, now 12-years-old, was born in Southern Louisiana. She stands 16.2 hands tall and weighs 1,800 pounds. Her adoring owners say she loves to travel because she likes all the attention she gets. She also enjoys ice cream and being around children.

Once the Kennys' finish touring the United States, they plan to head for Europe, Japan, and Russia. Della will be flown to places that can't be reached on foot.

When Bud and Patricia began their journey, both at age 53, the year after marrying, they vowed to make it the "grandest honeymoon ever."

GEMs to host fundraiser

GEMS of Hope will host a Magical Movable Feast Sunday, Dec. 10, to celebrate the holidays and support three remarkable programs: the computer education for women program run by Wellspring in Hull; the career education for low income women offered by the Odwin Learning Center in Boston and primary education for children offered by Maria Alvarides School in Pici, Brazil.

This beautiful evening, hosted by Peter and Leah Taylor Roy and Mary and Don Larson will consist of cocktails and caroling at the Roy's followed by dinner, dessert and a silent auction at the home of Mary and Don Larson.

Tickets cost $75 per person and can be reserved by contacting Cindy Kuppens at 781-383-6670, or by leaving a message in her voice mail and she will return your call.

The highlight of the evening will be the fabulous jewelry featured in the Gems for GEMs Holiday Auction. Some of the items in the auction include both new and estate pieces. In addition, men's enameled coin cufflinks, a gold watch, bracelets and more will be featured. Cohasset Jewelers, as well as women involved in GEMs, have donated lovely pieces of jewelry to help ensure the evening's success.

GEMS of Hope, USA is a local not-for-profit organization of women who are committed to helping women become self-sufficient and able to support themselves and their families. All food, beverages and auction items have been donated for this event and GEMs estimates that over 95 percent of all ticket sales and auction proceeds will be donated to the three projects benefited by this event.

'The Messiah' to be performed

Second Congregational Church in Cohasset will present selections from Handel's "The Messiah" on Dec. 17. The church choir and guest soloists, accompanied by a chamber orchestra, will perform. This is an opportunity for everyone to welcome the Christmas season by enjoying this music, performed right in the community.

All are welcome to the 10 a.m. service and performance. For more information, call 781-383-0345.

Dance workshop

Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a holiday vacation dance workshop, directed by Caroline Carr, from Tuesday, Dec. 26, through Friday, Dec. 29, in the auditorium at Town Hall.

The program will be from 1 to 2:30 p.m., and is for boys and girls ages 7 and older. Basic jazz and hip-hop dance techniques will be included. Emphasis will be placed on developing a health and active lifestyle, building strength, flexibility and endurance, as well as feeling good and having fun.

Participants are encouraged to come in comfortable attire, and bring a bottle of water, snack and an open mind. Price is $75 per participant.

Registration forms are available in the foyer of Town Hall. Call the Recreation Department at 383-4109 for more information.

Christmas concerts to benefit Wellspring

The Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale have joined with Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull to present two Christmas concerts to benefit the Wellspring Diane Edson Fund, which provides direct financial aid to people in crisis. This cause is meaningful to the singers since Diane Edson was a member of Unicorn Singers for 15 years until her death. Concerts will take place at House of Prayer Lutheran Church in Hingham Saturday, Dec. 9, at 8 p.m., and First Parish in Cohasset Sunday, Dec. 10, at 4 p.m.

The concert is called "Dancing Day," and features various settings of the old Cornish carol "tomorrow shall be my dancing day…this have I done for my true love." The principal works are a suite of Christmas carol dances called Ringeltänze, which will be accompanied by piano and hand bell choir, and John Rutter's cantata, "Dancing Day." A number of familiar carols, some with hand bells and instruments to brighten the sound, will be rendered by the assembled audience and choirs.

Tickets at $15 each can be purchased at First Parish in Cohasset by calling 781-383-1100; by phone or mail from Wellspring, 814 Nantasket Ave., Hull, MA 02045/781-925-3211; from Kathy Reardon at 781-749-0162; and at Noble's in Hingham Square. Ask to be a concert sponsor at $25 to help support Wellspring. Tickets are good for either performance and will be sold at the door as available.

Readings for December 17th, Third Advent, are from the Zephaniah 3: 14-20 in which the prophet foretells a time when the judgment of Israel will be ended and the Lord will bring victory. In the reading from Philippians, 4: 4-7, Paul invites the new disciples at Philippi to exult in the Lord who is near. And in the Gospel from Luke, 3: 7-18 John the Baptist preaches repentance to all those who hear his call to Baptism.

Obituary

Richard W. Towle

Former Cohasset resident

Richard "Dick" Washburn Towle, 91, died Nov. 21, 2006, at Indian River Memorial Hospital.

Mr. Towle was born in Cohasset, the son of the late Philip Lothrop Towle and Mildred Chaffee Towle. He graduated in 1938 from the Massachusetts State College in Amherst, where he earned varsity letters on the football, hockey and baseball teams. It was at Massachusetts State College that he met his wife of 66 years, Louise. They were married in 1939, and lived in Cohasset until his retirement in 1980, at which time they moved to Vero Beach, Fla.

He served in World War II as a captain in the Army with the 20th Armored Division in Europe. Following the war, he returned to Cohasset to join his father and brother in the family business, Towle Electrical Co. Mr. Towle earned a master electrician license in Massachusetts. He was also a Master Mason in his local lodge.

He was a member of the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset, Community Church of Vero Beach, Vero Beach Country Club and a former member and four-time club champion of Cohasset Golf Club.

Husband of the late Louise Towle, who died Aug. 4, 2005, he leaves three sons, Nathaniel A. Towle and his wife, Mairo, of Bingham Farms, Mich., Stephen L. Towle and his wife, Maria, of Boca Raton, Fla., and Richard W. Towle Jr. and his wife, Patience, of Cohasset; six grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren.

A memorial service was held Nov. 27 at the Community Church of Vero Beach with the Rev. Gary Moore officiating. A service in Cohasset is planned for June 2007.

Memorial donations may be made to VNA Hospice House, 1111 36th St., Vero Beach, FL. 32960 and Community Church of Vero Beach, 1901 23rd St., Vero Beach, FL 32960.

Caroling on the Common is Dec. 16

First Parish, Unitarian Universalist Church, is sponsoring Caroling on the Common Saturday, Dec. 16. Everyone is welcome. This is a community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; carols will be familiar and simple. Because it gets dark quickly, attendees are asked to bring flashlights.

Participants will assemble at the First Parish's Parish House, 23 North Main St., between 3:45 and 4 p.m. Carolers will circuit much of the Common, serenading selected homes as weather permits. At approximately at 5 p.m., everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies. Cookie donations will be appreciated.

Everyone is asked to bring a pair of socks – or two or three – that will be donated to Boston Health Care for the Homeless. Socks should be white cotton; both men's and women's sizes are welcome.

Join friends for this annual old-fashioned holiday get-together. For more information, call Sandy Bailey at First Parish at 383-1100 or Woody Chittick at 383-3215.

Feeding a year-round demand

Editor's note: This is one in a series of articles as part of our annual Gifts of Hope campaign, focusing on assistance needed at local food pantries.

By Kathleen Zigmont
CORRESPONDENT

Hunger is not confined only to the poor, jobless or city dwellers. It could impact your neighbors the next street over or the child who sits next to yours in school.

"In our town we have some people very well off and we also have a whole society that is on the edge," said Carol Ferguson of the Pembroke Food Pantry at the Pembroke Community Center.

"They are people who are just barely making it and an extra, unexpected expense can be enough to keep them from being able to put enough food on the table," she said. Ferguson said she has seen the need for food increase in Pembroke.

"Every week we see someone new," said Ferguson, who said the Pembroke Food Pantry is feeding about 140 families right now, with that number increasing every week.

According to the Greater Boston Food Bank, it helps local food banks and pantries to distribute about 18,693 pounds of food a year in Marshfield; 12,948 pounds in Carver; 62,755 pounds in Kingston and about 48,906 pounds in Rockland. According to the Greater Boston Food Bank, both Plymouth and Quincy have higher concentrations of hunger than other area communities.

Ferguson said that in Pembroke, residents take care of each other.

"Pembroke is a very giving town. People here know they have neighbors in need and take of their own. We have several churches and schools in town, along with the firemen and police, who are always bringing food to us, so we are very lucky here," she said.

Barbara Itz of the Hanover Food Pantry at the First Baptist Church, 580 Webster St., said the need in that town is picking up, along with donations.

"Everyone wants to help at this time of year. We had a lot of Thanksgiving donations and we hope the donations keep up throughout the year," she said.

Itz said the spirit of the season generally keeps the food pantry shelves stocked through the early part of the new year, but the hungry then tend to be forgotten the rest of the year.

"We really run into trouble during the spring and summer months. We hope people don't forget to give all throughout the year," she said.

Itz said the Hanover Food Pantry is particularly in need of peanut butter and jelly, pastas, soups and canned fruits and vegetables. Gift certificates to area groceries for meats and other fresh food are also very welcome.

A cold winter combined with high heating costs are expected to continue to tax the resources of many area residents who live paycheck to paycheck, according to many who work in emergency food programs.

"We're facing a major 'heat or eat' dilemma," said Ellen Parker of Project Bread, which helps provide resources to many area food pantries.

"This means that this winter families and seniors will have to choose between turning on the heat and buying food for dinner," she said.

"It takes so little to put people over the edge, especially in winter," said Bob Short, who along with his wife Charlotte, cooks at St. Patrick's Table in Wareham. "I'm glad we can help out. I really am. It breaks our hearts to see the people. Sometimes it feels like, but for a quirk of fate, it could have been us."

To donate to the Gifts of Hope, simply make your check payable to one of the food pantries listed and forward it to Anne Rodwell, CNC/South, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050. All donations will be published in the paper, unless the donor requests otherwise.

Lining up to see the Rockettes

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The Radio City Rockettes are seen by more than 2.1 million people annually thanks to their starring role in "The Radio City Christmas Spectacular" at New York's Radio City Music Hall and in many other U.S. cities. If the 2004 Boston debut of "The Radio City Christmas Spectacular" — when more than 200,000 theatergoers took in the famous high-kicking troupe — is any indication, then local audiences just may push that attendance even higher when the Rockettes begin a return engagement at Boston's Wang Theatre this Thursday.

A fixture on the holiday calendar in New York since 1933, the Christmas Spectacular — which travels in 10 trailer trucks — is aptly named. A cast and crew of some 100 people — not to mention three sheep, two camels and one donkey — see to it that teddy bears dance, wooden soldiers come alive, snowmen shimmy, reindeer fly, elves both wrap and rap, and the Rockettes round out the show with their patented brand of dazzling dance moves first demonstrated 81 years ago. The "Missouri Rockets" were first seen in St. Louis before being renamed and relocated to Radio City Music Hall in 1932.

Since then, more than 3,000 women have danced as Rockettes, forming a perfect line of 36 performers who, even in the most intricate of routines, move as one. Everything - from costumes to kicks - is perfectly alike with the illusion of uniform height maintained by putting the tallest dancers at the center and decreasing the height with the shortest women at either end.

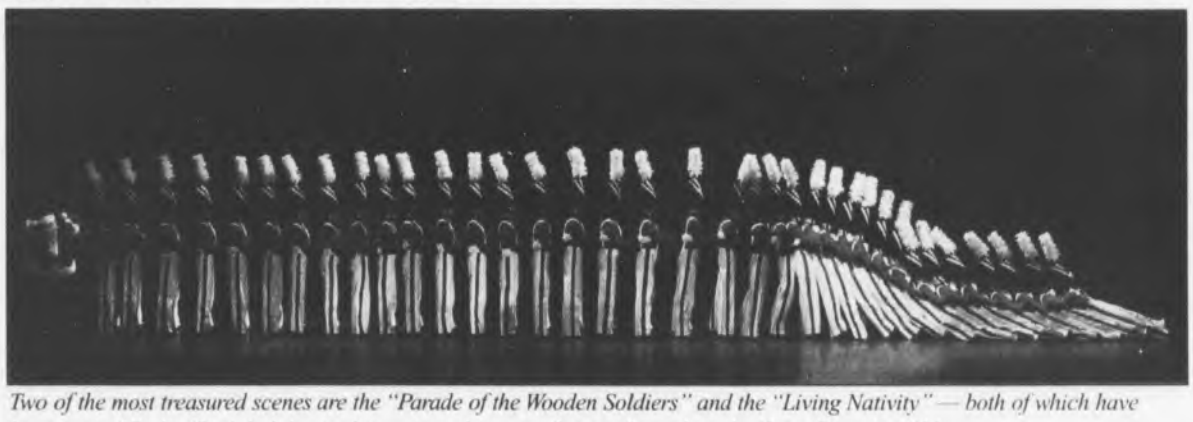
"What sets being a Rockette apart from everything else is that you're part of a legacy. You are not just an individual, you are part of the most famous precision dance troupe in the world," explained Tina Moya at the Wang Theatre recently when she and fellow dancer Traci Reszetylo donned their Christmas Spectacular costumes to meet with the press. "There is an innate pride in being a Rockette."

Moya has been a Rockette since 2001 and performed the Christmas Spectacular in Boston two years ago and also in several other major cities. A San Gabriel, Ca., native and a graduate of Santa Clara University with a bachelor's degree in theater and dance, Moya has toured with "Cats" and also served as an assistant director on the Andrew Lloyd Weber musical.

"The ballet training I took gave me the discipline to become a Rockette. I remember watching them on the Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade and thinking that what they did in terms of precision dancing was just masterful. I know now how special it is to be a Rockette. Even at the end of a long rehearsal when I am completely exhausted I still feel joy about what I do for a living."

The Rockettes perform the traditional kick during The Radio City Christmas Spectacular held at the Wang Theatre through Dec. 31.

A fixture on the holiday calendar in New York since 1933, the Christmas Spectacular — which travels in 10 trailer trucks — is aptly named.



Two of the most treasured scenes are the "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" and the "Living Nativity" — both of which have been part of Radio City's holiday tradition since they were first performed on the Great Stage in 1933.

Pittsburgh-born Reszetylo couldn't agree more with her linemate.

"The truth of the matter is that we do get tired. We rehearse a lot and we perform several shows each day, but we also get an adrenaline rush from the audience that is just unbelievable. People always remember the Rockettes when they see them for the first time, and when they come back again they always bring someone new with them to share that experience," says Reszetylo, a Rockette since 2002, who shares her audience's enthusiasm.

"Before each performance, we can feel the chills and excitement backstage, too. The entire production fills people with joy. It is also wholesome entertainment that appeals to grandparents and grandchildren and everyone in between," explains Reszetylo, whose own favorite number is one that is new this year. "'The 12 Days of Christmas' opens with the most amazing lighting on just our legs and then we do the most incredible 7 1/2-minute tap dance. We haven't performed anything like it in years. It's just thrilling."

("The Radio City Christmas Spectacular" will be at the Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont Street, Boston, through Dec. 31. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.citicenter.org.)

Birth of a religion

"The Nativity Story" (B-)

James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Are you ready for "The Passion of the Christ: The Prequel"?

The self-explanatory "The Nativity Story" arrives at local theaters in time for the holidays, and it's a sweet, live-action version of an elementary-school Christmas pageant.

The big story behind the scenes is that Australian Keisha Castle-Hughes ("Whale Rider"), this film's blessed virgin, is pregnant in real life at age 16, which is the kind of publicity money can't buy. As Mary, she is young, strong and vulnerable, but her performance is a bit of a blank slate.

The action begins with a paranoid Herod (Ciaran Hinds) ordering the murder of all Hebrew first-born male children to thwart a prophecy that a king will be born to take his place.

In flashbacks, Mary's Aunt Elizabeth (Shohreh Aghdashloo) conceives a child at an advanced age, a child who will become Christ's forerunner John the Baptist, and Mary is visited by the semitransparent, wingless angel, Gabriel (Alexander Siddig). Joseph (Oscar Isaac), the industrious and handsome young carpenter, lives conveniently across the way from Mary.

Joseph (Oscar Isaac) leads the way as he and Mary (Keisha Castle-Hughes) travel toward Jerusalem.

Meanwhile, back in Persia, the three magi — Melchior (Nadim Sawalha), Balthasar (Eriq Ebouaney) and Shemp, I mean, Gaspar (Stefan Kalipha) — seem more like the Three Stooges than wise men. They're watching three heavenly bodies align and bickering over whether to mount a camel-borne expedition to the East.

The film, directed by Catherine Hardwicke ("13," "Lords of Dogtown"), has less in common with Pier Paolo Pasolini's neorealistic landmark "The Gospel According to St. Matthew" (1964), Martin Scorsese's controversial "The Last Temptation of Christ" (1988) and Mel Gibson's gore-splattered "The Passion of the Christ" (2004) than with the blandly earnest Hollywood biblical epics of the 1950s and '60s. Screenwriter Mike Rich ("Finding Forrester") followed the leads provided in the Gospels of Matthew and Luke. For her part, Hardwicke — who shot in southern Italy, where both Pasolini and Gibson preceded her — brings a refreshingly enlightened view of women's roles and details the lives of her biblical characters. Mary's mother Anna (Hiam Abbass), for example, makes and sells designer goat cheese, which she rolls in thyme, in the village.

The dialogue is in English and Hebrew and advances the plot but does not reveal much about characters' inner selves. The film's climax relies too heavily on canned, choral music. The first of the expected offspring of "The Passion," "The Nativity Story" is an After-Sunday-School Special.

Rated PG. "The Nativity Story" contains violence.

Village changes could be back this spring

EDC has its eye on downtown zoning

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A cluster of Village zoning articles failed at the Special Town Meeting but members of the Economic Development Committee have not let that stand their way. To that end, the committee is already back in the saddle, working with developers and attorneys to craft language that will hopefully pass when brought forward to Town Meeting this spring.

The EDC met Wednesday and invited local developers, who are either stakeholders in Village development or who have been through a permitting process in town, to help make suggestions as to what could have been done better or what they would like to see included in the articles going forward. Together, the group hopes to be able to answer every question residents might have about the zoning changes, and ensure articles achieve what the town wants.

Chairman Peter Brown said even though time is limited, he is confident the articles will be "ready for primetime" by the Annual Town Meeting, scheduled for March 31. He said the EDC worked very hard when it was advocating for Town Meeting to pass a bylaw to establish a new Transit Oriented District at the 2006 Annual Town Meeting. He said he believes a similar approach can be taken for the village articles, now that the committee has a little more time.

"I hope we get the same positive reaction we did the last time. We did something that has never been done in town before," he said, as zoning articles typically do not receive as much support as the TOD did. He said by providing the same level of information this time around, he hopes more residents will vote in the affirmative.

Scituate resident John Tedeschi, formerly of Cohasset, filed the five citizens' petitions, which were up for consideration at the Special Town Meeting. Articles 23 through 26 were presented as

Town to be awarded state funds

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Thanks to the state's Transit Oriented Development bond program, Cohasset's MBTA station on Route 3A will be pedestrian friendly.

On Dec. 8, the Romney Administration awarded $5.9 million to support transit-oriented development projects around the state, of which $225,000 was awarded to Cohasset. While the town had not been formally notified with a letter from the state at the time the Mariner went to press, Greenbush liaisons Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber said they received a call about the award Friday.

"This is terrific news for the town. It's been a lot of work, but when this project gets done, we'll have sidewalks from Scituate to Hingham. That's a huge deal," said Brennan.

The MBTA did not include sidewalks to and from the Greenbush station in its design, and the town has been working hard to secure funding to ensure the station will be pedestrian accessible. Brennan explained the town's Greenbush office applied for $325,000 in 2005, but the submission was declined "for a variety of reasons." However, he said sometimes persistence pays off and after some streamlin-

Mexican restaurant closes doors in Cohasset

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset residents with an appetite for fajitas and margaritas must now travel south (or north) of the border to get a Mexican food fix. After roughly one year in business, Acapulcos restaurant has closed its doors.

Located in the former KoKo Island building on Route 3A, the restaurant brought new life to the site, which had been lacking since the Asian restaurant's departure in 2004. With the renovation of the KoKo Island site also came the renovation of the adjacent Hair Affair building, which was turned into a Dunkin' Donuts with a drive-thru.

Michael Tack, a representative for the Nauset Group, which owns the site, said restaurant owner David Brambila closed his doors the Sunday after Thanksgiving. Brambila leases the space and is still under agreement with the Nauset Group and is therefore looking for another restaurant to buy the lease for the space.

"He opened two other restaurants in Quincy and Weymouth after opening in Cohasset," said Tack, adding Brambila is very successful and wasn't seeing the numbers he expected in Cohasset. Most of the business was being done on Thursday through Sunday and the key to being profitable is having good business Monday through Wednesday as well. He added the restaurants have been more successful in areas that are more densely populated and he wishes Brambila well.

POLICE/FIRE BEAT

Ultralight spirals and disappears; nine-hour search ensued

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset fire and police are still wondering what happened to the pilot and an ultralight plane that witnesses saw spiraling below the tree line on Saturday afternoon.

Once the reports came in from three people at Hingham Lumber off Route 3A, emergency personnel went into action. In addition to Cohasset, the State Police Air Wing, regional police help through Metro-LEC (Metropolitan Law Enforcement Council), and mutual aid from area towns all helped in the search that got under way about 3:30 p.m. and was called off after midnight.

Police Chief James Hussey said witnesses, who initially heard it overhead, said they thought the plane might have crashed because they heard the motor cutout. They also described the ultralight as having a parachute open out the back.

A command post was set up near Graham Waste off Crocker Lane. And what followed was an extensive ground search that included both sides of Forest Avenue, parts of Wheelwright Park, the Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary, Bancroft Bird Sanctuary, and areas along North Main Street and Route 3A. The State Police Air Wing used infrared sensors and floodlights.

Acting Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Chief Hussey called off the search after nearly nine hours. No one has been reported missing. Police also checked with ultralight flying clubs and local airports. Hingham and Hull also provided fire units and Scituate covered Cohasset Fire station.

Twelve Cohasset firefighters took part in the search as well as four from Hingham and two from Hull; they were joined by 25 police officers – so there were 40 people on the ground, not counting command staff, Silvia said. Red Cross provided support for the searchers.

"Some of the terrain was difficult, especially west of Forest Avenue and the area of Wheelwright Park and the Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary," Silvia said. "But we received no calls that someone was overdue or that someone landed and walked way."

Hussey said a bulletin was put out on the 10 o'clock news. WATD radio was also providing updates.

A caller did report seeing a light aircraft head out along the railroad tracks, Hussey said.

"Based on lack of any further information and no missing person reports, we called off the search after what we thought was a thorough search of the area," Hussey said. "When I went home that night I felt as though we had done our due diligence that if someone was out there who needed to be rescued, we would have found them."

"When I went home that night I felt as though we had done our due diligence that if someone was out there who needed to be rescued, we would have found them."

— Police Chief James Hussey

Both Hussey and Silvia said they still hope the pilot would call and let them know he landed and made it home safely.

According to Internet sites, the ultralight movement grew out of the sport of hang gliding in the 1970s, when people started to put small engines on foot-launched hang gliders. The vehicles developed, became faster, more maneuverable, and landing gear were added.

Federal regulations put ultralight vehicles in two categories: powered and unpowered. To be considered an ultralight vehicle, a hang glider must weigh less than 155 pounds; while a powered vehicle must weigh less than 254 pounds; is limited to 5 U.S. gallons of fuel; must have a maximum speed of not more than 55 knots; and must have a poweroff stall speed of no more than 24 knots. Both powered and unpowered ultralight vehicles are limited to a single occupant.

Baby delivered

Firefighter/paramedics don't often get a standing ovation when they bring a patient to South Shore Hospital.

But that is what happened last Thursday night (Dec. 7) when Cohasset paramedics Laura Morrison and John Dockray delivered a healthy baby girl in the ambulance en route to the hospital.

Acting Fire Chief Robert Silvia said Cohasset ambulance responded to a 9-1-1 mutual aid call from Scituate, whose ambulance was out of town on another call.

"They picked up the mother and while en route the baby decided it was time," Silvia said. "Both (Morrison and Dockray) were beaming when they came in Friday morning. It was the first time in their careers they walked into South Shore Hospital to a standing ovation."

The baby, whose name is Hannah, lives on Turner Road in Scituate.

The fire department is ordering a decal featuring a stork with a pink blanket in its beak to put on the ambulance, Silvia said. The last time the Cohasset ambulance delivered a baby en route was about 11 years ago, he said.

Carbon monoxide

The fire department responded to a report of a carbon monoxide detector going off in a home on Reservoir Road last Thursday. The incident caused by a malfunctioning oil burner.

Acting Fire Chief Robert Silvia said the carbon monoxide detectors the firefighters use to check for the gas registered some readings. They evacuated the home and paramedics evaluated the two residents. The home was ventilated and oil burner was shut down pending repairs.

Chief Silvia said carbon monoxide detectors should be installed on every floor that a family spends time including the basement. Detectors should be installed within 10 feet of every bedroom.

Carbon monoxide is a highly toxic gas produced when fuel (kerosene, oil, coal, petroleum gas, and wood) is burned. It is colorless, odorless and tasteless — which makes it very hard to detect.

Water lines

A waterline break on Beechwood Street last Thursday (Dec. 7) resulted in the street having to be shut down until repairs could be made.

The mishap occurred near where Highland Estates is being constructed not far from the railroad tracks and just east of where Beechwood splits with Norman Todd Road.

Two water services were disrupted; the one to the condominiums near the site and to a private home.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia said the incident was a concern to the fire department because shutting the road could have delayed the fire department's response to calls on Beechwood and Route 3A.

Cleanup of harbor, coastal waters

Process to start on seeking 'No Discharge Area' status

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

If the Harbor Health Committee has its way, then no boats would be able to discharge their sewage into Cohasset Harbor or within a certain distance along the Cohasset coast.

The committee is seeking to have the Cohasset coast designated as a "No Discharge Area," joining eight other NDAs including the coastal waters of Plymouth, Kingston, and Duxbury.

An NDA is a designated body of water in which the discharge of all boat sewage, even if treated, is prohibited, according to Coastal Zone Management, a state agency whose mission is to balance the impacts of human activity with the protection of coastal and marine resources.

Jason Burtner of CZM joined Russell Bonetti and Karen Quigley of the Harbor Health Committee at last week's Selectmen's meeting.

As it stands now, boats with certain types of sanitation devices can discharge treated effluent in coastal waters. Federal law prohibits the discharge of untreated sewage from vessels within all navigable waters of the U.S.

Type I and II Marine Sanitation Devices (MSDs) can be discharged directly to the harbor. Cohasset Harbor suffers from bacterial pollution, which has resulted in the Harbor not meeting state water quality standards, beach closures, and shellfish bed closures. An NDA is one of the tools available to help municipalities address impacts from bacterial contamination, Burtner explained this week.

Burtner said CZM is currently working with both Marshfield and Scituate, which are supportive of seeking NDA designations.

Bonetti said the designation would be a win-win because there is no cost and a potential source of pollution would be eliminated.

"We are hoping that this will encourage greater use of the pump-out boat that the harbormaster has," he said.

CZM's role in the NDA process is to assist in the writing of the application, provide resources and information to interested communities, coordinate with Environmental Protection Agency, and help to ensure that the proposed NDA has adequate pumpout facilities.

Bonetti said Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons, whom the Harbor Health Committee said supports the efforts for an NDA designation, pumps out three to four boats a week and there was an obvious need to increase those numbers.

Burtner explained the NDA application process is fairly involved. He said an aggressive education and outreach campaign delineating the no-discharge zone would be launched. If implemented, the harbormaster and the Environmental Protection Agency would have enforcement powers.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said a public hearing on the issue was needed to hear any reasons for "not doing it."

"We are philosophically with you," he said.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil warned the town "should not fix something that is not broken." He said the number of boaters that would be affected needed to be determined.

Burtner aid the nomination process, which takes 16-18 months, would be inclusive and take concerns into consideration.

Selectmen voted to authorize the Harbor Heath Committee to proceed with the process. They also asked that the Harbor Committee join in this effort. The next step is to solicit support from appropriate entities both public and private, including the Board of Health, Conservation Commission, lobstermen, Yacht Club, and Cohasset Harbor Marina.

Public hearings will be conducted to educate people about the NDA designation and to address any citizen concerns. Once the process has been completed, the issue will be brought before Selectmen for final approval, the Harbor Health Committee said.

Police/Fire Beat

Ceiling collapse

At about 8:45 p.m., Sunday (Dec. 10), the fire and police departments responded to a call about a ceiling collapse in a third-floor apartment in a building on Pleasant Street.

"It was a water leak issue and it appeared to have been leaking for a while and the ceiling gave way," Police Chief James Hussey said. "We called Bob Egan to take the ball from there."

Building Commissioner Robert Egan said a roof leak was the cause of the problem, not plumbing. The water saturated the sheetrock which then collapsed.

Fire Capt. Paul Bilodeau who is also a licensed electrician, took care of the wiring in the vicinity and told the residents not to turn the power on to that area of the home. No one was injured in the incident.

Egan said roofers were on the scene Tuesday to make repairs.

Suspended license

A 35-year-old woman is being summonsed to court for driving on a suspended license following a traffic stop at Depot Court and N. Main Street last week. Police are stepping up patrols in the village area following a recent motor vehicle/pedestrian accident and another near miss. In this case, the motorist "rolled through" the stop sign at the top of Depot Court and was stopped by an officer. In addition to having a suspended license, her car was also unregistered. Her car was towed.

Chief Hussey explained the stop sign at Depot Court is actually before the crosswalk; some motorists are not stopping that that point but farther up, past the crosswalk.

Gas drive-off

Another area resident apparently mistakenly drove off without paying for gas last week. Police got a call at just after 4 p.m., Tuesday (Dec. 5), about a larceny of gasoline. An officer stopped the car, talked with the motorist, who said it was a mistake and returned to pay for the gas, Chief Hussey said.

Illegal dumping

A man who was recently arrested on an unrelated matter was identified as dumping trash from his van into a private dumpster.

Police said the man's car had just been released to him. The individual was contacted and police had him retrieve his trash from the dumpster.

Suspicious vehicles

Over the past two weeks police have talked with parents of youngsters who have reported suspicious vehicles. In the first case, two girls said there was a suspicious dark-colored SUV in their neighborhood and in the second case a 10-year-old youngster told his mother about a car parked with someone inside.

Chief Hussey said he encourages parents to report any incident. Both these reports were investigated and officers are keeping an eye out.

But at this point, police do not think there was any danger, Hussey said.

Shoplifting

A 53-year-old Scituate woman is being summonsed to court for shoplifting at Shaw's, police said. The incident occurred at about 12:53 p.m., Friday (Dec. 8). Police received a radio call reporting shoplifting at Shaw's, which had the woman, detained, Chief Hussey said. The store manager reported store surveillance cameras had allegedly filmed the woman stealing in previous incidents but, this time, the store was able to actually catch her and get her identification.

The total value of items she allegedly stole in this incident was $200. Hussey explained she was actually making some purchases and there were other items that she had not paid for. Shaw's is pursing charges and is seeking no trespass order to keep her out of Shaw's supermarkets.

Two minor MVAs

Over the past week, police responded to two minor motor vehicle accidents, both involving parked cars.

In the first incident that occurred Saturday (Dec. 9) at 4:20 p.m., a woman driving a 2006 Chevrolet Trailblazer was backing out of a driveway in town and hit a 1999 Landrover that was parked on the opposite side of the road, diagonally across from the end of the driveway. Somehow when she backed out to turn, she struck the vehicle. As it turns out she was driving on an out-of-state license and was cited for unlicensed operation. State law requires all residents of the state to be licensed in Massachusetts.

At 4:51 p.m., that same afternoon, a 1996 Ford Taurus struck a 1998 Toyota that was parked on N. Main Street near the Community Center. The operator of the Taurus was driving too close to the parked vehicle and the side mirrors hit one another, Chief Hussey said. The motorist was cited for failure to use care while operating.

Stop & Shop incident

A shoplifting incident that occurred last week at Stop & Shop in which the suspect filled a basket up with products and fled the store is being investigated, Chief Hussey said.

Pedestrian safety a top priority for police

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Residents may have noticed an increase in police presence in the Village this week. In the wake of an accident that sent and elderly pedestrian to the hospital Nov. 27, Police Chief James Hussey has beefed up patrols in the area, in an effort to remind motorists to keep speed down and drive with caution.

The department's safety officer Sgt. Bill Quigley is also gathering information on the safety standards used by other towns when it comes to signage, crosswalks and sidewalks in their downtown areas, to see what kinds of safety measures Cohasset might want to implement downtown.

"When we have compiled our research, we'll write up a recommendation," said Hussey. He said any recommendations would be given to Town Manager Bill Griffin.

Griffin asked Hussey to collect the information based both on concerns brought forward as a result of the accident and those from senior citizens in the community. On Nov. 27 an elderly motorist making a left turn onto Depot Court from South Main Street hit an elderly pedestrian who was in the crosswalk. The pedestrian was heading in the direction of the South Shore Community Center where the Council on Elder Affairs is located.

After the accident, Director of the CEA Linda Elworthy immediately invited Hussey to attend Monday's (Dec. 11) meeting of the Elder Affairs Board to discuss what safety measures should be taken to ensure another accident does not occur in the Village. She said many seniors cross the street at the intersection of Depot Court and South Main Street and they need to feel safe doing so. She added the Community Center is a busy place and also houses a nursery school.

"People need to be very cautious."
— Police Chief James Hussey on Village traffic

In an interview after the Monday meeting Elworthy said she was very pleased with the steps being taken by the police department. "The chief is all over it," she said, adding increasing patrols and looking at ways to increase visibility of the crosswalks and make the speed limit signs more visible will all be a great help.

Elworthy added the pedestrian who was involved in the accident is currently rehabilitating at Cohasset Knoll. "She is in very good spirits," Elworthy said, as she visited with her earlier this week, but added her knee was crushed, her lower leg was injured, and recovery will be a long process.

Hussey said the area where the accident occurred has been highly patrolled this week as it has been an area of concern for some time. He said coming up from Depot Court in the direction of the Village, motorists who are taking a right onto South Main Street often do not stop at the stop sign, which is before the crosswalk. He said due to the limited visibility of cars coming from North Main Street into the Village, "people tend to roll through the stop sign" at the top of Depot Court and come to a stop farther up, where they can see oncoming traffic to their left. That causes motorists to ignore pedestrians on their right side who want to cross the street. State law requires motorists stop and yield to pedestrians who are either in a crosswalk or about to enter a crosswalk. "We need to change people's habits," he said. Hussey added officers gave out roughly 50 verbal warnings to motorists who rolled through the stop sign this week.

The Village has some of the narrowest streets in town.

"People need to be very cautious," said Hussey, adding the speed limit in the Village is 20 mph. He noted two days after the accident, another woman reported almost being hit in a crosswalk in the Village. She provided the license plate of the offending vehicle and police spoke to that driver about being more careful. The area can become very congested "and it is in everyone's best interest to slow it down," Hussey said.

Hussey said Sgt. Quigley will be collecting information this week and will provide recommendations to Griffin no later than next week. Enforcement efforts by officers on patrol around the Village will continue.

Adiós Acapulcos

Tack said due to the buildout completed by Brambila, it should not be hard finding a new business to take the place of Acapulcos. "He has a number of good prospects," said Tack, adding Brambila put in an entire new kitchen with top-of-the-line appliances and central air, which should be very appealing for restaurant owners. Tack said he anticipates the town will have a new restaurant within the next couple of months.

"He opened two other restaurants in Quincy and Weymouth after opening in Cohasset."
— Michael Tack, Nauset Group

The opening of Acapulcos brought to an end roughly one year of Planning Board and ZBA hearings, some of which dragged on into the wee hours of the morning. The Nauset Group purchased both the KoKo Island restaurant and the adjacent Hair Affair building with the intention of renovating then conjoining the two. Plans to turn the former Hair-Affair building into a Dunkin' Donuts with a drive-thru caused major concern with Fairoaks Lane neighbors, who worried it would cause noise pollution and an increase in traffic. Ultimately, plans for both were given the go-ahead and both opened their doors just over one year ago.

Acapulcos applied for and was granted a full liquor license just prior to its opening. The Board of Selectmen renewed that license in November. Town Manager Bill Griffin said having the license allows the owner the opportunity to transfer it to another business with the selectmen's approval.

Left turns out of the Dunkin' Donuts parking lot are currently prohibited between the hours of 7 and 9:30 a.m. Due to the fact that traffic is heavy on Route 3A during the morning commute and attempting to make a left turn to head south can be very dangerous, when the Planning Board approved site plans for the reconfigured parking lot, it made the condition motorists would only be allowed to continue north after purchasing their coffee and donuts.

To help further enforce the condition, Police Chief James Hussey said he will petition the Massachusetts Highway Department to post its own sign outlining the regulation. Route 3A is a state highway, and although the town may enforce the regulation, Hussey said he would like to see it come from the state as well. "I would prefer for them to put it (signage) up. It's their roadway," he said.

In a letter sent to Hussey Nov. 27, the Planning Board said it had voted unanimously to support his petitioning of MHD for a new sign. The letter stated at its Nov. 15 meeting, "Board members iterated their appreciation and support of your ongoing efforts to make Route 3A a safer major byway in the town, and look forward to continuing to work with you and the Department on these important matters."

Nomination papers available Jan. 3

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election for 2007 will be available Wednesday, Jan. 3, at the Town Clerk's office.

The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 15.

In order to hold an elected office, you must be a registered voter of the town. It is important to note that you are not officially running for office until you take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies your signatures.

Positions available for the 2007 town election include: Selectmen - two three-year positions; School Committee - two three-year positions; Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library - three three-year positions; Assessor - one three-year position; Board of Health - one three-year position; Cohasset Housing Authority - one five-year position; Planning Board - one five-year position; Recreation Commission - three five-year positions; Sewer Commission - one three-year position and Water Commission - one three-year position.

Friday, March 9, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting which will be held Saturday, March 31, and for the Annual Town Election which will be held Saturday, April 7.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

FESTIVE TIME

Hello Cohasset, how are you all doing? The holiday spirit is here across the board and is really getting fun. (OK fine, a tiny bit stressful keep trying to bring in the fun.) It is so nice to write about some wonderful community events that keep the spirit of the holidays alive. Regardless of what holiday you celebrate, December is an upbeat, crazy whirlwind some of the time but very festive month. Make sure to enjoy with all around you.

NOMINATED

Congressman Bill Delahunt has nominated 29 local students for admission next year to US Service Academies and one of those students who was nominated is Cohasset's own Timothy Toomey. Dozens of prospective nominees were reviewed by Delahunt's Congressional Service Academy Selection Committee, comprised of eight distinguished area residents. Receiving a nomination completes the first stage of the Service Academy process. The applications of these students have been forwarded, without preferential listing, to the respective Academies, which make the final appointment decisions. Timothy, you should be very proud of yourself for this nomination as I know your family and friends and now, the town of Cohasset are. We are all going to wait with you on hearing the final decision.

BASEBALL!

Looking for something to do tonight? The first Home Boy's Basketball game is happening tonight at the Cohasset Middle High School gym. Junior Varsity will play at 5 pm followed by Varsity at 6:30 pm. Both teams will be playing against East Bridgewater and support from the fans is always a huge plus. All kids who wear their Recreation or Travel Basketball shirt or, any Cohasset shirt will be admitted free of charge, compliments of the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club. So gather the family, all your Cohasset shirts and come on down. Oh yes, concessions will be run by Cohasset Girls' Softball with a drink and snack for all.

SPECIAL TWIST

"Joslin High Hopes Gala featured a special 'Twist'!" — Cohasset's Suzy Doherty strummed a few bars on a Jon Bon Jovi-signed Fender guitar during the live auction component of Joslin Diabetes Center's High Hopes Gala. The official "King of Twist," Chubby Checker, entertained guests at Joslin's 7thAnnual High Hopes Gala held in Boston this past Nov. 18 at the Westin Copley Place.

Dr. Mallika Marshall, medical reporter for CBS4 News and anchor of the station's regular medical series Healthwatch, served as emcee for the evening. More than $600,000 was raised via festivities that included a silent auction during the cocktail reception; a fabulous dinner; and a live auction with Billy Costa from KISS-108 FM's Matty in the Morning Show and NECN's TV Diner. Gala Chair J. Christine Wilson, vice chairman of the Board of Trustees at Joslin, was joined by more than 650 people as Joslin honored the Massachusetts Lions Eye Research Fund and its 40 years of continued dedication to Joslin Diabetes Center and research into preserving eyesight.

CAROLING

Come join in for this community-wide tradition sponsored by First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset. This Saturday, Dec.16th at 3:45 pm will be the Annual Caroling On the Common and you and your family are encouraged to join. Gather at the Parish House between 3:45 and 4 p.m., carol around the Common, and return by 5 p.m. for cocoa, cider, and cookies. Please bring your flashlights and some cookies to share. New this year is a sock collection for the Boston Health Care for the Homeless. Please bring two or three pairs of socks (new, white cotton, men's and women's sizes). This promises to be a wonderful time to put one and all in the Spirit of Christmas.

VILLAGE STROLL

The Cohasset Village Stroll is this Saturday, Dec. 16th from 4-7 p.m.. Merchants in the Village (South Main Street, James Brook Crossing, Art Center and Cindy Vallino's new photography gallery on Ripley Road — where Springbrook Toys used to be) will each offer special holiday activities and cheer! The Art Center will be offering snacks, hot cider, and the Cohasset Middle/High School Jazz Combo, under the direction of Stephanie Hoskin. This is such a wonderful way to enjoy the holidays within our community regardless of which holiday(s) are celebrated by your family. Family, friends and good times, try to come down and enjoy.

CASINO NIGHT

Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters annual casino night fundraiser will be Saturday night, Jan. 20 at Atlantica. The Boosters will "raise the stakes" from 8 p.m. until midnight! Tickets are $25 each and available from Lyn Previte (9723). There will be blackjack, roulette, poker and other games of chance. Atlantica will serve hors d'oeuvres and there will be a cash bar. It will be a great fun night out, even if you are not a gambler. Space is limited at the event, so try to purchase ahead before the upcoming holidays! This will be the booster's only 2007 fundraiser and the group needs the support of the entire community! The money raised from this event will go directly to funding the JV lacrosse program at the high school for both boys and girls. This event is critical to provide playing opportunities to younger players and the continued success and growth of the entire lacrosse program. Cohasset Lacrosse has numerous players at the collegiate level-probably more so than any other varsity sport. Our recent success (Cohasset boys were 2006 state champions and looking to repeat) has much to do with the continuing support from our feeder programs and the financial support from the entire Cohasset community. Any lacrosse parent looking to help out with this event, please call Lynn Previte!

PROM DRESSES

The Cohasset Consignment Shop will be collecting fabulous dresses during January and February to be sold at the Pre Prom event being held in early March. If you have a dress or two that will fill this need, call 781-383-0687 to make an appointment to donate or consign your gently worn prom or prom-like dress.

TREE PICKUP

Here is a wonderful program that the Cohasset Middle School Student Council and Project Safeguard are sponsoring. Looking to have your holiday tree picked up and taken away? Even better, the cost that you pay to have this much wanted and needed chore taken care of will benefit Project Safeguard. The cost per tree is $20 with Senior Citizens paying $15. Call 781-383-2492 and leave a message with your address, phone number and any special instructions. Make sure to call by 8 pm on Jan. 5. Have a check made out to Project Safeguard with your tree and it will be picked up at the end of your driveway on Saturday, Jan. 6 between 10 a.m. and 2 pm.

PAN-MASS CHALLENGE

Marty Grassie of Cohasset, was at the Pan-Massachusetts Challenge Check Presentation Ceremony when the PMC gave $26 million to the Jimmy Fund. The record-setting gift is the largest sum ever given to the Jimmy Fund, it represents 99 cents of every rider-raised dollar, and it is twice the amount ever raised or donated to a charity by an athletic fundraising event anywhere in the United States. Marty was among the 6,700 cyclists and volunteers who participated in the statewide bike-a-thon last August to raise the $26 million contribution. Since its 1980 inception, the PMC has raised more than $171 million for cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund - crucial funds that have improved the lives of cancer patients around the world. For information about the PMC, call (800) WECYCLE or visit www.pmc.org.

'THE MESSIAH'

Second Congregational Church in Cohasset will present selections from Handel's "The Messiah" on Dec. 17. The church choir and guest soloists, accompanied by a chamber orchestra, will perform. This is an opportunity for everyone to welcome the Christmas season by enjoying this music, performed right in the community.

All are welcome to the 10 a.m. service and performance. For more information, call 781-383-0345.

A Holiday Happening Celebration will be happening here at One Creative Place on Thursday, Dec. 21 from 4-7 pm with Santa Claus, Mrs. Claus and a special snowman friend coming by. A holiday sing-a-long will take place around 4:30 or so with vendors available for those super last minute gifts that are needed, face painting, snacks and more. Bring the family, camera and spirit on by. Check out more on the website at www.onecreativeplace.net

That is all for this week. Send in all of your news to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

WEDDINGS & ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Marks

Marks-Lundin

The Marks family of Scituate and the Lundin family of Hingham announce the marriage of their children, Paul Marks and Linnea Lundin. A beach ceremony took place in East Sandwich Sept. 2, 2006. A small gathering of family and friends shared in the ceremony, followed by a reception at the home of PJ and Bobbie Driscoll, uncle and aunt of the bride.

The groom, of Hingham, formerly of Cohasset, is employed as a sous chef for a private company while also attending Boston University graduate program.

The bride, also of Hingham, is self-employed as a childcare provider in the South Shore area.

The couple now resides in Hingham.

Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Starvish, III

Vanderweil - Starvish

Shelley McMillan Vanderweil, daughter of Anne and Raimund Gerhard Vanderweil, Jr. of Cohasset, was recently married to John Joseph Starvish, III, son of Mary and John Starvish of Concord, N.H.

The ceremony took place at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents in Cohasset.

Elizabeth Hurley served as Maid of Honor. Serving as bridesmaids were Lucinda Vanderweil, sister-in-law of the bride and Margaret Starvish and Anne Starvish, sisters of the groom.

Brian Deveney served as Best Man. Ushers were Thomas Keighley, Brian Wasik and Alexander Vanderweil and Stefan Vanderweil, brothers of the bride.

The bride graduated from Milton Academy and Brown University. She is currently employed as an electrical engineer at R. G. Vanderweil Engineers, Boston.

The bridegroom graduated from Pinkerton Academy, in Derry, N.H. and St. Michael's College. He is Senior Finance Manager at Direct Capital Corporation, Portsmouth, N.H.

After a wedding trip to Spain and Italy, the couple is residing in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kinchla

LaCoste - Kinchla

Amanda LaCoste, the daughter of James and Ailsa LaCoste of Weymouth, married John Kinchla, son of Nancy Kinchla of Cohasset and John Kinchla of Texas, June 3, 2006, at The First Church in Weymouth. The Rev. Gary Blume officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was given by her father, Jim LaCoste. Maid of honor was Tracey Young of Weymouth, friend of the bride. Bridesmaids were Alison Kinchla of Boston, sister of the groom, Olga Kinchla of Wallingford, CT, sister-in-law of the groom; Chantal Maad Dabdoub of White Plains, NY, friend of the bride.

Brendan Kinchla of Wallingford, CT, brother of the groom, served as Best Man.

Ushers were Harry LaCoste of New York City, brother of the bride; Mason LaCoste of Philadelphia, brother of the bride; Dan Kinchla of Cohasset, brother of the groom.

The bride is a graduate of Weymouth High School, Umass-Amherst and received her master's degree from Rutgers University. She is employed at Light Life Foods in Turners Falls.

Her husband is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Umass-Amherst with both his bachelor and master's degrees. He is the owner of Amherst Nurseries in Sunderland.

A reception was held at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

The couple is residing in South Deerfield.

Tiger Cub family thinking of others

Launches holiday drive for Cradles to Crayons

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

People are being asked to donate gently used (or new) children's toys, books, clothes and school supplies.

Alexander Arnold, 6-1/2, is helping to make sure his fellow Tiger Cub Scouts in Cohasset are thinking about what children, who are less fortunate, might be getting for Christmas this year.

To that end, Alexander, his parents Jon and Francesca, and his sister Natasha, 4-1/2, have orchestrated a collection for Cradles to Crayons, an organization that helps needy children in Massachusetts.

As a member of the Tiger Den of Pack 38, Alexander and his dad must host a pack meeting during the year.

"My son and I were originally down for holding our Cub pack meeting in March," Jon recalls. "But as I started thinking about this, we thought 'wouldn't it be great to try to do something that starts to educate boys about giving back and thinking about those less fortunate than themselves.'"

Jon, who is director of brand marketing at Shaw's Supermarkets, is familiar with Cradles to Crayons. In the fall, Shaw's "discovered" the organization and conducted a back-to-school supply drive in all its New England stores. Customers would donate school supplies to put into the backpacks of underprivileged kids, Jon explained.

"We were really impressed with Cradles to Crayons and what they do: there are few organizations that collect and distribute supplies for needy kids and where young kids can actually volunteer and help," he said.

So Jon thought he and Alexander would organize a drive for Cradles to Crayons for their Cub pack.

"Our group meeting would then take place at Cradles to Crayons in Quincy where the boys and dads in the group would deliver everything we collect and then help sort in the warehouse."

St. Stephen's (the Arnolds' church), and the Osgood School, both agreed to be collection points and to help publicize the event.

"Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan was so supportive and enthusiastic that she suggested we do it before the holidays as people are in giving moods," Jon said. He added that many families also want to clear out "stuff" before the onslaught of Christmas gifts.

the Cub Scout drive are truly appreciated," Sheehan said. "The children are in the spirit of the season."

People are being asked to donate gently used (or new) children's toys, books, clothes and school supplies at the drop-off points through Dec. 22 at Osgood and through Dec. 31 at St. Stephen's. Donation boxes are near the front entrance of each location.

"If they want to be really generous, they can donate money to Cradles to Crayons or buy new toys that would be given for gifts," Jon said.

The "Arnold family" Cub Scout activity is slated fro 2 p.m., Jan. 13 when the Cub packs will deliver all the collected items to Cradles to Crayons . Plans also include having the Cubs and their dads help sort some of the items.

About Cradles to Crayons

Cradles to Crayons is committed to providing poor and homeless Massachusetts children, from infancy to age 12, with everyday supplies.

Since 2002, Cradles to Crayons has served more than 40,000 children-in-need. In 2005 alone, 25,000 local children received high-quality children's goods to keep them warm, safe at home, and ready to learn at school. Cradles to Crayons is a non-profit organization, whose work is made possible through active community involvement. More than 20,000 volunteers have helped at the Quincy warehouse.

Through community-partnerships with neighbors, schools and companies, as well as civic and faith-based organizations, Cradles to Crayons generates the supply of products and labor needed to expand its services. Through distribution-partnerships with shelters, health centers, schools, parenting programs and day cares, it directly reaches the children who are most at-risk and in-need.

Give 'Savor of Salt' for Christmas

Just in time for the holidays, the Committee on Town History is publishing the second anthology of historic articles collected and edited by Jacqueline M. Dormitzer. It is titled "Savor of Salt" and is a companion piece to "Treasury of Cohasset History" published in 2005. "Savor of Salt" differs slightly from "Treasury" in that it is organized more like a magazine while "Treasury" was organized into historical periods. There are more period photographs in the new publication with each of the 56 articles starting with a brief description about the author or contents. The reader may leaf through the book or look up a topic in the contents or index to choose an article. Some articles, such as "Little Harbor," may have different authors bringing a different perspective to their subject.

The book's title, "Savor of Salt," is derived from the title of one of the several articles by Lucy Treat. Dormitzer selected the title since most of Cohasset's history is linked to the sea. Treat joins town historians David Wadsworth and Robert Fraser and others whose writings might otherwise be lost if Treat hadn't discovered their work while doing her research for the town's third history of Cohasset.

"Savor of Salt" will be available at Town Hall, the Town Clerk's office, Buttonwood Books and the Historical Society's Pratt Building. The price is $28 and checks can be made out to the Town of Cohasset. The hardbound laminated book cover depicts a section of the MacIvor Reddie mural at the Historical Society's Pratt Building and the end leaves are from a photograph of Minot Light taken by Margot Cheel from a helicopter. She captured the lighthouse from a unique angle looking toward the Cohasset coastline.

The hardbound laminated book cover depicts a section of the MacIvor Reddie mural at the Historical Society's Pratt Building.

Excerpt from 'Washington's Birthday Masquerade Ball' By David Wadsworth

"After the Grand March there followed a series of costumed and masked dances such as the quadrille, contra-dance, Virginia reel, and Portland Fancy, during which the spectators had ample time to view the many unique costumes and speculate upon the identity of the wearers. Then, at about 9:00 the dancing stopped, and participants formed a large circle and unmasked, revealing the visages of many well-known townspeople and their guests. There followed an intermission before dancing began anew. From that time until about 1:00 a.m., the assembled participants performed a variety of dances well known in that day but scarcely remembered today. Quadrilles, schottisches, and gallops, intermixed with the more familiar waltzes, carried the festivities through the evening until the presumably exhausted dancers bid farewell to each other in the early morning hours.

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own community.

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 15 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Abington Mariner, Rockland Mariner, Braintree Forum, Cohasset Mariner, Hanover Mariner, Hingham Journal, Marshfield Mariner, Norwell Mariner, Pembroke Mariner & Reporter, Scituate Mariner, Wareham Courier, and Weymouth News in giving the greatest gift of all – a gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way in helping those in need.

This year these local newspapers have identified several local charities to be the recipients of the gifts of hope donations.

Spanish students say 'Adiós' to Cohasset

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When April vacation comes around this year, students in Peggy Jordan's high school Spanish classes will be expanding their educational horizons.

While Cohasset has been participating in foreign exchange trips with its French classes for some time, thanks to Jordan and the School Committee, which approved the trip at its Nov. 1 meeting, students in high level Spanish classes will travel to Guatemala to be immersed in the language for one week this spring.

"We're only opening the trip up to the upper levels," said Jordan, which would be Spanish IV and V. She said out of the pool of roughly 22 students, she hopes between eight and 10 will go on the trip.

This is Jordan's second year teaching in Cohasset, but this will not be her first experience traveling abroad with students. "I taught in Hingham for five years and at Silver Lake for 16 years," said Jordan, and over the years she has traveled to both Europe and South America with students.

In 1992, she took 33 students to Mexico City, and in 1994, she took roughly 17 students to Spain. "We visited tons of places," on the trip to Spain, but she said the pace was too hectic for not only her — at 6-1/2 months pregnant — but also for her students.

In 1999, Jordan took nine students to Costa Rica through a company called ACIS Educational Travel. She said the trip was very successful for everyone involved and she will be again using ACIS to help plan the trip to Guatemala. She added, when calling to make inquiries about the trip to Guatemala, the representative she spoke to recognized her name and voice, as she had attended the trip to Costa Rica with Jordan and was so impacted by the experience, she took a job at ACIS after graduating from college.

Jordan said the students who participate in the trip will stay with host families in Guatemala City. While Jordan said she has never been to Guatemala, she has heard great things about the city. High School Social Studies Department Chair Michael Welch told her he worked with the Peace Corps in Guatemala City and it is a quaint, quiet town akin to Colonial Williamsburg.

"It will be for one week, from Sunday to Sunday," she said, adding during the weekdays, students will take a 4-hour intensive language class in the morning. Families in Guatemala open up their homes to the students similar to a bed and breakfast, and their host families will give them three simple meals per day.

Jordan said roughly 28 years ago, she participated on an exchange and it changed her life. She said students who fully experience another culture are able to make a much more personal connection with the language, and she hopes the experience will be as positive for her students as it was for her.

Water Commission honored with 'Smart Growth Award'

Cohasset Water Commission has been awarded the 2006 "Smart Growth Award" by the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs for their Raingarden Program in the Lily Pond Watershed.

Raingardens are specially constructed biorention cells that allows storm water runoff to be passively filtered, to reduce nutrients and pollution, and also attenuates peak flow and runoff volume to reduce flooding. The Water Commission has constructed seven so far, and is in the process of installing another 26 in the next year.

The Smart Growth Awards were made to eight communities in recognition of their smart growth achievements. The premise of smart growth is that land conservation and development can be done better, according to EOEA.

"We are pleased that our Raingarden Program has been recognized by the state as a significant achievement," said Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt. "The installation of rain gardens is one part of our comprehensive watershed protection program, which also includes acquisition of undeveloped watershed land to protect the integrity of the watershed into the future."

"When the Raingarden Project is completed," said Water Commissioner John McNabb, "we project that non-point source pollution from storm water runoff into Lily Pond will be reduced by at least 50 percent. This has been seen throughout Cohasset as a good way to reduce storm water pollution that should be considered for the rest of the town and is being looked at by the new Stormwater Management Committee."

"This project is one part of our overall water system improvement program," said Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer, "which also includes an ongoing program to replace old undersized water mains and make major improvements at the Lily Pond Treatment Plant to improve drinking water quality and public safety."

The Smart Growth Award was presented to the Water Commission and its consulting engineers, the Norfolk Ram Group, LLC, which designed and is implementing the Raingarden Program for the Water Commission, at the state Smart Growth Conference Friday, Dec. 1, in Worcester.

More money, more books for schools

By Nancy White
CORRESPONDENT

"These items will be taken out of the fiscal 2008 budget and be used to enhance the classroom experience right now."
— Denise Walsh, Superintendent of Schools

The School Committee approved the use of $138,314 to buy new education materials and equipment for all town schools last week. The money is a foundation reserve fund received by the state earlier this year.

In September 2005 the state legislature appropriated $6.8 million to provide financial assistance to Massachusetts towns and cities. Municipalities were required to submit an application for the monies. Then each application was reviewed and appropriately awarded a grant. The Cohasset Schools received a $226,000 Foundation Fund grant from the state. This type of award, according to Business Manager Dave DeGennaro, is treated as grant money and is not incorporated into the fiscal budget.

In order to find the best use for the funds, Superintendent Denise Walsh met with each school's principal to identify the school's greatest (and most urgent) needs. At the top of each school's list were new editions of textbooks.

"Typically textbooks should be replaced every three to five years," said Walsh, due to both wear-and-tear and new material. Many of the principal's requests were needed the last two years but due to budget restraints the items were put on hold, explained Walsh. Approximately $85,000 will go toward the purchase of new books.

School Committee member Richard Flynn pointed out that this money is not an every year occurrence, "it's a one time deal we're not going to get [this money] again."

The Committee discussed this point to ensure allowances will be taken to incorporate these expenses into future fiscal budgets.

Other items to be purchased include microscopes, classroom furniture, musical instruments, new books for the middle/high school library and the development of the School Committee's new Policy Manual.

The School Committee approved the Superintendent's proposal unanimously. The texts and other equipment will be bought and in use for the second half of the year.

"These items will be taken out of the fiscal 2008 budget and be used to enhance the classroom experience right now," said Superintendent Walsh.

Scholarship for Kurt Gritzan

The School Committee recognized a Scholarship Fund established in honor of Cohasset student Kurt Gritzan, who succumbed to cancer last year. School Committee members expressed their thanks and appreciation to those involved in getting the fund off the ground. "It's a wonderful way to memorialize his life," said Walsh.

Breathalyzers

The School Committee revisited the breathalyzer policy and its use school dances last week. Principal Joel Antolini was on hand to comment. "It's posted in our student handbook to notify the students that in the event that they want to participate in school sponsored activities that we reserve the right to administer the breathalyzer test," Antolini said. "They know of it in advance, we are not asking them to abandon their individual rights." The Committee agreed with Antolini's comments.

The breathalyzer policy was instituted three years ago in an effort to alleviate the reoccurring problem of students arriving to school functions under the influence.

"It's just a choice that they need to make if it's something that they want to participate in," Antolini said.

Get the point

It used to be only Joker, Penguin and the Riddler had to worry about the arrival of the Bat mobile.

This holiday season anyone foolish enough to overdo it on the eggnog and get behind the wheel of a car is at risk of running into the B.A.T. Mobile — conveniently parked nearby sobriety checkpoints. Drivers asked to step out of their vehicles and walk a straight line, won't meet the Caped Crusader on board the B.A.T Mobile. Instead they'll find a complement of state and local police officers ready to administer Breathalyzer tests and make arrests – a new and efficient way to emphasize and enforce the familiar Governor's Highway Safety Bureau campaign "You drink, you drive, you lose."

The B.A.T. (breath alcohol testing) Mobile made the rounds last weekend along Route 18 in another town and police made six OUI arrests in the early morning hours of Sunday morning. Since hitting the road last July the customized, high-tech RV has been part of sobriety checkpoints in several Massachusetts towns, and throughout the holiday season motorists can expect to find the B.A.T. Mobile cruising into what state police call areas of concern and high traffic accidents. In fact, the B.A.T. mobile which features its own cell and light towers, two holding cells and all the equipment police need to book a drunk driver on the spot, has been so successful another one is in the works right now — guaranteeing law enforcement officials will be increasing the number and frequency of sobriety checkpoints across the state.

This is the time of year we all find ourselves heading out for holiday gatherings and work parties. Many get into the spirit of the season with a glass or two of cheer, and that's why it's important to have a plan in place to ensure everyone in your party gets back home safely. Designating a sober driver or agreeing to be one yourself is a smart idea that can save you a whole lot of trouble, particularly with the law.

Last weekend that concept escaped several those drivers arrested, who had passengers sober enough to operate the vehicle riding along with them. And those who think they can evade or drive right by a checkpoint, think again. Every car is stopped and every driver is checked out to determine if they are good to go, or too impaired by alcohol or other substances to operate a car safely.

It's important to remember that State and local police officers aren't trying to be a nuisance or hold up traffic, they're trying to keep our roadways and citizens safe during the holiday season and throughout the year.

Friday, March 9, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting which will be held Saturday, March 31, and for the Annual Town Election which will be held Saturday, April 7.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cohasset fire, police thanked

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter was sent to Acting Fire Chief Robert Silvia, with a copy to the Mariner for publication.

Dear Chief Silvia:

On Saturday, Dec. 2, there was a fire at our home. I would like to thank Captain Paul Bilodeau, Lieutenant Thomas Finegan, Eric Wenzlow, Randy Belanger, Robert Forde, and Frank Mahoney for putting out the fire and minimizing the damage. I am very grateful to these fine men and very much impressed by the ability of the Cohasset, Hull and Hingham fire departments to work together so smoothly. Along with Cohasset police officers Regen Steverman, Christy Tarantino, and William Quigley, the firefighters moved with a swiftness and organization that speaks of much careful co-ordination and planning.

I would also like to take the opportunity to thank the Emergency Medical Technicians for the many occasions on which they responded to emergency situations for us. My mother, now deceased, lived several years in a fragile state of health and benefited from the highly professional and genuinely kind care she received from your entire department.

The people of Cohasset and of surrounding towns are blessed to have such a well-organized and committed group of firefighters available to them.

Year-round swimming pool needed

TO THE EDITOR:

Since the Cohasset Community Swim Center opened about 30 years ago; there have been two unsuccessful attempts to convert the pool into a year-round facility.

Both attempts were unsuccessful, but that does not mean the objective was flawed.

There has been one big change since the last attempt. I am convinced that monies from the Community Preservation Act (CPA) could significantly contribute toward financing the improvement. Based on past homework, it is likely that a year-round, environmentally friendly pool with a glass retractable roof and glass sliding doors could be overlaid on the existing pool. You would have the current openness with year-round accessibility (even on rainy summer days).

Currently, it is only with tremendous effort and cost that Pool Managers open for a 12-week season. A year-round pool would offer pre-school lessons, a facility for schoolchildren, therapeutic opportunities for all ages and particularly the elderly.

The CPA has wisely spent large amounts of money on land and historical preservation and especially playing fields. It is now time to invest in something that residents of all ages will benefit from. I am confident that the project can be done for less than $2 million with the CPA assuming one-third of the cost over a three-year period; the balance to be funded by the Swim Center Board of Trustees and an aggressive fund-raising effort.

Most of all, a group of committed swimming enthusiasts is needed to organize and make this suggestion happen. It would not be easy, but most things worth having are difficult to achieve.

HEALTH NOTES

Healthy eating, exercise over the holidays

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

There's no getting around it; the pace quickens around the holidays. It seems that we try to cram a years worth of experience into the days between Thanksgiving and New Year's. And the extra activity generally means more food and extra pounds. But even holiday treats can fit into a healthy eating plan. The key is balance and moderation. To avoid holiday weight gain, balance the calories you consume with the calories you burn. Physical activity and moderate food choices will help. A gift you can give yourself and your family is to eat sensibly and exercise.

Let the holiday spirit move you! Take some time to be active. Studies have shown that regular aerobic activity clears the mind and actually increases brain function. Take some time off to walk with friends or your family. You will become healthier and have fun doing so. Be adventurous and try something new, but also choose something you enjoy. Stick to your regular exercise routine as much as possible. Especially during the holidays, plan your physical activity routine in advance (don't leave it up to chance). Mark it on the calendar and consider it as important as any other appointment. Get at least 30 minutes of moderate intensity physical activity daily, and more if possible.

Play some backyard football or Frisbee with children and adults before the big holiday dinner or during football half time.

Instead of television viewing, limit the number of hours spent watching and playing video games. Instead make a new holiday tradition. Take a brisk walk around the neighborhood to see the holiday decorations or grab your bike, walking shoes or snowshoes and head out to Whitney Woods or Wheelwright Park.

Play some backyard football or Frisbee with children and adults before the big holiday dinner or during football half time.

Healthy Holiday Eating — Overcome the urge to overeat. Get away from that buffet table! It's a temptation to overeat. Remember holiday parties are a time to celebrate with

Train station sidewalk in the works

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Late Breaking News — On Friday, Dec. 8th we were notified verbally that Cohasset was awarded a Transportation Oriented Development Grant in the amount of $225,000 for the construction of sidewalk from the corner of N. Main Street and Forest Avenue / King Street to Route 3A and then to the new Greenbush Commuter Rail Station. You can read more about this elsewhere in this issue of the Cohasset Mariner.

News on the Greenbush – At a recent meeting with a CBB representative and the neighbors abutting the Pond Street crossing, we heard a number of concerns from the residents. This construction area has been very difficult for these residents because it is clearly the most complicated crossing in Cohasset. We will do everything in our power to keep things running as smoothly as we can. At this meeting, CBB indicated that their goal was to have Pond Street crossing completely finished by the end of December. We suspect that they might be a bit optimistic, considering the amount of work yet to be accomplished. However, they do need to get this crossing finished so that they can permanently close the temporary Spring St. crossing at the skating pond.

The Greenbush and Storm Water – Storm water has become a hot topic in Cohasset recently. The Board of Selectmen has appointed a Stormwater Committee to begin Cohasset's first formal review of new EPA requirements and how our Town should approach compliance with these new regulations. Just like the Town, the MBTA has to deal with the same requirements when building the Greenbush rail line. So what's the big deal, and what's different from the past?

Manufacturer's cutaway drawing of a new drain structure.

In the past, storm water traveled overland into wetlands or onto our streets where it was captured and ultimately directed to the harbor through our storm water drainage system. The object was to get rid of the storm water as quickly as possible. Now things are viewed a bit differently. Removing the stormwater as quickly as possible is not necessarily a good thing. Why not, you ask? Well, by getting rid of the water as soon as possible we were not recharging the local aquifers. Nor, are we able to take advantage of the normal pollutant filtering that local earth and plant life can offer. Cleaning up storm water before returning it to our waterways and harbors is really important.

What does this mean to the Greenbush? Everyone knows that automobiles create pollutants. These pollutants tend to accumulate on the surface of our parking areas. The release of storm water from parking lots contains heavy concentrations of this nasty stuff. This is especially true of what is called the "first flush." The "first flush" is the initial rainwater that provides the first cleaning of the parking lot surface, which carries heavy concentrations of surface pollutants. In the newly reconfigured Town Parking Lot in the center village, there are three special drain structures whose function is to clean the stormwater. These structures will automatically separate oil and grease, floatable materials and dirt and gravel from the stormwater, and store each in a separate area inside of the drain structure. Substantially cleaner stormwater is then released to James Brook from the Town Parking Lot. The Greenbush Station will have similar devices in that parking lot, as well. And, several other places in Town will process street stormwater in a similar manner. We should also point out that these are passive devices in that they work without the need for outside power. They contain a series of baffles that perform the pollutant separation automatically.

Drain galleys being set into place beside Forest Avenue.

Well that sounds great. What's the downside? This benefit does have its costs. To use a shopworn phrase, "there is no such thing as a free lunch." When the MBTA turns these drain systems over to the Town we must maintain them. As any new drainage is installed in town (and some have already), these too must be maintained. These new structures need to be inspected and cleaned several times a year. One manufacturer of these stormwater-processing drains says that they must be cleaned four times per year at a total expected cost of $3000 per year per device. Plus, it requires a special vacuum truck to do the work. These trucks can cost between $100,000 and $200,000 to purchase. And since oil is being removed this must be treated as hazardous waste with appropriate disposal fees. These are issues that our Town must plan for. We conservatively expect 20 to 30 of these structures to be in place by the end of 2007.

Other Stuff in Progress – This week we began construction work on a small drainage project on Forest Avenue near Wheelwright Park. This is the last project that needs to be completed before Forest Avenue can be paved and sidewalks completed. This project consists of adding two catch basins at a low spot to each the edge of the road. These basins will channel the storm water to a special drain structure (similar to those described above), which will clean the water. Then it will be directed to drain galleys where the storm water will infiltrate back into the ground.

The current project, weather permitting, should take a week or so. We have already begun working on the plans for Forest Avenue paving and hope to go to bid early next spring. There may be light at the end of the tunnel after all!

Marshfield uber Weymouth! Huh?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

For a guy who grew up on single wing football, Marshfield's victory over Weymouth in the high school playoffs came as something of a shock.

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth and I covered high school sports for the Quincy Patriot Ledger, Marshfield didn't even belong on the same field with Weymouth.

The Rams, then known as the Hilltoppers, might have given the Weymouth jayvees a good scrum for a period or two, but beat the Maroons, as the Wildcats were called? . . . hey, give me a drag on that before you throw it away!

Weymouth, under the legendary coach Harry Arlanson, was the king of South Shore high school football in those days, a half century ago, winning three state Class A titles in four years in competition with the Arlingtons, Somervilles, and Everetts.

Weymouth, under the legendary coach Harry Arlanson, was the king of South Shore high school football in those days..

They were so good they were invited to the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., where they ran up a 34-0 lead on Landon High, the Florida champion, in the first half and then coasted to a 34-18 victory.

They were so good that Look magazine, with a national circulation in the millions, gave them a multi-page spread labeled "Championship High School Football," the kind of attention they pay to Florida and California schools today.

Marshfield, on the other hand, had trouble filling out a full squad.

They played in a cozy little four team South Shore League along with Scituate, Cohasset, and Hanover, filling out the rest of their seven or eight game schedules with equally tiny Catholic parish high schools or even jayvee teams.

Other natural rivals, like Pembroke and Norwell, didn't even field a team, nor did Holbrook, which was better known as Sumner High.

Randolph, a.k.a. Stetson High, seemed to be always in the depths of Class D despite the best efforts of Coach Joe Zapustas.

My closest association with a Marshfield football team was in 1947 when Eero Helin, a Quincy boy, was coach, and the team was propelled by a fullback named Dan Hall and an exciting scatback named Donnie Martins.

They were undefeated going into the Thanksgiving Day game with Scituate, a contest that either ended up in a tie or a Scituate victory, I don't remember which. I do remember that on the last play for the game, Donnie Martins broke away and was caught from behind.

Either the next year or the year after that, Helin was off to coach the high school in Patchogue on Long Island, N.Y., and the next I heard of him was a few years ago when he was murdered in a camp in Pembroke.

The other coaches in the South Shore League were an odd lot — John McBain at Sylvester High of Hanover; genial Ed Stewart at Scituate, who would just as soon interrupt practice to chat a while; and Don McNeill at Cohasset, who lost an arm as a youngster at Paragon Park in Nantasket.

And now it's Marshfield 15, Weymouth 0. How the humble have grown!

When tips made Christmas special

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I challenge you to picture the following scene playing out today in Cohasset. On a bitter cold January morning a 10-year-old girl wakes up an hour before her peers and goes outside to work. She travels for miles on foot. Alone. In the dark. Huge dogs roaming free in the neighborhood bark at her, chase her, sometimes even bite her. Yet she goes out every morning before school. And on weekends. Through the summer too. By the end of each week she has worked a total of 8 to 10 hours, and she is paid enough money to buy a small pizza.

This was the life of an average papergirl or boy in 1975. It's unimaginable now, in an age so paranoid it makes life during the Cuban Missile Crisis seem carefree in comparison, but my wife and I both lived to tell about it. And the part we like to talk about most is Christmas Tips. After being criminally underpaid for 51 weeks, that collection day the week before Christmas was a paperkid's dream, as if 60 Scrooges had thrown open their storm doors and giddily offered you half a crown to buy the big goose for Bob Cratchit. It was more than a Christmas tradition; to us it was Christmas, as hotly anticipated and joyously celebrated as Hood eggnog, carolers and Santa Claus.

Of course paperboys and girls are extinct now. A giant meteor hit the Yucatan Peninsula in 1986 and killed off all the trees on which they fed. But that cataclysm allowed the babysitters, who can burrow underground, to thrive and eventually

Now, there was babysitting work 30 years ago as well, but as always we never clued in to how pitifully we were being compensated. I often wonder whether Mr. and Mrs. Donnovan, now probably in their 70s, ever lose sleep over the hourly rate they used to pay me. After finally getting their two hyperactive boys to stay in their beds I would sit on the couch in their cold living room watching Fantasy Island and trying desperately to stay awake. Early on I sensed it was a bad idea to be caught sleeping on the job by one's boss, a lesson I relearned the hard way during my brief career with Brinks Home Security. But inevitably I would succumb to either fatigue or hypothermia and the parents would startle me awake at 11:15 or so.

As I stumbled around woozily pretending I'd been conscious the whole time, Mrs. Donnovan would scrounge in the bottom of her purse for the pennies and nickels she would need to complete the transaction. I would then climb into the death seat of their Honda Civic with a visibly tipsy Mr. Donnovan behind the wheel, and pray I would live to spend the change in my left hand while gripping the door handle with my right.

You can understand then, how pleasantly surprised I was the other day when my daughter returned home from her first babysitting job with enough money to feed a family of five. Since she doesn't have a family of five I promptly confiscated the money and took my family out to Bertucci's. My wife and I got steak and veal and the kids got a bunch of those free rolls they like so much, so everybody won.

Having a third source of income is really handy this time of year, especially with kids' tastes getting more expensive by the minute. For instance the whole cell-phone trend just baffles me. Giving a 12-year-old girl a cell phone is like giving heroin to a junkie. Why don't we just go all the way and give every boy a subscription to Maxim? We'll never see any of our kids again. We can all retire to Arizona and be done with it.

By the way, which one of you is behind this dramatic compression of the gift schedule? If you give them the cell phone at 12, the laptop at 14, and the Trans Am with the big Firebird decal on the hood at 16, what the heck do you give them for a graduation present, a house? When they turn 21 your kids will expect their inheritance, and you'll have no choice but to kick off or risk losing their affection. Then what about a wedding gift? You can't shop from beyond the grave, people, despite all of AOL's efforts to extend its business into the corpse demographic.

Anyway have a great holiday everyone. And don't forget to tip the kid who delivered your Mariner, even if she's got kids of her own now. It'll give her a Christmas thrill.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, and would like Santa to know that he could really use a new cell phone, as his was run over recently by a Camaro.

LIBRARY CORNER

Independent film night is Dec. 21

Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For information on programs and events, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Library Book Bags – Looking for a unique gift for a reader? Paul Pratt Memorial Library book bags are available for purchase at the library for $15. These sturdy, heavy canvas bags are ideal for carrying home library materials. Each bag has an interior pocket large enough to hold a library card. Book bags come in dark green with a white logo and lettering. Checks should be made payable to Friends of the Library.

Art Exhibit – South Shore Art Center is sponsoring an exhibit of Diana Rousseau's landscape paintings through Dec. 31 at Paul Pratt Library. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesdays and Fridays, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Saturdays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sundays, from 2 to 5 p.m.

Independent Film Night – Take a break from holiday shopping and come to a free movie at the library. The independent film "Be With Me" will be presented Thursday, Dec. 21, at 6 p.m., in the Meeting Room. Free admission and refreshments will be provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Library Book Group – With the holiday rush upon us, this month the group is trying something different. Rather than assign one book to read and discuss, bring in a book that is currently being read. It could be fiction or nonfiction, biography or graphic novel. Be prepared to share a comment or two about the book. This will be a fun, relaxing way to share one's enthusiasm for reading. All are welcome. Coffee and refreshments will be provided by the Friends of the Library. The group will meet Wednesday, Dec. 20, at 10 a.m.

family and friends, not just food.

It's easy to overindulge during the holidays. Make sure to watch portion sizes and select one or two of your favorites from the host of tempting foods.

Leave those extra calories behind — limit your intake of foods high in fat or added sugar.

If you drink alcohol, do so in moderation.

Stick with a colorful variety of fruits and vegetables. Bowls of fresh fruit are a festive and sweet substitute for candy or chocolates

Remember calories add up! This is especially true during the holidays when we snack more. For a healthy snack, choose a piece of fresh fruit.

You've tried the leftover turkey sandwich; now try the leftover turkey salad! Add a few pieces of turkey to a generous portion of mixed greens, cucumbers, mushrooms, peppers, or any other vegetables you like. Sprinkle with dried cranberries for that authentic holiday taste.

For a great holiday gift, try going to your farmer's market or grocery store and selecting fresh fruits and vegetables. Place all your tasty treats in a basket, and you have a present packed with tasty fruits and vegetables.

Holiday Cooking: Keeping it Safe! — As the holidays approach we like to celebrate by entertaining friends and family, throwing parties, and preparing feasts. From the buffet table to the office party, food moves center stage throughout the holiday season. Be sure to keep food safe by following basic food safety steps.

• Clean: Wash hands and food-contact surfaces often. Bacteria can spread throughout the kitchen and get onto cutting boards, knives, sponges and counter tops.

• Separate: Don't cross-contaminate—don't let bacteria spread from one food product to another. This is especially true for raw meat, poultry and seafood. Keep these foods and their juices away from ready-to-eat foods.

• Cook: Cook to proper temperatures. Foods are properly cooked when they are heated for a long enough time and at a high enough temperature to kill the harmful bacteria that cause food-borne illness.

• Chill: Refrigerate promptly. Refrigerating foods quickly keeps most harmful bacteria from growing and multiplying. Refrigerators should be set at 40°F and the freezer at 0°F, and the accuracy of the settings should be checked occasionally with a thermometer.

Affordable housing for seniors

To the Editor:

(Mrs. McMorris provided the Mariner with a copy of her letter to Selectmen).

During a more hopeful and energetic time the town envisioned an "affordable" senior housing project on land adjacent to the Cook estate. It is wrong to abandon that worthy goal without first making every effort possible to make such a project work.

I urge the Board to convene a discussion between the Housing Authority, Housing Partnership, the housing consultant and interested residents who served on the senior housing committee aimed at developing an RFP for a downsized rental project for the site. Many of these people shared a vision for this property that would meet the needs of Cohasset seniors. Please keep that vision alive. This potential should be explored before the door is closed forever by a conservation restriction.

As a past member and chairman of the Conservation Commission I fully appreciate the desire to protect environmental resources. I believe that wise policy recognizes the balancing of various needs. We can build what needs to be built and still save what needs to be saved.

Thank you for your consideration.

Jingle Bell Walk appreciates community support!

To The Editor:

The South Shore Community Center in Cohasset would like to express its appreciation to the many merchants and volunteers who lent a helping hand at our Twelfth Jingle Bell Walk.

As the bells rang out from St. Stephen's Church, thanks to Mary Kennedy, Santa and Mrs. Claus accompanied by their many elf assistants arrived at the Community Center. All our volunteers were ready to go with jingle bells, hot cocoa, and cookies waiting.

Mrs. Claus and Santa, along with Frosty, Rudolph and the merry Elves led a community sing-along of traditional holiday favorites. Photos with Santa, bowling, and face painting followed. Hayrides, the Turkey Trot, and the Luminaries were a big hit for everyone.

We would like to express our sincere thanks to the many contributors and volunteers who helped make the day a great success!

Energizing the village with housing

To the Editor:

What gets decided at Town Meeting depends not only on the facts, but on the timing of the article during the evening, what names are listed as sponsors, how much advance marketing of the issue, and the persuasiveness of the individuals who speak for or against it. And often there is a disconnect between persuasiveness and rational marshalling of the relevant facts.

So sometimes the decision is inconsistent with those facts, and counter to the long-term interest of the Town. Example: the vote against the well-developed bylaw changes proposed to facilitate much needed, reasonably priced dwelling units in the village (something that had been approved in principle at previous meeting). Instead, it was voted to spend $30,000 on a consultant to tell us what we need!

The mantra about preserving the character of the village is useful to obscure other considerations (and perhaps other agendas). But preservation also entails preserving its economic viability, and that in turn requires some beneficial changes. There is nothing so architecturally stunning that can't be improved, nor of untouchable historic significance. We tend to like it because it is familiar, not because of its merits.

Yes, parking could be a problem, but it has to be addressed rather than duck the responsibility by a lateral arabesque to a consultant, or to yet another committee, or other stalling device. Most improvements in our town's doings result from the initiative of its citizens, not from the elected officials more occupied with regulatory concerns than initiatives. So let us hope that, rather than wait until the elected boards have run out of rationale to resist change, a group of citizens will again propose the needed by-law changes. That's the process that we often need rely on. That's democracy!

I'm not suggesting that the town get into development, rather that the town removes obstacles to our benefiting from the initiative of private individuals willing to develop what the town needs.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives and senators' votes on two roll calls from prior legislative sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$706,666 TO HELP SMALL MANUFACTURERS (H 5210)

House 143-10; Senate 34-2; override Gov. Romney's veto of $706,666 in funding for the Massachusetts Manufacturing Extension Partnership (MassMEP). Supporters of the $706,666 said that MassMEP is an important group that provides small Massachusetts manufacturers with affordable and innovative solutions to their problems. They noted that it helps leverage many public and private resources and services to help these small companies become more competitive and profitable. They pointed to many success stories including the retention of jobs, increased sales and investment in these small firms. Opponents of the $706,666 acknowledged that MassMEP is a very useful group that has helped many companies but argued that it should fund itself by the revenue that it generates from charging fees for its services. (A "Yes" vote is for the $706,666. A "No" vote is against the $706,666).

$1.1 MILLION FOR SCHOOL-TO-WORK PROGRAMS (H 5210)

House 144-10; Senate 36-0; override Gov. Romney's $1.1 million veto reduction (from $2.6 million to $1.5 million) in funding for School-to-Work Programs. The programs connect a student's teacher and employer to help the student apply his or her classroom knowledge to real-life work experiences. Supporters of the $1.1 million said that this program is a very successful one that is invaluable to students who are going on to college or entering the workforce immediately after high school. Opponents of the $1.1 million said that the program is adequately funded and does not need the additional $1.1 million. (A "Yes" vote is for the $1.1 million. A "No" vote is against the $1.1 million).

ALSO UPON BEACON HILL

MBTA FARE EVADERS (S 2256): The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill allowing uniformed, "front line" MBTA employees to issue civil "evader tickets" to any passenger who attempts to evade the fare. The legislation makes the matter a civil offense similar to a motor vehicle violation and imposes a $15 fine for a first offense, $100 for a second offense and $250 for subsequent ones. It also allows these uniformed employees to request identification from the evaders in order to write the ticket. If a violator refuses to provide identification, the employee would call the MBTA police who could arrest the person if he or she refused to provide identification. The proposal would eliminate a current law that allows MBTA police officers to arrest evaders as trespassers and charge them with a criminal misdemeanor.

$15 MILLION FOR PANDEMIC FLU PREPARATION (H 5349): The Senate approved a bill providing $15 million to help the state prepare for and respond to a pandemic flu outbreak. The Senate also added an amendment providing $2.3 million to reassess the town of Danvers with its expenses related to a chemical plant explosion in November. It also attached a provision providing $4 million to extend emergency prescription drug coverage for one year for seniors and the disabled to ensure that eligible Medicaid and Prescription Advantage members can access necessary prescription drugs while transitioning to the federal Medicare Part D coverage. The House has approved a different version of the measure and the Senate version now goes to the House for consideration.

INTERFERING WITH TRAINS AND SUBWAYS (H 2143): The Senate approved a proposal creating a new crime of "interfering with the operation of any train or subway." The legislation imposes a range of jail sentences and fines on anyone who shoots at or throws anything at a railroad or subway car, places objects on the tracks, generally disrupts, delays, prevents or interferes with the vehicle's operation and/or causes serious bodily injury to the crew or passengers. The penalties range from a $500 fine and/or one year in prison for causing interference or delay to a $50,000 fine and/or 20-year prison sentence for an action that causes serious bodily injury to the crew or passengers. The House has approved a different version of the measure and the Senate's version will now be considered by the House.

BILL OF RIGHTS DAY (H 4600): The Senate approved legislation establishing December 15 as Bill Of Rights Day, in recognition of the day that the United States adopted the first ten amendments to the U.S. Constitution. The House has already approved the measure and only final approval in each branch is needed prior to the proposal going to the governor. It has taken almost a year to get to this point for this bill that was filed in December 2005.

ABANDONED BABIES: Representative Barry R. Finegold (D-Andover) announced that he will file legislation to extend indefinitely the law allowing parents to leave their baby under the age of seven days at a police or fire station or hospital emergency room. The original law went into effect in 2004 and expires on June 30, 2008. The bill also allows newborns to be surrendered to 911 emergency responders. Supporters say that the bill has worked well and has already saved the lives of three babies who were dropped off under the new law. They argue that making the law a permanent one and adding 911 responders would save more lives and give young, scared mothers a choice. They note that without this law, outside abandonment or even the killing of babies would continue. Opponents say that the new law sends the wrong message by legalizing child neglect and abandonment for the first few days of a baby's life. They noted the state already provides ample opportunity to give up babies for adoption.

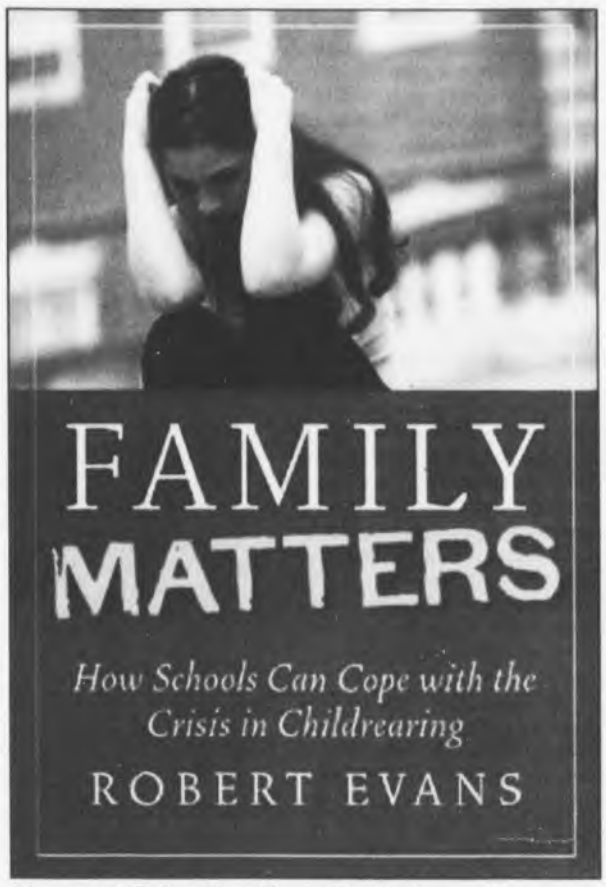
Parents learn a lesson in childrearing

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM



The cover of Robert Evans' book "Family Matters: How Schools Cope with the Crisis in Childrearing."

All parents have their moments when they begin to question whether they are doing a good job. Raising a happy, healthy family is no easy feat, but thanks to the Character Education Committee at the Osgood School, many Cohasset parents were able to participate in a discussion on the topic Tuesday with Dr. Robert Evans.

The Character Education Committee is dedicated to promoting children's social and emotional development by supporting the school's character education curriculum both at school and at home. While the committee works in conjunction with the Osgood School, parents of students from K-12 and beyond were in attendance.

Evans is a clinical and organizational psychologist and the Executive Director of the Human Relations Service in Wellesley. He holds degrees from Princeton and Harvard. He is a former high school and preschool teacher, and for many years a child and family therapist. Evans has served in schools for more than 30 years and now speaks widely at educational conferences throughout the United States. He came to Cohasset this week to speak about themes included in his latest book, "Family Matters: How Schools Can Cope With the Crisis in Childrearing."

Parents have been raising children since the beginning of time, and Evans said it is one of the most normal things for a person to do. However, he said parenting is a task that is becoming more and more difficult as the years go on.

"There are increasing complexities in society," he said, such as technology that never existed before and the fast pace at which things are moving forward. It is a situation that can leave parents feeling anxious about preparing their children for the future.

However, he said in his opinion, there are three crucial things parents must do for their children which have always been true: giving adequate amounts of nurture, structure and latitude.

Evans explained nurturing is the care and attention that is bestowed upon tiny babies. "I associate nurture with people like Julia Child and Mr. Rogers," he said. "Fred (Rogers) always liked you just the way you are," and it didn't matter if you were the most coordinated or uncoordinated kid on the block. He said through nurture children develop self-esteem and to some degree, as adults being nurtured is still very important, although as adults get older, they tend to rely less on their parents to provide it.

But while being nurturing is good, being over-nurturing is not better. Evans said although Julia Child was a fantastic chef, one of her own personal rules was, she would never have seconds. He said the same holds true with nurturing. "When you've had enough, you stop eating" and when a child has had enough nurturing, too much can be overwhelming, he said.

According to Evans, structure is also extremely important in a child's life. He said structure can be thought of as an imaginary box in which a child lives where the behaviors and expectations of that child are clearly defined. "Every culture has a box and that's powerfully comforting as a human being. Kids with clear boxes are better able to persevere, control their impulses and when they make mistakes, they learn lessons," Evans said.

Giving children latitude is also important, and Evans clarified this does not mean giving them carte blanche to do whatever they want. "They need room to make choices and find out the consequences," he said, otherwise it will affect them later on in life when they must be able to take care of themselves.

After explaining the three "keys" to parenting, Evans acknowledged he hadn't told the audience anything it didn't know. He said where parents sometimes falter is in the delivery, which is very important.

Nurturing cannot be done without spending time with your children, he said, adding currently the American family is suffering as our country spends more time working than any other country in the world.

"It has made a difference in our national economy, our household economy, in professional opportunities for women, but it's not good for kids," he said.

Evans noted there is a growing trend in which parents think because they don't spend much time together with their children, the time they do have is more precious. However, he noted you can only have high-quality interaction when it is not forced and the only way to do that is to be together every day and get through the mundane and once in a while, a quality moment surfaces.

Negotiation is also something that is being seen more and more in today's children. He said in classrooms when a teacher says, "Get out your math books," there is no longer the 45-second shuffle as children get their books from their desks and do as they're told. The request brings about many little negotiators who don't want to have a math lesson that day. He said he had heard of parents in New York City applying to send their children to private elementary schools and when the children are accepted, they ask the child where they want to go. "Imagine asking a child how they want to spend your $20,000," he said.

Getting back to having a solid "box" in which to live, Evans said children only feel secure when they have a box with not only a top and sides, but also a bottom, which is a firm foundation provided by parents who are in control.

When it comes to latitude, Evans said many parents these days are doing whatever they can to avoid having their children face consequences. He said if children get in trouble at school, there used to be a time when that child would automatically be in trouble at home as well, but now, that is not always the case. He said having worked in schools he knows there are many parents who want exceptions for students, or come in with the infamous "I don't want it on his/her record." With parents smoothing everything over for their children all the time, Evans said it leaves them unprepared for their adult life. "I think we need to prepare the child for the path instead of preparing the path for the child," he said, which means letting them deal with the consequences of their own actions.

Evans asked those in attendance to think of one of the most valuable lessons they ever learned. "Chances are, it came with loss, disappointment or failure," he said. If children are protected from experiencing that, they will never learn the ability to cope with their problems and deal with them on their own.

The Character Education Committee at Osgood invited Robert Evans to speak Tuesday evening. Parents of students in grades K-12 attended.

At the root of parenting, Evans said all anyone has to do is set a good example for his or her child. "You are always teaching. When you think you're teaching, you're preaching," he said. If a parent watches television all day then tells his son or daughter they watch too much television, it doesn't mean much as they are learning by example, he said. "You always need to think twice about the example you set."

When the fear comes that you're not doing something right, Evans said it is important to remember children are very resilient. "All children have fragile moments and some truly are fragile, but if you think you're going to make one wrong move and the kids are going to plummet to a horrible future, that's not true," he said. In reality, he noted most children could just use a little more Mr. Rogers, who was always happy to spend time with you, show you things, and keep winning and losing out of the equation.

Evans ended the night by telling the audience of the speech Mr. Rogers gave when accepting his lifetime achievement award at the 1998 Daytime Emmys. In front of all the actors and performers, Rogers stood up and said, "All of us have special ones who have loved us into being. Would you just take, along with me, one minute to think of the people who have helped you become who you are. One minute of silence." He then looked at his watch and said, "I'll watch the time."

Evans then asked the same of his audience, and at the end, reminded them all that likely, the people they thought about weren't perfect, but loved them enough to make a difference in their lives and helped shape who they are, and as a parent, that is the best thing you can do.

"Family Matters: How Schools Can Cope With the Crisis in Childrearing" is on sale at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset and other major retailers.

EDC has its eye on downtown zoning

a package and Article 27 was taken up separately. The package of articles would have created a separate zoning district — the Cohasset Village Business District — to be governed by its own dimensional provisions, which would have had more liberal standards with respect to the creation of multiple family housing than would exist in other business districts. In other words, it would have allowed new residential units to be created in the Village, provided they were not on the first floor of a building.

The new district would have been put on the town's zoning maps, new dimensional requirements for multi-family housing would have been established, and a set of use provisions, which would be the same as currently exist, would have been put in place. After literally hours of discussion and a voice vote so close it required a hand count (55 in favor, 67 against), it was determined the articles did not have the required two-thirds approval.

Through Article 27, which was almost pulled from the warrant after the package of articles failed, parking requirements would have changed for downtown businesses within 500 feet of the new Pleasant Street parking lot. That motion was defeated by a two-thirds vote as well.

However, two articles were passed which allocated $15,000 each for the Planning Board to hire a consultant to study the best ways to move forward with Village zoning. The Planning Board said without that kind of expertise, it did not feel comfortable approving bylaws which could have unintended consequences on the development of the Village.

Developer Wayne Sawchuk, who has proposed a mixed-use development in the Samuel Bates House (1811 building) in the village, said one of his main concerns in terms of the articles passing the second time around, is that the Planning Board, and in turn the town, will not support the articles without a conclusive report from the planner. He added as far as he knows, the Planning Board has not solicited bids for the planner as of yet, and it is unlikely a report will be complete by the spring.

Another issue the EDC is up against is finding a way to answer questions regarding litigation over sewer capacity. Brown said if Village zoning is changed to allow development of residential units, there has been concern that it will open up the town to litigation, as there is no sewer capacity to accommodate additional units.

Sawchuk also noted it might be wise for the EDC to discuss establishing parking regulations. He said having developers provide parking for units depending on lot size and allocating designated spaces for residents should be considered. He also noted it might be a good idea to dedicate overnight parking in some areas.

Brown said the EDC is also working on compiling an inventory of all the residential units which could be built, should the zoning regulations change. He said there are currently 31 known units in the village, and one major concern of residents voiced the last time is just how many more people could be living downtown if the articles pass.

The EDC will continue working on answering the questions associated with the articles. It will meet again Wednesday, Dec. 20 at 7 p.m. at Town Hall. All are welcome to attend.

Town to be awarded state funds

ing of the application it reapplied this Sept. 8. "It's been cut by $100,000, but we think the town can still do something with it," he quipped.

Prior to applying for the funding, Brennan and Gruber received endorsement from a number of other boards, including the Board of Health, which is very supportive of the endeavor as it both promotes physical activity and cuts down on pollution.

Longtime Board of Health member Steve Bobo said he was very glad to hear about the grant. He has been working with other Greenbush towns on a "Rails with Trails" project and adding sidewalks, which encourage walking to the station, would be a wonderful complement to their efforts. Rails with Trails is part of a national initiative that constructs biking and walking paths parallel to train right-of-ways, providing safe access to public transportation. Not only does the program endorse physical activity for a healthy lifestyle, it would help cut down on pollution and encourage connectivity of communities.

Bobo said while it has been a struggle with the MBTA and the town has received less than it wanted by means of pedestrian access from the organization, "Thanks to the Greenbush gang, we've gotten something out of it," he said. "This is certainly a step in the right direction," he said.

Cohasset was one of 14 communities that received funding from the state. Pedestrian and bicycle improvements will be made not only in Cohasset, but areas of Boston, Holyoke, Worcester, Cambridge, Lowell, Scituate and Somerville. New housing development will also be completed in areas of Boston and Fitchburg.

In a press release issued by the Office for Commonwealth Development, Development Chief Andrew Gottlieb explains "Smart Growth" is about building in and around central business districts or traditional city or town centers, near transit stations or in areas that have previously been developed for commercial, industrial or institutional uses. He said it is also about offering improved transportation and mobility choices to reduce automobile dependence. "Today's awards will go a long way in improving our quality of life in Massachusetts because these projects will create more housing and create more vibrant neighborhoods where walking, bicycling, and public transit are viable mobility options," he stated.

Cohasset is currently in the throes of construction on its MBTA commuter rail station, which will be located at the site of the former Winter Garden skating rink on Route 3A.

Cohasset is currently in the throes of construction on its MBTA commuter rail station, which will be located at the site of the former Winter Garden skating rink on Route 3A. Next door, the old strip mall and the buildings, which housed Mary Lou's News and Exotic Flowers, have been torn down in preparation for a Transit Oriented District. The TOD will include a mix of retail, including the possibility of a restaurant, and housing on five acres.

Voters at last spring's annual Town Meeting set the stage for the development by approving a zoning article which established a transit-oriented development overlay district at the former Davenport parcel, located at 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). The overlay district permits "mixed use" development that was not allowed under existing zoning.

The developer, New Jersey-based Connell Real Estate & Development Co., is proceeding with plans to redevelop the site that would include 34,000 square feet of new retail space and a small number of one-and two-bedroom apartments.

To date there are more than 88 TOD projects in the state in various stages of planning, development, or already completed in transit station areas, including more than 26,000 units of housing, 4.6 million square feet of retail development, and 11 million square feet of office development.

Village merchants say 'Thanks' with Holiday Stroll on Saturday

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"People have continued to patronize the stores and we've managed to stay in business despite some pretty rough times."
— David Bigley, All the Best

The holidays are upon us and that means it's time for downtown merchants to deck their storefronts and open their doors for the annual "Cohasset Village Holiday Stroll."

This year's event, which will take place Saturday, Dec. 16 from 4-7 p.m., will be a double celebration as merchants are also extending their thanks to the many patrons who have helped keep business strong during an immense amount of construction this year.

"People have continued to patronize the stores and we've managed to stay in business despite some pretty rough times," said David Bigley, owner of All the Best Natural Foods. "We sincerely appreciate the patience and continued support of our patrons, and this is a small way for us to show it."

This year, merchants have partnered together with the school's Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity, or METCO program, which allows students from more urban areas to commute to schools in suburban areas as a way of expanding educational opportunities and reducing racial imbalance. "In the past, the Village has benefitted the Cohasset Food Pantry, but this year we decided to do something different," said Bigley, as all the merchants decided to purchase wreaths for their storefronts from the METCO program, which was selling holiday greenery as a fund-raiser. "I think we just about doubled their order and they were thrilled," he said.

To give the village a unified theme, all the wreaths were decorated the same, with gold bows, starfish and seashells.

The merchants will also be holding raffles in every store, the proceeds of which will benefit the Appalachia Service Project. "We all know ASP is something near and dear to my heart," said Bigley, as he has participated many times and helps with the fund-raisers, which make the trip possible. ASP is an interfaith program that sends teens and adults from all over the country to areas of Appalachia, to do badly needed repairs on homes in some of the poorest areas of the United States.

Bigley said at his shop, he will be raffling off a basket of organic coffee blends which includes a CD of music from countries which grow coffee beans. He will also be offering organic chocolate samples for those who stop by. At the Windsor Tea Shop, owner Judy McColgan will be raffling off a tea sampler. Emporium Naturals will raffle off a basket of natural soaps. "We'll all be raffling off something that has to do with our stores," he said.

For the second year in a row, Brendan St. John will be providing hayrides for those who attend. Proceeds from the hayrides will also benefit the ASP trip. Guests will come aboard in front of the Windsor Tea Shop at the James Brook Crossing Shops, and will ride up Depot Court down North Main Street, around the common and back again.

There will be live entertainment this weekend as well, as the Cohasset High School Jazz Ensemble will be performing at the South Shore Art Center. In addition, Bigley's son Aaron will be coming home from college specifically to play the bagpipes during the celebration. The Rusty Skippers will also be marching around the downtown area and the bells will be played at St. Stephen's Church. "It should be really nice," he said.

But no holiday event would be complete without the jolly old elf himself, and the Holiday Stroll will not disappoint. Santa will be on hand at Coldwell Bankers to listen to this year's wish list, but children may want to follow up by sitting down to write a letter destined for the North Pole at Coastal Countryside.

To give the village a unified theme, all the wreaths in the Village — like the ones here on Darrilyn's — were decorated the same, with gold bows, starfish and seashells.

Although weather predictions currently look good for the weekend, the event will be held rain or shine. "We're all pretty excited for it."

The Cohasset Village Holiday Stroll will take place Saturday, Dec. 16 from 4-7 p.m. in Cohasset Village. The village will be closed to traffic on South Main Street from Elm Street to Brook Street, roughly from the Red Lion Inn to Cohasset Hardware during the celebration. For more information, please call David Bigley at (781) 383-3005.

CHS girls feature just 2 seniors, 1 junior

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

John Levangie's biggest concern? Filling the gaps in the guard positions lies at the top of his worry list.

Can you imagine the confused and shocked look opponents will have when they square off against the Cohasset High girls basketball team?

Who would dream that head coach John Levangie selected two seniors, one junior, four sophomores, three freshmen and one eighth-grader to join his varsity squad?

With this information some opponents would have thought Levangie had accidentally submitted the junior varsity lineup. So what's the deal here?

What names do we find among the young but elite 11 players on his roster? Senior captains Haley Haracz and Lacey Richardson; junior Anna Haggerty; sophomores Sam Lehr, Carly Salerno, Sarah Coggins, and Kayla Farren; freshmen Tory Lehr, Meredith Kelly, and Samantha Crough; eighth-grader Carly Haggerty.

One would guess, after more than 25 years of coaching, Levangie will weave together a strong team. Last year's 16-6 record and trip to the Div. 4

Grapplers score big win over BC High

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Things were looking bleak for the Cohasset High wrestling team when it found itself down 24-0 through four matches against BC High on Wednesday night.

But the Skippers responded with wins in eight of its next matches – six via pin – and finished with a 46-36 victory to improve their record to 2-2 on the young season.

Senior Adam Smith got the run started with a four-point, major decision victory at 152. Seniors Gannon Dorion (160) and Tim Toomey (171) both pulled out clutch third-period pins to turn what were going to be three-point wins into six points on the scoreboard for Cohasset.

At 189, senior Nick Cambi continued his dominant start to the season, earning a pin, his fourth in as many matches. Junior Steve Hurlbut pinned his opponent at 215.

Sophomore Rudy Helbock won his 103-pound match, and freshman Jack Murphy (112) and senior Ryan McLellan (119) finished the run with pins of their own. McLellan joins Cambi with a 4-0 individual record so far this season.

New hockey coach has a positive outlook

Bob Walsh's tenure as Cohasset High hockey coach didn't get off to a winning start, but he is far from discouraged about the season ahead.

Considering the caliber of opponent (Westwood) they faced in Saturday's game, the Skippers fared pretty well. A pair of goals from junior winger Pat Doonan had Cohasset within one, 3-2, at the second intermission.

The third period wasn't quite as competitive, as Cohasset suffered a couple tough breaks that saw two goals into its own net off of players' skates. Westwood also added a pair of power play goals to eventually earn a 7-2 win.

"Westwood was as solid as I thought they were going to be," said Walsh. "They're a good team, and we really didn't execute some of the things we had practiced the week before."

With that said, the first-year high school coach (Walsh is also associate head coach for the Bridgewater State College team) wasn't about to let one loss get in the way of an overall positive outlook for the year.

"We're going to be a good team," Walsh said Monday. "They're working hard everyday, both on the ice and doing off-ice practices."

Walsh is a proponent of off-ice

Cohasset's Nick Cambi has the upper hand on his Bridgewater-Raynham opponent during last year's Marshfield Tournament. The Skippers will be competing there again this year during the Christmas vacation. In the meantime, they host Hanover, Canton and Norton tomorrow morning (Dec. 16) at 10, and travel to Bristol-Plymouth on Monday night.

South semifinals underscore his winning style. He also surrounds himself with highly knowledgeable assistants like Kay Long, Basil Cronin and JV coach Matt Lewis.

So, in a few words, how would you describe his players? Inexperienced, well-conditioned, and accelerating in their skills.

Levangie's biggest concern? Filling the gaps in the guard positions lies at the top of his worry list. He lost some excellent ball handlers like Chelsea Grossman to graduation and Gabriella Flibotte to prep school.

Cohasset's Sam Lehr (52) rises above her defender for two of her game-high 23 points against Holbrook.

To offset this weakness, Levangie has emphasized the importance of a well-executed press on defense. This decision paid off big-time in game one of the season at Holbrook.

As the game progressed, the Skippers gradually tightened the leash on the Bulldogs and didn't let go until the final buzzer when the Skippers won by a decisive 52-17 score. The Skippers never fell behind. Even at the half they controlled the floor by a commanding 20-9 lead.

Haracz voiced excitement about the game, saying, "Our press really shut Holbrook down at the beginning of the second half. As a result we went on a 16-point run."

Levangie also became animated when asked about the game, saying, "The girls ran very well. Their preseason work definitely showed. Once they strung some passes together, things fell into place."

Sam Lehr tallied a whopping 23 points, while Farren and Salerno contributed seven and six, respectively. Haracz ripped down seven rebounds, closely followed by Salerno with six.

A few days after the game, Levangie fielded a few questions from the Mariner about how this team will perform in 06-07.

"It's still too early to pinpoint all of our strengths and weaknesses," he said. "However, the girls have practiced very hard since day one and improve daily."

He has initially picked Farren, Haracz, Richardson, Salerno and Lehr for his starting five.

Of course, this list can change at any time.

With the talents of Haggerty, Salerno, Coggins, Farren, and Crough, Levangie will address the guard weakness. Can the Lady Skippers compile a strong record and compete in the sectional semifinals like last year? Or even further?

It's probably too early to call. No one team in the South Shore League can claim dominance. Levangie predicts any one of Carver, Harwich, Norwell, Abington or Cohasset could win the SSL championship.

In fact, what Levangie likes most about coaching is the "tight balance" in the SSL. He also enjoys watching the girls improve in their skills and come together as a team.

By the end of January we should have a good idea about where Cohasset will fit into the league hierarchy. Keep your fingers crossed.

Skippers win season opener in Holbrook

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

It took three tries, but Cohasset High boys basketball coach Dorian Bryant can now say he won a season opener.

The Skippers got strong efforts from sophomore guard John Sturino (13 points), junior guard Pat McCarthy (nine), senior center Justin Alexander (eight points, seven rebounds) and sophomore forward Danny Martin (eight points, 10 boards off the bench) in a 52-40 win over Holbrook last Thursday.

Cohasset got off to a slow start in the game, but got it together and found itself up by six at the half. The visitors dominated the early minutes of the second half, eventually building a 21-point advantage.

Holbrook made a couple runs, but never got closer than 12, as Cohasset made enough plays down the stretch to prevent things from getting too interesting.

Bryant assessed the game by saying, "Nerves got us in the first half. The effort was great for the entire game, but we're a new team trying to find ourselves. In the second half we settled down and got comfortable on offense and defense. Defensively, we did a lot of nice things to create fast break points the other way."

Cohasset opens its South Shore League slate tonight (Dec. 15) at home against East Bridgewater, and on Tuesday host league favorite Abington.

The Skippers have struggled in the win column the last two seasons, but Bryant remains hopeful that will start to change this winter. In order to do so, though, it will require contributions from some new faces. Alexander, a strong rebounder and good inside scorer, is the only senior on a team with over half of its roster being new to the varsity scene.

"We're definitely young this year," said Bryant. "We're hoping to jell by the halfway point of the year and start winning some games."

McCarthy, a league All-Star last year, is a good shooter and ball-handler. He and Alexander, the team's two captains, will likely be the first two options of offense.

Sturino brings speed and good instincts to the floor, and will start at the two-guard spot. Juniors Dave Snowdale and Mark Flibotte will start at the forward positions. Flibotte is a talented three-sport athlete with a good medium-range jump shot, while Bryant likes the energy that Snowdale brings to the floor.

Cohasset has a pair of athletic big men off the bench in 6-foot-5 sophomore Gordon Smith and Martin, who stands 6-3. Bryant says both show their inexperience at times, but both have the potential to become very good players. Junior forward Kenny Muir brings a tough rebounding presence to round out the Skippers' group of big men.

Sophomore Marcus Charles will back up McCarthy at the point. Bryant described Charles as a crafty ball-handler with good court vision, but is another player that needs to work on his overall game on a daily basis. The coach said junior two-guard Ryan Crough is "probably our best shooter," and he will certainly see plenty of minutes.

Junior swingmen Kyle Pinkus and Chris Rose round out the Skippers' bench. Pinkus is one of the team's best pure athletes, while Rose is also a good shooter.

activities, including the "killer 20's": run 100 yards, do 20 push-ups, run 100 yards, do 19 crunches, run 100 yards, do 18 push-ups, and so on until there's just one crunch left.

That sounds rough, to be sure, but Walsh doesn't have a problem setting high expectations. In the preseason, the Skippers scrimmaged with Xaverian, a Div. 1 Catholic Conference power.

"We skated pretty well with them. We put a couple pucks in their net," Walsh said. "They pretty much filled out net, sure, but I cared more if they would skate and play hard, and they did."

Looking at this year's team, Cohasset brings an interesting blend of youth and experience to the table. Junior Charlie Czerkawski, who assisted on both of Doonan's goals against Westwood, will center the first line with Doonan and senior Corbin Faber on the wings. This line played well together last year and Walsh said he saw no reason to break it up this winter.

Senior Colin Smith joins a trio of underclassmen – Andrew Bell, Harry Cipolla and Vinny Curran – as players who will see some shifts on a fourth line. At some point, Cohasset hopes to return senior center Austin Lanzillotti, who is still hampered by a back injury suffered last winter.

Cohasset features a physically imposing pair of defensemen in seniors Conor Holway and Zach Murray. Holway is a returning South Shore League All-Star and Mariner All-Scholastic, while Murray has impressed thus far despite not playing the sport last year.

Behind those two on the depth chart are senior Ben Massotta, junior RK Quebec, sophomores Frank Wheelwright and Ian Lyster, and freshman Conor Queenan. Walsh has been particularly impressed with Wheelwright's combination of size and speed on the ice.

Sophomore Jonny Wade returns between the pipes for Cohasset after a freshman season in which he improved tremendously from beginning to end. Freshman backup Andy McKenna has potential and will see some action, said Walsh.

The Skippers host Rockland tonight (8 p.m.) at Pilgrim, and open their league season Wednesday at home at 3 p.m. against Harwich.

Grapplers score big win over BC High

"It was great to score that many unanswered points," said head coach Torin Sweeney. "When we were down 24-0, I didn't think we could've quite pulled it off. But we got some big wins to get us back in it."

The Skippers opened their season on Saturday with a quad meet against Tri-County, Pembroke and Mansfield. Cambi and McLellan both won all three of their matches, with Cambi pinning all three of his opponents. Murphy and Helbock won twice each.

As a team, Cohasset won one of its matches, against Tri-County. Mansfield, a Div. 2 power, dominated, while the loss to Pembroke was a close one. Sweeney said one key match swung the contest in Pembroke's favor, but the coach is optimistic about his team's chances should it face the defending Div. 3 South champions again.

"I think we'll have a good shot at them if we see them again," said Sweeney.

The Tri-County match was the first for Cohasset in the newly formed South Shore/Mayflower League. Traditional SSL teams Cohasset, Carver and Norwell have joined with Mayflower programs Holbrook, Tri-County, Southeast Regional and Bristol-Plymouth to form a seven-team league. Next year, South Shore Voke will make it eight.

Sweeney is excited about the new format, saying, "Every Wednesday night is going to be a league match, like it used to be. One goal of ours is certainly to win the league and get into the state tournament automatically."

This season, the Skippers have 22 athletes. With just six seniors and two juniors, it's a young team, but Sweeney doesn't see that as a problem, given the way young wrestlers like Helbock and Murphy have performed so far.

"We have a lot of freshmen and sophomores that we're going to be counting on," said the coach. "I'm very pleased so far with that group and how hard they've been working at it."

Cohasset competes Saturday morning at 10, at home, against Hanover, Hingham, Canton and Norton. The Skippers then travel to Bristol-Plymouth Monday night.

These Deer Hill third graders prove that there is strength in numbers! Since September, they have collected 999 Boxtops for Education, making their grade the winner of Round One of the Boxtop Challenge. Great teamwork grade 3! The Boxtop Challenge is a recycling project run through the Deer Hill Library. Boxtops for Education coupons, which are found on all General Mills products, are collected throughout the year and redeemed for 10 cents each. All community members are invited to participate in this worthwhile program by clipping boxtops and sending them to Deer Hill School. Stay tuned to find out which grade will win round 2.

Concert Band, Chorus on annual holiday tour

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

This trip has become somewhat of a tradition and is a great experience for both the performers and spectators.

Holidays are just around the corner and the convenience of the Internet takes all the pains out of shopping; except maybe carpal tunnel. Wednesday was a half-day, much to the chagrin of adults and pleasure of students. Today the Concert Band and Chorus went on their annual Holiday Tour, performing for students and senior citizens in Cohasset and Hingham. This trip has become somewhat of a tradition and is a great experience for both the performers and spectators. Speaking of performances, Guys and Dolls was a huge success! Hats off to Ms. Hoskin, Mr. Marks, and the ensemble for their stellar performance.

Independent study staffers of the Spinnaker Staff joined forces to publish a supplement to the Spinnaker with the help of Ms. Berman's English classes. Don't miss the premiere issue of The Spinnsheet! Who knows, maybe it will become a collector's item for eBay in the future. For a single dollar, purchase a copy for yourself on Dec. 22.

News is scarce this week. However, these tidbits should tide you over until our next chat.

• Monday the NEASC follow-up committee met during school in the main office.

• Tuesday morning the Superintendent's Administration Council met.

• Tuesday after school a joint faculty meeting was held in the library.

• On Wednesday, the PSO Staff Luncheon was held in the cafeteria.

• Thursday morning Cohasset Emergency Management met in the community room.

• Thursday after school the Department heads met in the Career Center.

• Student Council met after school Thursday.

• Today the Band and Chorus went on their Holiday Tour.

• Chanukah starts today. Happy Chanukah for those readers celebrating the Festival of Lights!

For parents who are still wondering what to give their kids (if they deserve anything) this holiday season, gift cards are a safe bet. Then when your son or daughter spends that money at the store of their choice, they can't complain to you about their lousy gifts. And kids: get your family members something nice this year — they put up with you every single day. Enjoy the weekend, Cohasset.

Carriage House registration, open house

The Carriage House School will hold their Open House and registration Saturday, Jan. 20, between the hours of 10 a.m. and 12 p.m. Parents and children are invited to come and explore the classrooms and meet the teachers. If you are unable to attend this open house, feel free to call the school to obtain a registration form.

The Carriage House offers programs to toddlers and well as preschool aged children. The toddler program enrolls children from 15 months, by Sept. 1, to 2 years, 9 months. The toddler program runs two days a week, Monday and Wednesday from 9 to 11:30 a.m., Monday and Wednesday from 12:30 to 3 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday from 9 to 11:30 a.m., and Tuesday and Thursday from 12:30 to 3 p.m.

Carriage House preschool offers three programs to meet the needs of children ages 2.9 years by Sept. 1, to 5 years old. The Tuesday and Thursday morning program runs from 9 to 11:30 a.m., the Monday, Wednesday, and Friday morning program runs from 9 to 11:30 a.m., and the Monday through Thursday afternoon program runs from 12:30 to 3 p.m. This afternoon program is for children who will be 4 years old by September 1st and entering Kindergarten the following year, or need a challenging year before they enter Kindergarten. The afternoon program also offers an extended day opportunity until 4:30 p.m.

Open House will be held at the First Parish House of the Unitarian Church at 23 North Main Street. Applications must be completed and returned to the school by Friday, Feb. 9. A $50 non-refundable registration fee must accompany the registration form.

The School enrollment policy is based on returning Carriage House families, First Parish families and remaining space will be filled by lottery. Parents will be notified by phone or mail the week of Feb. 14.

If you have any questions concerning Open House or the registration process, contact Georgie Gladdys, Director, at 781-383-9785. The Carriage House School is licensed by the Office of Massachusetts Child Care Services and is NAEYC Accredited.

Art boosters celebrate successful year on the Internet

Austin Breslow
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

One year ago, www.CohassetArtsBoosters.com was launched with the hope that Cohasset Middle-High School students and teachers could share their artistic talents with the community at large. Here are some statistics: More than 4,000 visitors have stopped by the site since its Nov. 19, 2005 opening. The site has been viewed over 6,500 times by those visitors. Collectively each of our pages has been accessed over 82,000 times.

We posted more than 63 news stories to inform our readers of the exciting arts-related events taking place at Cohasset Middle-High School. We uploaded more than 200 images to our Web site. We created a message board that has hosted almost 40 topics of discussion.

We have created special feature pages for events including Fine Arts Night 2006, Eat Your Art 2006, Cabaret 2006, Winter Concert 2005 CD, and "Guys and Dolls" (All-School Musical 2006).

We thank you for visiting and hope you continue to stay informed.

Have an idea for a page or feature that you would like us to include on the Web site? E-mail us at info@CohassetArtsBoosters.com.

Happenings

The Rev. Jan Carlsson-Bull leads the carolers in song during last year's Caroling on the Common.

Caroling on the Common is Dec. 16

Participants will assemble at the First Parish's Parish House, 23 North Main St., between 3:45 and 4 p.m.

First Parish, Unitarian Universalist Church, is sponsoring Caroling on the Common Saturday, Dec. 16. Everyone is welcome. This is a community event for young and old, especially families with school-age children. Exceptional singing voices are not required; carols will be familiar and simple. Because it gets dark quickly, attendees are asked to bring flashlights.

Participants will assemble at the First Parish's Parish House, 23 North Main St., between 3:45 and 4 p.m. Carolers will circuit much of the Common, serenading selected homes as weather permits. At approximately at 5 p.m., everyone will return to the Parish House for cocoa, cider and cookies. Cookie donations will be appreciated.

Everyone is asked to bring a pair of socks – or two or three – that will be donated to Boston Health Care for the Homeless. Socks should be white cotton; both men's and women's sizes are welcome.

Join friends for this annual old-fashioned holiday get-together. For more information, call Sandy Bailey at First Parish at 383-1100 or Woody Chittick at 383-3215.

Holiday fun at One Creative Place

Holiday Happenings are filling the month of December at One Creative Place here in Cohasset. From Shop till you Drop nites to Gingerbread House Workshops and gift making programs and more for all ages, you can bring the kids over to have a fantastic time. For more information, go to www.onecreativeplace.net or call 781-383-2211.

'The Messiah' to be performed

Second Congregational Church in Cohasset will present selections from Handel's "The Messiah" on Dec. 17. The church choir and guest soloists, accompanied by a chamber orchestra, will perform. This is an opportunity for everyone to welcome the Christmas season by enjoying this music, performed right in the community.

All are welcome to the 10 a.m. service and performance. For more information, call 781-383-0345.

Join the Girl Scouts

Any girls interested in joining Girl Scouts, who are in grades kindergarten through high school, can call Amy Brash at 781-923-1099 or email amybrash@putnam.com for more information.

Adults are also needed to become troop leaders. Anyone interested should contact Brash.

Diary of a Mad Elf

Cohasset native to star in Sedaris satire at New Repertory Theatre

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

If you've watched one too many holiday TV specials, sung enough traditional carols for even a pious person's lifetime, and smiled through more than your share of community-chorus-accompanied Christmas tree lightings, then "The Santaland Diaries" may be just what you need at this time of year.

"It is an antidote to all the treacle available just about everywhere at the holidays," explains John Kuntz, who opens next week in a new production of the David Sedaris play at the New Repertory Theatre in Watertown. "Sedaris's observations are very, very witty. He takes American popular culture and turns it on its ear. The best comedy is dangerous and risky and that's what Sedaris does so well."

A humorist and essayist, Sedaris wrote "The Santaland Diaries" - an acerbic account of his stint as Crumpet the elf at Macy's flagship store in New York - for National Public Radio, where he read it for the first time in 1992. Since being adapted for the stage by Joe Mantello, the piece has become one of the 10 most produced, non-Shakespeare plays of recent years, according to American Theatre magazine. Kuntz first played the role, under the direction of Steven Maler, at Boston's SpeakEasy Stage Company in 1998. He reprised the role the following year at the Copley Theatre, also in Boston.

"This is my third time doing this show, but it's more than five years since I last played Crumpet so I'm eager for this opportunity. Wesley Savick is directing this time around and he will definitely bring a new, different energy to the play," says Kuntz.

John Kuntz will appear in "The Santaland Diaries"

"Sedaris's observations are very, very witty. He takes American popular culture and turns it on its ear. The best comedy is dangerous and risky and that's what Sedaris does so well."
— John Kuntz

Most of that energy will come from Sedaris's own autobiographical look at his one-time winter job.

"'Diaries' is a pretty literal take, perhaps somewhat embellished, on Sedaris's experiences working alongside a department store Santa. The character has questionable dreams and ambitions. He moves to New York to find work on a soap opera and instead ends up as an elf at Macy's."

Kuntz first developed his own interest in acting while a student at Cohasset High School where his late father, Dennis Kuntz, was the longtime Athletic Director. Upon graduating in 1986, Kuntz went on to Emerson College and later earned a master's degree in Playwriting from Boston University. Along the way to achieving acclaim as both an actor and playwright, Kuntz, 38, had his own elfin early career experiences.

"I have certainly had my share of humiliating acting jobs. When I was in my 20s, I performed in drag as part of a murder mystery on a sightseeing train filled with senior citizens. It was a one-time gig that I did for a friend when a woman in the cast had to bow out unexpectedly. The senior citizens weren't even told in advance that there would be a show presented on the train, so when my character was killed they actually seemed to feel badly for her."

Things have improved decidedly for Kuntz since then and he has gone on to win Elliot Norton, IRNE (Independent Reviewers of New England) and New York Fringe Festival awards. Kuntz plans to present some of his own work in Watertown.

"'Diaries' is a short play so we usually have a curtain raiser before the show starts. This time around, I'm doing two short pieces about Christmas - one monologue, and one monologue with audience participation. I started working on them very recently so they are not quite finished, but they're meant to be sweet but silly comedy skits."

Movie review

His son also rises in 'Pursuit'

"The Pursuit of Happyness" (B+)

By JAMES VERNIERE
FILM CRITIC

The hard-luck drama "The Pursuit of Happyness" is a family affair in more ways than one. Will Smith delivers a wrenching performance as real-life Chris Gardner, a husband and father trying to raise himself out of homelessness and poverty. His son, Jaden Smith, however, almost upstages him playing his screen son.

Directed by Italian filmmaker Gabriele Muccino ("L'Ultimo bacio") and scripted by Steve Conrad (last year's neglected gem "The Weather Man"), the film is set in 1980s San Francisco. Chris is a harried father, husband and salesman whose hair is beginning to gray. He sells medical bone-scanning devices, which he purchased in a get-rich-quick scheme.

His wife Linda (Thandie Newton in a thankless role) is terribly unhappy about her family's situation and blames it on nice-guy Chris. Why her double-shifts don't at least pay the rent is never quite explained. Chris didn't meet his father until he was 28 and has resolved to be a full-time dad to son Christopher. But he falls further behind on his bills. His bile-spewing wife finally leaves for New York City, leaving Chris with their son.

Redemption appears in the form of an unpaid internship at Dean Witter, where Chris, who is smart, good with numbers and a master of Rubik's Cube, dreams of striking it rich as a stockbroker. But he and Chris experience one setback after another. The film's arc is predictable; the payoff comes late, and the little-engine-that-could musical score grates.

Christopher (Jaden Smith) helps his dad (Will Smith) tie the perfect Windsor knot.

Still, you can't fake that father-son chemistry, and when Smith finally weeps, you will, too.

But the acting gets you through it. As two Dean-Witter execs, character actors Brian Howe and James Karen lend valuable support. But the film belongs to the Smiths, and as an astute colleague reminded me (before I thought of it, of course), Chris and his son are throwbacks to the father-son duo in Vittorio De Sica's neorealist classic "The Bicycle Thief."

Smith, who is currently playing the title role in a new version of Richard Matheson's novel "I Am Legend" for director Francis Lawrence ("Constantine"), is one of the world's biggest movie stars, and he has the chops to back it up.

Carrying one of those ball-and-chain, bone-scanning devices almost wherever he goes, Smith's hard-charging Chris is a genuinely moving metaphor for the indomitable human spirit.

My only reservation is Muccino's occasional heavy-handedness, such as when he cues up of "Bridge Over Troubled Water." Smith spends so much time running in "The Pursuit of Happyness," by the time the film was over, I was exhausted.

Still, you can't fake that father-son chemistry, and when Smith finally weeps, you will, too.

Rated PG-13. "The Pursuit of Happyness" contains profanity.

Holiday music on the menu

Change of venue for Quincy Dinner Theatre

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

With Quincy's Masonic Temple currently closed for major renovations, the Quincy Dinner Theatre (QDT) has moved its annual Musical Holiday Party to Braintree's Sons of Italy Hall. The venue may have changed, but the variety show approach to holiday entertainment remains solidly intact, as does the tasty four-course dinner by Fasano's Catering.

Opening with a PG-13 rendering of "Hey Big Spender" from Cy Coleman's "Sweet Charity," showcasing Amy Dancz, Gina Nawazelski, Molly Kelleher, and Katie Ford as they help a shopping-impaired Joe Ciccolo pick out Christmas presents, the show smoothly segues into the full-company rendition of "Start of Something Big," with Steve Allen's familiar music accompanied here by Joyce McDonough's original lyrics.

While big and brassy works well when all 10 cast members share the stage, virtually each one is also give a chance to shine alone in the spotlight and Kelleher is the first to do just that with her plaintive and pretty take on "Shake Me a Rattle." But while holiday music is the order of the day, Michael Glashow presents one of this year's biggest pop hits in his act one solo. And, unless you slept through the 2006 season of "American Idol," you'll recognize and enjoy Glashow's moody rendition of Daniel Powter's "Bad Day." Ford shifts gears with a strong and energetic "Jingle Bell Rock" that even has her inviting an audience member on-stage to join her in a twist.

Dancz and Sanjay Merchant join their beautiful voices in "The Prayer," the Carole Bayer Sager song made famous by Andrea Bocelli and Celine Dion, adding some meaning to the musical merriment.

The full cast opens act two with a rousing "We Need a Little Christmas." The second half of QDT's Holiday Party is presented in the style of a vintage TV Christmas special complete with a big-name host - in this case, QDT Holiday party staple McDonough, who does the honors as if she were channeling both Kay Starr and Kaye Ballard. McDonough is clearly having fun, however, and that is never more evident than when she is joined by Jim Grassia for Weird Al Yancovic's "The Grapefruit Diet."

You gotta love a show that follows Yancovic's wickedly funny answer to one popular weight-loss approach with "Oh Holy Night," sung with great solemnity by Dancz and Merchant, but that's just how director George Stevens packages these annual holiday shows - like the classic TV variety programs once hosted by Ed Sullivan, Bob Hope and Dinah Shore - with something for everyone.

Like a procastinator's Christmas tree, however, the show could still use a little trimming. The Weather Girls made "It's Raining Men" a dance club anthem in 1982, and the QDT company has fun with it now, but it doesn't quite fit with the rest of the proceedings, even with Michelle Webb's high-energy choreography, and is just one of the numbers the 150-minute show could easily do without.

What do fit are the beautiful costumes worn by the cast, including lovely evening wear for the ladies and dapper tuxedoes for the gentlemen.

Director George Stevens had help from Geoffrey Stevens on the book for this year's show and the collaboration has resulted in a warm-hearted evening of entertainment which is backed by the tight trio of Music Director Petros Sekelliou on piano, percussionist Marcelo Woloski, and Francesco Marcocci on bass.

(The Quincy Dinner Theatre will present its "Musical Holiday Party XIX" at the Sons of Italy, 161 King Hill Road, Braintree, through Dec. 17. For tickets and information, call 781-843-5862 or visit www.quincydinnertheater.com).

'Respect' has its rewards

Diane Miller of Whitman was the grand prize winner of a necklace at a "Shopping-and-Show Shindig!" held recently at a performance of "Respect, A Musical Journey" at Boston's Stuart Street Playhouse. Frosted Brownie, a Pembroke-based traveling boutique, helped present a special evening of shopping and a performance of the show celebrating women through American popular music. Miller, who attended the event with her co-workers from New England Art Publishers in Abington, accepted her prize from the cast on stage following the performance.

Featuring a cast of local actresses - including Tina Checchia of Quincy - "Respect" chronicles four women and the songs they listened to at important moments in their lives. All or part of more than 50 well-known songs are performed including "Mr. Sandman," "Dedicated to the One I Love," "Diamonds are a Girl's Best Friend," "I Am Woman," "I Will Survive," and, of course, Aretha Franklin's "R-E-S-P-E-C-T." The show was written and created by popular music scholar Dorothy Marcic.

"Respect, A Musical Journey" is currently in an open-ended run at the Stuart Street Playhouse, 200 Stuart St., Boston. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.respectmusicaljourney.com

Aboard the Sea Cloud

By BENJAMIN LYONS
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

With the British Virgin Islands slipping past on either side, I looked up at a complex web of lines and masts supporting almost an acre of sail that stretched 178 feet into the sky. One deck above, 34 other passengers were enjoying a festive brunch complete with champagne and freshly made crepes.

Here onboard the Sea Cloud, the romance of a tall ship and the unhurried luxury of a yacht combined to create a memorable morning at sea.

Created for American cereal heiress Marjorie Merriweather Post, the Sea Cloud was in 1931 the largest private yacht ever built. Post spent years designing the ship and spared no expense in its fitting out, including renting a Brooklyn warehouse where she constructed mock-ups of the interior.

As Post's ship the Sea Cloud entertained royalty, was used on diplomatic missions and saw service in World War II over the initial objections of President Roosevelt, who felt the vessel was simply too beautiful to be sacrificed. Sold by Post in 1955, the ship was eventually forgotten until refurbished in 1979 as a cruise ship for 65 passengers.

Today, Post's personal touch and elegant lifestyle are still felt onboard — the Sea Cloud feels less like a cruise ship than a wealthy person's beautiful home.

The Sea Cloud

An authentic remnant from another era, the ship is one of those few great ships with a mystique and cachet that cannot be duplicated.

Rich mahogany woods and constantly shined brass form the superstructure while varnished wooden railings and benches line the teak promenade deck. Gilded chandeliers and oil paintings grace the intimate dining room and library, perhaps the most beautiful room at sea.

Eight original cabins feature Carrara marble bathrooms, antique dressers and decorative fireplaces. If you aren't staying in one of these luxurious retreats you can still see them as they are opened up once a week for all passengers in a festive champagne and canape-filled open house. (The more-modern cabins on the ship are much smaller although still tastefully appointed.)

Food and service on the Sea Cloud are among the very best at sea, and like-minded (but well-heeled) passengers delight in the casual, daytime outdoor lifestyle in which reading a book or chatting with convivial shipmates is the main activity — many of the passengers on my sailing were from Germany (the ship is now operated by a German company) and a European ambience prevailed.

The elegant dining room where you enjoy fine international cuisine.

Lunch is served in a sumptuous buffet on the Promenade deck. Dinner is often served al fresco too. During the Captain's Welcome and Farewell dinners, suits are worn in the dining room. Complimentary wine is offered at lunch and dinner.

High tea in the afternoon comes with such treats as hot waffles and ice cream.

The real joy for ship enthusiasts, however, is in the rigging, masts and sails. A four-masted barque, the Sea Cloud has 29 sails and hundreds of lines that run from the deck to the very top of the mast. Unlike on more modern sailing ships, the deck crew onboard this ship has to scamper up the shrouds and ratlines before moving horizontally above the sea to the very end of the yardarms.

Standing on a small wire swinging wildly about while untying the sails, they look like they are floating in the air — kind of like a circus act at sea. These daily aerial acrobatics by the crew — the ship only uses its engines when it has to — never failed to amaze.

Itineraries are also different than your standard cruise ship variety. On a Sea Cloud cruise you bypass the crowded shopping havens that some Caribbean ports have become and instead call at tranquil islands where you share quiet harbors with private sailboats rather than megaships. Port calls on my cruise included Isle Des Saintes, Guadeloupe and Jost Van Dyke, British Virgin Islands. Once on land you are more likely to share the road with goats and chickens than taxis. Snorkeling and beachcombing are among port activities — the Sea Cloud stocks equipment for snorkeling, waterskiing and windsurfing, and shore excursions (such as a visit to nearby caves) are complimentary.

Throughout my weeklong cruise, passengers witnessed the instant admiration and envy the Sea Cloud commands in port. An authentic remnant from another era, the ship is one of those few great ships with a mystique and cachet that cannot be duplicated.

Sea Cloud Cruises is a Germany-based company, with U.S. bookings handled through New York-based Elegant Cruises and Tours (800-683-6767; www.elegantcruises.com). Sea Cloud sails from Barbados from early December to early February and from Antigua in February and March; it spends the summer in Europe cruising from a variety of ports. Seven-night Caribbean cruises are from $4,160 per person.

Silvia takes over as permanent fire chief

Fire Chief Bob Silvia of Cohasset is the town's new permanent fire chief. Silvia is replacing longtime Chief Roger Lincoln, who retired in October after 30 years with the department. Lincoln was at the Selectmen's meeting Monday to wish Silvia well in his new role.

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For the past 27 years, Robert Silvia has been a fixture at the Cohasset Fire Department. That won't be changing anytime soon, as the former captain and acting chief was appointed this week as permanent chief.

Town Manager Bill Griffin made the appointment, which the Board of Selectmen had 15 days to veto. At its Monday meeting Selectmen waived its right to do so, officially marking Silvia as the new head of the department.

"I'm delighted with the appointment," said Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer. Vice Chairman Rob Spofford added, "This is a great day for Cohasset. I couldn't be happier with the appointment, and the town will be well served."

Silvia is replacing longtime Chief Roger Lincoln, who retired in October after 30 years with the department. Spofford noted Silvia was lucky to have such a great mentor in Lincoln, who attended the meeting to wish Silvia well in his new role. In fact, a crowd of well-wishers from the fire department were present during the meeting, which Griffin said speaks volumes about Silvia's relationship with his peers.

Silvia said from the very beginning of his career, Lincoln was always there to show him the ropes and he is honored to follow in his footsteps. "I feel very privileged to have worked with Roger," he

School budget work begins

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In an effort to ensure everyone is on the same page when it comes to the fiscal 2008 budget, the School Committee has been proactive in getting the word out about budget discussions. During the budget's unveiling at Wednesday's School Committee meeting, Town Manager Bill Griffin was on hand to listen to the presentation and provide preliminary feedback at this early stage in the process.

While ultimately funding will depend on what can be allocated from the overall town budget, to keep level services the school department says it will need a budget of $13,687,626, or an increase of 5.5 percent. However, Griffin noted there are many departments to consider and limited funds, and that number cannot be guaranteed.

"I don't want anyone to assume we can meet that first level budget. If the governor is kind to us, the first thing we may be able to do is get to that level," said Griffin.

The School Committee and Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh acknowledged the figure is the first attempt to nail down funding for next year and there are still many discussions to be had before a final figure is voted on. "This is just the beginning," said Walsh.

While the school department said the new budget figure was an increase of Making music is his 'calling card'

Cohasset man dedicates CD to colleague

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

Seated in his tastefully appointed living room graced by an elegant piano, Don "Reed" Dickinson reflected on the blessing bestowed upon him through his opportunities in life to create music.

"Commerce is not the point of what I do," he said. "I want to share my music; it is my calling card."

"Music touches the heart and words touch the brain. When the two come together, they feed the soul."
— Don "Reed" Dickinson

Dickinson who resides in Cohasset with his wife, daughter, son and Wheaton Terrier moved to the town 14 years ago from Milton. He was raised in Braintree and attended Berklee College of Music in Boston. For several years he was involved with his family's business, a direct marketing firm, which eventually was sold.

He has since been able to focus on his passion and talent of various forms of musical expression. His most recent project, a CD titled "Bay Farm Sessions", a collection of "demos" all written by Dickinson. Though very pleased about his latest venture, Dickinson finds the experience bittersweet due to the recent unexpected

Holiday lights

In a letter included in this week's correspondence, the South Shore Community Center thanked Town Manager Bill Griffin for the Christmas lights the town provided during the Jingle Bell Walk. "The town common looked so festive! This is an annual tradition that brings the whole community out to celebrate the holidays together. As you know, this is an all-volunteer event. Your assistance helped to make the day a great success," wrote Stephanie Church, program director for the Community Center.

Beechwood Ballpark

The Beechwood Ballpark Committee expects to award the contract for improvements to the park in the next few weeks, and construction on the project is slated to begin in January of 2007. A neighborhood meeting has been scheduled with the contractor for Jan. 6 at 10 a.m. All residents of the neighborhood are invited to attend. If you are not able to attend, please feel free to contact either Glenn Pratt at (781) 383-0048 or Merle Brown at (781) 383-1625.

POLICE BEAT

Hingham neighbor allegedly steals from family friends

22-year-old charged in Hull Street theft

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police arrested a Hingham man Tuesday in connection with the theft of items from a home on Hull Street in Cohasset.

As it turned out, Mark Lamm, 22, of 172 Hull St., Hingham, is a friend of the family he allegedly stole from.

Rhonda Handley, 203 Hull St., whose house was broken into, confirmed that fact.

News of the holiday breaking-and-entering caught the attention of Fox News, which was in town Wednesday to talk to police and the family.

However, Chief James Hussey said this is not a "Grinch stole Christmas" story but a difficult B&E case that police were able to solve quickly thanks to an earlier tip from a neighbor.

At around 11 a.m., police responded to call from Hull Street from a person who reported seeing some suspicious activity. The caller observed a man get into a 1996 Olds Sierra and he appeared to be carrying some items that looked as though they might be wrapped. Police took a report but did not find anything.

Later that day, Handley's teenage son came home and discovered the house had been entered and his "X-Box" (video game player) and some CDs and video games were missing.

The teen called his mother who came home and notified police, Chief Hussey said. When police talked to family members and gave a description of the car seen earlier, Lamm's name came up.

Police went to Lamm's house where he gave up the X-Box, DVD and some of the CDs. He had already sold some of the games, Hussey said.

Lamm was arraigned Wednesday on charges of breaking and entering in the daytime with intent to commit a felony and larceny over $250.

"I've known him for five years and could not believe he would do it in a million years," Mrs. Handley said.

Handley also said a large sum of cash, gift cards to places like Best Buy, and two bags of gifts from Old Navy are also missing. She said her bedroom was ransacked.

Warrant arrest

A 61-year-old grandmother who collected her grandson at the library last week was picked up on warrant for driving an uninsured motor vehicle, police said.

Chief James Hussey explained there was some confusion about which family member was going to pick him up. The librarian called police at 10 p.m. and said the boy had not been picked up and the library was closing.

Before releasing the boy to the grandmother, police asked her for identification and ran her name through the system. The default warrant turned up.

The woman was released on her own recognizance and will clear the matter up with the court, Hussey said.

Illegal dumping

On Tuesday, Dec. 12, police received a report from a caller about trash being thrown from a vehicle.

"In this case, the caller had the plate and a description of the vehicle, which belonged to a company," Chief James Hussey said.

He said police are sending a letter to company officials to let them know what observations were made and what the driver that day was doing.

Car window smashed

Police are not sure what may have smashed the rear driver's side window of a motor vehicle traveling along Church Street last Thursday (Dec. 14). The woman, who drove to a friend's house in Scituate and called police, saw two kids standing near a house and thought they might have been responsible.

Chief James Hussey said, however, after interviewing the youngsters police do not believe they broke the window.

Hussey said police could find no evidence about what caused the window to shatter. There is no evidence that a BB gun was used or even a rock was thrown. The incident remains a mystery, he said.

Identity theft

Police are investigating a case of identity theft involving checks. Someone used the victim's name and Social Security number and set up a bank account.

Suspicious male

Police investigated a report of a suspicious man who talked to a woman on Pond Street and then asked her over to his truck last Thursday (Dec. 14). Police put out a report to other towns with a description of the suspect and truck, Chief Hussey said.

Hussey said the woman has not come down to the station to help with a composite or look at photographs.

Metal detector

Chief Hussey was walking near the Town Common when he spotted a man with a metal detector and a small trowel digging holes.

"I came upon him and told him to stop and not to come back," Hussey said. He said the party was not a Cohasset resident. Hussey said he asked an officer to come up to the common and make sure the man did not return.

Hussey explained people use metal detectors to find jewelry that someone has lost, coins and other valuables.

Solicitor scolded

A solicitor working along Hull Street last week apparently did not realize that one side of Hull Street is in Cohasset and the other side is in Hingham.

Hingham does not have a solicitation bylaw – but the when solicitor crossed the street, Cohasset police responded to a call about an individual coming up to the door and trying to sell something.

Chief Hussey said the solicitation company apologized and said it had no intention of conducting business in Cohasset that day.

Under Cohasset's bylaw, door-to-door salespeople have to register with the police.

Charges expected to be dropped

Charges of breaking & entering of a building in the nighttime and trespassing that are facing an 18-year-old Cohasset resident are expected to be dropped.

Chief James Hussey said police are working with the District Attorney's office in the matter.

As the incident evolved, it appears the teen was so drunk that he had no idea where he was, Hussey explained. So he tried to enter the wrong house.

The homeowners were alarmed when at 11:50 p.m., they heard someone banging on the cellar door. When confronted the teen was just sitting there, Hussey said.

"In retrospect the victim totally understands and is convinced there was no intent to commit a Breaking & Entering," Hussey said.

The 18-year-old was also taken into protective custody and later released to his father.

Hussey said the entire incident has been disheartening for the teen's family. The young man will face consequences for drinking and could be suspended from some school activities.

Mistaken identity

At 11:37 a.m. Sunday (Dec. 17), a caller reported she was stopped at a stop sign on Atlantic Avenue when a man wearing a white-and-black windbreaker and jeans attempted to get into her vehicle.

As it turned out, the man mistakenly thought the woman was someone else who had stopped to give him a ride.

She agreed it was a mistake, Chief Hussey said.

"Police knew who he was and gave him a ride to work," he said.

CDs stolen

An owner of property on Tower Lane reported on Sunday that someone broke into his house, which is being remodeled, and stole about 400 CDs, police said. Chief Hussey said the homeowner has provided names of people to talk to and detectives are investigating.

Brazilian license

Police charged a Rockland woman with unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle when she produced a Brazilian license after being stopped on North Main Street near Cedar Street. She was also cited for marked lanes violation. Police say she was crossing the centerline while traveling on Cedar Street.

Chief Hussey said drivers' licenses from other countries or even from out of state are not valid in Massachusetts once someone becomes a resident.

"They must convert their license," he said. "Licenses from other places do not stand up."

Kid culprits

Kids are suspected in the theft of a can of paint and some sparklers from a shed on Atlantic Avenue that was reported last Monday (Dec. 11), police said. The owner has since locked the shed. The incident is under investigation.

Falling debris

Loose debris from another vehicle was likely the cause of a damaged windshield that was reported to police at about 3:17 p.m., last Monday (Dec. 11). The reporting party provided a plate number but no such plate turned up in a computer search, Chief James Hussey said.

Car break-in

A passerby in the Whitney Woods parking lot reported a car with a smashed window last week. Police arrived and waited for the owner to return. She said her purse was stolen. The car was locked and the thief smashed the window to gain access, Chief Hussey said.

Hussey said thieves are opportunists and it is critical that people do not leave any valuables, such as a purse or electronic device, in plain view.

The incident remains under investigation.

Silvia takes over as permanent fire chief

said, adding when he first came on board in Cohasset, Lincoln was his training officer. "I hope I can somehow try to fill his shoes and I will strive to do the job you have asked me to do."

Silvia's was one of 11 résumés received by the town for the position. Griffin, along with Director of Finance Michael Buckley, Selectman Fred Koed and Hingham Town Administrator Charles Cristello, served as the interviewing committee and chose six candidates to come in for interviews. Of those six, one pulled his name from contention minutes before his interview and a second failed to respond to the town's invitation, leaving four to interview. Those interviews were followed up with a final round for two candidates, and ultimately Silva was seen as the right candidate for the job.

"We had a very good group of candidates, but when all was said and done, Bob did an outstanding job in the interview, he has done an outstanding job on the job, especially as a captain over the last 21 years and most recently as acting chief. It was our unanimous decision that he has earned this opportunity," said Griffin. "He knows what the challenges are and he made it very easy for us to make a decision."

Silvia's strong background made him a perfect candidate for the job. Not only has he been a member of the department for the past 27 years, he has served as shift commander and administrative officer to the fire chief, has served as acting fire chief on many occasions, including the last three months since Lincoln's retirement. He also attended Northeastern University for emergency medical technician (EMT) training and the National Fire Academy for advanced fire administration. He has attended numerous fire science-training programs during his career and in his "spare time" has served as an assistant football coach at Cohasset High School for the past 25 years.

"Are you still going to have time to coach football?" quipped Selectman Gary Vanderweil, to which Silvia replied he thinks it may not be possible with his new role.

Silvia said he is very happy with his new appointment. "It was one of those things I'd been aspiring to do for a long time," he said, adding he feels he is currently in a position where he is able to dedicate the amount of time it takes to be chief. "I decided it was time to give it a shot," he said.

Silvia said he has many plans for the department moving forward. He said computerizing the operations at the department is on the top of the list. At the Special Town Meeting in December, voters approved allocating $25,000 for a new ambulance billing and reporting system. The system runs on a wireless secure Internet network that has a unit in the ambulance, and when the ambulance backs into the station, the information filled out in the vehicle during the transport can automatically download onto the hard drive at the station. The time saved with the electronic system will allow the department to respond to other calls instead of filling out paperwork, which will result in more ambulance fee revenue for the town.

Silvia said he would also like to start up local a Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program. After Sept. 11, the Department of Homeland Security initiated the program, which educates people about disaster preparedness for incidents that may impact their area and trains them in basic disaster response skills, such as fire safety, light search and rescue, team organization, and disaster medical operations. Using the training learned in the classroom and during exercises, CERT members can assist others in their neighborhood or workplace following an event when professional responders are not immediately available to help. CERT members are also encouraged to support emergency response agencies by taking a more active role in emergency preparedness projects in their community.

Silvia said he would also continue the work he has been doing with automated external defibrillators, or AEDs. Currently, all three schools are outfitted with the devices, which can give life-saving shocks to patients in cardiac arrest. The next leg of the mission is to install the machines in the town's buildings and ensure there are many people in town who have been trained to use the devices.

"Our goal is to become a heart safe community," said Silvia, which means the department has satisfied all the goals of the American Heart Association, including have equipment on hand that even someone with minimal training can use to save the life of someone who has gone into cardiac arrest.

Selectmen congratulated Silvia on his appointment and one by one they shook his hand. Spofford said it is a pleasure to be able to hire a resident for the job who will always be nearby, and it is wonderful to be able to promote from within the department. He reiterated, "This is a great day for Cohasset."

Spofford won't seek reelection

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Selectman Rob Spofford announced Monday he will not run for reelection this spring.

With nine years of service on the School Building and Facilities Committee under his belt prior to the last three years on the Board of Selectmen, Spofford said he feels proud of his accomplishments, but it is time to focus on other efforts.

Spofford spent nine years on the School Building and Facilities Committee, seven of which he served as chairman. He helped oversee $52 million in new construction and renovation projects, starting with the construction of the new Osgood Elementary School and more recently, the renovations of the Deer Hill and the middle-high school. "Those are some of my proudest public service projects," he said.

During his time on the Board of Selectmen, Spofford said he is very proud to have been both a part of the team that hired Town Manager Bill Griffin, who is in his opinion one of the best managers the town has ever seen, and also Police Chief James Hussey, whom he also gave high marks. Earlier in the evening, the board waived its right to veto Griffin's appointment of new Fire Chief Robert Silvia. Spofford said that is one more appointment the board can be proud of. "These past three years (on the Board of Selectmen) have been both exhilarating and challenging. It has been an honor to serve."

"I wish the seated board members the best."

Nomination papers for the Annual Town Election for 2007 will be available Wednesday, Jan. 3, at the Town Clerk's office. The last day to take out nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 15.

Only registered voters of the town may hold an elected office. Candidates are only officially running for office after they have taken out papers and the Board of Registrars has certified the signatures.

Positions available for the 2007 town election include: Selectmen - two three-year positions; School Committee - two three-year positions; Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library - three three-year positions; Assessor - one three-year position; Board of Health - one three-year position; Cohasset Housing Authority - one five-year position; Planning Board - one five-year position; Recreation Commission - three five-year positions; Sewer Commission - one three-year position and Water Commission - one three-year position.

Friday, March 9, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting, which will be held Saturday, March 31, and for the Annual Town Election which will be held Saturday, April 7.

Fire department looks to boost range of permit fees

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Tight fiscal times have led all town departments to go over their budgets with a fine-tooth comb. Many have increased fees for services and implemented cuts to help make ends meet.

To that end the fire department has decided it too will increase fees for permits to help cover the cost of running the department. Chief Robert Silvia attended Monday's Selectmen's meeting to outline the plan.

Silvia explained the fire department has not changed the amount of money it charges for permits in almost 20 years. According to Massachusetts General Laws, the head of the department may charge as much as $25 for permits, and Silvia explained currently, most permits are running at $10 each. By statute, the Board of Selectmen also has the option to increase fees beyond the department's limit of $25, up to $50.

Silvia said the department has been gathering information regarding fees other towns charge and said, "Quite a few communities have gone as high as $50." He added he felt an increase is warranted on his end, and asked the board if it felt the same. "Are you satisfied with the $25 I would charge?" he asked.

To give a little perspective on increasing fees, the department's fire prevention officer Captain Mark Trask attended the meeting. He said the department has a whole list of permits it can issue which run the gamut. Some of the permits the department issues include blasting, installing oil burning equipment, fireworks and bonfires, open air fires, storage of combustible material and gunpowder or ammo storage. "This is a huge source of revenue," he said if the fees are increased.

Silvia explained last year, the fire department issued 57 permits for installing or altering oil burning equipment and at $10 a permit collected $570. If that fee were increased to $25, the amount collected would jump to $1,425 if the same amount of permits were issued. If the Board of Selectmen decided to increase the fee even more to $50, the amount collected would be $2,850.

Silvia said smoke detector and carbon monoxide detector permits are required at the time of sale or transfer of a home. Currently the department charges $20 for the permits. During fiscal 2005 the department conducted 188 inspections for smoke detectors and carbon monoxide compliance at the time of sale or transfer, which totaled $3,760. If the fees were raised to the allowed limit of $50, the department would collect $9,400 on the same amount of permits.

There are some permits other towns charge for which Cohasset has been giving out for free. Open-air burning permits are issued in town from Jan. 15 to April 30 and hundreds are issued every year. Other towns are charging between $10 and $25 for a seasonal permit and Cohasset residents are currently paying nothing. While Silvia said charging a fee would have to be considered, at the very least the process for obtaining a permit will change.

"It has always been done over the phone," said Silvia, as homeowners simply call the station and ask for permission to burn in their yards and the department takes their information and gives a verbal OK. However, he said there has been a lot of trouble with people burning things they aren't supposed to. He said beginning this year, residents will be required to come down to the station and sign in and take a copy of the burning regulations they must follow before receiving an open-air burning permit.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said in his opinion, it makes sense to implement a $50 permit fee across the board. He said if there are certain permits the town would like to waive fees for, such as burning, there could be a list of exceptions drafted.

Selectman Vice Chairman Rob Spofford said for some of the permits, such as underground storage tank installation permits, he feels the work required by the department warrants fees above $50. The board discussed implementing fees on a sliding scale, using time as a yardstick to gauge how much should be charged. Vanderweil noted the department provides services such as looking over development plans, including both single-family residential and larger projects such as subdivisions, and those are worth more than $50 in his opinion.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said he does not want to dissuade some residents from seeking permits due to the fees associated with them. "We don't want to discourage people from doing the right thing," he said, including having smoke detectors checked. Silvia noted the only time the department charges for smoke detectors is at the sale or transfer of a home. If anyone in the community who plans to stay in their home wants either their smoke detector or carbon monoxide detectors checked, a member of the department will be happy to come out to the home free of charge at any time. Trask added the typical lifespan for detectors is 10 years.

Silvia said with information collected from the board, he and Trask would work on recommendations for a new fee structure and bring it back to Selectmen after the first of the year.

Police increase parking fines

Last year, the Board of Selectmen voted to increase the illegal parking fine at Sandy Beach from $25 to $50. In a memo sent to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Police Chief James Hussey noted he is currently in the process of ordering new parking violation "tag" books to reflect that increase.

"On review of the parking infractions and current fines listed on the current 'tag,' I see the fine for parking at a fire hydrant is only $25. This is the same fine as all other infractions, with the exception of a handicapped area, which is $100," he said.

Hussey said Sgt. John Conte has suggested the Board of Selectmen consider raising the fine for blocking a hydrant to $50 and he agrees. He noted he would hold off on ordering new parking violation books until he heard further from the board.

At its Monday meeting, the board agreed not all parking violations are the same and recommended the increase.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS

Happy Holidays Cohasset! For all those who are anticipating the arrival of Santa on Monday, I hope he is good to all of you and that we all take a moment to enjoy and think about our true meanings of Christmas. For those who celebrate other special holidays and celebrations, I hope that all enjoy. I know that for me, listening and having conversations with children about it all is so magical and special. The stories they share are so heartfelt and childlike, yet they all hold so much truth in what they say. Children are so special... Anyways, enjoy this wonderful weekend of family and friend filled events and especially on Christmas Day. For all of you who are on vacation next week, make sure to enjoy it to the fullest extent whether you have children and are planning some great play time with the kids or, are just taking some time for yourself, make it a nice week.

ALUMNI HOCKEY

On Jan. 1 the Cohasset Varsity Hockey Team will be hosting its 8th Annual Alumni Hockey Game at Pilgrim Arena in Hingham from 4:10 - 6:20p.m. The current varsity team is hoping to have a good turn out for this event and encourages all alumni players to come and join in on the fun. The cost is $25 per player for two hours of ice time, a souvenir shirt and a chance to take on the current team at CHS. If you are interested in playing, please contact Anne Czerkawski at 383 997 or e-mail at cacz@comcast.net . Look forward to seeing you there!

WIN A CRUISE!

Princess Cruises and Cohasset Travel have joined forces supporting a fundraiser to benefit the programs and services of Wellspring Multi-Service Center. South Shore residents can win a cruise for two to Alaska, one of the last remaining wildernesses on earth. The raffle donation will provide funding for all the valuable programs at Wellspring and the winner could be rewarded with a remarkable vacation. Winners will experience the stunning beauty of Alaska including Glacier Bay National Park, Tracy Arm Fjord or Hubbard Glacier along with Juneau, Skagway Sitka or Ketchikan depending on the itinerary. The award includes airfare to Vancouver and balcony stateroom accommodations from which to view the unforgettable scenery. The chances of winning this dream vacation are very good!

Tickets are $50 and only 300 tickets will be sold. Raffle tickets are available at the following sites: Wellspring Thrift Shops, 814 Nantasket Ave, Hull and 40 North St., Hingham; Cohasset Travel Agency, Rte. 3A, Cohasset; and Darilynn's in Cohasset Village. Cohasset Travel will be coordinating the travel plans for the cruise which is good for travel during 2007 or 2008. Raffle tickets are now available and would make a great holiday gift! The winning ticket will be drawn on April 15.

BALLERINA

Sarah Gruber is performing as a toy solider in "The Nutcracker."

Sarah Gruber, 10 years old and a fourth-grader at Deer Hill, is dancing the part of a toy soldier in this year's production of Boston Ballet's Nutcracker at the Opera House in Boston. Sarah has performed in nine shows so far and has four more to go. It is her first time performing in "The Nutcracker" and she is having a wonderful time. She is the daughter of Elizabeth Gruber and granddaughter of Alan and Helen Gruber, also of Cohasset. Her family is so proud of her! And so are we, congratulations, Sarah!

LACROSSE BOOSTERS

Lacrosse Boosters annual casino night fundraiser will be Saturday night, Jan. 20 at Atlantica. The boosters will "raise the stakes" from 8 p.m. until midnight! Tickets are $25 each and available from Lyn Previte (781-383-9723). There will be blackjack, roulette, poker and other games of chance. Atlantica will serve hors d'oeuvres and there will be a cash bar. It will be a great fun night out, even if you are not a gambler. Space is limited at the event and the boosters will be sure to run out of tickets before the 20th, so try to purchase ahead before the upcoming holidays! This will be the booster's only 2007 fundraiser and we need the support of the entire community! The money raised from this event will go directly to funding the JV lacrosse program at the high school for both boys and girls.

This event is critical to provide playing opportunities to our younger players and the continued success and growth of the entire lacrosse program. Cohasset Lacrosse has numerous players at the collegiate level-probably more so than any other varsity sport. Our recent success (Cohasset boys were 2006 state champions and looking to repeat) has much to do with the continuing support from our feeder programs and the financial support from the entire Cohasset community. Any lacrosse parent looking to help out with this event, please call Lynn Previte!

FABULOUS DRESSES

The Cohasset Consignment Shop will be collecting fabulous dresses during January and February to be sold at the Pre Prom event being held in Early March. If you have a dress or two that will fill this need, call 781-383-0687 to make an appointment to donate or consign your gently worn prom or prom-like dress. Here is a wonderful program that the Cohasset Middle School Student Council and Project Safeguard are sponsoring.

TREE PICKUP

Looking to have your holiday tree picked up and taken away? Even better, the cost that you pay to have this much wanted and needed chore taken care of will benefit Project Safeguard. The cost per tree is $20 with Senior Citizens paying $15. Call 781-383-2492 and leave a message with your address, phone number and any special instructions. Make sure to call by 8 pm on Jan. 5. Have a check made out to Project Safeguard with your tree and it will be picked up at the end of your driveway on Saturday, Jan. 6 between 10 and 2 pm.

WELLSPRING

The Cohasset Consignment Shop, owned and operated by the Social Service League of Cohasset, celebrates six successful months under new management. The shop managers, Marita Carpenter and Karen Fowler conducted a raffle of a Waterford Santa Cookie Jar and held a jewelry party featuring La Di Da Jewelry and Accessories by Kerry Pipenbrink that raised $250. The Shop matched these funds and presented a check in the amount of $500 to Vinny Harte, Executive Director of Wellspring to help a families in need this Christmas. The lucky winner of the cookie jar is Deb Galambos of Hingham. Congratulations!

Marita Carpenter of the Cohasset Consignment Shop presents a $500 check to Vinny Hart of Wellspring. Part of the funds were raised through a raffle of the Waterford Santa Cookie Jar, shown in the photo.

The Cohasset Recreation Department and One Creative Place are sponsoring a Youth Volleyball Clinic for boys and girls in grades 5- 9 coached by Ben Leong and his sister, Wendy Lum, both of Cohasset. Learn the basic skills or enhance your skills of Volleyball, bumping, setting, serving, spiking, fun and teamwork. This program will be held two times a week at the Deer Hill School on Tuesdays and/or Fridays from 3:30-5:30 in the gym. The sessions will run for 8 weeks and if you are interested in twice a week, the cost is $160 and if you would like once a week, the cost is $100. The registration forms are available at the Cohasset Town Hall Recreation Department or by logging onto www.onecreativeplace.net. If you have any questions, call 781-383-4109 or 781-383-2211 for registrations etc. and for questions on the actual program, you may email Wendy at LeongLum@NEHCF.NEMC.org

WEDDINGS & ENGAGEMENTS

Patrick R. Gaughen and Katherine L. Johnson

Johnson - Gaughen

Katherine L. Johnson of Northville, Mich., and Patrick R. Gaughen of Cohasset, have announced their engagement.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Kyle and Jeri Johnson. She received a bachelor of arts degree in English and sociology from the University of Virginia-Charlottesville, and her master's degree in social work and public policy from the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor. She is currently the supervisory child welfare evaluator for the North Carolina Division of Social Services.

Her fiancé is the son of Robert H. and Margaret A. Gaughen. He is a graduate of Yale University where he received his bachelor's degree in history and political science. He received a master's degree in security studies at Georgetown University, and is presently enrolled at Duke University seeking a doctorate degree in political science.

A May 2007 is planned at the Henry Ford Estate in Dearborn, Mich.

Coffin - Cook

Stacey Lynn Coffin, daughter of Robert and Karen Coffin, formerly of Topsfield, and Poinciana, Fla., and Trevor Drake Cook, son of Thomas and Deborah Cook of Cohasset, were married this past summer at the Danversport Yacht Club in Danvers. The evening ceremony, officiated by Justice of the Peace, Alan Ulrich, was followed by a reception at the yacht club.

Serving as Matron of honor was Kerry Blyth and the bridesmaids were Jessamyn Anderson and Jennifer Mahon, all friends of the bride and groom.

Groomsmen included the groom's father, Tom Cook, who served as best man, as well as Steven and Brian Coffin, both brothers of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of Masconomet Regional High School in Topsfield and Westfield State College. She received a Masters in Education from Lesley University. She is currently employed as the director of a pre-school in Rowley.

The groom graduated from Proctor Academy in Andover, N.H., and the University of North Carolina with a degree in marine biology. He works at Alden Research Laboratory in Holden.

After a honeymoon trip to Belize, the couple is residing in Gloucester.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2007 observances.

The effort would result in upwards of 200 American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets, facing Veterans Memorial Park. The flags sell for $20 and can be dedicated to anyone.

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www alingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

Making music is his 'calling card'

death of his friend and business colleague, Paul Caruso.

A talented producer, Caruso's credits included work with Aerosmith, Joe Perry and Ringo Starr. "Paul was such a special guy," Dickinson recalled. "When I first met him, there was a lot I wanted to do but I didn't know how. Paul was the engineer. He knew. We built a studio upstairs in the bedroom. I would write a song and then he would know what instrument would work best for the sound. He made me into a better a writer. He knew a great song when he heard it. "Bay Farm Sessions" is dedicated to Paul. His absence leaves a huge void in my life. But I still feel his presence."

Dickinson continued to describe the creative process and its impact on others. "Music touches the heart and words touch the brain. When the two come together, they feed the soul." Not limiting his work to one genre of music has been a fascinating challenge, for him. "Learning how to draft country songs is like telling a story. The lyric is so important. Lullabies and pop or rock are completely different."

When creating a song Dickinson finds that a lyric or a tune may appear in his mind, but more often an idea will "hibernate" and eventually find its way to the piano keys and paper. Other times he hears the music in his head and will begin humming the chords. Inspiration comes to him in countless forms: his family, spirituality, nature, the woods, fields and trees. Sometimes a social concept ignites a spark that develops into a musical creation like, "Whatever happened to Sundays?" an observation that Sundays once were about rest, family dinners and time to "walk though the meadows." Today they are about work and activities and shopping and "walking down aisles" of mall stores.

Another outlet at which he shares his creativity is the Company Theatre in Norwell. "I've been in several productions there." Dickinson smiled as he recalled a particularly fun role as Gaston's sidekick in "Beauty and the Beast. "It's a great place for the community," he added.

He also teaches a song-writing course at the Company Theatre for three weeks during the summer for 9-17 year olds, though he believes that developing such skills and changing direction in life can happen at any age. "Most people who fail at things give up too soon," he said. "It is important to tap into something good-something beyond you; the creative spirit. Pay attention to the signs in your life."

Prior to "Bay Farm Sessions," Dickinson had released the CD's "Ruby"(2003) and "Playing Games with the Sun"(2001).

Don "Reed" Dickinson also shares his creativity at the Company Theatre in Norwell where he has been in several productions there. He also teaches a song-writing course at the Company Theatre for three weeks during the summer for 9-17 year olds.

On his new CD, for the first time he had eight of the vocals sung by someone other than himself. Erin Vulgamore, a singer discovered through Berklee College's website is heard on the recordings. "Her voice was perfect for the sessions," Dickinson said. She has a terrific voice for country and pop music." Also heard on the CD are seven other musicians.

This fall, the CD, "Sheltered In Love" will be released and will feature two songs from Dickinson's latest work. This compilation of musical artists will raise donations for Covenant House, a non- profit organization for runaway teens. Dickinson's work has been met with upbeat reviews. Modern Rock says, "Dickinson obviously has heaps of talent as a songwriter."

Dickinson practices his own philosophy and expresses his gratitude for his ability to do so. "I know how lucky I am to be able to do this," he said." Five years ago I never would have thought this would be my life. I am blessed because this is what I like to do. I can write music, take walks with my wife and dog, be with my kids. But people can do what they love as a hobby, too. It's important to take that corner toward change. Everyone has importance. And everyone can do something. You can be the change you want to see in the world."

Dickinson's Cd's are available on CDBaby.com (type in Reed Dickinson). Dickinson songs are also available on iTunes.

Seawall construction

Bids are due on the Border Street seawall construction project Jan. 5. Town Manager Bill Griffin told selectmen this week construction will hopefully begin around Feb. 5. The portion to be worked on runs from Atlantica to the Mill River Marine Boatyard.

A Cohasset Christmas poem by Andrew Trask

As winter approaches and Christmas draws near,
I sit in my study and think back through the years.

Recollections of skating on Milliken Field,
When frigid winds blew and black ice was revealed.

Of sliding the hill by the old tennis courts,
And hollowing snow drifts to make icy forts.

Of a day when you knew every neighbor around,
From Pratts and McCarthys to Marks, Hobbs and Downs.

When throughout the hillside and from farther beyond,
Kids came with their ice skates to the old Ash Street pond.

And houses and trees decked with colorful lights,
Gave a nice friendly glow to the dark winter nights.

And shoveling out neighbors as snow fell and drifted,
Gave a sense of true purpose when spirits were lifted.

I was thinking these things of growing up in a time,
When the world seemed more friendly, more simply, sublime.

And I fondly recalled when the only thing pressing, was being home for dinner and counting our blessings.

Andrew Trask's Christmas card to announce his family get-together included this poem. Andrew is one of five brothers and two sisters who grew up on Bancroft Road in Cohasset in the late 50's, 60's and early 70's. His father is the late Harry Trask and his mother Joan still lives in the family home. Andrew now resides in Mansfield with his wife Sue and his children, Jennifer, Justin, Jessie, James, JJ and Julie. He works in the computer field, currently for "Geek Housecalls," a home computer repair service.

Toys for Tots drive under way

Cohasset police are joining with the Marines Corps in the annual holiday Toys for Tots campaign through Dec. 24.

New toys and games can be dropped off at the Cohasset Police Headquarters, on Elm Street, 24 hours a day, and seven days a week. Toys and games should not be wrapped.

Schools take a first swing at the budget

$707,815, Griffin said he thought it was closer to an increase of $772,912. He noted voters approved a school budget of $12,714,714 for fiscal 2007. To that, Town Meeting added $200,000 in Chapter 70 grant funding from the state, which brought the budget up to $12,914,714, which would be an increase of $772,912. He said it looked to him as if the $65,097 the schools were given as reimbursement for the purchase of security system equipment for the Osgood School had been added to the base budget. He said because that money came from free cash, it was a one-time expense and would not necessarily become part of the school budget going forward. "We can talk about that at our joint meeting, but the money came from free cash and was a one-time event," he said.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said he thought Town Meeting had agreed to add the money to the school department's budget. However, Griffin reiterated free cash is used for one-time expenses.

"I don't want anyone to assume we can meet that first level budget. If the governor is kind to us, the first thing we may be able to do is get to that level."

— Town Manager Bill Griffin

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said he understands the importance of bringing a balanced budget forward every year, but he does not want to see it happen at the expense of the district's goals. To bring the district forward and achieve the goals the School Committee has set, "The reality is, it will take about $16.1 million to move ahead," which would be roughly $2.4 million more than presented for fiscal 2008. He noted better schools would make Cohasset a premier town for people to purchase real estate, which would be good for the town as a whole.

In response, Griffin recalled the first Town Meeting he attended in Cohasset. It was December 2004, roughly one month prior to his officially coming on board in January, and he sat on the bleachers in the non-voting section with the press. "That night was spent cutting budgets back because assumptions were made and they did not come true. At our last Town Meeting (Nov. 13) we were able to restore or add things because we brought in a balanced budget first. In my opinion, it's a better route," he said.

School Committee member Steve Fusco said in his opinion, the school department has an obligation to come in with a balanced budget and at the same time, has an obligation to the children in town to stretch it as far as it will go. "I'm not sure the $16.1 million figure is the answer, and I'm not sure this one ($13.7 million) is either," he said. Fusco said it will take work on both sides to come up with the appropriate figure for everyone.

Griffin said going forward, when the school department meets with the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee at joint hearings, he would like to discuss the assumptions which were made during the last budget cycle and whether they are valid. He said the town is hit hard due to the shared costs between the town and the schools and strategies need to be developed to deal with them. "Building maintenance is a shared expense, even though we're not budgeting that way," he said. Square footage-wise, the schools are bigger and he has been budgeting more for their maintenance, but said this year, he's begun budgeting for maintenance again, "and I may not have enough money to cover everyone," which will have to be discussed.

School budget calendar for fiscal 2008

The school department has begun budget discussions for fiscal 2008. The following is a list of dates for meetings it will hold to discuss the budget, which it plans to send to all pertinent town boards and parties as well as members of the PSO.

- Jan. 3: School Committee budget sub-committee meeting (Osgood School, Janet Sheehan; Deer Hill School, Keith Gauley; Student Services, Linda Gill; Technology, Ken Cisneros).
- TBD: Budget summit with the town.
- Jan. 10: School Committee budget sub-committee meeting (Cohasset Middle High School, Joel Antolini; Athletics, Ron Ford; Curriculum and Professional Development, Nancy Mrzyglod).
- Jan. 17: School Committee budget meeting.
- TBD: School Committee presents budget to joint meeting of Selectmen and Advisory Committee.
- Feb. 28: School Committee public hearing on budget/ School Committee votes final adoption of budget and certifies budget figure.
- March 5-16: Central office staff prepares Town Meeting budget materials.
- March 16: Budget document ready for distribution.
- TBD: Annual Town Meeting.

The school department's budget calendar can also be found on the district Web site at www.cohassetk12.org. School Committee meetings are held in the Community Meeting Room at the high school, near the superintendent's office. All are welcome to attend.

School budget focus group

The School Committee is beginning its budget discussions and has asked Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer if two members of the board would join two members of the School Committee who are serving on a budget focus group. Dormitzer asked his board for feedback at its Monday meeting.

"Personally, I don't want to divide us," said Dormitzer, adding he feels if the Selectmen agree to participate in the meetings, it should be in a role of information gathering, rather than participating in budget discussions. "I think our current liaisons to the School Committee could do that," he said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said it was his understanding the School Committee also wanted to include two members of the Advisory Committee.

Selectman Vice Chairman Rob Spofford said he had spoken with School Committee member Rick Flynn who indicated the meetings would be posted and the public or other board members would be invited to attend. Spofford said he thought it was a good idea to have a working group in a smaller setting and agreed it should not be a decision-making group.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil noted if members of the board participate only as observers, there would not be any opportunity to provide creative input. "I don't see the point of essentially having two more citizens participate. We can't go as representatives of the board," he said, as the individuals will only be able to convey their personal thoughts.

However, Selectman Fred Koed said he thinks it sounds like a great opportunity for brainstorming, and it would ensure two members of the Board of Selectmen are on top of what the School Committee is doing and can report back to everyone else. Dormitzer noted the meetings will be open and the entire board could attend to remain informed.

The Board agreed to participate in the meetings, but said it will need to come together and discuss its thoughts soon, to enable it to move forward into budget season with a common position, in general, across the board.

The gift that keeps giving

'Tis the season for not only giving and receiving, but also for generating tons of trash.

Christmas morning, for example, can look like a twister ripped through the living room, scattering wrapping paper, gift boxes, tissue paper and ribbons and bows about the room. The easy approach to clean up is grabbing a large garbage bag and shoving the piles of paper, ribbons and ripped-open boxes the bag. But the easy approach is not always the best.

According to information provided by the South Shore Recycling Cooperative, Americans throw away 25 percent more trash during the Thanksgiving to New Year's holiday period than any other time of year. On the South Shore alone, the extra waste reportedly amounts to about 1,000 extra tons per week.

That's a hefty amount of garbage that doesn't need to find its way into our already overloaded trash stream. Recycling most of what you'll be throwing away this holiday season will not only help save the environment, it will save money.

Instead of adding to the rising cost of garbage disposal, recycling these materials could save a whole lot of money as well as other things. For instance, the Cooperative reports that recycling one ton of paper saves 17 trees, 7,000 gallons of water, 212 gallons of fuel, and reduces pollution emitted into the air. And in Massachusetts, recycling supports 1,437 recycling businesses and organizations and 19,500 jobs.

If that's not enough to motivate you to take a few extra steps after the hustle and bustle of Christmas morning, think of the money you could help save by recycling.

More than half of the paper (including cardboard) that could be recycled is being thrown away. This costs the 15 towns in the Cooperative about $2 million a year and statewide the price tag is in excess of $100 million per year. Those costs will more than likely make it back to the individuals in the long run and that means more money in your pocket and less for waste disposal "fees".

So, this holiday season please do your part to trim the trash after trimming the tree.

Here are some helpful recycling tips provided by the South Shore Recycling Collaborative that are especially relevant this holiday season:

Cardboard: Recycle all of your cardboard boxes. Flatten and either fold or cut to a size not larger than 2 feet by 2 feet.

Gift boxes and wrapping paper: Gift boxes and all non-foil wrapping paper can be included with your paper recycling. Tape and twine is okay, but no ribbons.

Holiday cards and calendars: Holiday cards (including envelopes and gift tags) and calendars can be recycled with your paper.

Other non-trash items: Magazines & catalogs, old files, paperboard (e.g. cereal boxes), shredded paper, newspapers, copy paper, paperback books, spiral binders, tape, and staples are all OK for the paper bin. You should also recycle all glass, plastic, and metal bottles and cans.

Christmas trees and wreaths: Special collections for most towns take place in early January. Remove all tinsel and garland and do not put in a plastic bag. According to the National Christmas Tree Association, more than 33 million real Christmas trees are sold in North America every year and Christmas tree recycling helps return a renewable resource back to the environment.

For more information on what can be recycled and what your town's policies are, as well as creative ideas to avoid putting items out in the trash, go to www.ssrc.info. The South Shore Recycling Cooperative includes the following towns: Abington, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Plymouth, Rockland, Scituate, Weymouth and Whitman.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society....

The Cohasset Historical Society's archives are full of documents and letters enriching our sense of the past. The letters below are what we hope to be the first in a weekly submission of fascinating items from our Collection.

The following selections were chosen from a box of letters written by Cohasset servicemen during World War II. All of the letters were addressed to the George H. Mealy Post of the American Legion in thanks for a Christmas gift of $5 donated by Cohasset residents. These three particular letters were chosen by our Cohasset High School volunteers, P.J. McCaw, Kenny Muir and Kyle Pinkus.

Happy Holidays from the Cohasset Historical Society!

These letters are taken verbatim and parts have only been omitted due to space issues.

Dear Friends,

Today I received your card, wishing me the best possible for the coming Holidays. You can't know how much that card meant to me. As you probably know Cohasset has been home to me for the past 5 years. I liked the town and the people. To me it is symbolic of Town. It has no factories to mar its beauties, and it has a beautiful beach, homes, woodlands, lakes, etc. All of this is American style. Some day I hope to return to that town and make it my permanent home.

I can't seem to word my appreciation to you people who have remembered me on Christmas. But I will tell you, I will never forget your kindness.

This the second Christmas spent out here, and need I say, I hope it's the last. It would be so good to see all the folks back there once more... ...Letters from home, we thrive on. As long as there is mail, we're happy. I will close now and may I extend my best wishes...for a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Dear Gentlemen,

Your kindness and your thought in sending me such a substantial and useful Christmas present are most profoundly appreciated. And my few words of thanks will only serve as an inadequate expression of my true sentiments. I have a very deep love for Cohasset, for it is there that I have spend my happiest days and it is there that I long to return after the war.

Three odd years of destroyer duty have taken me to all but one continent and on all but two oceans not to mention seas. In fact, so much of the time is spent at sea that one is likely to lose contact with his friends at home. Sometimes you begin to wonder whether you have been completely forgotten except by those to whom you are closest. That, perhaps, explains in part why your gift is so highly regarded, for it is a real token of your thoughts and best wishes. It convinces one that he is remembered and that those at home are fully aware of what he is doing.

Again, many thanks for your kindness and wishing you all a Merry Christmas and much happiness in the New Year.

Dear Friends,

Just a short note to tell you that the $5 arrived ok and to thank you of the Legion and al the townsfolk that helped make these gifts available to the men and women of Cohasset who are in the service.

Some of you have probably heard that I have left Australia and am now up in New Guinea and I can tell you that it is totally different than what we in Cohasset are accustomed to.

Imagine that some oft he boys on the European front have already spent their money orders but mine is still resting peacefully in my wallet and it will be some time before I have a chance to get rid of it. However I expect to get a leave eventually and get down to Sydney, Australia and I hear it is just about the same as any large American city.

The last few weeks have not had much time to write more than a short note to anyone and am afraid this isn't going to be very long either.

Sure would like to be home in Cohasset and hope that it won't be very long before I am there.

My regards to all the people in town.

Track laid through all five towns

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Some General Stuff — By the end of this month, the Greenbush Project will have track laid continuously from Braintree to Scituate, through all five Greenbush towns. We have certainly seen many changes in Cohasset over the past 12 months. This office has received numerous calls from residents about bits and pieces of the project that have not been finished. Residents, who have been generally quite patient up to now, are wondering when these little things will be finally addressed. Well, here's the deal. CBB has been entirely focused on completing the track. This is clearly their top priority. The small things that we see day in and day out and brought to our attention by the patient residents are regularly discussed with the project. Both CBB and the MBTA assure us that our issues are on their punch list and will be corrected eventually. Just when remains to be seen.

Forest Avenue — The small drainage job has been completed on Forest Avenue near Wheelwright Park. Guess what's next? Drum roll, please… In 2007 the Town will be paving Forest Avenue and completing the sidewalks. In the meantime, you might see surveyors up and down Forest along with strange markings on the street. That is part of the preliminary planning and design. We can't thank the Norfolk County Engineering Department enough for all of their diligent work on the two recent drainage projects and the soon to me completed sidewalk and paving. They have been with us every step of the way and have been exceedingly helpful. Thanks, Norfolk County.

More on Train Safety — Hardly a week goes by in which we haven't been called about some safety issue around town. Recently, we've heard about speeders on the Norfolk Road detour for the closed Pond Street. Once again, we ask anyone who uses this detour, "Please take it easy through this congested neighborhood." The traffic gets unusually heavy just before the High School starts and just after classes are over for the day. Please, please, please slow it down!

Local teenagers are walking on the tracks, which is not a very safe practice.

CBB has been entirely focused on completing the track. This is clearly their top priority.

And, mention this to any teen-aged driver in your family.

Another safety item — If at any time you see any condition resulting from Greenbush construction that you feel is unsafe, please call the CBB 24 hour Hot Line at 781-682-6350. Particularly, as winter approaches and the weather gets worse with freezing and thawing cycles we know that there may be areas of temporary paving etc. that will deteriorate. The quickest way to get these fixed is to call CBB's attention to these safety hazards through the Hot Line.

Lastly, we have spoken about residents walking on the right of way. We know that there are no trains running at present. But, there is construction equipment traveling on the tracks. The rails are not safe places to walk. We all need to get into the habit of Not walking on the rails. Note the enclosed photo, taken this week, of two Cohasset teenagers ambling down the tracks. From our vantage point that's not a very safe practice.

One Small Issue Down — For quite a while the Town has had a disagreement with the MBTA about a section of sidewalk that they removed from the project near the kitchen store across from the South Shore Art Center. The original plans called for a section of sidewalk to be added that connects the existing sidewalk to the "out" side of the Town Parking Lot driveway. We have reached agreement with the MBTA along with a bit of horse trading, that this small section of sidewalk will now be constructed. (This sidewalk will be approximately parallel to the jersey barriers that were placed at the edge of the Town Parking Lot late last summer.)

Site of the new sidewalk to be constructed near the kitchen store on Depot Court, across from the Art Center.

Rocky Lane — We've had numerous meetings with groups of residents and residents on an individual basis about the conditions and design of the bridge and roadway. One of their issues is the lack of a street sign identifying the new roadway. We understand that a new sign is on order and will be installed as soon as it arrives. But so far, we don't have a date. CBB did stripe the road recently which is progress.

Misc. Train Information — Did you know? The length of a Greenbush diesel locomotive is 65 feet and the length of each passenger car is 85 feet. Try to work that into your holiday party conversation.

How neutral is gender?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see where Harvard University is breaking new ground in education.

The folks who run the little prep school on the Charles are considering making their dormitories "gender neutral."

That means that they are thinking of letting the sons of Harvard room with the daughters of Harvard so they can study and bake cookies together and not have to worry about going home in the dark.

"It is something that is on the table," said Robert Mitchell of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. "There are already gender neutral suites, floors, and entryways, and wherever possible, we have created gender neutral single occupancy bathrooms."

…they are thinking of letting the sons of Harvard room with the daughters of Harvard so they can study and bake cookies together…

I wonder if Mom and Pop, who are footing the bill for all this, are going to be polled to see if they are willing to keep signing checks to cover what could be an unexpected extension of their offsprings' education in anatomy.

The move to offer the opportunity to share one's dorm room with someone of the opposite sex is also on at Clark University in Worcester.

It was started there when Jeffrey Chang and Allison Clancy, close friends and next-door dorm neighbors, asked to room together next year and were turned down.

"They did not give us a reason," said Jeffrey.

I can give you one in one word. It has three letters and ends in "x." At least I think it is, but this is 2006 on the campus and you never can tell.

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth and a Methodist bishop was president of my university, it was okay to have a visitor of the opposite sex in your dorm room, provided one out of every four feet were placed firmly on the floor.

This, of course, ruled out collegiate sex for anyone but a contortionist.

I once dated a nubile young lady, an art student from Greenfield, who lived in the Franklin Square House, a sort of female rooming house in Boston's South End.

Friends of the male persuasion, even friends with benefits, if there were such a thing in those days, were not allowed above the first floor of the Franklin Square House under penalty of … well, I never knew of anyone who tried.

And that wasn't even a college dorm.

But I digress …

The same story of Harvard's dalliance with coed dorms, which made page three of the Herald the other day, also told me that Hampshire College in Amherst has had a policy of "gender blind" rooming since 1970.

"Men and women who request to room together frequently are people who are good friends," Elaine Thomas, spokeswoman for Hampshire, told reporter Marie Szaniszlo without batting an eye.

I haven't been to Hampshire College or Amherst in years, but I always wondered why so many of their coeds walked around with smiles on their faces.

Surviving the holiday overdose

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

For this crew, the entire holidays are all about making a list and checking it twice to make sure they've got everything covered.

As I sat down to write a holiday column, it struck me. I had actually OD'd on the holidays and I hadn't even made it to the "Seven Swans A-Swimming." I suppose that's what happens when Christmas ads begin around Halloween, and by Thanksgiving, that toy your child would absolutely die if he does not get is already on the "you're too late now, chump!" list. But, the stores aren't the only culprits who push us to the edge during this season of good cheer and forced merriment.

Polly & Peter Perfects. We all know them; the families who take their holiday photos in June and even Edgar, their prized English bulldog, is well-groomed and smiling despite the big red bow on his collar. While I contemplate whether I can recycle last year's photos, their newsletters detail the numerous awards won by Johnny, Susi and little baby Timmy. Who knew a two- year old could accomplish so much in a single year? When their epic of family overachievements arrives in my mailbox the day after Thanksgiving, I know I'm supposed to think "How lovely;" but what I'm really thinking can't be printed in a family newspaper.

Ted & Trina Traditionalists. Each year they enjoy long-established family traditions like cutting down their own tree or making cookies together while singing Christmas carols. Then there are the rest of us, who can't remember what traditions we started the year before, let alone the words to anything other than "Grandma Got Run Over by a Reindeer." Maybe we've moved, divorced, remarried; or simply decided that we can't handle our own families during the holidays. So we tend to make things up as we go along. (Yes, son, other people really do eat take-out Chinese on Christmas. Well, I'm sure they do in China.)

Sam & Sally Spirits. These two seem to have an unending supply of holiday energy and attire. You run into them all over town and they're full of Christmas cheer and good tidings because they actually enjoy holiday shopping and even have the panache to pull off blinking lights on various articles of clothing. You briefly marvel at how you can't even get your winter wardrobe out of storage, yet they manage to dig out reindeer sweaters and Christmas tree neckties. Then you try not to think of what you could do about those blinking lights if you only had a Red Ryder BB gun.

Checklist Charlie & Trudie To-Do List. Christmas tree up? Check. Cards mailed? Check. Presents wrapped? Check. Letters to Santa? Check. For this crew, the entire holidays are all about making a list and checking it twice to make sure they've got everything covered. As your child watches their family race from one holiday event to the next, they inevitably turn to you and whine, "Mommy, why don't we make gingerbread houses from scratch? String cranberries for the tree? See the Nutcracker? Do the Holiday Stroll? …." Which leads you to look down and say, "Hey, why don't we go to McDonald's?" It works like a charm every time.

With the holidays spinning out of control (well for us normal people, anyhow) and taking on more manic proportions each year, we all have to come up with coping mechanisms, or at least little forms of rebellion. Last year, I didn't send out holiday cards. I can't tell you how great it felt not to pull an all-nighter licking envelopes. This year, I sent the cards (as I never sent change of address cards last year either). Instead, I let my seven-year old decorate the tree all by himself. So what if the ornaments are all at knee level. He thinks it's the most beautiful tree ever. And you know what? So do I. Now can someone please pass me the eggnog – no, not the one meant for the kids — and don't forget to wake me up when it's December 26th.

Animal shelter fund closer to goal

TO THE EDITOR:

The Friends of the Scituate Shelter would like to send warm holiday wishes to the residents of Cohasset and to thank all of you for your continued support.

As many of you know, the Eleanor Haughey Animal Shelter, commonly referred to as the Scituate Shelter, has been working for the past year and a half to raise money to relocate to the newly acquired 3A Farm. We are getting closer to our goal, but we still have a way to go.

We serve the towns of Scituate, Cohasset, Norwell, Hingham and Hull, taking in lost and surrendered animals on a space-available basis. As a long-time volunteer, I've witnessed the tireless dedication of the people who give their time, as well as countless happy endings. Some of our homeless friends come to us with health problems, some with behavior problems and some are quite elderly. Abandonment, abuse or unfortunate changes in circumstance bring them to our door, but each animal is treated with kindness, medical and behavioral help and most of all, dignity.

Just this year, an ancient and emaciated Newfoundland, now named Howard, was brought in by the Hingham Animal Control Officer. A good 40 pounds underweight, missing most of his teeth and stinking to high heaven from an untreated skin infection, he bore no tags and very little hope for the future. He was put on a special diet and treated by our wonderful vet, Dr. Pat Hess. Miraculously, a kind person with a soft spot for Newfies stepped in and volunteered to give him a good home for the rest of his life!

So to all of you who have sent in donations or held fundraisers, to the children who have given us the proceeds from their lemonade stands or asked for pet supplies in lieu of birthday gifts, we extend the most heartfelt thanks and warm wishes for the coming year.

We ask that in this season of giving, you remember the Scituate Shelter, whether with a donation to the 3A Farm Fund or a new home for a companion animal.

CEF appeals to community to support schools

The Cohasset Education Foundation recently sent out an appeal to local residents and businesses. The CEF is a non-profit local education fund designed to promote academic initiatives and excellence in Cohasset schools. The appeal asks for contributions to the CEF in two ways: donating to the Project Gift fund which will immediately fund needed projects at all three schools and donating to the Endowment Fund which will provide long-term funding solutions for the schools. The CEF has raised over $100,000 in gifts and pledges for 2006.

The goal of the CEF is to ensure that Cohasset students, teachers and administrators are provided with programs, materials and up-to-date equipment necessary to maintain academic excellence in today's competitive environment. The CEF works with the school administration to determine the needs at each school. The CEF will immediately fund projects once money has been raised for its Project Fund gifts. The Endowment offers a principal preserved fund, with its income from the Endowment fund becoming available for projects and for long-term funding, while assuring that the principal cannot be invaded.

This fall, the CEF funded the Osgood School computer lab. The grant of $25,000 purchased 24 new desktop computers, flat panel display screens and Microsoft Office Professional Edition 2003 software. Projects designated by Dr. Denise Walsh, Superintendent of Schools, for CEF include: funding the final phase of the Middle School Technology and Engineering Lab, purchasing Promethean White Boards for the Deer Hill School and High School, purchasing Safari Montage Video on Demand software systems for all schools and grade levels. The CEF is also donating all of the money raised through its "Extra Credit" program which recognizes teachers, administrators and staff at all three schools to professional development.

Tax deductible donations, in-kind contributions, corporate matching donations and volunteer hours will be gratefully accepted. For more information, visit www.cohasseteducation.org. The CEF is looking for volunteers to help with the upcoming Spelling Bee and Gala event. Contact, Catherine O'Callaghan at 781-383-6868.

Book discussion with local author

This week on Our Town, Cohasset's very own cable TV show, co-hosts by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo sit down with local author and historian Lincoln Bloomfield. Mr. Bloomfield discusses his new book "Accidential Encounters with History, Some Lessons Learned" and shares his life in the fields of education and high ranking government service.

This show airs Monday at 9pm on channel 10 and Tuesdays and Thursdays as well.

Watch every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 9p.m. on Comcast Channel 10.

Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed.

Christmas Tree Drive

Cohasset Middle School Student Council and Project Safeguard will hold a Christmas Tree Drive. They will pick up your holiday tree and take it away at the cost of $20 per tree and $15 per tree for Senior Citizens.

To have your tree picked up call 781-383-2492 by 8 p.m., Friday, Jan. 5, and leave a message with your address, phone number and any special instructions.

Have a check made out to Project Safeguard with your tree and it will be picked up from the end of your driveway Saturday, Jan. 6 between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

'Journey of growing up together had come to an end'

Christmas in Cohasset 50 years ago

By Joel S. Pratt
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In June, the 36 graduates of the Cohasset High Class of 1956 received our diplomas from School Committee Chairman Ozzie Ingram. There were 27 girls and nine boys! Our class included Cohasset's first-ever Exchange Student: Rosewitha 'Rika' Meseth from Külmbach, Germany. Eighteen of the 36 had started our long journey toward graduation in Miss Kitty McMahon's Ripley Road School kindergarten in September, 1943. How far we had come! Classmates Betty Bailey and Pamela Parker modelled little girl's finery in Elizabeth Bristol's 1947 fashion show. Nine years later, Pam and Betty modeled very adult garb for Miss Bristol's ad in our 1956 Tessahoc yearbook. The children had become — almost — adults. Over the years, new classmates had joined us and others departed. For all of us, the journey — growing up together — was at an end.

The last months of our school years were hectic. College applications were sent and results anxiously awaited. Many, many hours were spent creating our yearbook. Tim Buckeridge and I campaigned for election as Cohasset's Student Government Day representative: the voters chose me. I spent a March day pretending to be the Clerk of the Massachusetts State Senate. State Representative Nate Hurwitz introduced me to Governor Christian Herter.

In February we put on our Senior Class play, "Jane Eyre." We repeated it in April at the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival. The stage at the old John Hancock building was huge and the competing schools far larger than CHS. We didn't win.

I had applied to five Engineering Schools. Two more SAT exams were needed to complete the applications. Heavy snow began to fall on Friday, March 16th, the day before the exams. By six a.m. Saturday morning, I had shoveled our driveway and gotten the '51 Chevy up the hill. I called two classmates to say we were going to try to get there. Together we crawled through the drifts to Thayer Academy in Braintree. Very few people made it: told we could stay or come back in a week, we elected to stay. I was able to stay awake through the first exam, but not the second. All I remember is waking up when the proctor called "pencils down". Needless to say, my score was abysmal. Apparently poor English Achievement SATs made no difference for prospective engineers: all five schools accepted me.

But among the clothes and books there was a wonderful surprise: a slender green Olivetti portable typewriter in a soft leatherette case. The 1956 version of a word processor was a welcome and useful gift.

To some it was the '56 St. Patrick's Day storm. To South Shore residents, it was the Etrusco storm. The Italian freighter Etrusco washed ashore on Cedar Point next to the Scituate lighthouse that morning. And there it stayed for many months.

Sale of yearbooks and yearbook ads paid for our three-day class trip to New York City in May. We rode in a New Haven Railroad car decorated with a banner proclaiming 'Cohasset High School Class of 1956'! Very early one morning we joined the crowd outside the NBC building to watch Dave Garroway and J. Fred Muggs and hoped that our families would see us on the Today Show. They did – for a few seconds.

We graduated. We celebrated. Several classmates' families hosted a progression of parties. Our goal was to stay up all night and then watch the sunrise on Sandy Beach. Some of us actually did!

Through the summer we spent time together, but our paths had begun to diverge. Ahead lay jobs, college, military service, marriage and children.

Early on a September morning, Mother, Pop and I set out in the old Chevy for my freshman year at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, the oldest engineering school in the US. The Massachusetts Turnpike was still under construction: we wound through the Berkshire Hills to Troy, New York on old Route 2. Pop and Mother left after lunch in the Freshman Cafeteria. I was alone in my dorm room. A new journey had begun. From then on, I would return to my beautiful hometown only as a visitor.

As High School ended, I remember thinking it was going to be wonderful to have time to do things I wanted to do. Such thoughts vanished days after starting college. In no time at all, Christmas break arrived, with the promise of a few days at home to do holiday shopping, visit family and do some studying before returning to the grind.

Pam and Betty modeling clothes for Yearbook ad in 1956.

The last term exam ended at noon, three days before Christmas. I rushed down the hill to the Troy Railroad Station and boarded a 1 PM Boston & Maine train to Boston. The wooden coach looked like a civil war relic — complete with a pot-bellied coal stove to warm the passengers! It labored over the Berkshire Hills and through the famous Hoosac tunnel, arriving in Boston hours behind schedule.

Leaving home meant leaving my chickens and ducks. In 1951 Pop had started raising poultry. It was one in a succession of his hobbies. His hobby became my college fund-raising project. By 1954 the flock numbered over 200 birds: Rhode Island Red chickens, Mallard and Muscovy Ducks and Red-Breasted Bantam Game Cocks. Feeding, shoveling the you-know-what and preparing the eggs and birds for sale was no small chore. But selling birds for the table and eggs provided money to cover many college expenses. When I got home, the pens were empty. Pop discovered that the work his 'hired help' had left behind was more than he was willing to do. The birds were in Arnold Erickson's freezer on North Main Street: it took years to eat them all.

There were no toys under our tree. But among the clothes and books there was a wonderful surprise: a slender green Olivetti portable typewriter in a soft leatherette case. The 1956 version of a word processor was a welcome and useful gift. Now, 50 years later, I doubt you could even find ribbons for one. It was in my suitcase when I left Cohasset on the train to Boston. I stood in the North Station lobby, return ticket in hand, looking for the train to Troy. There wasn't one: B & M had suspended all service to the west! I was stuck. One more bump to be overcome on my new journey.

Postscript

The first "Christmas in Cohasset 50 years ago" story told of the Pratt family's 1944 wartime Christmas. Each succeeding story was as much about growing up in our beautiful New England Town as it was about Christmas. In 1956, my journey through childhood came to an end when I left Cohasset to attend college. I have visited hundreds of times since then, but never did live in Cohasset again. So with this, the 13th in the series, my Christmas stories come to an end.

Cohasset is, and always has been, a very special place. It has changed: the Cohasset of my 1940's and 50's childhood is irretrievably gone. Recalling today's Cohasset 50 years from now, one of today's young citizens may well entertain Mariner readers with stories about life in the quaint old days of 2006 when newspapers were printed on paper and delivered through the mail.

To Mariner Editor, Mary Ford, my special thanks for her support. To Mariner readers, I hope that you have enjoyed reading the stories as much as I have enjoyed writing them. Perhaps I will write more stories for the Mariner. If so, we will again journey together back to Cohasset in the last century.

Merry Christmas and Happy 2007 to all.

Eighth graders step up to the plate

Some play on high school teams

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"Maybe we have to take a look at the offerings and whether the population can support it."
— Rick Flynn, School Committee.

The School Committee would like to have a policy in place regarding eighth-grade students playing high school sports prior to the start of the 2007-2008 school year. While there is currently a "pilot program" in place which has allowed middle schoolers to participate in junior varsity sports on an as-needed basis, with Cohasset's small enrollment figures, their participating going forward may be vital to the school's sports program.

At the Dec. 20 School Committee meeting, Athletic Director Ron Ford came forward with a request to allow eighth-grade girls to participate on the junior varsity basketball team. Without additional players, Ford said he was not sure there would be enough students to even have a girls' basketball team.

"We are by far the smallest of the schools," said Ford, when it comes to the districts Cohasset competes against. In some cases, such as wrestling and swimming, the town has partnered up with other towns to increase participation. In other cases, eighth graders have tried out and have proven to be very skilled players who are capable of competing at the junior varsity level.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said looking at enrollment projections given to the schools by the New England School Development Council, or NESDEC, "There will be some years when this is really going to be a problem. We simply don't have the numbers," she said, adding the "bubble years" during which the district was preparing to take on more students, are not going to happen.

School Committee member Rick Flynn asked whether the number of sports offerings should be pared back. With 22 sports to choose from and students spread out across the spectrum, all the sports end up suffering from a lack of participation. This is the third sports season in a row for which eighth-grade students have been asked to literally step up to the plate and help fill out high school sports rosters. Last spring it was girls' softball and this fall it was boys' soccer.

"Maybe we have to take a look at the offerings and whether the population can support it," he said.

When the policy is crafted, the School Committee said it would also be wording to clarify the role of eighth graders in varsity sports. Currently, students are only allowed to participate at the junior varsity level, regardless of their ability to play at the varsity level. While the School Committee said there is much to discuss when it comes to younger students on a varsity team, Ford said he would be open to it.

"Lots of communities have eighth graders that are really good and we currently have one," he said, as he would like to play an eighth grader on the girls' basketball team. He noted students are learning how to play their sports and are honing their skills at a much younger age, and sometimes, it is appropriate to allow them to compete at the highest level.

However, the School Committee said the middle school and high school are two very different schools, although they are under the same roof. In fact, high school principal Joel Antolini noted when he came on board in Cohasest, he inherited a philosophy that the schools were completely separate entities for which there was very little crossover. With that being said, he noted the line is "becoming very muddy" and in some cases it might be appropriate to allow younger students to participate. "I would encourage people in the community to weigh in on that. This is all part of our growing pains," he said.

Flynn said the interaction of an eighth grader with a senior in high school whether it be on the bus or in the locker room, may cause some concern for parents. He also noted with some sports, such as football or hockey, there is a safety issue as the older students would have matured and are much bigger than the middle schoolers. "There is a lot to consider before we bring it forward," he said. "There is more to it than I thought."

Flying Santa exhibit, activity at Lifesaving Museum

For more than 75 years, Flying Santa has been delivering holiday packages to families at lighthouses and Coast Guard Stations across New England. The tradition began in 1929 when a Maine float plane pilot, Captain William Wincapaw, decided to make a Christmas Day flight to drop a few gifts for lighthouses keepers he knew along his regular route. By 1936, famed Boston Harbor historian and author Edward Rowe Snow had joined the Flying Santa flights. Snow would continue as Flying Santa for more than 40 years, growing Wincapaw's first thoughtful remembrance of the lighthouse keepers into a truly beloved holiday tradition. The Hull Lifesaving Museum's new winter exhibit, Flying Santa: A Holiday Tradition, includes dozens of photographs and artifacts from Flying Santa's wonderful history of spreading Christmas joy along the coast.

Make a holiday craft from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 27 and Thursday, Dec. 28; families are invited to view the Flying Santa exhibit and make their own Flying Santa ornament. While at the museum, be sure to spend some time in our Children's Loft, complete with climb-on sailboat and lookout tower!

The Hull Lifesaving Museum is located at 1117 Nantasket Avenue, Hull. Admission is $5 for adults, $3 seniors, and free for children and members. For more information, please call 781-925-5433, email lifesavingmuseum@comcast.net, or visit; lifesavingmuseum.org.

Nautical monument floated for harbor

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Plans have been unveiled to erect a new maritime display in the harbor. With the go-ahead from the Board of Selectmen, a ship's wheel could soon be installed in the middle of a roughly 5-foot ring of granite and brick, adding a new point of interest to the harbor landscape.

This project would be located near the pergola on Lawrence Wharf, which is between the Olde Salt House and Veterans Memorial Park.

Cushing Road resident John Small, who is also a member of the Cohasset Police Department, met with Selectmen Monday to talk about the project. "I thought this project up a long time ago," he said, but it has always been pushed to the back burner.

Small and his family have been very involved in projects around the harbor, including the Minot Light replica and anchor on Government Island.

"We're just looking to spiff things up," said Small, adding when complete, the ship's helm will look like a nautical artifact. He said he intended to use the same mason to lay the granite and brick as he did with the other projects he has worked on. He noted the Veterans Memorial Park received a new makeover this year and it "looks like a million bucks," and he would like to see continued improvements made around the harbor.

This project would be located near the pergola on Lawrence Wharf, which is between the Olde Salt House and Veterans Memorial Park.

But the Board of Selectmen said it would like more information about the project before giving its approval. Selectman Gary Vanderweil said while it sounded like a nice idea, he wasn't sure what the point of it was. Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said most of the projects in the harbor area have some kind of special meaning, as they are a memorial for someone or mark a special point of interest, and he would like to see this project do the same.

"This will be located on Lawrence Wharf," said Dormitzer, which has a rich history in the town. "Can it make reference to something?" he asked. Selectman Fred Koed concurred. "There is a little bit of history for that spot," he said. Koed also asked if the ship's wheel itself had any history in town.

Small said he hadn't come up with anything in particular to highlight in terms of history, but he could do some research. He also said he was not sure where the ship's wheel came from, but he could look into it.

Dormitzer said if possible, it would also be nice to see a graphic element incorporated into the project. Perhaps an illustration of the way Lawrence Wharf looked going back into the town's history, or some other graphic illustration to really paint a picture for those who view it.

The board asked where the money would come from to complete the project. Small said he has completed fund-raisers in the past for the other monuments to the tune of $75,000 and planned on doing the same for this project as well.

To give residents and the board an idea for where the monument will stand, Small said he would stake out the area. The board said when the plan is more developed, Small could return and make another presentation. Dormitzer said although the board did not give its immediate approval, "We do want to thank you for doing this. These kinds of projects really do make a difference in the town."

Citizen nomination deadline is Jan. 5

See nomination form facing page

The deadline for nominations for the 2006 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 5.

In keeping with a 14-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the mean by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Marjorie "Margie" Steele — "the heart and soul of the Cohasset Food Pantry" — as Citizen of the Year, for being a great role model through her long-time commitment to the important service, which has helped countless families over the years. The deadline for nominations for the 2006 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 5. Please see the nomination form on page 5. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@cnc.com are also welcome.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the 2006 Citizen of the Year, who will be named in January 2007.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

GIFTS of HOPE

Reaching out to help in your own community.

The season of giving is upon us. Gifts of Hope can help you give to those in need in your community.

For the past 15 years, Community Newspaper Company's Gifts of Hope program has helped connect you to those in need in your own community. Each year, a local charity is selected to be the beneficiary of the Gifts of Hope donation campaign. And each year, your generous donations have helped feed the hungry, shelter the homeless and bring joy to the faces of young children across Massachusetts.

How can you help this year? Please join the Abington Mariner, Rockland Mariner, Braintree Forum, Cohasset Mariner, Hanover Mariner, Hingham Journal, Marshfield Mariner, Norwell Mariner, Pembroke Mariner & Reporter, Scituate Mariner, Wareham Courier, and Weymouth News in giving the greatest gift of all – a gift of hope. A donation of any size goes a long way in helping those in need.

This year these local newspapers have identified several local charities to be the recipients of the gifts of hope donations.

Lady Skippers on an early roll

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

Everyone likes to win.

But when the Cohasset High girls basketball team tipped off in East Bridgewater last Friday, the Skippers questioned whether their romp over Holbrook the prior week told the whole story. Does running up the score on the inexperienced Bulldogs really qualify the Skippers as a "good" team?

In the first half of the East Bridgewater game, the girls certainly had their doubts. From the opening tip, the Vikings went on a disheartening 13-2 run before the Skippers could even catch their breath.

Cohasset eventually managed to close the gap late in the first half, but still faced a 19-14 losing score at the first buzzer. Something had to change if the Skippers wanted to maintain their undefeated record. And it did.

From the opening seconds of the second half, the Skippers switched on the button for the full court press and kept the Vikings struggling for air under the pressure.

"We really came out with high intensity and work ethic in the second half," explained Cohasset coach John Levangie. "EB really had trouble with our press."

Indeed, the well-rehearsed 2-2-1 Skipper press, with guards pressuring full court and forwards hanging at the half court line, put the Vikings in a panic. The press, which has provided the Skippers with consistent success in the past, cleared the runway for Cohasset to break away offensively.

"We rotated in our press much better in the second half," explained senior captain Lacey Richardson. "We put the pressure on them and worked the ball inside to the forwards for some open shots."

Sophomore center Sam Lehr threw down 10 points and grabbed 11 rebounds. Sophomore Kayla Farren went 7-for-8 in free throws late in the game to give the Skippers a huge boost. Richardson contributed six points, and freshman Tori Lehr provided four key second half points.

Levangie showed particular enthusiasm about Tori, who moved up from JV on short notice after eighth-grader Carly Haggerty was removed from the roster due to eligibility issues.

Levangie also commended Carly Salerno and Sarah Coggins for their work at the guard positions, as well as freshmen Meredith Kelly for a solid performance at forward.

During the Skippers' second half barrage, the Vikings only tallied 12 more points on the board in contrast to Cohasset's 29. All said and done, Cohasset turned this game around in a big way to walk away with a 43-31 victory.

After defeating Abington on Tuesday, the girls are 3-0 as they prepare for next week's Cohasset Holiday Tournament. At 6 p.m. on Thursday, the Skippers take on Bristol-Plymouth. The winner squares off against the winner of Sacred Heart and Hull, which will be played Thursday afternoon at 3.

The consolation and championship games take place Friday at 3 and 6, respectively.

CHS boys hoop nipped at buzzer

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

In a game of clutch plays down the stretch, it was East Bridgewater's Greg O'Sullivan who came up with the biggest play of them all.

The Vikings senior's basket at the buzzer gave his team a 56-54 win over Cohasset in Friday night's boys basketball clash.

It was the Skippers' first home game of the season and first game against EB after it joined the South Shore League this year.

The game started off rather slow with neither EB, led by captains O'Sullivan and Andrew Foster, nor Cohasset, led by captains Pat McCarthy and Justin Alexander, establishing a rhythm of their own. Only a junior, McCarthy has already been the star player and leading scorer for Cohasset in his sophomore year and he again displayed his talent out on the court.

He scored the first basket of the game, and continuously hit jumper after jumper for a total of 20 points in the first half alone. Helping him was sophomore Danny "D-Mart" Martin, who played his size at 6-foot-4 by piling up rebounds and blocking numerous shots, as well as putting up a few points himself.

For EB, O'Sullivan had two huge threes in the half that kept his team right in it and going into the half trailing by only two. Helping him out was fellow junior Daniel Marble who put up 10 points in the half.

The second half was a completely different story at the beginning, as both teams scored several baskets in the first couple minutes. The Skippers pushed their lead up to five in this short amount of time, which was fueled by both of their captains.

For the next 10 minutes, play remained even for both teams as they exchanged baskets. Then as the six-minute mark rolled around, the game became very interesting. EB junior Mike Curtin scored just under the mark to retake the lead for EB, but Alexander showed his relentlessness by coming right back down and putting it in for the Skippers.

Then came back the Vikings, led by Curtin, who put up two more and then got to the free throw line, making both baskets and giving EB a 48-45 lead. Now it was time for McCarthy to come calling once again as Cohasset was down one and, off a turnover, he got himself to the

Gymnasts score high in opener

The Cohasset-Norwell gymnastics team lost its season opener to Hanover-Rockland last Friday, but coach Amy Maree was pleased with her team's score of 123.2.

Senior captain Melissa Murphy and junior Corinna Durham led the effort with solid performances in the all-around. Murphy earned a 31.95, while Durham finished with a 31.4 in the four events (bars, floor exercise, vault and balance beam).

On the bars, senior captain Jamie Nichols and sophomore Cassie Pacella scored a 7.8 and 7.6, respectively. Pacella also earned an 8.0 on the floor, with Nichols putting up a 7.5 on the vault.

Rounding out the team's top performers were senior captain Kiersten Shontz (7.9 on vault) and sophomore Liz Clapp (7.45).

Other athletes that will contribute throughout the season include senior captain Jesse Davies, juniors Juliette Karp and Sarah Dargon, sophomore Alex Smith, and freshmen Mackenzie Hagney, Sarah Harding, Vanessa Durham and Shindra Cardoza.

"The team is looking good," said Maree. "We lost four strong captains from last year, but I feel these four captains this year have stepped up to the plate; they've been great leaders."

The girls compete tonight (Dec. 21) against Silver Lake at Silver Lake Middle School.

Jake Cuneo named to All-Scholastic team

Editor's note: With the recent merger of Community Newspaper Company and Memorial Press Group, there are now more schools and more athletes to be considered for All-Scholastic teams.*

The increase from 13 schools to 20 in the region will have an impact on how teams are chosen, including how many representatives some schools receive.

Only public school athletes from the following schools will be considered for All-Scholastic honors: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Old Rochester, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, Wareham, Weymouth and Whitman-Hanson.

Jake Cuneo – Junior
OT/DT - Cohasset

The best in a group of offensive linemen that was again the biggest strength for the Skippers this fall…With Cuneo manning the right tackle spot, it was no coincidence that a majority of Cohasset's running plays went to that side…Has great size at 6-foot-5, 270 pounds, and boasts the skill and technique to match…Also a major contributor to the Skippers' defense, anchoring the middle of the line on that side of the ball and limiting opponents' ability to run up the middle…Plays lacrosse for the defending Div. 3 state champions in the spring…Says Cohasset head coach Pete Afanasiw: "Jake was basically an unstoppable force for us. The line was very strong, and he was the biggest reason for that."

Ron Dunn – Senior (Capt.)
Offensive Line –Abington

Calling him the anchor of the Green Wave offensive line, may not be strong enough, the 6-5 285 pound left tackle was certainly a big reason the Abington rushing attack was so prolific. The Green Wave's four backs, Tony Gianinni, Joe Gabriele and Webster Rogers all produced solid numbers running behind Dunn, and the rest of the line. Dunn was also a stalwart on the defensive line as well lining up at defensive tackle. For his efforts this season he was named a South Shore League all-star. He's extremely athletic and light on his feet for his size, and demonstrates that at his best on the basketball floor in the winter for the Green Wave. Dunn will likely play football in college and is being highly recruited by schools at the Division 1AA and II levels.

Tim Wells – Senior (Capt.)
Wide Receiver – Abington

Now that it's all said and done, it's safe to say Wells is going down as one of the greatest players in Abington football history. This season he was South Shore League MVP, while leading Abington to an undefeated regular season and a berth in the playoffs. He was nearly unstoppable on offense at wide receiver using his speed and athleticism to create separation from defensive backs. On defensive he was a terrific safety who was always around the ball. In the league championship game he came up with a huge strip in the fourth quarter while adding 120 receiving yards to preserve the victory. He is a standout basketball and baseball player for the Green Wave, and is also being highly recruited as a potential college football player.

John Creamer - Senior Quarterback -Abington

The other half of the prolific Creamer-to-Wells duo, the senior quarterback will be a major part of the Green Wave passing record book for years to come after completing a terrific stint under center. This season he threw the ball all over the place, mostly to Wells, but also had other sound targets as well. He could also do it with his legs, and hands, as he caught a touchdown pass in the MIAA playoff game, and scrambled for a key first down in the lone touchdown drive of the Mashpee game that sealed the South Shore League title. Defensively he was one of the best corners in the league, and had two key interceptions in the Norwell game to seal a 6-0 win.

A South Shore League all-star this year he hopes to play football in college.

Jared Dunn - Junior Defensive Line -Abington

The Green Wave's high powered offense earned all the headlines this year but as the old adage goes it's defense that wins championships. Dunn, the younger brother of fellow all-scholastic Ron Dunn, was the best defensive player the Green Wave had this year. With his brother playing mostly offense because of a knee injury, Jared stepped his game up and was a near perfect run stuffing tackle. He could also get to the quarterback in passing situations. He was a big reason the Green Wave only allowed double digits in points twice this season. Head coach Jim Kelliher consistently recognized his efforts, and the rest of the league saw it as well in naming him a South Shore League all-star. He will be a force next year for the Green Wave and will be counted on to lead a young team.

Addison Lynch – Senior (Capt.)
Quarterback - Braintree

Teigan Pina – Senior
Running back - Braintree

Brandon Holbrook - Sophomore
Running back - Carver

The Carver High team was filled with youngsters this season and leading the pack was South Shore League All-Star Brandon Holbrook. The sophomore used his tremendous speed to be a threat on offense as well as returning kicks on special teams. He ended the season with seven touchdowns for the Crusaders this year.

Kyle Harasimowicz – Senior (Capt.)
DE/TE - Duxbury

When healthy, you'd be hard-pressed to find a more dominant high school defensive end than Duxbury senior Kyle Harasimowicz…The Dragons' co-captain wreaked havoc on opposing offenses early this season before suffering a high ankle sprain against Rockland midway through the season…The senior missed a few games, but came back strong at the end of the season, leading a defensive line that was nearly impossible to run on…Harasimowicz, a Patriot League and EMass all-star, also played tight end for Duxbury, catching a pair of touchdown passes and causing all kinds of match-up problems with his six-foot-six-inch, 240-pound frame…Earlier this month, Harasimowicz was accepted to Harvard University, and will play football for the Crimson next fall.

Cohasset's Jake Cuneo (71) was a force on the Skippers' line this year.

Luke O'Day – Senior (Capt.)
OL/DL - Duxbury

For the last few years, the Duxbury football team's biggest strength has arguably been its offensive and defensive lines…Senior co-captain Luke O'Day is a big reason for that…O'Day has dominated his opponents for two years, pairing up with teammate Kyle Harasimowicz to form one of the more imposing defensive lines in the area…O'Day and the Dragons rarely let opponents rush for more than 100 yards…Offensively, O'Day played left tackle on an offensive line that was largely responsible for Duxbury's success running the ball this fall…The six-foot-four-inch, 235-pound senior was named a Patriot League and EMass All-star.

James Wheeler – Senior (Capt.)
Running back – Hanover

Matt Kearney – Senior
Linebacker – Hingham

At 6-4, 260, Kearney was one of the defensive catalysts on the Patriot League champion Harbormen (7-0) team…The PL All-star played on both sides of the line, but shined brightest in his defensive role as one of the team's leaders in tackles…Kearney was an essential part of a defense that shutout three opponents this fall and surrendered seven points or fewer in four other contests…Only three opposing teams would score more than two TD's in meetings with Hingham, which went 9-3 this season and qualified for postseason play in the Div. 2A tourney for the second-straight year…Also winter and spring track teams at HHS, Kearney is a talented thrower, specializing in the shot put and javelin outdoors.

Trevor Robertson – Senior
Fullback – Hingham

Was one of a handful of ball carriers for the Patriot League champion Harbormen (7-0) this fall and fulfilled the job when called upon…A PL All-star, Robertson scored six touchdowns for 36 points this season…The 5-10, 200-pound fullback took off for a 21-yard TD run to get the scoring started for the Harbormen in a 20-6 victory over rival Scituate on Thanksgiving Day…Had another long TD run to cap a comeback effort that fell just short in a game against defending Div. 3 Bowl champs, Abington…Also played on the defensive side of the ball at linebacker and was part of a Hingham (9-3) defense that shutout three opponents and allowed more than two TD's in a game only three times this season, which ended in the Div. 2A playoffs…Robertson also competes on the winter track team at HHS.

Josh Savoy - Sophomore
Quarterback – Holbrook-Avon

Wendell Chipman – Senior (Capt.)
Running back – Marshfield

There isn't much this multi-talented player didn't do for the Atlantic Coast League champion Rams (9-0) this season…Chipman led the ACL in scoring and was third among those in Div. 1A with 15 touchdowns, 30 extra-point kicks, and two field goals, helping Marshfield (11-2) reach the Div. 1A Super Bowl game…An ACL and Eastern Mass. All-star, Chipman shined in the Rams' 15-0 semifinal victory over Weymouth, recovering a fumble in the end zone, picking off a pass, and booting a 23-yard field goal…Chipman was an Old Colony League All-star last season… Also a captain on the MHS lacrosse team, Chipman plans to continue his football career at the next level and is checking out the Ivy League schools.

Kurt Leone – Senior Quarterback – Marshfield

A two-year starter for the Rams, Leone's experience proved invaluable for the Atlantic Coast League Champions (9-0)…Able to throw the ball when necessary, it was Leone's great signal calling ability that made him stand out…The two-time league All-star (once in the Old Colony League and in the ACL this season) often changed calls at the line and saw great success in doing so…Leone was one of the best QB's in the ACL and in Div. 1A this season, racking up nine TD passes to finish ninth in the Div…He also scored three TD's of his own on, one coming on a two-yard keeper in Marshfield's 15-0 victory over Weymouth in the Div. 1A semifinals, sending the Rams to their second Super Bowl in three years…Shined in a 38-0 win over Sandwich in which he connected for a trio of TD passes…Leone plans to continue his football career at a Div. 1AA college next fall.

Jerry Freed – Senior
Running back – Marshfield

Not the biggest guy on the football field, but Freed's presence was huge…A running back/defensive back, Freed came up big on both sides of the ball for Marshfield…The Atlantic Coast League All-star had a knack for coming up big in the big games…Trailing Duxbury in the annual Turkey Day contest, Freed's great second half running (81 yards) was instrumental in the Rams' comeback 13-7 win…Made a remarkable interception in a 15-0 win over Weymouth in the Div. 1A semifinals…Freed also had great punting ability, often pinning the competition deep in their own end…Hauled in six TD's this season for the Rams, who won the ACL title (9-0) and played in the Div. 1A Super Bowl…Freed made waves last season when he came up with the fumble recovery that gave the Rams a chance to win their Div. 1 playoff game against Brockton in the closing seconds…Freed plans to continue his football career in college, looking at schools like University of Rhode Island, Merrimack, Stonehill, and Bentley.

Wil Nagle – Senior (Capt.)
Guard – Marshfield

The reason guys like Chipman and Freed saw so much success this season was largely because of this guy…Coaches in the Atlantic Coast League were calling him the best offensive lineman in the league and for good reason…It didn't matter what down it was, if the Rams were running behind Nagle, the odds were great he'd provide the holes they needed…Nagle boasted great size (6-4, 260) and speed on the line and his tenacity and "lineman mentality," according to coach Lou Silva, made him tough to beat…Occupied the right side at guard and running backs found great success when running sweeps to the right…Nagle trapped extremely well and earned an ACL All-star nod this fall for the Rams, who won the league crown (9-0) and reached the Div. 1A Super Bowl (11-2)…Nagle is looking to continue his football career at the Div. 1AA level next fall.

Garrett Mazanec – Senior
Defensive lineman – Marshfield

At 5-7, 210, some opposing offenses might have thought they could beat Mazanec, but boy were they wrong…Mazanec was among the leaders in tackles on the Atlantic Coast League Champion (9-0) Rams squad, registering an average 4-5 per contest…He was an essential part of a defense that shut out five opponents this season and allowed an average 8.6 points per game…The ACL All-star played his best football when it mattered most, registering five tackles in the Rams' 15-0 win over Weymouth in the Div. 1A semifinals, including one sack…His quickness off the line was essential in Marshfield's run to the Div. 1A Super Bowl game, where he recorded four tackles in the loss to Wayland…Mazanec plans to attend Eastern Carolina University in the fall.

Doug Farinick – Senior (Capt.)
RB/LB – Norwell

Whether it was in the offensive backfield or behind the defensive line, Farinick was always in the middle of things for the Clippers…One of the team's top runners, Farinick finished his high school football career in style with 80 yards and two touchdowns against Hanover on Thanksgiving…Also one of Norwell's leading tacklers from his linebacker position…Toward the end of the season, emerged as a threat in the passing game, and caught a 19-yard touchdown pass against Cohasset on Nov. 10…Also plays lacrosse for NHS…Is being recruited by several colleges for football, including Springfield College and Plymouth State University in New Hampshire…Says Norwell head coach Jim Sullivan: "Doug and Mike Rapa were the two guys that held the team together through our plague of injuries. Offensively and defensively, Doug was the leader of the team."

Armando Oliviera – Senior
Running back - Rockland

Gary Crowley – Senior (Capt.)
QB/FS – Scituate

The centerpiece of the Sailors' new pass-oriented offense this season…Passed for 2,371 yards and 15 touchdowns while completing over 60 percent of his throws, and was named team MVP…A tremendously skilled athlete who was also dangerous on the ground, running for over 700 yards…Also a key player in the Sailors' defense from his safety position…Will play lacrosse on scholarship at Bryant University in Smithfield, R.I…Says Scituate head coach Steve Castle: "Gary is a tremendous athlete who I would've dearly loved to have coached for another year, because I think he would've been fabulous."

Jay Milkiewicz – Senior
WR/DB - Scituate

Scituate's jack of all trades, Milkiewicz almost never came off the field…The team's leading receiver with 71 catches for 1,009 yards, but also played cornerback, punter, kicker, and returned all kicks and punts…Also ran for over 400 yards and nine touchdowns when Scituate lined up with a running back…Ranked in the top-10 in Eastern Mass. in points with 93 (13 touchdowns, seven extra points and four two-point conversions)…Scituate's most consistent, reliable target in the passing game…Also a key part of the defending Div. 3 South champion hockey team…Says Scituate head coach Steve Castle: "Jay is the type of kid where, if you got the ball in his hands, he'd make something happen. He was very important to the team."

David Bradshaw – Senior (Capt.)

7th grade boys drop close one to Hull

The seventh grade Cohasset boys matched up against Hull on Sunday at Cohasset High School. The seventh graders went down to Hull, 26-20, but they showed their characteristic grit as they gave Hull all they could handle.

This game developed at a low scoring pace. Both teams pushed the ball up the court, but both teams were missing their shooting touch. Hull pulled to an early 7-2 lead, but Cohasset's interior defense began to play big, as Jay Salerno, Robbie Mahoney, Jamie Faber and Kyrel Jaundoo contested shots and rebounded effectively.

Mahoney was particularly ferocious on the boards, and he picked up the scoring, as well. Morgan McCarthy gained position and rebounded well in among the trees. Chris Murphy got himself in position for some open looks at the basket along the baseline.

The seventh graders played this game without its starting point guard, Christian Allard, for the fourth consecutive game. Coach Mahoney relied primarily on Pat Kearney and Patrick MacCormack to lead the team. Both guards continued to grow into the position with on-the-job training. They played with poise, applying strong defensive pressure and taking care of the ball on the offensive end.

They were spelled by Chris Lunde, who showed flashes of brilliance with his jumper and some deft passing, and Chris Carpenter, who played straight-up, in-your-shirt defense.

Hull went on a run early in the second half and maintained a four- or five-point lead most of the rest of the way. McCarthy hit a soft jumper and Mahoney scored as well with a jumper in the key. Kearney made some outstanding defensive stops, but Hull's defensive pressure and some free throws left Cohasset just shy as the final horn sounded.

After the game, Coach Mahoney felt that the team had put itself into position to get open shots, but they just did not drop in this game.

5th grade boys top Norwell in opener

The fifth grade boys travel team won its first game of the young season against Norwell on Saturday, 24-19.

Cohasset put all the pieces together and played a complete game from start to finish. This was a game where everything seemed to flow from the defense, right from the opening tap won by big Joe Buckley.

The starting unit played great positional defense. Connor Green played great active defense from his forward position, not allowing Norwell to get inside along the baseline. Rebounding by Buckley, who was immense, and Chris Haggerty allowed Cohasset to run the floor on offense, as Brendan O'Connell and Rocco Laugelle put constant pressure on the Norwell zone.

Haggerty was smooth along the baseline, as he used a great head fake move to set up his soft jumper or drop off to teammates.

Through the first half, the guard play was solid as the boys built up an 11-0 lead. Liam Burke, Matthew MacCormack continued the defensive pressure. They pushed the ball, and they also ran the half-court offense, in which Burke and Dakota Achin patiently waited for open jumpers to drain.

Steven Maher played hustling defense down low, as he denied the Norwell big men the baseline and boxed out effectively on the boards.

Norwell made a run in the second half, cutting the lead to 17-16, but again, defensive pressure by the guards and active defense down low led to fast break lay-ups and jumpers by Achin, Burke, and Green to seal the win.

"This was a total team effort," explained Coach Liam O'Connell. "We played great defense throughout, which allowed us to get good shots on offense. I am happy for our team."

line and made both of his shots, giving the lead back to the home team.

Later, McCarthy would put up two more with just under two minutes left but Curtin, who scored all 10 of his points in the second half, made yet another shot to cut Cohasset's lead to a mere one point. After that, O'Sullivan (16 points) showed his leadership by making two clutch free throws to give EB the lead again.

The next big play came again from McCarthy, who forced a turnover and got to the line to make one free throw to tie the game with only 35 seconds left. EB now had the ball with less than 20 seconds left and one last chance.

After a missed shot and a rebound by Martin, O'Sullivan took the ball away and laid it up for two just as time expired. He had given his team, East Bridgewater, the last second victory in an outstanding game.

Following the game, EB coach Alessandri mentioned how O'Sullivan played for him as a freshman and how well he knows the game and what he brings to the court. He also thought his team, "played like it was a first game," meaning that they had minor mistakes.

Alessandri added, "Cohasset played very well and I felt Dorian [Bryant] coached outstanding and [McCarthy] and [Alexander] played outstanding."

McCarthy did play outstanding, scoring a game-high 31 points. Afterward, though, he said, "31 means nothing; a win means everything. I'm just proud of my team."

TopGun laxers excel indoors

TopGun Lacrosse has just completed its first Hingham-based girls varsity indoor league session and recorded a resounding success. It is another indication that this fastest growing sport continues to do so for both boys and girls.

Although the success of the league probably comes as no surprise to those who have observed TopGun Lacrosse over the years, the success of one of the teams in the league might be considered somewhat of a surprise. "Relentless," a team comprised of mostly eighth graders with one ninth grader and a sophomore, finished their regular season with a record of 3-2.

In a semifinal Hingham League playoff game against the Plymouth Varsity, Relentless came back from a 7-4 halftime deficit to win the game 11–9. The girls then traveled up to Acton to face the best of all of TopGun's League playoff teams in the "Championship of Champions."

It was billed as "Super Sunday" and proved to be just that. Relentless faced a tough Acton team and fought hard the entire way, eventually succumbing to the more senior team 12–11 in a very exciting game. These young women showed true grit and skill beyond anything that could have been imagined when the season had begun.

The following quote was posted by Topgun on their website:

"Relentless had the same problem that Marshfield had with youth, but they still were able to live up to their name sake as they pushed BG to the final buzzer, loosing by one in the opening round. Still, with a team this young (primarily eighth graders) to have come so close can only serve to drive them to take the next step to move on. And that is definitely in the cards for them. Great job, ladies!"

The "Relentless" squad of now seasoned warriors include: Katy Baker (Cohasset), Laura Ferzoco, Jessica Fusco (Cohasset), Emmy Giarrusso, Eliza Kinnealey (Cohasset), Kaci Kucinski (Cohasset), Anna Michalowski (Cohasset), Molly McElgunn (Cohasset), Chappie Scheller, and Sara Veranao.

CHS skaters take down Rockland

Despite the best efforts of the Rockland High starters last Friday, it was all Cohasset in its 6-3 home opening win over the Bulldogs.

This marked the team's first win under new head coach Bob Walsh, who said afterward his team was more than ready to play.

"After losing our first game to Westwood last week, the boys trained hard to prepare for this game," said Walsh.

Rockland scored first at 5:25 of the first period, when Devin Crowley scored unassisted. Less than 90 seconds later, Cohasset senior defenseman Conor Holway scored to tie the game at 1-1.

After that, Cohasset may have heard footsteps but never looked back, as senior Corbin Faber scored, assisted by juniors Charlie Czerkawski and Pat Doonan. It was 2-1, Cohasset, at the first intermission.

At 5:40 of the second period, Holway fed Doonan for a goal to make it 3-1. Dan Erickson pulled one back for Rockland, with an assist from Crowley. With 4:13 left in the second, Holway would earn his third point and second goal of the game, with help from sophomore defenseman Ian Lyster.

The third period started with Rockland's Mike Darling breaking in off the opening face-off to score unassisted, and it was again a one-goal game at 4-3.

Doonan took over from there, however, scoring at 6:56 of the third with an assist from linemate Faber. The junior winger completed his hat trick with three seconds left in the game to account for the final score of 6-3.

Cohasset is next in action during its Holiday Tournament over the holiday break. On Dec. 29, the Skippers take on Southeastern at 8:20 p.m. at Pilgrim Ice Arena in Hingham. Blue Hills and Westwood square off at 6:30.

The consolation and championship games take place at Pilgrim on New Year's Eve at 11:50 a.m. and 1:50 p.m., respectively.

CHS alumni hockey game

On New Year's Day, the Cohasset High varsity hockey team will be hosting its Eighth Annual Alumni Hockey Game at Pilgrim Arena in Hingham from 4:10 to 6:20 p.m.

The current varsity team is hoping to have a good turnout for this event and encourages all program alumni to come and join in on the fun. The cost is $25 per player for two hours of ice time, a souvenir shirt and a chance to take on the current team at CHS.

If you are interested in playing, please contact Anne Czerkawski at (781)383-9997 or email at cacz@comcast.net.

Final sign-up opportunity for spring lacrosse is Jan. 6

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will close its registration for the spring of 2007 with its second sign-up session on Saturday, Jan. 6 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at Cohasset High School.

Having opened registration in early December, organizers expect to have full rosters once the Saturday session is complete.

"It currently appears that we will hit or surpass our ideal roster sizes during the registration period," said Chuck Jaffe, director of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "We are committed to accepting all players who sign up by January 6, but there comes a point where having too many players diminishes the experience for everyone. We do not have cuts, and we play equal playing time, so the only way to be fair in managing our roster limits is to turn away late-comers.

"We would prefer for everyone interested to sign up on time, giving us the maximum time to deal with some of the issues that occur when we go beyond our ideal roster sizes."

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls in the 15 & Under (7th and 8th graders), 13 & Under (5th and 6th grades), and 11 & Under (grades 3-4) age levels.

The registration fee is $160 for one player, $300 for two, and $400 for three. Late registrations, if roster spots are available, carry an additional late fee of $25 per player.

The registration fee covers all Cohasset Youth Lacrosse events, a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to Lacrosse Magazine for Kids.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents, or students in the Cohasset school system.

In general, games for boys and girls are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set, although the older teams for both boys and girls typically have two practices and one game each week. At the youngest level, there typically is one practice per week. The teams will begin practicing indoors in early March and begin playing games in April. Cohasset's season concludes with the annual Family Day celebration – featuring intra-town games — in June.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse works with other town sports organizations to minimize conflicts and to allow players to participate in as many activities as possible.

In addition to players, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for additional coaches at all levels. If you are interested in volunteering to coach, contact Jaffe at 781-383-6688 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

Parents who can not attend the Jan. 6 registration should contact Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com in sufficient time to have registration materials mailed and returned prior to registration. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

For more information, go to www.cohassetlacrosse.com or contact Jaffe at 781-383-6688 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

'Longest' school week is finally over!

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Arguably one of the longest weeks in the entire school year is over! Seniors who applied early to schools are finding letters in the mail that could alter their entire life; while some individuals (sorry Mom) — haven't submitted anything yet.

It doesn't quite feel like December with the weather we're having. I braved the elements this Tuesday, walking home in my gym shorts. I still have feeling in my extremities, so I'll probably make it.

Today marks the debut issue of The Spinnsheet, The Spinnaker's younger sibling. Find a better way to kick off the last school day before the vacation. I dare you. This week was taxing, and that's an understatement. Close to any vacation, cabin fever spreads amongst the students; and when that final bell rings — it's mayhem. Expressionless faces break out into broad grins as we quickly take that first breath of freedom. Just thinking about it makes the second hand of the clock move even slower.

Here is this week's news:

- The Winter Concert was Wednesday night.
- Monday open auditions for Drama were held in the auditorium. Auditions for anyone interested who missed Monday's audition were held after school Wednesday.
- Debate Team met Wednesday after school.
- Wednesday night the School Committee met.
- Student Council held a home-baked Holiday Cookie sale this week to raise money.
- The PSO President's Council met Thursday morning.
- Middle School Team Leaders met after school on Tuesday.
- A Faculty Holiday reception was held in the Library Friday morning.

The Spinnsheet hit newsstands today! This baby might become a collector's item.

I was fortunate enough to be the Picture This! feature person this week. Check it out; maybe we have some things in common. Even if we don't, I still like you.

There will be no Life at CHS next week, my apologies. If you're looking for a column or two to read Steve Rushin and Rick Reilly of Sports Illustrated always have great stuff. Enjoy the vacation, Cohasset.

Sobering statistics

Hunger goes beyond city limits

Editor's note: This is one in a series of articles as part of our annual Gifts of Hope campaign, focusing on assistance needed at local food pantries.

By Kathleen Zigmont
CORRESPONDENT

Hunger is a silent, widespread epidemic that has strongholds in several demographics — without knowing it, your child's classmate, your coworker and even your neighbor may be going hungry.

According to the Greater Boston Food Bank, the number of people seeking food assistance in Massachusetts increased 14 percent from 2001 to 2005, when the organization conducted a study on hunger on the state.

The Greater Boston Food Bank, which distributes food and resources for food to several area food pantries, helped over 321,500 people in 2005.

Other findings from the study include:

- About one-third of the households receiving food assistance have a child under the age of 18 in the home and nearly a third say their children are not eating enough because they can't afford enough food.
- Many have to make difficult choices, according to the survey: 45 percent said they have had to choose between food and heat; 39 percent, between food and rent and 30 percent have had to choose between food and medical care.

The survey also shows that not all hungry are homeless and in the cities. Some 84 percent of all people seeking food assistance have a place to live; over a third of the households have one or more working adult; 52 percent live in the suburbs.

Stephanie Nichols of the Greater Boston Food Bank said most people are surprised with these figures.

"A lot of people think only the homeless need assistance with food, but the numbers show that the problem goes way beyond that. Hungry people are not just poor and jobless. Every town, every community has hunger," she said.

Nichols said many factors can contribute to the need for food: high energy and housing costs, medical bills, job loss.

"We are seeing a lot of hard-working people for the first time recently, people who have been able to make ends meet but just can keep juggling the bills anymore," she said.

Carol Ferguson of the Pembroke Food Pantry in the Pembroke Community Center said that in her town, they are seeing more first time households seeking help than every before.

"People began having trouble with the high cost of heat and gas last year and haven't been able to bounce back," she said. "These are people with jobs, but the pay isn't enough to cover their expenses so they need help," said Ferguson.

Nichols said the hunger epidemic leads to other health and societal problems.

"People who aren't eating nutritious food can't concentrate, their health is at risk, especially among the elderly and small children. It isn't enough to provide calories, who need to provide healthy food to maintain growth and health," she said.

But while eating nutritiously

Studies have shown that children who are malnourished develop more health problems as they grow up, including obesity, diabetes and other diseases.

Winter art classes

South Shore Art Center announces its winter schedule of courses and workshops, including "Not Everyone Does Email" – a calligraphy course taught by Cynthia Henrich, and two classes with new instructor Sharon Perlmutter: "Nuts and Bolts of Watercolor" and "Trompe L'O'eil." Courses start the week of Jan. 16.

Eileen Rotty will lead a workshop on the essentials of drawing the figure on Jan. 27 and 28. Other workshops include tile making, "Akua Kolor" printmaking, digital photography, portrait photography and a master book arts workshop with book artist Peter Madden.

Children's classes include "Learning from the Masters", papermaking, printmaking and "Elements of Design". Courses are available for students age 4 1/2 and older, including specialized courses for teens. Most materials are supplied for children's classes and prices range from $55 to $175. Financial assistance is available through the Lois Weltman Memorial Fund for Children, requiring a student be recommended by an art teacher. All classes begin mid-January.

Gift certificates are available in any denomination and make great holiday gifts. For more information, call 781-383-2787 or visit ssac.org.

Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.; and Sunday, from noon to 4 p.m. South Shore Art Center is at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

'All Things Dutch' provides taste of Holland for holidays

By Sara Mason Ader

Owner Dan Waterman often invites his local customers to swing by his warehouse located near Home Depot to peruse his stock and pick up their orders.

Children who celebrate Christmas in the United States typically find their gifts waiting for them under their trees on the morning of Dec. 25. But for families who celebrate in the Dutch tradition, the festivities begin on Dec. 5 — St. Nicholas Eve.

On that night, young children in the Netherlands leave their shoes by the fireplace and wake up to find inside them the traditional gifts of cookies, candies, chocolate and marzipan in the morning left by St. Nick, or Sinterklaas, as he is known there.

For local Dutch families, finding the customary holiday goodies has been a snap, thanks to a Rockland-based online and catalog retailer that is aptly named All Things Dutch. Although the company does not have a retail store, owner Dan Waterman often invites his local customers to swing by his warehouse located near Home Depot to peruse his stock and pick up their orders.

"Because of his products, we have been able to maintain a lot of our traditions," says Hingham resident Johanna van Strien, who has relied on Waterman in the past to help her fill her children's shoes on St. Nicholas Eve with the initials of their names made from chocolate.

In addition to its usual array of products from the Netherlands, All Things Dutch is currently featuring a variety of traditional holiday gift items. These include a range of Sinterklaas tree ornaments, plus a variety of cookies and candies available in colorful tins.

All Things Dutch also has a large "Drop Shop," full of one of the largest selections of Dutch licorice in the United States. Coming in sweet, salty and bitter flavors, Dutch licorice — called drop — has little in common with its American counterpart. In fact, "That's not licorice," Waterman said of the American style in an interview with Martha Stewart on her show in late 2001. She had invited Waterman to appear on the show to explain the Dutch love of licorice. The follow-up article about Waterman's Drop Shop that was written in her magazine is posted on the All Things Dutch website at: www.allthingsdutch.com.

Van Strien estimates that about 10 Dutch families currently live in Hingham, although a far bigger number is present in the Greater Boston area. When her children were younger, Van Strien says she helped organize St. Nicholas parties for Dutch families around Boston with many children in attendance and she ordered the holiday goodies from All Things Dutch. She says she still seeks out special gifts for her kids' teachers there at Christmas time.

For local residents interested in exposing their young children to Dutch traditions, Boer also recommends a preschool on Cape Cod Lane called The Dutch School. Run by Ernestine Lammers — herself a native of Holland — the school incorporates Dutch language and culture into the usual preschool curriculum for kids between the ages of 2–1/2 and 5 years of age. "It's a fantastic place," Boer says.

More information about All Things Dutch is available at www.allthingsdutch.com. The Dutch School's website is www.thedutchschool.net.

OBITUARIES

Patricia A. Walsh

Served on several town committees

Patricia A. Walsh

Patricia Anne (White) Walsh, of Cohasset, age 76, died Dec. 18, 2006 at the Harbor House Rehabilitation and Nursing Home in Hingham.

Born in Dedham, Mrs. Walsh received an A.B. Degree from Radcliffe College in 1951. She summered for 13 years at the parent's home on Nichols Road in Cohasset and lived in Cohasset for 51 years on North Main St. She was very active in Cohasset.

Mrs. Walsh served as a president of the St. Anthony's Sodality, CCD teacher and as a chairman for the St. Anthony's Church Fair. She also served as secretary and treasurer for the Democratic Town Committee, a member of the Cohasset PTA, Cohasset Women's Club, a member of the Board of Directors for the Cohasset Community Center, and served as leader for the Girl Scouts and was Chief Den Mother for the Cub Scouts. Patricia served on the Cohasset School Committee, to which she was elected in 1978. Mrs. Walsh also served as secretary for the Board of Selectman, School Committee, Sewer Commission, Board of Health, Planning Board and the Conservation Commission. She was also an active member of the Old Colony Radcliffe Alumnae Club, serving as treasurer and vice president.

She leaves her husband of 54 years to Joseph F. Walsh, Jr. of Cohasset; her children Robert John Walsh of Ashland, Patricia Anne Savignano of Creamridge, N.J., David Michael Walsh of Quincy, James Patrick Walsh of Chicago, Ill; four grandchildren Zachary Walsh, Katelyn Savignano, Nicholas Savignano, and Tyler Savignano.

She also leaves a sister of Carol Frances Bradbury of Saugus, and Florida; and nephews Robert, Phillip, Fred, and Frank Bradbury.

She was the mother of the late Joseph F. Walsh, III.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset this morning, Dec. 22, at 10 a.m.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, in Cohasset handled the arrangements.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Joseph F. Walsh, III Scholarship Fund, c/o Cohasset High School, 143 Pond St., Cohasset, MA. 02025.

Jeanette C. Somerville

Member of Eastern Star

Jeanette C. (Lincoln) Somerville, 97, of Cohasset, died Dec. 17, 2006, at New England Friend's Home in Hingham.

Mrs. Somerville was born and raised in Cohasset and was a graduate of Cohasset High School.

She was a life-long member of Beechwood Congregational Church in Cohasset, and was also a member of Eastern Star and Norwell Grange.

Wife of 71 years of the late Arthur Somerville, she leaves her son, Wesley Somerville and his wife, Janette, of Plymouth; her grandchildren, John Somerville of Maine, Allan Somerville and Douglas Somerville, both of Cohasset; three great-grandsons; and many nieces and nephews.

A funeral service was held at Beechwood Congregational Church, Cohasset. A graveside service was held at Beechwood Cemetery. Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Memorial donations may be made to Beechwood Congregational Church, 51 Church St., Cohasset, MA 02025

Mary N. Andracchio

Former seamstress

Mary N. (Pagliaro) Andracchio, 94, of Cohasset, died Dec. 15, 2006, at Harbor House in Hingham after a brief illness.

Born in Amaroni, Italy, Mrs. Andracchio came to the United States at age 9 and settled with her family in Cohasset, and graduated from Cohasset High School with the Class of 1931. Following her marriage, she lived in East Boston before returning to Cohasset in 1950.

Mrs. Andracchio had worked as a seamstress for several firms on the South Shore. She sang in the choir at Glastonbury Abbey for many years, and was active in the Cohasset Council on Aging.

Wife of the late Frank Andracchio, she leaves her daughter, Frances Smith and her husband, Wayne, of Foxboro; her daughter-in-law, Judith Andracchio of Scituate; five grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren. She was the mother of the late Bruno Andracchio, who died in August.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Arrangements were handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Memorial donations may be made to Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham, MA 02043.

Prize-winning painting a pet project

Local artist selected for Blue Man Group's juried exhibition

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

South Easton artist Laurie Grunin recently won the $1,000 second prize in the 18-plus age division in "Blue Man Group Vortex 2006: A Juried Exhibition" for her oil painting entitled "Bailey's Balloon Dog."

Grunin's prize-winning painting, along with three others selected in the 18-plus-age category, will be on display at The Charles Playhouse in Boston through December 2007. Earlier this year, Blue Man Group — the mute trio who've been performing with their patented blend of odd props, all kinds of paper, and rock music on The Charles Playhouse main stage since 1995 — invited all Massachusetts artists to discover and explore interconnectivity in their shared communities as part of "Vortex 2006," the latest installment in the group's annual outreach to local artists. This year's judges included Nora Donnelly, Senior Registrar at Boston's Institute of Contemporary Art; Ricardo D. Barreto, Director of UrbanArts Institute at MassArt; and Chris McCarthy, Executive Director of the Provincetown Art Association and Museum.

"Bailey's Balloon Dog," by Laurie Grunin

I've always thought that animals make a great subject for art, because they are so genuine."
South Easton artist Laurie Grunin

"I was inspired by Blue Man Group and I wanted to do something fun," explained Grunin, 24, recently by telephone from her South Easton home, of the painting of a dog's encounter with a balloon animal. "I was trying for a photo realistic style, but I was told I didn't quite make it. I submitted the piece for fun, never expecting to win anything, never mind second place."

Grunin's subject may have other ideas about his own artistic merit, that is if he were to sit still long enough to ponder his canine visage on canvas.

"Bailey is a hyperactive Australian terrier who lives with my boyfriend, Ian Blair-Lamb, and his family in North Easton. Bailey is very funny and has a great personality. I took a photo of Bailey looking up and then, separately, a shot of a balloon animal. I thought Bailey might tear his balloon counterpart to shreds if they actually came in contact as they do in the painting."

Grunin is looking to see her painting on display when the exhibit goes up this month in Boston and thinks her four-legged friend may also be interested in seeing himself on the venerable venue's wall.

"I can't wait to see it hanging at the Charles Playhouse and, if they let dogs in, Bailey will make the trip with me, too."

A graduate of the Class of 2000 at Oliver Ames High School in North Easton and a 2004 magna cum laude graduate of the Hartford Art School, Grunin has been interested in animals as art since she was in elementary school.

"I was in fifth or sixth grade when I got a book called 'How to Draw 50 Animals' out of the library and set about teaching myself how to draw animals. I love all kinds of animals so whenever I have the opportunity, I paint one. The secret is in the eyes. If you get the eyes right then you really capture the personality."

Currently a freelance illustrator, Grunin has painted several animals on commission for local collectors.

"I find people would almost rather have their dogs or their horses painted than their children which is fine by me. I've always thought that animals make a great subject for art, because they are so genuine."

(Prints of "Bailey's Balloon Dog" are currently available at On The Cusp, 195 North Washington St., North Easton. All "Vortex 2006" winners may be viewed by visiting www.blueman.com and clicking on Boston. The Blue Man Group continues to perform in an open-ended run at The Charles Playhouse, 74 Warren St., Boston. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787.)

The spy who bored me

"The Good Shepherd" (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

A preppie "Godfather," "The Good Shepherd" takes us into the inner sanctums of political power in the United States, and — guess what? — it's a pinstriped mafia.

Directed by Robert De Niro ("A Bronx Tale"), who also acts, and scripted by Eric Roth ("Munich"), "The Good Shepherd" was originally to be directed by the godfather himself, Francis Ford Coppola. It tells the story of the John Le Carre-ish figure Edward Wilson (Matt Damon), a bland young man born into pre-World War II wealth and privilege. At Yale, Edward is inducted into the legendary Skull and Bones Club, whose members include George W. Bush and John Kerry, and later is earmarked for a position in the OSS and even later, the newly established, hush-hush Central Intelligence Agency.

The film shuttles between Edward's cloak-and-dagger adventures as a junior spy in Europe at the start of the Cold War and his later attempts in 1961 to uncover why the Bay of Pigs Invasion, a CIA operation he led, was such an abysmal failure.

Power in "The Good Shepherd" is a family affair. Edward falls in love with a beautiful, deaf woman (Tammy Blanchard), but is manipulated into marrying a more highly placed prize.

In one scene, Damon appears in drag in a Yale production of "H.M.S. Pinafore," singing "Oh joy, oh rapture unforeseen," and it is the only time Damon gets to show off some pizazz.

The rest of the time, Edward is as colorless as a glass of water and about as exciting to observe for two-and-a-half hours. While the film is well made and recalls such cloak-and-dagger classics as Coppola's "The Conversation" and Steven Spielberg's "Munich," it has a vacuum for a heart.

When he's not toppling South American governments, Edward makes tiny ships in bottles. Another key to his character is his distant relationship with his son, who craves his love and attention. This makes the son (English actor Eddie Redmayne) not so much another Michael Corleone as another Fredo.

Also in the all-star cast are De Niro as fictional Gen. Billy Sullivan, creator of the CIA; William Hurt as Wilson's wily superior; Michael Gambon as a gay British spy; John Turturro as Wilson's Luca Brasi; Billy Crudup as a Kim Philby stand-in; Timothy Hutton as Edward's father; Joe Pesci as a mobster recruited to murder Castro; Keir Dullea ("2001: A Space Odyssey") as a U.S. Senator; and Alec Baldwin.

As Wilson's neurasthenic wife Clover, Angelina Jolie is too beautiful to be so ignored by everyone around her and too shockingly underused for someone with her talent.

When she shouts "Who are you?" at her flinching, bespectacled husband after 20 years of unhappy marriage, viewers can only sit there asking themselves the same question.

Rated R. "The Good Shepherd" contains violence, profanity and sexual situations.

School vacation week

WOULD YOU LIKE TO BECOME AN ARTIST, A MUSICIAN, A CHEMIST OR A ZOOLOGIST? At the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell you'll learn how to transform patterns in nature into beautiful works of art, listen to the sounds around you and create instruments that make music, discover how water freezes to create unique and interesting crystals, and meet some really cool animals up close - there's something for everyone.

Each day is a different topic or subject. The program is divided into two groups, grades K to 2 and grades 3 to 5 and runs from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The cost is $30 per day for members and $34 per day for non-members. Pre-registration and pre-payment are required. The registration deadline is Thursday, Dec. 21.

Topics/subjects include the following: Tuesday, Dec. 26, Art in Nature; Wednesday, Dec. 27: Animalia; Thursday, Dec. 28: Science of Music and Friday, Dec. 29: Water, Ice and Snow.

Inspired by Jeff Corwin of Animal Planet, indoor exhibits include the EcoZone, an interactive animal area focusing on the ecosystems of southeastern Massachusetts. The Science Center offers year round programs and events for all ages. For information go to www.ssnsc.org.

Bandstand Revue

Christine Hurley

Choosing between big bands, big laughs, and big waves for New Year's Eve

If the title question posed in the plaintive Frank Loesser standard "What Are You Doing New Year's Eve?" - recorded over the years by everyone from Ella Fitzgerald and Barbra Streisand to Lee Ann Womack, Clay Aiken and Bette Midler - is one you still haven't answered then you may want to consider one of the many South Shore options available this Dec. 31.

Quincy's own JM Productions will present Bandstand Revue - direct from Foxwoods Resort Casino in Connecticut, in a New Year's Eve Celebration at Braintree's Sheraton Hotel" including dinner, show, dancing and party favors for $89 per person. There is also a special hotel room rate at the Sheraton Braintree for those wishing to stay overnight.

Playing the greatest hits of the 50's, 60's and 70's, Bandstand Revue has been touring Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts since 1979. While they specialize in rock 'n' roll oldies, their play list covers swing and standards from the late 40's and other hit music right up to the 70's, including doo-wop, rhythm and blues, British invasion and Motown. Founding member Joe Gionti - who performs on keyboards, bass and vocals - formed the five-member show Band 27 years ago. The group has been featured at Foxwoods since 1997. Other band members include Greg Mulvey on lead vocals, Fran Donnelly on guitar and vocals, Pete Vanasse on saxophone, and Tony Aquilante on drums. The New Year's Eve show will include dancing until 1:30 a.m. with the band playing on.

Tommy Dunham

Jerry Thornton

JM Productions first introduced "Bandstand Review" to South Shore audiences five years ago and will present them in an intimate setting for only 80 people on Dec. 31. For tickets and information, call: JM Produc-tions at 617-786-7469 or visit JM Productions secure website for on line purchasing at www.jmproductionspresents.com.

Other New Year's Eve offerings include:

Jimbo's Steak & Fin Restaurat in Braintree which will present "A Big New Year's Eve Night Comedy Show Comedy show. featuring some of South Shore's best-known stand-up comics including Tommy Dunham, Annette Pollack, Bill Farrell, Christine Hurley, and Jerry Thornton. The $75 per person package will include appetizers, dinner, party favors, and a champagne toast. Patrons can watch the Ball Drop in New York's Times Square in the Lounge at midnight to Ring in the New Year. Tickets must be purchased in advance by calling 781-848-0300 or visiting either www.jimbossteakandfin.com or www.annettepollack.com

Quincy's Yardrock Productions and Harbor Express will set sail for New Year's Eve Cruise featuring live music, dancing, food, and fireworks for $65 per person. Hosted by Joe Hajjar and featuring Ricky "King" Russell and The Cadillac Horns. Call Joe Hajjar for details and reservations at 617-22-6999 harborexpress.com or yardrock.com The boat will board at 8 p.m. in Quincy and also pick up passengers at Boston's Aquarium Wharf.

And for people looking for a special way to spend Jan. 1, 2007, what about a trip to Spectacle Island. The Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands are sponsoring the annual Seafarers' Island Holiday on New Year's Day. There will be three separate ticketed cruises from Rowes Wharf to Spectacle Island: from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., or from noon to 4 p.m. or from 1 to 5 p.m. Rowes Wharf is in downtown Boston (by the Boston Harbor Hotel, Atlantic Avenue). The closest MBTA stations are South Station (Red Line) and Aquarium (Blue Line). The trip goes regardless of the weather, with no rain date. Tickets will be sold in the Ferry Terminal one hour before departure.

Another way to spend New Year's Day is to take a free guided New Year's Day Nature Walk, on Monday, Jan. 1, at 11 a.m. Halfway Pond, in Plymouth. The Wildlands Trust, a local nonprofit organization protecting nearly 5,000 acres of land in Southeastern Massachusetts, invites you to enjoy a walk all the way around Halfway Pond. The walk, which will take approximately two hours, is suitable for all ages. Participants should dress appropriately for the weather and bring binoculars, a camera, and water if desired. Directions: Route 3 south to Exit 3. West off exit to stop sign. Turn right and go north about two miles on Long Pond Road, pass school, then turn left onto Mast Road (opposite golf course). Follow Mast Road about two miles to small parking area on right just after Camp Wind in the Pines Girl Scout Center.

Jean Patterson looks through the standing-room-only crowd at the back of the Sullivan Gymnasium to watch the school video during debate on Article 3 (budget) during the annual Town Meeting in April. The school budget was one of the biggest stories in 2006.

'Healing Field' planned for Memorial Day

The flags sell for $20 and can be dedicated to anyone.

The Sons of the American Legion is planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2007 observances.

The effort, which Selectmen have unanimously endorsed, should result in upwards of 200 American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $20 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces.

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

Police Beat

Teens arrested with marijuana

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Three local teens were arrested on drug charges just two days before Christmas on Dec. 23. An assistant harbormaster at Government Island reported observing a red Toyota parked with teens inside that were tossing what appeared to be seeds out the window. He came into headquarters to report what he had seen. He had also picked up some of the seeds and provided a plate number.

The teens were no longer at Government Island when police arrived but a short time later the car was spotted heading northbound on South Main Street. After pulling the car over, police could smell marijuana coming from the car as they approached it.

Two teens, an 18 and 19 year old, both Cohasset residents, were arrested and charged with possession of a Class D substance (marijuana). The third youth, a 16-year-old juvenile was charged with possession of a Class D substance and possession of a Class D substance with intent to distribute. Police said he had eight smaller plastic bags of what appeared to be marijuana in a larger plastic bag.

Chief James Hussey explained that people will often pick through marijuana to get rid of the seeds and any small branches before rolling it.

MVA on Route 3A

A driver was cited for following to closely after an accident at Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Pond Street last Monday (Dec. 18) at about 4:20 p.m. Chief Hussey said a 2001 Ford Windstar was the fourth car in line heading north and stopped at the light. When the light turned green, the four cars pulled away. The first two vehicles started moving; but the Windstar, which picked up speed too quickly "rear-ended" the third vehicle in line. There was a minor injury; no one was transported to the hospital, Hussey said.

Paintball vandals

Last Tuesday (Dec. 19), a walk-in at the police station reported his property on King Street had been hit by paintballs. The incident occurred sometime between Dec. 14 and Dec. 19. The house was hit about half a dozen times with paintballs, Chief Hussey said. Police are investigating.

Dog bites dog

A woman told police that while she was walking her dog in Whitney Woods, a large German shepherd attacked her dog last Wednesday (Dec. 20) at about 11:20 a.m. The owner of the German shepherd put the dog on a leash. However when the walker got home, she found a puncture wound on her dog.

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy contacted the owner of the German shepherd. Chief Hussey said the dog was licensed and up to date on its shots. Murphy is filing an incident report so there will be a record of the attack. Hussey said the German shepherd owner would have to pay any medical costs for the other dog.

Leaving scene

A man is being summonsed to court for leaving the scene of an automobile accident after causing property damage, Chief Hussey said. The incident occurred last Thursday (Dec. 21) at about 10:45 p.m. on Jerusalem Road. Police were called to the scene after reports of the accident, and came across a white Nissan Frontier off the road and up against a large rock. There were people, who had stopped to look, standing around the vehicle that had been abandoned, Chief Hussey said. Because of the location, Hull police sent a K-9 unit that started tracking and found a person who claimed the car belonged to her husband, Hussey said. Police ran the registration, which came back with the people living in Hull. Police went to the dwelling and believe both the husband and wife were in the car; however, they are not certain who was driving because of mixed stories. Hussey said the husband, who said he was driving, said he left the vehicle and walked home because he needed his medication immediately. There was some damage at the scene to a sign.

The man was also cited for speeding.

Vehicle vandalism

Police say a thick, hardened substance on the outside of a resident's car appears to have been chocolate syrup. The owner of the vehicle reported the vandalism at 8:30 p.m. last Friday (Dec. 22). The owner thinks the vandalism occurred sometime after midnight the night before. The car was parked on Beach Street at the owner's house. Police are looking into a potential motive but have not come up with anything, Chief Hussey said.

Erratic driving

A report of a driver going in and out of driveways and driving erratically in the Linden Drive neighborhood at 4:53 a.m. last Saturday (Dec. 23) was probably the newspaper delivery person, Chief Hussey said. Police responded to the scene and came upon the delivery person, he said.

At 7:12 a.m. later that day, a walk-in at the police station reported being cut off by an erratic driver on South Main Street. Police say a vehicle traveling too fast down S. Main St., appears to have had to swerve to avoid a car making a right onto South Main from Brook Street. The Brook Street driver had to turn the wheels sharply to avoid being hit and bumped into the tree at the corner. Chief Hussey said there was a small scrape on the car door and the tree was not damaged.

Water tank

Youths left a cell phone behind at the water tank off Pleasant Street, which led police to them, Chief Hussey said. Here's what happened. At about 9:30 a.m., Saturday (Dec. 23), a caller from the water department reported that someone had put a ladder up to the water tank overnight. There was also a cut in the fence. During a thorough search of the area, police found a cell phone and were able to identify its owner.

"Based on the information we received in speaking to the person – we are summonsing at least two individuals to court on charges of trespassing and damage to property," Hussey said. He explained the top of the tower is locked, so the youths did not gain access to the water.

Police do not think the teens involved were trying to put something into the water supply but may have been trying to climb the tank to take pictures of the area.

Scrap copper

Police are investigating the theft of about 50 pounds of scrap copper from a house on Hobart Lane. The incident was reported at about 3:25 p.m., on Sunday (Dec. 24). The property owner, who discovered the missing copper, thinks the theft occurred sometime in the past two weeks. Hussey said police are following up. He explained there is quite a market out there for copper.

Ornaments moved

Police received a report from a concerned resident last Friday (Dec. 22) at 12:18 a.m. about teens taking Christmas decorations from a neighbor's yard. As it turned out, the perpetrators did not remove any decorations but had rearranged some of them.

2006: a roller coaster of emotion

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

As 2006 comes to a close, those who reflect on the issue-driven, past 12 months could experience feelings that run the gamut.

However, the past year was also one of compassion, as residents came out to help each other in large numbers. To start this year off, the Doonan family experienced a fire on New Year's Day, which left their Jerusalem Road home uninhabitable. Their friends and neighbors immediately stepped up to the plate. No sooner had the last embers been put out had someone offered up a house in Hull for the family to stay in and a Web site set up to accept the many donations which poured in.

There were also selfless deeds, shown best in Nichols Road resident Ted Gledhill, who at 23 years old donated one of his kidneys to his mother, saving her life. With that act, he became one of the youngest patients to ever donate a kidney, and got back the vibrant, energetic mother he had been missing for so long.

Cohasset's youngest residents pooled together to provide outreach in a number of ways. From sending cards to an ailing Red Sox pitcher, to collecting funds for the operating of a beloved bus driver's bull mastiff, to sending care packages to soldiers overseas — their compassion proved to be never ending.

The following Year in Review provides a broad overview of the issues and events that were covered and debated in the pages of the Cohasset Mariner during 2006. While some issues split the town, at the end of the day the passion exhibited in even the most contentious debate is further proof Cohasset cares.

January

The Very Rev. E. Clifford Cutler of St. Stephen's announces he is leaving Cohasset to return to his roots in Philadelphia.

News about alleged embezzlement of hundreds of thousands of dollars in Cohasset Yacht Club funds is causing more waves than a major nor'easter.

Cohasset seniors looking to move into affordable housing might not find an answer in the Cook Estate project. While there will be affordable units built, seniors selling homes will have a

Time running out for Citizen nominations

See nomination form on page 21

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In keeping with a 14-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

The deadline for nominations for the 2006 Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Jan 5. Please see the nomination form on page 21. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@cnc.com are also welcome.

This year's recipient will join past recipients:

1993: Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset": for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

1994: Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

1995: Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

1996: The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

1997: Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

1998: Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

1999: Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

2000: former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

2001: Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

2002: Arthur Lehr for more than 50 years of volunteer service on worthwhile projects including the Boy Scouts; serving on the Zoning Board of Appeals and as a Registrar of Voters; Clerk of the Works for the DPW garage, Little League Complex, and Mariners Park; serving on the Recycling Committee, as town Civil Defense Director, on Gravel Pit Reuse Committee and more.

2003: Marjorie Murphy for touching countless lives through her roughly 25 years as school librarian at Deer Hill. With eyes that twinkle and an infectious smile, Mrs. Murphy devoted her life to helping children discover the wonders of reading and the value of a good book.

2004: John Coe, a WWII veteran, for all his volunteer service at the Senior Center where he helps make the center a warm place where people come and meet friends; for his work quietly behind the scenes helping fellow citizens and his service as the "beloved Town Crier" every year at the Village Fair.

2005: Marjorie "Margie" Steele, who is the "heart and soul of the Cohasset Food Pantry," for her energy and long-time commitment to the important service, which has helped countless people in need over the years.

Richard Perkinson speaks his mind on Article 3 (the budget) at last spring's annual Town Meeting. The school budget and overrides were among the biggest stories in 2006.

hard time passing the asset tests necessary to determine who qualifies for the housing.

Budget season has begun in earnest for fiscal 2007 for both the town and school department. Town Manager Bill Griffin presented a balanced budget to selectmen and the Advisory Committee, which stays within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2.

Selectmen may bring an article before Town Meeting April 1 to help put some rules in place for door-to-door solicitation.

The Cohasset Housing Partnership Committee is taking root. Four residents have expressed interest in serving, and once the town hires a new housing consultant, selectmen will make the committee appointments.

The alternative energy committee and board of selectmen would like to see land located near the town landfill tested to see if it would be a site suitable to host a wind turbine.

Local developer Wayne Sawchuk's proposal to expand the 1811 Samuel Bates House in the village could hinge on whether Town Meeting agrees to amend the zoning bylaws.

February

Turn the clock ahead a few years and imagine a vibrant mixed-use district surrounding the new Greenbush train station — one that might bring in some badly needed tax revenue for the town. Voters at the April 1 annual Town Meeting could have the chance to set the stage for just such a place — by establishing a Transit Oriented District or TOD.

The fiscal 2007 Town Manager's recommended budget does not have the funds available to meet the requests of every department.

This spring the Cohasset Historical Society will have a brand new weathervane blowing in the breeze, thanks to Jerusalem Road resident and Historical Society member Steve Bobo.

The Advisory Committee, Board of Selectmen and School Committee are slated to have another round-table budget discussion. While the first joint budget session was a good starting point, all three boards agree there are many more issues to be vetted before the numbers are ready for Town Meeting.

School Committee incumbent Rick Flynn announced in January, that after six years on the board, he would not run for re-election. This week he added a little excitement to the race when he announced he has changed his mind.

A group of border collies is causing some concern in town. While the owner of the dogs says they are sweet and gentle animals, several residents who were allegedly bitten by the dogs tell a different story.

Margie Steele, the "Heart and soul of the food pantry" is named Cohasset's Citizen of the Year.

March

Cohasset has passed 28 overrides since 1998, and this year, it could be asked to do so again.

A group of nine border collies, which have threatened and/or bitten four Cohasset residents, will be separated permanently, in an effort to break up the "pack mentality" which may have contributed to some of the attacks. The dogs will also undergo a behavioral analysis to determine whether they are a threat to humans on their own.

Selectmen voted to accept Weymouth-based Weathervane Construction Corporation's $4.9 million proposal to build Cape-style condominiums for those 55 and older on the Cook Estate off Sohier Street.

In a packed meeting that at times resembled more of a pep rally for the school budget than a governmental proceeding, selectmen voted to go along with the recommendation of the Advisory Committee and place two override questions on the special election ballot.

Tired of acres of asphalt along Route 3A in places like Tedeschi Plaza and Shaw's Plaza? If a Town Meeting article passes muster with voters, commercial property owners along the highway business district could have the option of reducing some

Come to the AISNE Private School Fair

Sunday, January, 7th, 2007
1:00 - 4:00 p.m.
Westin Hotel, 70 Third Avenue
Waltham, MA 02451-7523

Finding the right school takes time. The keys to success are knowing your child and learning as much as you can about the schools you might consider. At the AISNE Fair you will meet with representatives from a number of Independent Schools in New England, including elementary and secondary schools, day schools and boarding schools, and single-sex and coed schools.

Come to the Private School Fair sponsored by the Association of Independent Schools in New England (AISNE) to consider private school options for September and get a head start on the school search process for the 08-09 school year.

To learn more about the Private School Fair, please visit us on the web at WWW.AISNE.ORG or give us a call at (781)843-8440.

Each family that attends the School Fair will be entered into a raffle for a free I-POD.

This is a free event and open to the public.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Hello Cohasset and Happy New Year! I hope that everyone has a wonderful and safe start to 2007. Although there is not much to report on in the column this week, it is all still really cool information and event news that will help in some of your January plans. Make sure to send in any holiday news or photos of interest, birthday or other special event information or any other interesting tidbits to share.

ALUMNI HOCKEY

On Jan. 1, the Cohasset Varsity Hockey Team will be hosting its 8th Annual Alumni Hockey Game at Pilgrim Arena in Hingham from 4:10 - 6:20p.m. The current varsity team is hoping to have a good turn out for this event and encourages all alumni players to come and join in on the fun. The cost is $25. per player for two hours of ice time, a souvenir shirt and a chance to take on the current team at CHS. If you are interested in playing, please contact Anne Czerkawski at 383 997 or e-mail at cacz@comcast.net . Look forward to seeing you there!

WIN A CRUISE

Princess Cruises and Cohasset Travel have joined forces supporting a fundraiser to benefit the programs and services of Wellspring Multi-Service Center. South Shore residents can win a cruise for two to Alaska, one of the last remaining wildernesses on earth. The raffle donation will provide funding for all the valuable programs at Wellspring and the winner could be rewarded with a remarkable vacation. Winners will experience the stunning beauty of Alaska including Glacier Bay National Park, Tracy Arm Fjord or Hubbard Glacier along with Juneau, Skagway Sitka or Ketchikan depending on the itinerary. The award includes airfare to Vancouver and balcony stateroom accommodations from which to view the unforgettable scenery. Tickets are $50 and only 300 tickets will be sold. Raffle tickets are available at: Wellspring Thrift Shops, 814 Nantasket Ave, Hull and 40 North St., Hingham; Cohasset Travel Agency, Rte. 3A, Cohasset; and Darilynn's in Cohasset Village. Cohasset Travel will be coordinating the travel plans for the cruise, which is good for travel during 2007 or 2008.

The winning ticket will be drawn on April 15.

SPORTSMANSHIP

Robert Jones of Cohasset won this year's Scituate/Cohasset Sharks Youth Football's James McInnis Sportsmanship award.

Fourteen-year-old Robert Jones of Cohasset won this year's Scituate/Cohasset Sharks Youth Football's James McInnis Sportsmanship award. It is the first time since 1983 that a Cohasset resident has earned this recognition. Robert, who is an honor student at Cohasset High School, had a remarkable final game when the starting quarterback was injured in the first quarter. In that game he ended up playing quarterback, middle-line backer, safety and cornerback and scored a touchdown at full back.

Congratulations!

CASINO NIGHT

Lacrosse Boosters annual casino night fundraiser will be Saturday night, Jan. 20 at Atlantica here in Cohasset, the boosterswill "raise the stakes" from 8 p.m. until midnight! Tickets are $25 each and available from Lyn Previte (781-383-9723). There will be blackjack, roulette, poker and other games of chance. Atlantica will serve hors d'oeuvres and there will be a cash bar. The money raised from this event will go directly to funding the JV lacrosse program at the high school for both boys and girls.

This event is critical to provide playing opportunities to younger players and the continued success and growth of the entire lacrosse program. Cohasset Lacrosse has numerous players at the collegiate level-probably more so than any other varsity sport. Our recent success (Cohasset boys were 2006 state champions and looking to repeat) has much to do with the continuing support from our feeder programs and the financial support from the entire Cohasset community. Any lacrosse parent looking to help out with this event, please call Lynn Previte!

PROM DRESSES

The Cohasset Consignment Shop will be collecting fabulous dresses during January and February to be sold at the Pre Prom event being held in Early March. If you have a dress or two that will fill this need, call 781-383-0687 to make an appointment to donate or consign your gently worn prom or prom-like dress.

TREE PICKUP

Here is a wonderful program that the Cohasset Middle School Student Council and Project Safeguard are sponsoring. Looking to have your holiday tree picked up and taken away? Even better, the cost that you pay to have this much wanted and needed chore taken care of will benefit Project Safeguard. The cost per tree is $20 with Senior Citizens paying $15. Call 781-383-2492 and leave a message with your address, phone number and any special instructions. Make sure to call by 8 pm on Jan. 5. Have a check made out to Project Safeguard with your tree and it will be picked up at the end of your driveway on Saturday, Jan. 6 between 10 and 2 pm.

That is all for this week, send in all information and news events to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

YEAR IN REVIEW

asphalt and replace it with more building space.

The Community Preservation Fund could continue to help restore an important part of Cohasset history as well as contribute to preserving open space, refurbish a worn-out ballpark, build a new veterans honor roll, restore the front doors at Town Hall, and even buy some new washing machines and dryers for the town's only affordable housing complex. It's all part of a "suitcase" article on the Town Meeting Warrant.

The Cohasset Rotary Club is celebrating a very special anniversary this year. Thirty years ago, the organization coordinated the first ever Road Race by the Sea, and today, the popular event is stronger than ever.

Cohasset teachers are getting an early start on campaigning this year and have posted nearly 200 red and white "Keep Quality Education in Cohasset" signs around town.

April

More than 600 residents were in attendance at the start of Town Meeting, but that number dropped to about 100 when those who came to support the override cast their votes, and then made their way toward the nearest exit.

A very rare beaked whale caused a stir on Sandy Beach when it came ashore. The animal could not be saved and was transported to the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute for further study.

The candidates who declared their support for the $1.495 million override won two seats on the School Committee and one on the Board of Selectmen.

If four out of nine border collies owned by Meadow Lane residents Mia and John Dean cannot be placed in suitable border collie rescue facilities, all four must be put to sleep.

After nearly three years of trying to build senior housing on the Cook Estate, the town has decided to call it quits.

May

The tone of this year's override election has been described by many to be the most contentious in years and perhaps in the entire history of the town.

With the defeat of both override figures, the school department has some tough budgeting decisions to make. With an increase of 3 percent, or roughly $370,000 to work with, there is a lot of money to be made up just to cover fixed costs.

Twenty-three years ago, Meredith Gledhill gave her son Ted the gift of life. Never did she, or he, expect one day he would have the opportunity to return the favor. One month ago, Ted became an organ donor for his mother, giving up a kidney to save her life, and today, both are celebrating good health together.

Drenching rain that stayed around for days, dumping about 8-1/2 inches in the area, was more of the wet stuff than anyone wanted.

Flooding during Mother's Day weekend caused damage to many homes around town. While the storm is a somewhat unusual event, town officials say something must be done to help prevent flooding from happening in the future.

June

Memorial Day is often thought of as the unofficial kickoff to summer. This year's weather lent itself especially well to barbecues and boating. But Cohasset's residents have not forgotten the meaning of the day, as year after year they continue to come out in full force to honor those who have paid the ultimate price serving our country.

About 100 residents gathered in the high school cafeteria for a forum unlike any other held in the town thus far. Sponsored by the PSO and facilitated by Cohasset resident and strategy consultant Laura Stone, the meeting was held to help the town figure out "What's Possible" for the future of the town and it's schools.

Selectmen voted to increase both the cost of all-facility stickers and pay-as-you-throw bags, which may be the first in a long line of changes.

CHS boys' lacrosse team earns title of state champs after 8-3 win over Dover-Sherborn.

The School Committee has voted to implement bus fees as well as parking fees for those students who drive themselves to school, on a one-year trial basis.

Security is a top priority for Cohasset's schools. To ensure they are monitored day and night, a new security system is slated to be installed at all three buildings, which will connect to monitors at the Cohasset Police Department.

Selectmen voted to go along with Town Manager Bill Griffin's recommendation to increase building department and ambulance fees.

Thirty-two teams competed in this year's Relay for Life.

July

Cohasset Pediatrics was abuzz with excitement when it opened its office doors to some very special patients. Thanks to the Chernobyl Children's Project — the largest organization in the United States to provide medical treatment and respite care for children from Chernobyl-affected areas — 18 children ages seven through 14 traveled all the way from the Ukraine, Belarus and Russia to receive medical care from doctors throughout Massachusetts.

After almost four decades on the Cohasset Fire Department, Chief Roger Lincoln has announced he will be retiring, effective Oct. 29.

Twenty years ago, during the summer of 1986, literally thousands of spectators flocked to Cohasset to watch the filming of "The Witches of Eastwick," in the hopes of getting a glimpse of one of the stars, Jack Nicholson, Cher, Susan Sarandon or Michelle Pfeiffer.

The school department will close out fiscal 2006 very much in the black. The School Committee was informed Monday the district has a roughly $433,000 surplus, which will be used to cover underbudgeted items from fiscal 2006 as well as pay for materials and supplies and some special education tuition for fiscal 2007.

Town officials had hoped to meet with the MBTA to talk about municipal parking and take a walk around the town parking lot so all involved could visualize the situation. But the MBTA sent word — and followed up with a letter — that it would not participate, preferring to have the issue discussed in executive session because it could involve future litigation.

August

Numbers have been painted in the parking spaces at the high school — step one for implementing parking fees for students. However, at the School Budget and Finance subcommittee meeting, fees for parking and riding the bus were put back on the table. Members of the School Committee said they were surprised to hear the district had a surplus of roughly $430,000, and indicated they may have voted differently about the fees had they known.

Heading up services for the town's seniors is no easy job. But new director for the Council on Elder Affairs Linda Elworthy, who has just finished up her first month in town, is already proving she is up to the task.

The MBTA is pushing back against the Board of Selectmen, which says it will only have dispute resolution discussions in open session. Currently the town and the authority, which is building the new Greenbush commuter rail line, are butting heads about

2006 Makes History

With interest rates still near 40-year lows, and home inventories at high levels, many real estate buyers are quickly realizing that now is a great time to buy. In fact, the National Association of Realtors predicts that 2006 will be the third best year in real estate history.

Given U.S. home prices have grown each and every year since 1950, real estate continues to outpace nearly all investments-including stocks, mutual funds and bonds. Now is a great time to meet with a broker at Home Center Sotheby's International Realty.

The Old Man and The Kid

The Old Man sat down at his desk and pulled out his familiar dog-eared logbook. It was almost filled with his scribblings. He opened it to a fresh page, the last one in the book. He looked at the clock. The second hand had swept into the last minute.

Outside, a bomb exploded and the wail of sirens filled the night.

They're going to mock me for the rest of my time, he thought. He knew what had happened without going to the window. He mourned the bomber, so filled with hate and despair, and he mourned the innocents that the bomber took with him in his madness.

Where was that Kid? He was supposed to be here early to give The Old Man a chance to brief him on what happened during his reign and what he could expect in the next one. Instead, The Kid was late. Where was he?

Suddenly the door flew open and The Kid was there in the room, the angry sounds of the outside world announcing his entry in the brief time the door was open. The Kid appeared a bit disheveled already, a strange look in one so young.

"What kind of a place are you running here?" he demanded of The Old Man. "They searched my diapers at the airport. I thought they were going to confiscate my sash. I'm not even born yet and already they suspect I'm up to no good."

The Old Man shrugged.

"It's the way of the world," he said and he almost bit his tongue for saying it. It shouldn't be the way of the world. He had fought against it all during his 12-month reign. For the first time, as the dying seconds ticked away, he had to admit he failed.

Outside a bomb exploded and the wail of sirens filled the night.

"Well, it's not the way of my world," said The Kid. "Do you know that someone took a shot at me as I was coming up the walk. Me! The hope of the future! And someone else asked me for my papers to see if I was an illegal alien? Me! An illegal alien!

"Now where is that book I'm supposed to read, the one that tells me how bad you fouled things up in the past year?"

The Old Man passed his log to the youngster. The Kid took it and opened it to a random page, any page. He read a few passages, turned the page and read a few more. His lips moved as he mouthed the unfamiliar words and phrases.

"What is this 'Iraq,'" he asked. "It's a strange word yet I see it on every page."

"It's a place," said The Old Man. "A place where there is a war going on. Been going on for about four years now. At least American troops have been there that long. Americans are getting impatient with it. I've been trying to end it. Maybe you can."

"A piece of cake," said The Kid. "I'll just declare victory and bring the troops home. Why didn't you think of that?"

"It's a little more complicated than that," said The Old Man.

"Complicated, shmomplicated," said The Kid.

Outside a bomb exploded and the wail of sirens filled the night.

"I see you spent a lot of time working on 'undocumented immigrants,'" said The Kid. "Is that like 'illegal aliens?'"

"That's what some people call them, yes," said The Old Man.

"I can take care of that problem right away," said The Kid. "Round 'em up and ship 'em home. Voila, no problem!"

"It's a little more complicated than that," said The Old Man.

The Kid turned over another page. He was near the back of the book now, far from the Iraqs and the illegal aliens. The problems were of lesser import but he lingered over them longer. Especially, the pictures. Ah, the pictures!

"I see this Paris Hilton was giving you trouble," he said. "She and Britney Spears. Those crazy kids with their drinking and carousing. Look at them. If you don't mind, I think I'll take on those problems first. Kind of a warmup. Okay?"

He chuckled and looked around for The Old Man but the second hand had ticked all the way to midnight and he was gone. All that remained was the tattered, dogeared logbook that recorded his failure.

For the first time, The Kid felt alone and the tiniest pang of regret that he had not listened to The Old Man more closely. Perhaps it as more complicated than that. Perhaps there was something to be learned from failure.

The Kid took out his own logbook, so pristine it still smelled of printer's ink, and opened it to the first blank page. He took out his pen and, in a bold hand, wrote "2007" cross the top of the page. Then he paused, pen in air. "What shall I write," he thought.

Outside, a bomb exploded and the wail of sirens filled the night.

Greenbush over past 12 months

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

North Main Street Crossing, summer of 2006.

Rocky Lane Bridge in January of 2006.

Pleasant Street, summer of 2006.

We have worked hard at keeping the Town up to date with the fast paced construction changes.

Another year has zoomed by. It hardly seems possible that the Greenbush Guys will have been on the job for two years as of the end of January, 2007. We're not sure where the time has gone. Originally, as our nickname, "The Greenbush Guys" indicates our mission was to be the Town's interface for the Greenbush Rail Restoration Project. Truly, this has been a very interesting mission. We think that the project is better for the Town than it might have otherwise been. Not perfect, but better. We have worked hard at keeping the Town up to date with the fast paced construction changes. We fully understand that the inconveniences of construction have not been easy …unexpected detours that seem to occur without warning, bumpy roads, inadequate drainage, loss of parking spaces in the village and so on. But most of it is behind us. We have included a few photos to bring back some of the construction history. Compare these with today's views at the same location.

Yep, there are still outstanding issues on the project. Things like: drainage that doesn't work on Beechwood Street and Rocky Lane; incomplete crossings at Sohier Street and Lower King Street; and additional parking spaces in the Town Parking Lot. The MBTA insists that these things will be addressed before project completion. However, this whole year, the MBTA's contractor, Cashman Balfour Beatty (CBB) has had their eyes fixed on laying rail. That's been their number one goal: To have the rail complete from Scituate to Braintree. Most other activities have taken a back seat to getting the rail complete. So, we continue to work with the MBTA and CBB to address the remaining issues.

We have tried to work hard at communicating with residents about their issues and concerns. From the feedback we have gotten, most residents are appreciative of our efforts. Occasionally, we just can't do much. We are constantly amazed by the number of positive comments we get about these articles that the Mariner is kind enough to print for us. Your feedback is always welcome, whether positive or negative.

Other stuff this past year – As some of you may know, the Town does not have an engineering department and has relied on outside engineering firms for most of its engineering activities. Although the firms the Town has used have been very professional they are not easily available for everything that needs to be done. And, they carry significant expense. Consequently, since we are both engineers we have been asked by the Town Manager to act in an engineering capacity on several projects, both large and small. The largest was the recent Village Revitalization in the center village. With the available funds, we were able to do Main Street and Depot Court. The Town is hopeful that it will receive additional funds to complete Elm and Brook Streets in the Village area, but the funds have not been released yet. We suspect that the change in the guard at the State House may have caused things to move slower than normal.

We have worked with Norfolk County Engineering to complete the two drainage projects on Forest Avenue that, until they were completed, precluded the Town from finishing the new sidewalks and street paving on Forest Avenue. So, next spring the Town has Forest Avenue completion to look forward to. We have also played small supporting roles with the Health of the Harbor Committee, Board of Health, Stormwater Committee, DPW, Conservation Commission and several other groups.

Just this week, we received formal notification that the application we submitted to the Department of Transportation and Department of Economic Development via a Transportation Oriented Development (TOD) grant for new sidewalks connecting the Town sidewalk network to the new Greenbush Station was approved in the amount of $278,000. That really makes for a Happy New Year.

In summary, this has been an interesting year and, quite frankly, a fun year. With that being said, we both extend a Happy, Healthy and Prosperous New Year to all of you.

Urge to face the big questions

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I thought about how old my parents are approximately and realized I hadn't a moment to lose.

New years is a time for thoughtful people to reflect on the past and plan for the future. Me, I just like to party and move on. But for some reason as 2006 comes to a close I have a strange urge to face the big questions: where am I going, why is it taking so long to get there, and is it just me or does it feel really hot in here?

I was pondering my situation like this and listening to the radio when I heard about a project called "StoryCorps", where people sit microphones in front of old people and record their life stories for posterity. I thought about how old my parents are approximately and realized I hadn't a moment to lose. I ran out and rented a nice tape recorder and microphone, did a little research on how to talk to the elderly, drove all the way to New Hampshire — basically I went to a lot of trouble getting things set up. And you wouldn't believe how unenthused they were when I explained that I wanted to get them on tape before they died.

"We're not dying," my mother said. "I know, but you're like, seventy years old," I said. "Seventy-one." "See? You're getting older by the minute. We should get your stories down before you're too sick to speak." "We're not sick," said my father. "You don't look so good," I said. "John, I'm seventy-three and can bench press twice my age," my father said. "You're forty-one and can't say the same thing." "This isn't about me," I said. "It's about recording your memories of my early childhood before you're too batty to remember them." "I think we're done here," my mother said.

So that idea was a bust. Since I was in the area I brought the sound equipment over to the house of my mother's uncle Bob, who has to be in his nineties by now, but he was off on some Alaskan dog sledding thing so I came home with zippo.

For many years I never doubted that my existence had a purpose. Then I got married, and these days I feel like I'm constantly confronted by the question. My best answer of late is that I'm here to smell the chicken. You see, my wife has almost no sense of smell, which makes life with a man a lot more tolerable for her than it is for most women, but unfortunately it also makes her paranoid about buying bad meat. Every Tuesday at 5pm I get the same call on my home-office phone.

"John, I need you to come and smell the chicken." "Are you being euphemistic this time?" "No." "Can I at least, you know, 'archive my Quicken file' first?" "Are you being euphemistic now?" "No." "John I'm trying to cook dinner." "So am I, baby. So am I." "Okay. You tell me if this chicken is good and then I'll 'vacuum the garage'. Deal?" "Honey we don't have a garage. Besides, I'm sure the chicken is fine."

One thing you learn when you have children is that it's not adults, but kids under the age of ten who raise the most challenging questions about life, death, God and the universe. It's therefore your responsibility as a parent to answer each of these questions with some fantastical bunk that's opaque enough to stifle their curiosity so they can quit bothering people and get on with their lives. I did have to laugh the other night, though, when I was putting my little six-year-old to bed. I'd been trying to explain why bad things happen to good people, and out of the blue she asked why good things happen to Ann Coulter. I didn't even have a bold-faced lie to answer that one, so I kissed her good night, wished her sweet dreams and told her I'd ask Satan when I saw him.

Seriously, is anyone else hot in here?

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset. His resolution for 2007 is to begin composing his Mariner articles several hours before the submission deadline, but we can't help noting that his 2006 resolution was to be named Cohasset Citizen of the Year, and we all know the end of that story.

HEALTH NOTES

Health priorities change with times

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Probably, the most visible crisis for the Town dealt with water. Not lack of it as in most towns, but too much of it.

When it comes to moving and shaking, it's best to look elsewhere than the Board of Health, but from the standpoint of accomplishments which will have a long lasting benefit to the Town, we're right up there. The Board has regularly changed its priorities and focus as we see the healthcare system, as well as the needs of the Town, change. This year was no exception and the big news is that in spite of the massive changes in healthcare and its administration nothing exciting happened.

For Medicare D, the major healthcare change, getting out information, of course, was the problem. The BoH worries about such things and its possible future impact on the citizens. Fortunately two things happened which made the transition for the Town a simple matter. The new Elder Affairs leader, Linda Ellworthy, worked closely with the Board of Health and information arrived early enough so that almost everybody who needed to, got the word.

Last year's Flu vaccine availability problem was repeated this year, with late notice as well as delivery of insufficient vaccine. However, because of the quick work and effective planning of Judy Fitzsimmons, the Town Nurse, the Flu Clinics went off like clockwork. As with many health issues, boring is much preferable to exciting.

In case you didn't notice, there's been a changeover in ambulance methods and protocols with the Fire Department taking many more local emergency calls. In spite of vastly increased use of emergency ambulance service, the Fire Department still had the means of helping with flooded cellars, putting up weathervanes for the Historical Society and such, as well as putting out the occasional fire with no casualties.

Speaking of Emergency stuff, for the first time the Town can say that it has done more than write plans and give on-line courses to key people. We've had emergency drills such as the Table Top exercise we talked about in Health Notes last month; we've enlisted volunteers, both professional, for the Medical Reserve Corps, and the Citizens Emergency Response (CERTS) activities. Both new key people, Fire Chief Bob Silvia and Linda Ellworthy are part of the Local Emergency Planning Committee. A dizzying number of accomplishments.

Probably, the most visible crisis for the Town dealt with water. Not lack of it as in most towns, but too much of it. For nine years the BoH's been screaming that we have a stormwater problem. But this year, our warnings have come to roost. It was the confluence of two factors: extra rain, including the Mothers Day storm in May and the completion of the drainage system for the new MBTA rail system going through Town. Fortunately, we have people in Town who care and thanks to those on the Harbor Health Committee the Water Resource protection Committee and the Water Commission all working together, we've made some real progress, activating the Stormwater Committee, getting a budget for them at Town Meeting and beginning plans transferring stormwater and drainage issues out of the Board of Health to a more appropriate authority. The members of the Committee are truly the best, most knowledgeable and sensible people we have in town and we're lucky to have such folk.

As a matter of support for information gathering about our waterfront contamination problem, we had several important developments. In case you didn't notice, the EPA was all over us last summer with their so-called Beach Program; a data gathering exercise to assess the severity of the harbor pollution problem. Because of the work students and teachers from the School System and the Board of Health coordinated by the Student Coastal Research Center accomplished, the EPA was able to complete a highly successful program which will give Town planners the first and best coordinated data available about estuarine contamination in Cohasset's waters.

The Health Fair and the Earth Day cleanup are two regular Board of Health events. In the past, we've had years when maybe 20 people showed up at both of the events. This year, for each activity, participation was in the neighborhood of a hundred.

Last: for years, the Board has been trying to get people to do more walking. One of the poster boards for pedestrian inactivity in Cohasset was the design by the MBTA for a station without pedestrian access. Finally, thanks to the Greenbush office and others working on this activity the Town is receiving a grant for a sidewalk to the Cohasset MBTA station.

Hooray and Happy New Year.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Turning on the old folks

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Supermodel Lauren Hutton posed in the altogether for the first time for an eight-page photo spread in "Big" magazine the other day.

Not a big deal, you say. Nubile coeds from the Atlantic Coast Conference or the Big Ten do it every day without turning a feathered boa. You can catch most any aspiring young actress en flagrante delecto late night on Cinemax.

The difference here is that Lauren Hutton was 62 years old.

Now I don't want you to get the idea that I get "Big" or "Playboy" or "Penthouse" for the pictures. I have friends who get them and tell me about it. The articles are pretty good, though.

If the year 2006 taught us anything it is that you can leave puberty far behind and still be sexy.

Actresses Hilary Swank and Penelope Cruz were both 32 when they posed for the sexy and provocative Pirelli calendar for 2007 in London. Sophia Loren was right in there posing with them. Sophia is 71 years old, older than Hilary and Penelope combined.

"I felt like a kid," said Sophia, who has been making at least part of her wardrobe malfunction for the past 50 years. Or so people tell me.

"We are not our mothers and grandmothers," said Hutton.

I can attest to that. I don't know about mothers but I do know grandmothers and, believe me, the mere glimpse of a well-turned ankle was enough to send the hormone-challenged youth of my generation into ecstasy.

We didn't have "Playboy" to titillate us but we had National Geographic Magazine, especially those issues that featured "The Girls of the Congo" or "The Girls of the South Sea Islands." That's where most of us learned they came in even numbers.

"We're interested in life and that's why life is interested in us," said Hutton. "I know I am definitely interested in seeing Sophia Loren in a sexy, near-naked pose."

I wouldn't put it exactly that way but I think I speak for every red-blooded American boy when I say, Wow!!! That's the way I remember it, anyway.

But tat's not all.

L'Oreal Paris, the skin care company, has signed up Diane Keaton as its TV spokesman. She's only 60. Remember her? She's the one with the nude scene in the flick "Something's Gotta Give." I stumbled on it just the other day while searching for the History Channel.

I know it's hard to realize but yesterday's sex kitten Ann-Margret is holding her own at the retirement (for others) age of 65, and the ditzy comedienne Goldie Hawn is still taking 30-something roles at the golden age of 60.

Rules for age-appropriate behavior no longer exist, John Demsey, president of MAC Cosmetics, told USA Today. "It's OK to be seductive in your 60s."

"Yes, indeed," said Lauren Hutton — and that part of the population who wish to be titillated by those who know how.

Book discussion with local author

This week on Our Town, Cohasset's very own cable TV show, co-hosts by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo sit down with local author and historian Lincoln Bloomfield. Mr. Bloomfield discusses his new book "Accidential Encounters with History: Some Lessons Learned" and shares his life in the fields of education and high ranking government service.

This show airs Monday at 9pm on channel 10 and Tuesdays and Thursdays as well.

Watch every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at 9p.m. on Comcast Channel 10.

Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed.

Christmas Tree Drive

Cohasset Middle School Student Council and Project Safeguard will hold a Christmas Tree Drive. They will pick up your holiday tree and take it away at the cost of $20 per tree and $15 per tree for Senior Citizens.

To have your tree picked up call 781-383-2492 by 8 p.m., Friday, Jan. 5, and leave a message with your address, phone number and any special instructions.

Have a check made out to Project Safeguard with your tree and it will be picked up from the end of your driveway Saturday, Jan. 6 between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

the number of parking spaces to be constructed in the municipal parking lot behind the shops on South Main Street, and have entered into a phase two dispute resolution process.

The School Committee has decided it will keep bus fees intact for the 2006-2007 school year.

For the past five years in a row, Cohasset has continually received a AA+ bond rating from Standard and Poor's, one of the two leading bond rating agencies. The designation puts the town within the top 10 percent of the state in terms of financial stability. However, it recently received what Town Manager Bill Griffin would describe as a "warning" as the town's financial outlook has been changed from "stable" to "negative."

September

Police have arrested a 14-year-old boy in connection with a threat to bring a gun to school, that occurred at the middle-high school last fall.

After roughly three years of trying, the Cook Estate could be developed after all. Private developers from Abbott Development of Boston came before the Planning Board to introduce themselves, give an overview of the plans they have in place for the Sohier Street site and gain feedback.

Athletes of all ages and abilities have a sporting event to look forward to, as a triathlon is being planned for the summer of 2007.

Students at the Deer Hill and Osgood Schools know what it means to be compassionate. Over the course of the past two weeks, students at both schools have been busily signing get-well wishes for one of their favorite Red Sox pitchers, Jon Lester. Lester was recently diagnosed with anaplastic large cell lymphoma, which is a cancer of the lymph nodes.

Gubernatorial candidate, Deval Patrick, a corporate attorney and Milton resident, won handily in Cohasset where just over 20 percent of the town's registered voters went to the polls.

October

Twenty-nine members of the Cohasset High School Class of 2007 were honored this week with a luncheon, to celebrate their qualifying for the John and Abigail Adams Scholarship. The Scholarship, which is awarded by the Massachusetts Department of Education, provides free tuition for four years at any Massachusetts public college or university.

The Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee strives to ensure those who have served our country in the armed forces are always remembered by their hometown. One of its latest endeavors is currently under construction at Veteran's Park, as a new monument is being erected to honor those who have served the country in its most recent wars.

Family, many friends and hundreds of thousands of former constituents are remembering former U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, 69, who passed away Oct. 14. He served 12 terms in Congress and won most of his races by comfortable margins.

Plans had been afoot for a while to find Fithi — the three-foot-long, ball python at Our World Museum — a new home. To the best that anyone can guess, the snake found out about those plans and wanted to stay right where she is in Cohasset. Fithi, which means, "snake" in Greek, went missing sometime overnight Oct. 12 and has not been seen or heard from since.

Mary Jeanette Murray often described herself as a "people person." This week, "her people" — the many who loved and admired her — are remembering the former state representative who always put her constituents first. Murray, 81, passed away Oct. 23 after a battle with cancer.

November

Many areas in Cohasset suffer from poor cell phone reception. While being interrupted in the middle of a conversation can be a nuisance, not having cell phone reception when it is absolutely necessary, such as during an emergency, is a public safety issue. To that end, the Board of Selectmen has begun working with Town Manager Bill Griffin to determine what its options are in terms of helping bring better coverage to every corner of the town.

At 69 percent, the turnout on Election Day this year was not as big as expected. When the polls closed at 8 p.m., 3,625 Cohasset voters had cast ballots. While gubernatorial candidate Deval Patrick handily won the state — Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey drew more votes than he did in Cohasset, beating Patrick 1,656 to 1,591.

There were 28 total items tackled during this year's fall Special Town Meeting, which lasted until midnight. The Town Clerk's office said 258 residents were in attendance at the meeting.

December

The old strip mall along Route 3A next to the future Cohasset MBTA station has bitten the dust. The demolition is making way for a Transit Oriented District, dubbed TOD, which will include a mix of retail including the possibility of a restaurant, and housing on five acres next to the train station.

Recreation Department Director Jack Worley celebrated his 30th anniversary on the job.

Several generations of Cohasset natives were born at 25 Ripley Road, which was once the Cohasset Private Hospital and is now a private home. The Cohasset Housing Partnership Committee hopes the 1889 structure could give birth to a town-sponsored affordable housing project.

Thanks to the state's Transit Oriented Development bond program, Cohasset's MBTA station on Route 3A will be pedestrian friendly. On Dec. 8 the Romney Administration awarded $5.9 million to support transit-oriented development projects around the state, of which $225,000 was awarded to Cohasset.

Cohasset residents with an appetite for fajitas and margarita must now travel south (or north) of the border to get a Mexican food fix. After roughly one year in business, Acapulcos restaurant has closed its doors.

For the past 27 years, Robert Silvia has been a fixture at the Cohasset Fire Department. That won't be changing anytime soon, as the former captain and acting chief has been appointed as permanent chief.

If you were czar of Cohasset, what would be your first edict in 2007?

Budget priorities

If I were the czar of Cohasset I would want more money to be put into schools. I would also like to see the money being used for things that are priorities before it is used for luxuries. Also, it would want to hear updates on what the money was being used for.

Fiona McBride

Senior citizens

If I were the czar of Cohasset, I would ask the town to provide additional services, affordable housing, and tax relief for our senior citizens. Throughout the ages societies have been judged by their commitment to children and to the elderly. For our wisest citizens, I think that we can do more in 2007.

Betsy Connolly

Village roundabout

I would do the same as last year, make South Main, Brook and Elm streets a roundabout. It would make the downtown much more friendly and give a lot more parking.

Merle Brown

Inclusive zoning

I would proclaim inclusive zoning for residences and small businesses, with incentives (not loopholes) for real inclusiveness, so that Cohasset might more generously reflect the diversity of the species we presume to deem homo sapiens. It is affluence redefined, holding gifts unexpected.

Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull

Money!

Send me all your money — and don't try pawning off your first born on me.

R. Murray Campbell

Fiscal management

Financially responsible management of town assets and taxes. Even Santa can't do his job if the goodies all disappear through elfish mismanagement

— Jack Creighton

Ballot vote

To make it mandatory that all decisions from Town Meeting be subject to a ballot box vote. People could then vote their conscience without fear of reprisal.

— Karen Quigley

Volunteerism

I would ask everyone who is not currently volunteering for the benefit of the local community to consider stepping it up. I would also make it snow.

Patience Towle

Town character

I would ban all self-serving zoning changes that would destroy the character of our town.

— Andrew Quigley

Safety concerns

First order of business is to have sidewalks throughout Cohasset to make it a safer environment for all. (If it makes sense, run the sidewalk on one side of street and then alternate where necessary).

Second — All street lights turned on at 4 p.m. in winter and 8 p.m. in summer until 12a.m. — very dark and dangerous curves in the roads. Aside from driver blind spots and dangerous curves in roads, walkers, runner and bikers beware!

Third — Sandy Beach parking lot: have the entrance and exit open through out the year, again citing safety concerns as the entrance is being used as the exit to beach as well — lots of congestion, confusion and unnecessary turns-.

Fourth and final for now — Trash cans with lids on Sandy Beach. The over aggressive sea gulls make a mess when they are hunting through trash cans for dinner.

— Mary Cirafice

School policies

If I were a czar, I would implement those policies in the schools that I would have hoped to as a School Committee member, which due to circumstances I cannot run for this year as I would like.

My focus would definitely be on the high school (for a change) and its ability to fully educate our students and see that they consistently enter quality colleges. I would first seek out each and every parent of the 29 or so 8th graders from last year who left the system for private school and find out why. I would create an environment where parents could say freely and openly what many say and feel privately. I would clearly support the goals Mr. Slanetz is trying to achieve, and would both heed and implement all the recommendations of Mr. Fusco's Technology Study Committee report of a couple of years ago.

I would also remind the School Committee that would return after my czarship that IT is the formulator of education policy and IT is the boss, and hopefully imbue it with some backbone vis-a vis both the administration and the union. Amongst the three As (academics, administration and athletics), academics would be given the greatest priority by far. I would also remind the Committee, the administrators and the union, and implement as policy, that wish budgets far in excess of 2-1/2's restraints that unnecessarily and callously divide the community are no longer allowed.

This year's proposed budget is a better, realistic example of how things should work. As for specific policy dictats, first to go would be the mess that is block scheduling. I would also ease up on homework burden and change the draconian homework grading policies throughout the system. I would also implement distance learning in partnership with a college like UMass and UDelaware to offer our students the electives they lack. I would explore sharing such programs with neighboring schools if necessary for fiscal reasons, as a sort of mini-partial regionalization. I would also explore fully whether regionalizing our high school makes sense, accepting a reality that a small town funding an entire K-12 stand-alone system is no longer feasible under 2-1/2. And absent reform of 2-1/2 or implementation of new tools like distance learning, which I would pursue as a first option to avoid regionalization, I would stop telling people that it is feasible.

I would also make changes in administration, technology, and guidance staffing and policy, as soon as contracts would allow without having to pay a premium. Thinkers outside the box, those who share goals of actual quality in the high school, those willing to go to the mat with DOE if necessary, those willing to embrace distance learning technology, those who avoid rote and mechanical thinking and those willing to create a nurturing and positive environment for each and every child, including the gifted, those with learning issues and the nonconformists, and who will reject the current, nationwide lowest-common-denominator approach to education would find most favor.

All-Scholastic girls soccer team

Torey Hart named among area's elite

Editor's note: With the recent merger of Community Newspaper Company and Memorial Press Group, there are now more schools and more athletes to be considered for All-Scholastic teams. The increase from 13 schools to 20 in the region will have an impact on how teams are chosen, including how many representatives some schools receive.

Only public school athletes from the following schools will be considered for All-Scholastic honors: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Old Rochester, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, Wareham, Weymouth and Whitman-Hanson.

Cohasset's Torey Hart was a South Shore League All-Star and the league's second-leading scorer this season.

Torey Hart – Sophomore Forward - Cohasset

With 14 wins and a spot in the Div. 3 South quarterfinals, Cohasset had its best season in recent memory, and Hart was perhaps the biggest reason why…The Skippers' attack always ran through Hart…Finished the regular season with 38 points (17 goals, 21 assists), second in the South Shore League behind fellow All-Scholastic Tina Gillen of Carver…Hart's corner led to teammate Maggie McGoldrick's goal in Cohasset's 1-1 on Oct. 21 against eventual Div. 3 state finalist Norwell…The Skippers will be expected by many to do even better next year, with Hart leading the way.

Becky DiSieno - Junior Sweeper – Abington

For first year head coach Jen Starsiak, DiSieno was the most indispensable player for the Green Wave this year. This junior sweeper patrolled the back for the Green Wave while hardly ever coming off of the field. She was tough to get by, but also has a nose for the net when she creeps up. She has a strong leg and takes every free kick and corner for Abington this year. Her two beautiful assists off of corners in the state tournament win over Norfolk accounted for the only two goals. She was a South Shore League all star this season, and helped lead the Green Wave to the sectional semifinals. She is a point guard on the basketball team and hopes to play soccer in college.

Amy Caldwell – Senior (Capt.) Forward – Braintree

What can we write here that hasn't been said already? We can try with a few numbers…Caldwell finished her senior season with 25 goals and nine assists, giving her an incredible 170 career points (112 goals, 58 assists)…At one point during this year's Div. 1 state tournament, scored seven straight goals for the Wamps…Capped her high school career with four goals in Braintree's 6-1 win over Ludlow, giving the Wamps back-to-back state championships…A high school All-American this season and a player in the national U-17 pool…Simply put, no one changed the game more than Caldwell did…Also a standout gymnast and outdoor sprinter for BHS, Caldwell will play soccer for nationally-ranked Boston College

Jackie Cooney – Senior (Capt.) Keeper – Braintree

For the second year in a row, Cooney saved her best for last in the state tournament and was a key part of Braitnree's back-to-back state titles…One of her best games came against Notre Dame in the first round, making several key stops early in the match before the Wamps' attack took over in a 3-0 win…Also made critical saves in the Div. 1 Eastern Mass. final against Masconomet…With good athleticism, instincts and a 5-foot-11 frame, Cooney has everything it takes to succeed at the college level, as well…Cooney also plays basketball and was part of last year's Div. 1 state title winning girls hoops team

Jess DeGraan – Senior (Capt.) Forward – Braintree

Braintree's attack the last couple seasons has hardly been a one-trick pony, as DeGraan has also excelled as both a scorer and playmaker…Had 16 goals and 12 assists this fall, to finish her BHS career with 116 points (64 goals, 52 assists)…Assisted on both of Braintree's goals in 2-1 win over Marshfield in Div. 1 South final…A Bay State Conference and Eastern Mass. All-Star…DeGraan earned kudos from teammates and coaches for her toughness and willingness to drop back and help in defense when needed…Starting point guard for last year's state title winning girls basketball team

Kara Ruggiero – Senior (Capt.) Midfielder – Braintree

Ruggiero didn't put up the biggest numbers this season, but her strong play in the middle of the pitch steadied the Wamps' defense and helped produce goal-scoring chances for the team's forwards…Still finished in the Wamps' top-five all-time leading scorers…Often dropped back into central defense when help was needed there…Came up huge in that position in Eastern Mass. final against Masconomet, including a goal-saving tackle late in the first half of a scoreless game…Earned Bay State Conference All-Star honors for the third straight season

Kalie Whitehouse – Junior Defender – Braintree

It was no coincidence that Braintree truly began to take off this season when Whitehouse began to assert herself as a dominant central defender…After losing all three regular starters from last year's title-winning side, defense was a question mark for the Wamps coming into this season, but Whitehouse answered those questions all season long…Braintree allowed just three goals in the state tournament, and Whitehouse's play was perhaps the biggest reason why…One of the Wamps' most skilled overall athletes, Whitehouse also took a majority of the team's free kicks this season

Tina Gillen – Senior (Capt.) Forward – Carver

The senior finished up her high school career with more points than anyone else in the history of the boys or girls soccer programs at Carver High. The three-time South Shore League and Eastern Mass. Division 3 All-Star finished her remarkable career with 48 points this season, tallying 38 goals and 10 assists. Gillen finished with 139 points overall on 109 goals and 30 assists. A three-sport athlete, Gillen is also talented runner as well as returning all-star on the two-time SSL champion girls basketball team.

Jordyn Krall – Junior Midfielder – Duxbury

Arguably one of the most talented soccer players on the South Shore, Duxbury junior Jordyn Krall is just getting started…Krall led the Dragons in points, scoring 14 goals and adding 12 assists this season…The dangerous midfielder was a unanimous Patriot League selection and was named an EMass all-star after helping the Dragons to a Div. 2 south sectional berth…Krall will be back on the pitch for Duxbury again next fall and will likely provide a lot of offensive punch again.

Meredith Poore – Senior (Capt.) Midfielder – Duxbury

The other half of Duxbury's potent 1-2 offensive punch, senior captain Meredith Poore had an excellent senior season…In the Dragons' win over Apponequet in the Div. 2 south sectional this fall, Poore scored an insurance goal with only 10 seconds left in the game to help propel Duxbury to the second round…Along with being named a Patriot League all-star, Poore was a leader on and off the field for the Dragons.

Lesley Guenard – Junior Forward – Hanover

A three-year starter, Guenard has only gotten better with age…Guenard was selected to her second Patriot League All-star team after finishing the season as one of the Lady Indians' top scorers…Guenard tallied 12 goals and six assists for 18 points this fall, helping to guide Hanover to a Fisher Div. title (8-3-1)…She was an essential part of a young offense that routinely put up big scores in carrying the Lady Indians to a berth in the Div. 3 South title…"She does a lot of excellent things up top and she's a classic center forward," said HHS coach Garth Nelson…A captain elect for next season, Guenard is also a standout shortstop on the softball team.

Brittany Fraser - Junior Forward – Hanover

Started the season in the midfield, but once she made the transition to right wing, Fraser really sparked Hanover's potent offensive attack…Was dangerous from several area's of the field, often surprising opposing keepers with her long goal attempts…Her efforts paid off in the form of six goals, three assists…Fraser served up the bulk of the Lady Indians' corner kicks and utilized her speed well in setting up some long crosses from the right side…Her consistent play helped Hanover capture the Fisher Div. title (8-3-1)…A captain elect for next season, Fraser will be one of the top returnees next fall.

Kristin Mulry - Senior (Capt.) Forward - Hingham

A four-year starter for the Harborwomen, Mulry was about as consistent as it gets on the frontline…The go-to striker over the last three seasons, Mulry led the Hingham squad in scoring again this year with 18 points on 15 goals, three assists…Mulry's figures placed her third among the Patriot League Keenan Div. scorers…A PL All-star throughout her career, Mulry made it look easy sometimes with her stellar goal placement…Her timely scores kept the Harborwomen in several games this season in the powerhouse Patriot League, where they finished 3-5-3 in the Keenan Div…Hingham was 6-8-3 overall…Mulry plans to attend college in the fall.

Amanda Bilas - Senior (Capt.) Sweeper - Marshfield

Those opponents who thought this particular sweeper would stay in the defensive end of the field often got burned…A first-rate defender, Bilas also had an uncanny ability to contribute to the offense, sometimes running the ball from the backline all the way to the net herself…Her efforts resulted in 11 points this season on six goals, five assists…Bilas has 30 goals and 15 assists in her career at MHS…Was named an ACL and Eastern Mass. All-star this season and was an essential part of a defense that shutout 10 opponents this year and blanked three en route to Marshfield's fourth-straight trip to the Div. 1 South finals…Bilas came up huge in a 1-0 semifinal win over rival Whitman/Hanson, shutting down the league's top two scorers…The captain also runs indoor and outdoor track at MHS and hopes to attend either Quinnipiac, St. Anselm's, or Wheaton.

Giovanna DaPrato - Senior Forward - Marshfield

DaPrato saw time at the varsity level last season but stepped out into the spotlight this year as the starting center forward for the Atlantic Coast League North Div. champions (10-2-1)…DaPrato scored goals in two of Marshfield's four tournament games, bringing her season total to 12…Speedy and smart, few could keep pace with the skilled DaPrato, netted a trio of goals in two regular season meetings against rival Whitman/Hanson, including a pair in the 4-2 win that clinched a share of the league title…"Her willingness to learn (over the years) is what made her so successful this season," said MHS coach Liz Grindle. "Her personality and game totally matured this season…An ACL All-star, DaPrato hopes to continue playing soccer at the collegiate level next fall and has listed Sienna among her top picks.

Amanda Citron - Senior (Capt.) Midfielder - Marshfield

A four-year starter for the Lady Rams, Citron has had many roles throughout her career and shined in all of them…A three-time league All-star (twice in the Old Colony, once in the Atlantic Coast), Citron's worth to the squad wasn't measured in goals and assists, although she certainly contributed a few…As the center midfielder for Marshfield (14-6-3), Citron controlled the pace of the game offensively and defensively, guiding the Lady Rams to the ACL North title and their fourth-straight Div. 1 South final…At stopper, she was essential in a pair of wins over rival Whitman/Hanson, essentially shutting down one of the league's top scorers…Has played in the midfield throughout her career at MHS and was on the field when the Lady Rams reached the Div. 1 state final in 2004…A year-round player, Citron has accepted a scholarship to play at Div. 1 Bucknell in the fall.

Casey Edward - Sophomore Goalie - Marshfield

Edward was good last season, but this year, she was great…Just a sophomore, Edward made opponents standup and take notice this fall with her gutsy goaltending, which helped guide the Lady Rams to their fourth-straight Div. 1 South final…There, Edward stuffed highly-potent Braintree striker Amy Caldwell on two point-blank attempts in a slim 2-1 loss…A two-year starter in the net, Edward was phenomenal throughout the postseason, shutting out a trio of opponents on the road to the final…For the season, Edward recorded 10 shutouts in 19 games for the Atlantic Coast League North Div. champs (10-2-1, 14-6-3 overall) and was nearly untouchable with a 0.65 goals against average…Also a track athlete at MHS, Edward still has two more seasons to play in the net for the Lady Rams.

Jill Cammett – Junior Midfielder – Norwell

Scoring numbers may have dropped from last season, but Cammett stepped up in every phase of the game to lead her team to within a penalty kick shootout of a state championship…Scored key goals in tournament games against Case and Abington, and assisted on both goals in 2-1 overtime win against Newburyport in Div. 3 Eastern Mass. final…A strong, highly skilled center midfielder, Cammett was the engine that made the Clippers run…A South Shore League and EMass All-Star…Cammett also runs track and is a starter on Norwell's back-to-back state championship winning lacrosse teams

Amelia Cimini – Junior Defender – Norwell

From her sweeper position, Cimini was the backbone of dominant Clippers defense that allowed just three goals in six state tournament games…For the entire season, Norwell allowed less then a goal per game…Cimini was always in the right place at the right time to stop opponents with well-timed challenges; opposing teams rarely earned quality shots or corner kicks, thanks to the play of Cimini…A South Shore League All-Star (one of five on the Norwell roster) and Eastern Mass. All-Star

Liz Williams – Senior (Capt.) Defender – Norwell

Norwell opponents had a tough time forming attacks on the wing, and Williams was the biggest reason why…Consistently dominant from the left back position; you can probably count on one hand the number of decent crosses opponents put forth from the right side of the field…With her outstanding speed and instincts, Williams could often be found stopping attacks on the right side of the pitch as well…Named a South Shore League All-Star for the second straight season, as well as an Eastern Mass. All-Star…Williams also plays for the two-time defending state champion girls lacrosse team.

Maura Jones – Senior (Capt.) Defense – Old Rochester

Like a good shutdown cornerback in football, Old Rochester senior captain Maura Jones rarely let opponents get the better of her…A four year varsity starter and two-time South Coast Conference all-star, Jones led a Bulldogs defense that shut opponents down late in the season during a run that helped ORR qualify for the state tournament…The Bulldogs lost only one of their last ten regular season games, allowing two or fewer goals in seven of those games…Along with being named a SCC all-star, Jones was named an EMass all-star this fall, too.

SEE ALL-SCHOLASTIC, PAGE 15

FROM ALL-SCHOLASTIC, PAGE 14

Lindsey Smith – Senior (Capt.)
Forward – Old Rochester

Just as Maura Jones was the spark for the ORR back third, senior captain Lindsey Smith had a similar effect on the Bulldogs offense…Smith followed up a solid junior season with an very good senior season, pacing an ORR offensive strike that struggled early in the season, but broke out a bit down the stretch…Smith is an Honor Roll student at ORR and according to her coaches, a model captain and leader on the field.

Amy Avitable – Senior (Capt.)
Forward – Pembroke

If not for a nagging injury that kept Pembroke senior captain Amy Avitable off the field for a few games this fall, her stats might be even more impressive…Avitable was a constant scoring threat for the Titans, who qualified for the state tournament for the third consecutive year…A strong leader and an instinctive soccer player, Avitable came on strong at the end of the season to help vault Pembroke to a tourney berth…A two-time Patriot League all-star, Avitable will be remembered for years to come as one of the better athletes to come through Pembroke.

Jen Kane – Senior (Capt.)
Defense – Plymouth North

It was no easy task to score goals on the Plymouth North girls soccer team this season and a big reason for that was another strong season on defense from Kane.. The senior captain defender was an Atlantic Coast League All-Star selection once again this season, a spot she earned by helping to get the ball out of the lady Eagles end of the field as quickly as possible. The three-time ACL All-Star also earned an selection to the ACL girls basketball team as a junior.

Danielle Gordon - Junior
Midfielder - Rockland

Nursed an ankle injury at the beginning of the season, but still managed to play all 80 minutes of every game this fall…The starting center midfielder for the Patriot League Fisher Div. runner-ups (7-3-3), Gordon was the catalyst both offensively and defensively for the Lady Bulldogs (8-6-4)…A PL and Eastern Mass. All-star, Gordon tallied 13 points this season on seven goals, six assists…She also took the majority of Rockland's corner and free kicks…"She understands the game and controls the midfield extremely well," said RHS coach Peter Woodward…Just a junior, Gordon will be one of the top returning players next season.

Steph Gordon - Junior
Goalie - Rockland

One of the best goalies in the league for the past two seasons, Gordon had the Lady Bulldogs' net well-covered again this fall…The two-time Patriot League All-star was tops in the PL standings with a nearly untouchable 0.97 goals against average, allowing just 18 goals in 19 games for Rockland (8-6-4, 7-3-3 PL)…Her stellar season earned her Eastern Mass. and All-State All-star status for the PL runner-ups…Gordon's command for the field and willingness to instruct her defense was essential in the Lady Bulldogs' seven shutouts this season…"She's the most confident goalkeeper I've ever seen for her age," said RHS coach Peter Woodward…Just a junior, Gordon returns to the net next fall.

Tess Weafer – Junior Defender – Scituate

The back four was the biggest reason for the Sailors' success this season, with Weafer leading the way from her left back position…Has the skill to play anywhere on the field, but truly found her niche in defense this fall en route to being named a Patriot League All-Star…Weafer was also nominated for the Eastern Mass. All-Star team…Older sister, Kacey (SHS '05), plays for St. Bonaventure University in Olean, NY.

Sarah Coggins, a Mariner All-Scholastic honorable mention, was a key part of the Skippers' defense this season.

Noelle Marston - Junior Forward – Silver Lake

The three-year starter had an outstanding junior season, leading Silver Lake to the first Keenan Division Patriot League title in the three years the school has been a member of the conference. The Patriot League and Eastern Mass. Division 2 All-Star was one of the top players in the league this season, registering 13 goals and 10 assists as the lady Lakers went two rounds deep into the tournament. The club soccer player will be back in 2007 to help Silver Lake attempt to defend their title.

Jenn Stack - Junior Goaltender – Silver Lake

For the last three season there have been few who were better in the net than the Patriot League and Eastern Mass. All-Star. Stack was the backbone of the team that won the first Keen Division Patriot League title in the history of the school. The now two-time Patriot League All-Star recorded seven shutouts for the lady Lakers this season.

Lindsey Collins – Junior Defense – Wareham

It's never easy for a player to switch to an entirely new position just before the season starts and still play well enough to earn All-Scholastic honors…But that's just what Wareham junior Lindsey Collins did this fall…A wing fullback by trade, Wareham head coach Roger Ouellette asked Collins to switch to sweeper this season…Collins struggled at first, but grew into the roll and formed into one of the better sweepers in the SCC…Collins, named the Vikings MVP this fall, has great soccer instincts and speed, and will return for her fourth varsity season next fall.

Kim Clooney - Sophomore
Midfield – Weymouth

One of the biggest reasons Weymouth was able return to the state tournament, and remain in contention for the Bay State League title this year was the strong play of Clooney at midfield. She had an impact at both ends of the field whether it was scoring, or playing defense. She scored with 30 seconds left to salvage a tie with Brookline and had assists in huge wins over Dedham and Braintree this season. She played defense for head coach Ron Jamieson when injuries necessitated a change, and she thrived back there as well. Her playmaking ability and unselfish passing is what sets her apart from most. She was a Bay State League all-star this season, and will be one of the top returning players in the league next season.

Emily Keeman - Senior
Midfield – Whitman-Hanson

While the young sophomore stars got all the headlines this year, Keeman was the glue that kept the team together. Her valuable senior leadership was key in helping the Panthers to their second straight Atlantic Coast League title. For her efforts this season she was named to the ACL all-star team for a third straight season. She was a four year varsity player, and was named to the all Emass second team. "She does all the little things that allows us to be a quality team. So much of what she does goes unnoticed by fans but it is evident to the coaches, including the opposing coaches," said her coach Dave Floeck. She is hoping to play soccer at Merrimack in the fall.

Kristie Mewis - Sophomore
Midfield - Whitman-Hanson

There isn't much that hasn't already been said about Mewis. She was the leading scorer for the Panthers this season, even though she missed a couple games to play for the Under-16 national team. She is already a superstar and can only get better. She was voted one of the top players in the state for the second straight year, and is considered the best underclassmen. This year she tallied 21 goals and 11 assists, in helping the Panthers reach the Division 1 semifinals. She is already rewriting the record books, at Whitman-Hanson and has 40 goals and 26 assists in her two years. She plays club soccer in addition to her time on the national team. She is a point guard on the basketball team and will return next year to help win the Panthers a state title.

Devin Petta - Sophomore Forward –Whitman-Hanson

The main recipient of all the playmaking of Mewis, Petta cast a shadow of her own this season as one of the most prolific goal scorers in Emass. She tallied 27 goals and nine assists this season including a pair of two goal games in the first two rounds of the state tournament. She was one of the top five players in the ACL, and was named an Emass all-star this year. For her brief career she has 36 goals and 13 assists. Next season she will return with Mewis to form one of the most potent duos in the state, and have aspirations for a state title. Petta plays softball in the spring, and hopes to play soccer in college.

CHS boys hold steady at .500

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Last week the Cohasset High boys basketball team faced two opponents, Abington and South Shore Voc. Tech. The Skippers began the week with a .500 record at 1-1, and finished with a .500 record at 2-2.

First off was a South Shore League game against the Green Wave of Abington. To say the least, Cohasset struggled against a team considered by many as the league favorite this season.

The Abington defense shut down the Cohasset offense, holding them to only 35 points while the Green Wave scored 65. Co-captain Pat McCarthy was held to a season low of 14 points and watched most of the second half from the bench while head coach Dorian Bryant let the backups play the rest of the game.

The SSVT game was a completely different story as Cohasset looked as they good as the have in the past three years. The game was full of scoring runs by both teams. After beginning the game with a 12-3 lead, the Skippers allowed a 13-1 run in the next three minutes.

Following that and after a 16-16 tie, Cohasset ran all over SSVT for an outstanding 15-0 run, which was fueled by great defense, especially by sophomore Marcus Charles, who totaled up five steals. An amazing half court, buzzer-beater shot pulled SSVT to within five at the half and gave them some hope to come back. This hope, though, was quickly crushed as soon as the second half started.

Right from the half's first possession, Cohasset looked like it was on a mission to score and quickly extended its lead and never looked back. They won the game 69-46 with three scorers in double digits. McCarthy again had 14 points, and co-captain Justin Alexander had 15 points, along with up-and-coming star Danny Martin's 15 points. Charles had seven points to go along with his five steals.

The Skippers' defense played outstanding and their press was almost flawless and appeared to fluster the SSVT offense. After the game, Bryant said it was key for his team to bounce back after a rough loss to Abington.

"It was a crucial win, especially with a young team," he said. "It was really a must win and we got our confidence back."

As long as Cohasset can stay out of early foul trouble, which has hurt them in almost every game thus far, they should be in good shape.

McCarthy mentioned another confidence booster, pointing out that rival Hull beat this SSVT team by a mere four points earlier in the season. Cohasset may very well be playing Hull tonight (Dec. 29), depending on the results of Thursday's first round games of the annual Cohasset Holiday Classic, played after the Mariner went to press.

In that first round, Cohasset played West Bridgewater, while Hull squared off against Sacred Heart.

Final sign-up opportunity for spring lacrosse is Jan. 6

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will close its registration for the spring of 2007 with its second sign-up session on Saturday, Jan. 6 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at Cohasset High School.

Having opened registration in early December, organizers expect to have full rosters once the Saturday session is complete.

"It currently appears that we will hit or surpass our ideal roster sizes during the registration period," said Chuck Jaffe, director of Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. "We are committed to accepting all players who sign up by January 6, but there comes a point where having too many players diminishes the experience for everyone. We do not have cuts, and we play equal playing time, so the only way to be fair in managing our roster limits is to turn away late-comers.

"We would prefer for everyone interested to sign up on time, giving us the maximum time to deal with some of the issues that occur when we go beyond our ideal roster sizes."

Registrations will be taken for both boys and girls in the 15 & Under (7th and 8th graders), 13 & Under (5th and 6th grades), and 11 & Under (grades 3-4) age levels.

The registration fee is $160 for one player, $300 for two, and $400 for three. Late registrations, if roster spots are available, carry an additional late fee of $25 per player.

The registration fee covers all Cohasset Youth Lacrosse events, a uniform and a youth membership in US Lacrosse, the national governing body for lacrosse. US Lacrosse membership includes mandatory insurance coverage and a subscription to Lacrosse Magazine for Kids.

The program is limited to Cohasset residents, or students in the Cohasset school system.

In general, games for boys and girls are played Sunday afternoons. The spring practice schedule has not yet been set, although the older teams for both boys and girls typically have two practices and one game each week. At the youngest level, there typically is one practice per week. The teams will begin practicing indoors in early March and begin playing games in April. Cohasset's season concludes with the annual Family Day celebration – featuring intra-town games — in June.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse works with other town sports organizations to minimize conflicts and to allow players to participate in as many activities as possible.

In addition to players, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for additional coaches at all levels. If you are interested in volunteering to coach, contact Jaffe at 781-383-6688 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

Parents who can not attend the Jan. 6 registration should contact Jaffe by e-mail at CAJaffe@aol.com in sufficient time to have registration materials mailed and returned prior to registration. Include your name, address and the number of children being registered.

For more information, go to www.cohassetlacrosse.com or contact Jaffe at 781-383-6688 or CAJaffe@aol.com.

IT'S HAPPENING

Cabaret! directors' party is Monday at 1 p.m.

The annual Cabaret's Meet the Director party will take place Monday, Jan. 1, at 1 p.m., at Hingham Community Center, South Street. This is a chance to meet the directors and choreographers for the show and be part of a music and dance production that benefits the Hingham Community Center.

Singers and dancers of all levels are welcome. Solo tryouts will start at 1 p.m. Those auditioning are asked to bring their own music and keep the audition brief.

Cabaret show dates are Jan. 25, 26 and 27, at the Hingham Armory.

For those who can't make the Jan. 1 party, just show up on Tuesday, Jan. 2, at 6:30 p.m., if are interested in either singing, dancing or both.

Dance rehearsals will be on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at 6:30 p.m. The initial dance rehearsal is Tuesday, Jan. 2, at 6:30 p.m.

Chorus rehearsals will be Tuesdays and Thursdays, at 7:30 p.m., with the initial rehearsal Jan. 2, at 7:30 p.m.

Cabaret 2007, dubbed "Just for the Record," is themed around the jukebox era, 45 rpm. records and a few George M. Cohan songs.

The creative team of choreographers, Liz Tronni and Anise Rodriquez, plus director/choreographer Sharon Terman, has worked out some new steps for all levels of dancers. Music director is Tom Boyer.

Cabaret welcomes old and new faces both on stage and backstage.

Duo at Old Ship Coffeehouse

Hingham's Old Ship Coffeehouse off the Square will present Paul Rishell and Annie Raines on Saturday, Jan. 20, at 8 p.m.

This W.C. Handy Award-winning Delta blues duo combines Rishell's singing, guitar style and knowledge of the genre with Raines' vocals and harmonica work.

Old Ship Coffeehouse off the Square is at Old Ship Parish House at 107 Main St. The concert is preceded by an open microphone at 8 p.m. Admission is $10 at the door. A variety of coffees, tea and desserts are available for 50 cents. Net proceeds benefit the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee. Volunteers are welcome. For more information, call Jim Watson at 781-749-1767.

CFD responded to 11 MV crashes

The summary of Fire Department responses during the month of November is as follows: four building fires, one motor vehicle fire, 11 motor vehicle crashes, 84 medical emergencies, 75 inspections , 29 investigations, four lock outs/lock ins, nine automatic fire alarm activations and 11 miscellaneous responses. 52 emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 41 medical emergencies, two motor vehicle crashes, three investigations, two building fires, one motor vehicle fire, one well being check and two lock outs, Fire Chief Robert Silvia said.

The Fire Department ambulance transported 58 patients to South Shore Hospital and four patients to Quincy Medical Center. 48 of the 62 were advanced life support transports. Mutual aid ambulances transported seven patients to South Shore Hospital. Five of the seven mutual aid ambulance transports were advanced life support. There were three motor vehicle crashes that required victims to be transported to the hospital, Silvia said.

Automatic fire alarm activation responses totaled nine for the month. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for four responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of five responses. There were four responses classed as building fires for the month, two were for malfunctioning electrical equipment one was for a stove fire and one was for malfunctioning heating equipment.

All businesses that require annual licenses to be issued by the Town, including alcohol, common victualer and new and used automobile were inspected by the department last month.

The refurbishment of Engine 1 was completed and Engine 1 was placed back in service, bringing the available number of pumping engines back to three, Silvia added.

Classic rock rolls on

Get the Led Out returns to Memorial Hall

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

"Get the Led Out: The Ultimate Led Zeppelin Experience"

It has been more than 25 years since Led Zeppelin — known for seminal rock hits like "Whole Lotta Love" and "Stairway to Heaven" — disbanded, following the untimely death of drummer John Bonham in 1980 at age 32, but the legendary British rock group maintains a firm hold on its position as one of the most successful rock groups in popular music history thanks to their artistic achievements, commercial success, and widespread appeal.

Since a reunion of surviving members — Jimmy Page, guitar, John Paul Jones on bass guitar, keyboards, and mandolin, and Robert Plant on lead vocals and harmonica — is unlikely, fans have found themselves drawn to a variety of acts currently recreating the Zeppelin live concert experience. One such act - cleverly titled "Get the Led Out: The Ultimate Led Zeppelin Experience" — returns to Plymouth Memorial Hall on Friday after a sold-out show in March 2005. The Philadelphia-based band of professional rock musicians is dedicated to re-creating the music of Led Zeppelin.

"We present a live concert experience of Led Zeppelin. We're not impersonators so we don't put on the dragon suit or blonde wigs," explained guitarist and mandolin player Paul Hammond by telephone last week. "We instill ourselves and Zeppelin into our live shows, we're just not as loose and improvisational as Led Zeppelin."

Zeppelin may have seemed relaxed to some, but they are also widely regarded as innovators who never lost mainstream appeal. While the band is best known for being among the pioneers of hard rock and heavy metal, they also infused their sound with blues, reggae, soul, funk, jazz, classical, Indian, Arabic, Latin and country sounds.

"Their music is still as powerful today as it was back in the day. It is timeless. And while the fans can't see the group in concert anymore, they can see us."
Paul Hammond, guitarist and mandolin player

Hammond, 41, is quick to acknowledge Zeppelin's lasting appeal.

"Their music is still as powerful today as it was back in the day. It is timeless. And while the fans can't see the group in concert anymore, they can see us. We're often referred to as the American Led Zepellin. We've even had people come back after one of our shows and tell us that they saw Zeppelin in the 1970s and we're even better."

While Get The Led Out may earn praise from its audiences, Hammond and his five fellow musicians know that they are merely recreating the work of legends.

"Paul Sinclair is our lead singer and so he does the vocals associated with Robert Plant. When he isn't singing, Paul speaks about his love for Led Zeppelin. We all feel that way. The members of Zeppelin had the most amazing depth to their musicality, much like the Beatles. Our group has great musical versatility, too, from rock to classical. It is our own depth that makes us more authentic when we do Zeppelin. We're professionals in our own right and while we play like rock stars, we don't act like them. We don't smoke or drink and we take very good care of ourselves. We take this whole thing very seriously."

(Get The Led Out: The Ultimate Led Zepellin Experience" returns to Plymouth Memorial Hall, 83 Court Street, Plymouth, on Friday, Dec. 29. For tickets and information call 508-747-1340 or visit www.ticketweb.com Tickets are also available at all Strawberries locations.)

Movie review

Rocky (Sylvester Stallone) proves that his right hook is still pretty good. Mason Dixon (Antonio Tarver) would agree.

A 'Rocky' finish

"Rocky Balboa" (C+)

By James Vemiere
FILM CRITIC

I come not to bury Rocky Balboa, but to praise him, at least for a few sentences.

Whatever he has or has not accomplished since, Sylvester Stallone created Rocky Balboa, wrote the screenplay for the original "Rocky" (1976), for which he was nominated for an Academy Award, and played the title role in the film, a role with which Stallone became synonymous.

Rocky remains a giant in the pantheon of American pop culture and a character recognized and celebrated all around the world. His triumphal trumpet theme is a form of universal language. Just stand in a crowd and reproduce the opening notes — dada da dada da — and watch the faces light up.

Having said that, "Rocky Balboa," the sixth and — please — last film in the Rocky saga, is almost pure kitsch. Maudlin and sentimental, the film presents Rocky as a tormented, scarred, grief-stricken warrior who is estranged from his son (Milo Ventimiglia of NBC's "Heroes") and must exorcise "the beast" with one final fight (grrr). The screenplay is a series of speeches, some praising Rocky and others arguing against this potentially disastrous fight against a younger, faster opponent named — ahem — Mason Dixon (Antonio Tarver).

That clunky metaphor is typical. The arguments against the fight are thinly disguised arguments Stallone must have heard about making yet another Rocky film.

Sixty-year-old Stallone takes Rocky back to his working-class roots in the blighted streets of South Philly. He lives alone in the modest home he once shared with beloved Adrian. He sits vigil at her graveside and runs the restaurant Adrian's, where photos of her paper the walls. He dutifully recites tales of the ring to his clientele, probably a variation of something Stallone experiences in real life — being constantly asked about Rocky — and feeds gratis a punchy, former opponent (Pedro Lovell). Paulie (Burt Young) is still a pain the neck.

Together, he and Rocky take a weepy guided tour of the sites of Rocky's and Adrian's courtship. Rocky starts an unresolved relationship with Marie (Geraldine Hughes), a local woman, and bonds with her son (James Francis Kelly III). We see Talia Shire, who originated the role of Adrian, in snippets of the original film, which evoke Rocky's cherished memories.

By the time Rocky begins pounding those beef slabs and Bill Conti's theme cues up, we know where we're headed. Many believe Rocky Balboa was inspired by the true story of Chuck Wepner, an obscure fighter who was given a shot against Muhammad Ali in 1975 and against all odds "went the distance."

But Rocky also has psychic roots in Marlon Brando's iconic "I couldda been a contender" speech, a talismanic refrain for working-class kids in the 1950s, and Rocky's famous cry, "Adrian," is an echo of Brando's "Stella!"

But at this point, a more apt cry is "Yo, Uncle!"

Rated PG. "Rocky Balboa" contains violence and profanity.

With approved credit to qualified buyers. Minimum purchase $999. The La-Z-Boy Furniture Galleries Mastercard is issued by Wells Fargo Financial National Bank. Special terms of 12 months no interest option with regular minimum monthly payments will apply to purchases charged with approved credit to your La-Z-Boy Furniture Galleries Mastercard line of credit. Regular minimum monthly payments are required during the option period. The no interest option means there is no interest if your purchase is paid in full within 12 months after the date of purchase; otherwise, interest accrues from date of purchase at the APR for purchases using your La-Z-Boy Furniture Galleries Mastercard line of credit, which is 25%. The standard APR for transactions using your MasterCard line of credit will be 13.90%. If you do not pay the total minimum payment when due, the APR for transactions using your MasterCard line of credit will be 25%. All APRs given are as of October 1, 2006. All APRs may vary. If you use your card for cash advances, the cash advance fee is 3% of the amount of the cash advance, but not less than $10.00. Offer expires December 31, 2006.
